So firmly was my mind made up, that I had actually glanced through Bradshaw in search of some pleasant continental watering place—I had even given Pointer orders to pack up for instant departure, when I suddenly changed my mind, on account of Gilbert. I really could not leave him in the lurch, for I was, at this time, his only true friend; and it was not a pleasant idea to think he was in prison while I was free. My conscience smote me as I thought how prone I was to consider my own comfort; therefore, I threw Bradshaw aside, I countermanded my orders to Pointer, and decided to remain on the spot, in order to make one final effort to help my poor friend.

Two or three days had now elapsed since Dallas had confessed his sins, and during that time, I had frequently conversed with Tancred on the aspect of affairs with which he was anything but satisfied. We saw Gilbert and told him all we had learned, but Tressinger could not help us in any way, and from the tangled mass of conflicting evidence, the three of us were unable to deduce any reasonable theory. I have already set forth five theories, but one upset the other; and in the end, as all proved useless, I was in a state of despair. Tancred also confessed to me that he was unable to see his way to a satisfactory conclusion; so we were both at a standstill, when Fate interfered, and solved the problem with the utmost ease and dispatch.

At this time Melchizedek made no sign, and we were much puzzled as to what could be his reason for this persistent silence. However, notwithstanding his apparent inaction, Tancred had every confidence in his judgment, and declared that he kept silent for some good reason. I had my doubts on the subject, as I considered that he should have made a daily report of how things progressed at Lippinton; and would have gone down there myself, but that Tancred entreated me not to do so.

"Leave Melchizedek to his own devices, major," he said, when I urged the necessity of making inquiries. "If there is anything to be discovered, he is the man to make such discovery, and, in his own good time, he will tell us all that he thinks necessary."

"Yes; but you forget that all this time Tressinger is in prison; that the time of his trial is drawing near, and there is not yet any provision made for a proper defence."

"Melchizedek knows the date of the trial, and will report to me all that he has seen before then. What with one thing and another, we will be able to prove Tressinger's innocence."

"I trust so, Tancred," but I confess I am not sanguine. Besides, our most important witnesses are Dallas and Ilma Celinski, who may leave the country before the trial comes off."

"Have no fear on that score, major. They cannot move a step without my knowing it."

"You are having them watched?"

"Yes. Ivan, Dallas, and Ilma Celinski are all being watched, while Melchizedek, at Lippinton, keeps his eyes on the Maxwells."

"I have no faith in Melchizedek."

"You are wrong. Melchizedek will find out more than you or I put together."

"What, at Lippinton?"

"Major Granby, a word in your ear. The solution of this mystery will be found at Lippinton."

"I don't believe that."

"Don't you? I do, and in a few days, events will prove that my belief is well founded."

This is only a sample of the many conversations which we had of this unsatisfactory nature—all talk, talk, talk, which led to nothing. Yet, in the end, Tancred proved to be right, for the solution of the secret was discovered at Lippinton, though it was revealed to myself and Tancred in London.

It was on Tuesday that we had interviewed Dallas, and as three days had elapsed since then, it was now Saturday, when, somewhere about 2 o'clock, I was seated in the writing-room of the Old Friends' Club, thinking of melancholy things. This arose, not from indigestion, but because I had that day been to see Tressinger, and the sight of one's dearest friend in a prison cell is enough to render sad the most unemotional man. I am not an unemotional man, therefore, you may guess how very dismal I felt, so much so, indeed, that I was just in the mood to call on Tancred and talk over the case. In fact, I had all but made up my mind to do so, when Pointer entered the room, with a letter for me.

"It came a quarter of an hour ago, sir," said this admirable servant, "and, as it was marked 'immediate,' I brought it on here at once."

"Quite right, Pointer," I answered, tearing open the envelope, "I see it is from Mr. Tancred."

That gentleman writes an uncommonly bad hand, but by the aid of my eyeglass, and a little patience, I gathered that he wished to see me at once on important business, the latter two words being underlined.

"I wonder what's up now," said I to myself, as I went out to get my hat. "Call me a hansom, Pointer, with a good horse. Queer, I should get this just as I was thinking of going to see him." I continued, when Pointer went out to execute his commission. "I wonder if he has solved the mystery."

On my way to the Temple I was a good deal exercised in my mind as to the reason of this sudden call, and at length came to the conclusion that Melchizedek had come up from Lippinton to make his report. Evidently he had discovered something extraordinary, else Tancred, who is generally a very cool fellow, would never have sent for me post-haste in this manner. I detest surprises, as they make me feel nervous, so I determined to give Tancred a bit of my mind in the event of the journey proving not worth the trouble.

Cool did I call him? He looked anything but cool when I arrived at the door of his room, for there he was waiting for me, having heard my footsteps as I ascended the stairs, and his first action was to seize me by the hand in order to the more conveniently whisper in my ear.

"Major," he said, hurriedly, "I have discovered the truth."

"[illegible] Indeed! Has Melchizedek come up from Lippinton?"

"Melchizedek! no, but someone has arrived from the same place."

"Maxwell?"

"His daughter."

"What, that blind girl!" I said, in astonishment; "what has she come up for?"

"To tell who killed Mazzucata."

"The deuce! And who is the culprit?"

Tancred reflected for a moment, and made up his mind.

"No, I will not tell you myself," he said, leading me towards the door of his rooms; "I will let Miss Maxwell tell her own story."

"But, Tancred—"

"Hush, major! not a word. Here is Miss Maxwell."

When we entered, she was seated at the far end of the room with her head bent, and her two hands clasped tightly together on her lap. She arose to her feet on hearing our footsteps, and asked the following strange question:

"Is that a police officer?"

"A police officer," I repeated, hurrying forward to shake her by the hand, "good heavens, no, Miss Maxwell. I am Major Granby, who called to see your father at Lippinton."

"Major Granby!" she said, disengaging her hand from mine, "and can you greet me like this, knowing what you do."

"I don't understand," I began, in a puzzled tone, when Tancred interrupted me to address Miss Maxwell in what I thought was a rather stern voice:

"At present, Miss Maxwell, nothing is known to Major Granby."

"Must I tell him also?" she whispered, clasping her hands together. "Oh, surely I need not repeat that shameful story! Mr. Tancred, have mercy, and send for a policeman at once to arrest me."

(To Be Continued).

Lantic Sugar

Has Nothing to Hide

Now that the Government has absolutely prohibited the use of any artificial coloring matter in sugar, we tell you again that we have —never used Beets

—never used Ultramarine Blue
—never used Aniline Dyes
—never used Vegetable Dyes

in refining any of our sugars.

This means that every pound in the hands of your grocer is pure and uncolored.

So—why take chances? Why not insist on having Lantic—the Sugars that have always been pure, and cost no more than any other?

Look for the Red Ball Trade-mark on every Carton and Sack.

124

MAY CONFISCATE

If Russians Do Not Subscribe to Loan.

Petrograd, Cable.—The Provisional Government is seriously considering a widespread scheme of confiscation of private property. This is the result of the relative failure of the war loan, due to the hoarding of currency.

The Government [illegible] will issue a communication [illegible] capitalists for their subscriptions to the loan, and declaring that the aim of the war loan is to prevent the flooding of the country with fresh paper currency not backed with gold. The Government, the communication will say, must, as things stand, issue more and more paper, with the result that a further depreciation of the paper already issued will ensue.

The communication will add that the [illegible] will feel that this kind of confiscation is much more burdensome than voluntary subscriptions to an interest-bearing war loan. [illegible]

Why They Do It

There ought to be no mistake among the American people as to the meaning of what the Germans have done and are doing in Northern France. The devastation and destruction of property and of lives are not incidents of war. They are not mainly directed to achieve certain strategic results. They are the ultimate expression of scientific barbarism and of savage calculation.

The German professors, the German publicists and the German soldiers long ago warned us of what they intended to do once more German armies entered France. From Bernhardi up or down the scale, as one may care to express it, there was the same declaration that France was so to be dealt with that she should never again cross the German path.

The German attack upon France has failed to destroy France. The German invading armies are already retreating, but the present policy of the German soldiers is so to destroy France as to leave open a pathway for later invasion and so to cripple France that she may not be able to recover her strength before Germany is again ready to attack.

It is not to the present but to the future that the destruction in France is now directed. The Germans are not turning Northern France into a desert merely or primarily to impede the advance of victorious allied armies. They are endeavoring to cripple France for a half century at the least, to prevent another such recovery from war as France had in 1870. They are deliberately, methodically, Teutonically laying waste the fields destroying the trees dynamiting the mines wrecking the canals in the hope and with the intent that France shall never again recover.

The policy of extermination with regard to the populations of the invaded districts has been carried forward from the beginning of the invasion. At first we had murder then starvation then that slavery which cost thousands of lives and will leave a permanent mark upon the health of at least one generation of French women and children of the invaded district.

We have had German ruthlessness designed to intimidate a population for the period of the war and for the purposes of the campaign but it is necessary to recognize that the present ruthlessness is directed to the future. It is designed permanently to weaken a nation whose conquest by arms has been beyond the German power in the present war. Germany expects to bleed France as white as possible in this war and to attack her again as soon as possible.

We are now in the presence of one of the supreme atrocities of human history—the deliberate effort to murder a nation, the effort to destroy the women and children, to obliterate every piece of machinery incident to human life and industrial progress. We are seeing a ruthless, scientific barbarism writing its handiwork over what was once the fairest corner of Europe.

Every monument of the French past within the German grasp or within the reach of German artillery is being destroyed. Every factory has been gutted of its machinery, every little detail in the farm life of the peasant turned into ruin. Everything that could possibly contribute to destroying not the present but the future of France has been done.

Let us recognize scientific barbarism for what it is worth. Let us recognize that there is for this spirit no answer save that of defeat: no peace by negotiation now will protect the world from a new recurrence of German invasion, and it is only when there is set forth within the German frontiers a lasting evidence of what German methods lead to that we shall have an assurance of no future repetition in the world of what we are now seeing.

The German people must pay in kind for the ruin of the French villages and the French cities. There must be returned to the French manufacturing districts that machinery stolen out of France. There must be returned to the little people and the little farms those utensils of agricultural life which have been carried off by Germany. Every German invading army brought with it means of transportation to carry back into Germany all plunder that could be collected. Everything of beauty that was not too large to transport has been swept into the German treasury. No army of locusts moving into an Algerian cornfield has ever wrought more complete destruction than this German horde.

And it is to misunderstand the whole German thing to regard this as an accident or an incident of war. It is a final expression of the German determination to destroy that on the ruin it may build Germany. It is a determination of a people regarding themselves as "superior" to wipe out another race that it may enjoy supreme power. Germany is to-day as yesterday seeking permanently to crush France. She is seeking to lay waste that she may cripple, realizing that another blow will be necessary to attain her full purpose.

The German spirit is the spirit of scientific barbarism. Its conquests have been over an unscientific civilization. Its ultimate conquest will be supreme unless mankind recognizes the quality and the character and the peril and deals once and for all with the spirit.

Let us keep clearly in mind in the weeks and months hereafter when German cries for peace are heard what the German actions have been as contrasted with the German professions. They cry out for humanity who murder children and dishonor women. They cry out for civilization who destroy everything that signifies civilization. They weep for the sufferings of mankind who do the things that are now spread forth upon the map of Northern France.

What the Germans are doing in Northern France is clear. Why they are doing it should be equally clear. They are seeking in so far as it is possible to destroy France, to make a recovery of the French people slow and difficult, and therefore to leave the door for new invasions swung wide open. Unless that judgment which is due is visited upon the German people the war will have been in vain. Not because one hates the German people, but because one loves civilization, humanity, decency, one must fight until this German spirit is conquered and until the German people perceive that it leads to destruction and agony not in Picardy and Artois and Champagne alone, but in Bavaria, and Baden, and Brandenburg also.—New York Tribune.

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

A WELL-KNOWN RESIDENT OF PORT HAWKESBURY IS RESTORED TO HEALTH AND STRENGTH.

One of the best known men in the town of Port Hawkesbury, N.S., is Mr. William Duff. He has been a member of the municipal council for [illegible] years, chairman of the school board and held other responsible positions. Mr. Duff's words, therefore, can be taken as coming from a man who has the esteem and respect of his fellow townsmen. He makes no secret of the fact that he believes Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved his life, and that they restored him to good health, after several medical men had failed to cure him. Mr. Duff tells of his illness and cure as follows: "About [illegible] years ago I was attacked with la grippe which left me in a condition difficult to describe. I was attacked with general weakness, and a constant dull pain in the stomach. I became so weak that I could not walk a hundred yards without sitting down to rest. The food I ate continually soured on my stomach. My nerves were all gone and palpitation of the heart and a fluttering sensation all through my chest, especially at night was almost unbearable. I was finally compelled to go to bed, and called in a doctor who said my heart was affected, and treated me for that trouble. After three months attendance, and feeling no better I called in another doctor. His treatment also failed to help me and I tried a third doctor. This one said there was nothing wrong with my heart, that the trouble was due to my stomach. After treating me for a time he advised that I go to the hospital at Halifax. On a previous occasion when I had an attack of rheumatism I had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided that rather than go to a hospital I would again try this medicine. I got a supply of the pills and began using them, in a few weeks I could feel my strength returning, my stomach was giving me less trouble, the palpitation of the heart was relieved, and after a further use of the pills I felt as well as ever [illegible] in my life. I can truly say that I feel more thankful than words can express for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me."

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A DUTCH PROPOSAL

In Holland a Suitor Goes Through a Curious Form

A curious old custom still exists in many provinces of Holland. If a young man is in love with a girl, and wishes to ask her hand in marriage, he goes about it in the following manner.

He buys a small, sweet [illegible] cake, and, wrapping it up in soft paper, proceeds to the house of his [illegible] the midst of the family [illegible] a word he [illegible] woman he wishes to make his wife, and he lays the [illegible]

If she accepts [illegible] the cake [illegible] [illegible]

If, on the other hand, [illegible] to have nothing more to do with her admirer, she [illegible] the cake [illegible] on the table [illegible]

If, however, [illegible] favorably and [illegible] the father takes [illegible] to ask about [illegible] and if he can afford to [illegible] for a wedding journey [illegible] the usual wedding journey of all Dutchmen. The girl [illegible] for about six weeks. [illegible] which to marry.

Redpath
SUGAR

is made in one grade only—the highest. So there is no danger of getting "seconds" when you buy Redpath in the original Cartons or Bags.

"Let Redpath Sweeten it."

2 and 5 lb. Cartons—
10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.

Canada Sugar Refining Co., Limited, Montreal.

6

Rubber Soled Canvas Footwear

Fleet Foot & Lifebuoy Lines . . .

Summer comfort for little money. Drop in and see the range we are showing. Some real dressy ideas in ladies lines.

The Home of Good Groceries' Week-end Specials

4 lbs. good sound figs -	25c
2 lbs. apricots - - -	25c
2 lbs. peaches - - -	25c

One doz. sweet sunkist oranges for 25c.

Butter and Eggs Wanted

Falconer Bros.

Delayed Shipments Just Arrived . . .

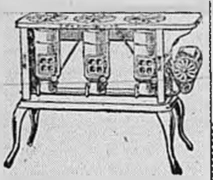
Now is the time to get goods that have been almost impossible to get. We have just got in delayed shipments, bought last fall at last last year's prices.

Cotton, Silk and Real Cashmere Hosiery From 15c to 60c. To-day's values 25c to $1.00

Gloves in kid, silk and mercerized lisle, and chamoise lisle. Floor coverings, linoluems, and oilclothes. Get them quick, they are going fast. We cant replace them.

Bring your butter and eggs And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.



To-day there are over 2,500,000 women are using New Perfection and will verify the delicious cooking results.

The reason is the long, blue chimney.

For sale at

Thomson's Hardware Store

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS

To

Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganotawan River
Lake of Bays
Kawartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourists tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares, with liberal stop overs.

GET YOUR TICKET IN ADVANCE

J. S. Cameron, Agent, Port Elgin, Both telephones.

WILLOW CREEK

On May 20th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Gottschalk, death claimed the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Menno Musselman. Deceased was but 2½ years of age, and had been ill only a short time. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved in their sad loss of their little son. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Gischler, and was largely attended. The father was away working in St. Thomas, when his little boy died.

Messrs F Schnittker, C. McDougall and T. Wrightson, now use Ford cars. This makes 17 east of the Goderich road road on the 4th. con.

Planting potatoes this year is quite a problem, a little too much wet.

We read conscription will come. Why not conscription in wealth, and why not begin with the big fellows in parliament and work down ?

Altho Sunday was wet, the services were largely attended Sunday morning

---

MONKMAN—In Arran Tp., on Monday May 17th Charles Gilbert Monkman, aged 71 years, 7 months and 11 days.

There are thousands of children who are bright but frail—not sick but underdeveloped—they play with their food—they catch colds easily and do not thrive—they only need the pure, rich liquid-food in to start them growing and keep them going. Children relish SCOTT'S and it carries rare nutritive qualities to their blood streams and gives them flesh-food, bone-food and strength-food. Nothing harmful in SCOTT'S.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont. 16-3

TOWN TOPICS

Harold Ryckman of Owen Sound has been visiting at Mr. G. McMurray's.

Mrs. J. A. Chapman is visiting in Toronto.

Pte. D. Kelleher of Port Elgin, was reported among the wounded on Saturday.

Bread dropped a cent in Port Elgin Monday, and is now 11 cents.

Miss J. Carr left last week to visit in Toronto.

Mrs. A. McNab, Sarnia, is visiting her mother, before going to Cartwright, Man.

Miss Mona Martin is visiting in Toronto.

Mr. A. V. Kellum, of Royal Bank, Elmwood, visited frien is here over Sunday.

The potatoes look good in the gardens just now.

It took great courage to start out with the first straw hat.

Mr. Neil McDougall the president of the Board of Agriculture, for this district, was in town last week, consulting with Secretary Wismer concerning the annual meeting, which will be held soon.

The W. C. T. U. county convention is to be held in Port Elgin on the 20th and 21st. The local union, under the presidency of Mrs. Vanslyke, are making preparations for many delegates.

Delegates from Port Elgin to the Liberal convention at Tara are: Messrs. Izzard, Saylor, McCallum, Stevens, Geddes, Cavin. The alternates are: Messrs McEwing, Schwartz, R Bell, McPherson, J. Henderson, Dr. Power.

Two cables sent from England last Thursday morning reached the local agent, Mr. Crawford, at 10.20. Of course we are about five hours ahead of English time. However, it shows a rapid service, cables doing the distance in about six or seven hours.

Sergt. Boyce, of Windsor has been in charge of the recruiting here and in Southampton the past few weeks, while Sergt. Stout was moved to Paisley. Sergt. Boyce says he had little encouragement from eligible young men in Port Elgin. He has been two years in France, and has a six weeks furlough, which is being used in recruiting in Military District No. 1.

Sanitary inspector Lowry has been busy this past few weeks looking up neglectful citizens. Mr. Lowry says the town is in good shape, and somewhat cleaner than in previous years. He notes considerable junk being left around some places and urges everyone to take an interest in keeping their premises neat and tidy. Good prices can be realized for old iron, and the wood lying around in old implements, etc., might be profitably used to kindle fires. A clean town means clean people.

In a letter to his brother, Mr. A. F. George, of Port Elgin, Capt. A. D. George, of the 141st battalion, notes that his battalion along with nearly 6000 other troops crossed the ocean safely some time ago, and were now in camp in England. Capt. George was made ship's adjutant, and the letter enclosed a large package of ship's papers showing the various orders given during the voyage. They are voluminous, but interesting, and were sent to Capt. George's brother here for safekeeping, and as a memento of the voyage.

The school board met on Monday last, with all the members present, and everyone on time, except the secretary, who was one minute late for the first time. The business was small. The board was pleased with the progress of the school under Mr. Aylesworth, and congratulated him on the excellent work being done. New maps were ordered, and a Meridian globe. The coal matter was not settled, local dealers still being unable to quote the prices. Mr. Aylesworth was appointed an examiner for the entrance examinations.

No one likes to see boys and girls enjoying themselves better than does the editor of The Times, but we want to call the attention of the lads and lassies that they should play ball in the vacant lots, and greens, rather than on the streets. Windows are expensive, and more than that there is danger from the ever increasing auto traffic. The other evening a number of young lads playing a game severely hurt Mrs. Wismer, who was struck with a batted ball. Of course, the boys and girls mean no harm, but the average street is not wide enough for ball games, and it would be better to play them on the greens or vacant lots before the constable is asked to take action. It is against the law to use public thoroughfares for this purpose.

Save and Serve

Serve your country by helping in the accumulation of savings; remember that thrifty individuals make a prosperous nation. Also the larger the people's savings, the more able will the country be to bear the burdens of the war.

The readjustment period after the war will be a trying time for those without money. Be prepared for this by opening a savings account in the Bank of Nova Scotia and depositing regularly from your income. 51

The Bank of Nova Scotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ [illegible]
RESERVE FUND - - [illegible]
TOTAL RESOURCES over [illegible]

PORT ELGIN BRANCH
C. Curtiss, Manager

Summer Millinery

Straw hats, Crepe hats, Also Sport hats in pique corduroy and ratine.

Also the latest styles and shades

MISS M. BAKER
Arlington Block

Mr. Wyant has purchased a Ford.

Entrance exams. begin Wednesday June 20.

Mr. A. F. George is in Toronto on business.

Mrs. Edwards of Sault Ste. Marie, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Sees.

Mrs. Byam and Miss Chambers of Toronto, are guests at Dr. Chambers'.

Pte. Maurice Gilbert is in hospital in England, having developed hernia.

The Buyers Guide will tell you where to buy.

Mr. Geo. Simpson, of Toronto was in town a few days.

Dr. Sid Campbell and wife of Trenton spent last week at Dr. Chambers'.

Kincardine races have been postponed to Thursday.

Delegates to Tara from No. 2 Saugeen are J. J. Hillis, A. Brunton, John Rushton.

Miss Duncan, of the High school staff, is back again after recovering from her illness.

Liberals from the North Riding of Bruce are assembling at Tara to-morrow afternoon.

Dr. and Mrs. Campbell of Elmwood, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Geddes.

Mr. W. W. McGillivray, inspector for the Bank of Hamilton, was a guest of his father here on Monday.

Archie McLean, a Kincardine gardener, sold during the month of May 1381 bunches of green onions, all home-grown.

Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Jamieson and daughter of Hespeler, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Jamieson.

The first garden party is billed for Friday night at the home of Col. Cameron, under the auspices of the Red Cross workers of S. S. No. 5.

The delegates to the Baptist convention at Durham next week are, Messrs. McCannel, McDonald and Nicholson.

Mr. Armstrong auditor for the A. O. U. W., was in town last week, on his rounds looking after the finances of the various lodges.

The sale of cattle owned by Mr. Cass of Chesley, was cancelled Saturday. The sale was begun by Auctioneer Cavin, but Mr. Cass thought he was not getting high enough prices. Finally some were sold privately.

A Rally Service of the young people will be held in the Evangelical church next Monday 8 p.m. Rev. F. C. Berger, of Cleveland, Ohio, will deliver a lecture. Rev. J. G. Litt, A. M. will fill the pulpit Sunday morning and evening.

Many friends of Miss Celie Cassidy will be pleased to know that she passed highest in her class in her probation for nurse at a Chicago hospital, receiving the commendation of the officers in charge.

The Milverton Sun notes that Rev. C. N. Paddon received an increase in salary from $1050 to $1200 to take effect from his induction. Mr. Paddon is pastor of the Presbyterian church there, and many friends here will be pleased.

Mrs. H. D. McLaren, Mrs. Geo. Black, Miss Mann, and Miss McIntosh were at Hanover last week attending the Presbyterial. The gathering was a large one and the sessions were much enjoyed. Mrs. McLaren was again elected treasurer. Mr. Black attended the Presbytery meeting.

The Calgary Herald had the following item which will be of interest here: "At the First Baptist church on Wednesday evening, May 23, the marriage of Mr. George Richardson Robertson and Miss Minnie Marie Simmon, both of Calgary, was solemnized by the Rev. J. Austin Huntley. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson will reside in Calgary.

Recent purchasers of Chevrolet cars from Power & Coulter are: Messrs. George Seiffert, John Henderson, A. Stornall, Josiah Kolb, Wm. Mesner has a new Gray Dort, and Murdoch Ayls and Robert McVittie have new McLaughlin's, Mr. Albert Esplen has a new Chevrolet, and N. E. Loeder purchased a Ford.

Advertise it in The Times.

CLIP THIS AND PIN ON WIFE'S DRESSER

Cincinnati man tells how to shrivel up corns or calluses so they lift off with fingers.

Ouch ! ! ! ! ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn or hardened callus stops soreness at once, and soon the corn or callus dries up and lifts right off without pain.

He says freezone dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels. If your druggist doesn't have freezone tell him to order a small bottle for you.

Extraordinary Values In Men's and Boys' New Suits

The very best production of Canada's foremost clothes designers and makers are now shown here. Our clothing is known as the finest and best in town and sold here for less money than at any other store.

Men's fine blue serge suits at
$15, 16.50, 18, 20, 22.50 and $25

Men's tweed and worsted suits
$12, 13, 15, 18, 20 and $25

New Shoes

Men's and boys positively the best values on earth. Shoes are one of our hobbies and we are still offering some lines at prices away below present manufacturer's prices.

Headquarters for
Hats, Caps, and Neckwear
and everything that man or boy wears.

Come and see the new goods. It will do you good to see them It will do us good to show them to you. COME

F. R. BARBER

MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

Wallpaper, Wallpaper

WALLPAPER at Pattison's is selling as Cheap as ever. Over 500 lines to choose from, We carry the largest and best stock in Bruce county. Call in and inspect our goods and be convinced. You can save money, by buying wall paper at Pattison's. No trouble to show goods.

All papers trimmed free of charge

Eggs taken in exchange for Wall paper . . .

Electric Vacuum Cleaner For Rent

J. W. Pattison

Furniture Dealer and Undertaker

Red Cross Report From May 12th. to Date

Tea Rooms.
May 12th., W. C. T. U. ladies'	$16.50
May 19th, Soldier's Friend club..	66.16
" 26 Ladies' of the Evangelical church	25.29
June 2nd Sunshine club North Bruce....	41.80
Donations:
From Boy Scout Treasury	3.00
Mr. and Mrs. John Coulter	25.00

GENTS' DEPARTMENT

Felt hats 75 to $2.50
Caps 25c to $1.50
Mexican hats 25 to 50c
Negligee shirts 1 $1.40
Working shirts 50-85c
Cotton night shirts $1
Neckwear 25c to $1.50
Cashmere hose 25to50c
Silk hose 50 cents
Working sox 10 to 50c

Bring us your produce

B. HILKER

A Handy Thing

The handiest thing in the world is a wrist watch, and especially so in the summer weather. You'll be interested in looking at them.

Let us show you one of our fine line of clocks

Rowlands

The Jeweller

A little of Sunlight goes a long way; every particle is pure; there is nothing to harm the clothes or impede the rapid progress of the wash. Every cake of Sunlight Soap carries a $5,000 guarantee of purity. 111

Sunlight Soap

Plan to Spend Dominion Day in Port Elgin

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 24 PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 13, 1917 $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

COMING EVENTS

10c. per line
No notice less than 25c

PATRIOTIC PICNIC—By Dunblane Red Cross, at Campbell's flats, Stirton's bridge, on Thursday, June 14th, at 3 p. m. Supper served. Good program, and a fine time assured. Admission 25c. See bill for particulars.

SPECIAL MEETING—Red Cross ladies are urged to attend a special meeting to-night (Wednesday) in the library at 7.30.

COMMUNION SERVICES will be held in the Presbyterian church on Sunday 17th. Session meeting Friday evening at 7.30 with Preparatory service at 8 o'clock. Rev. John MacDougall, D. D., will preach on Friday evening.

GARDEN PARTY—Plan for the big garden party by the Burgoyne Patriotic society, on Thursday June 28th. Good program of speeches, songs and music. Admission 25 and 15 cents. This is held to assist the cause of the soldiers at the front. All attend.

WAIT FOR IT—The Bazaar by the Ladies' Aid of the Underwood Methodist church, which will be held afternoon and evening on Thursday June 21st. All are invited, from town and country to come to the Methodist church at Underwood on above date. A good time is promised. Don't miss it.

MARRIED

A quiet but very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday evening of last week, at the home of Mrs. Theo Kelly, when her youngest daughter Elvina, was united in holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Milton Thede, only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Thede of Saugeen, Rev. Dr. McDougall officiating.

The bride who was given away by her brother Chas. looked charming dressed in a dainty gown of white silk and wore a veil caught with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of carnations and sweet peas. After congratulations the guests, being only the immediate relatives, sat down to a daintily served dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Thede left Thursday morning for Kitchener and other points. On their return they will take up residence on the 6th of Saugeen.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

LOST—On Saturday night a purse containing about $4. Finder please return to Mrs. Everett, or Times office.

WOOL WANTED—We are ready to pay the highest price for wool. We will canvass the country. Have it ready for us. B. Zelkind, Port Elgin.

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. 429 G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communications in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at 8 p. m. Visiting brethren cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Gus. Smith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE, No. 179, I.O.O.F., of Ontario, meets at 8 o'clock, p.m., every Monday in their hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N.G.; T. Rankin, Rec.-Sec.; D. Geddes, Perm. Sec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer of Marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office in Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE
Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address
LOUIS BLOCH,
23-4tc Owen Sound, Ont.

CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE
Stratford, Ontario
Ontario's Best Business College
Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your courses now and be qualified for a position by Midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for Over 200 Office Assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.
D. A. McLACHLAN, PRINCIPAL

WOMEN WAR WORKERS
Young women can render the country real service by preparing to take position in business offices and banks and relieve young men for war service.
Fifty thousand men will be called up very soon under the Militia Act for home defense—who will take their places in the Business offices and banks? Young women should prepare now at
NORTHERN Business College
Owen Sound, Ontario
SPRING TERM OPENS APRIL 10TH
Circulars Free.
C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal

Poisoning Dogs

Several dogs have been poisoned the past few days, and apparently someone is taking some spite on the dogs

True, The Times has received several letters recently complaining of dogs running over gardens and flower beds, but in a town like Port Elgin, where most people know the owners, it should not be necessary to adopt such brutal tactics as poisoning, and it is hoped there will be no more of it. Those reporting losses are W. Holtz, R. M. Lowry and C. A. Philips, Dr. Wells, Frank Bowen, R. Hanbidge, N. Snyder.

In Memoriam

In memory of our father. Lines found in the private paper of the late Abraham Brand, who died on Saturday, June, 2nd, 1917.

Miss Sue Brand.
Asaph Brand

A VOICE FROM HEAVEN

I shine in the light of God
His image stamps my brow.
Through the shadow of death my feet hath trod,
And I reign in glory now.
No breaking heart is here,
No keen and thrilling pain,
No wasted cheek, where the burning tear
Hath rolled and left its stain.
I have found the joys of heaven,
I am one of the angel band,
To my head a crown is given,
And a harp is in my hand
I have learned the song they sing.
Whom Jesus hath made free,
And the glorious walls of heaven ring
With my new born melody.
No sin, no grief, no pain
Safe in my happy home
My fears all fled, my doubts all slain.
My hour of triumph come.
O friends of my mortal years!
The trusted and the true!
You're walking still in the vale of tears,
But I wait to welcome you.
Do I forget? oh no!
For memory's golden chain,
Shall band my heart to the hearts below
Till they meet and touch again.
Each link is strong and bright
While love's electric flame
Flows freely down, like a river of light
To the world from whence I came.
Do you mourn when another star
Shines out from the glorious sky?
Do you weep when the voice of war
And the rage of conflicts die?
Why then should your tears roll down,
Or your heart be sorely riven,
For another gem in the Saviour's crown
And another soul in heaven!

Barber is paying 45c to 50c for unwashed wool, 50 to 60c for washed.

CARD OF THANKS

The Red Cross of S. S. No. 5 Saugeen, desire to thank Col. Cameron for the use of his fine grounds for their party, and also to especially acknowledge the splendid assistance given by the workers of S. S. 4 and 6.

Card of Thanks

Mr. Fred Schildroth, desires to extend his sincere thanks for the help the neighbors and friends rendered during the fire when his barns were burned.

Card of Thanks

The family of the late Abraham Brand, desire through The Times to thank many friends and neighbors for their kindness in their recent bereavement.

DROP IN AT
FALCONER BROTHERS
And see the new range in
Women's Misses and Children's white canvas shoes and slippers
VERY REASONABLY PRICED

PHONOGRAPHS!
How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.
Louis Bloch's Music Store
Owen Sound

FRUIT!
Week-end Special at Falconer Brothers
The Naval orange season coming to a close, this week the last lot of the famous Sunkist oranges on an sale
100 dozen at 30c per dozen
Fancy lemons 25 cents per dozen
Grape fruit 3 for 25cents
Pineapples, choice Bahamas
Also a few pecks of choice potatoes for seed or table use.
Falconer Bros.

WOOL WANTED
10,000 pounds wanted. Highest market price will be paid Cash or trade.
Bring your wool to the old reliable wool dealer
F. R. Barber

A Large Bible Class

A Bible class with an attendance of 138! Where? In New York? No. Right in the Presbyterian church at Tiverton. Just pause here, and let this sink in, all those interested in Sunday schools.

Last week, an interested member of the Bible class of the Presbyterian church at Tiverton, invited The Times editor to come down on Sunday, and see this large class. It was a surprise to be informed that a class of over 100 adults existed in this section.

So the scribe went to the church at 3 p. m., and upon entering the auditorium thought he had made a mistake, and had got into a special church service.

But not so. Here he saw Mr. P. J. Brown the superintendent, presiding, and giving out a hymn, and we knew then we were surely in the Sunday school. And what a surprise it was! There were 75 children and teachers, and 138 members of the Bible class, making a total of 213, in the village of Tiverton, with a population under 300.

After the singing and devotional, Rev. J. C. Robinson the pastor, came from the rear of the church, where he was sitting with his class, and opened the reading of the lesson. It was in the 19th chapter of John, and concerned the crucifixion of Christ. The reading was responsive. Mr. Robinson then began his exposition of the lesson. Here we found a big part of the reason for such a large attendance. He is a Bible class teacher par excellence. Not only does he hold the large class to the particular points, but by shrewd questions he leads and directs discussion on the part of the class members. Here we find a pastor who is training men and women for leadership, so greatly needed in Canada.

But, you say, the teacher cannot do all the work in a class that size. No. He does not try. It is the team work of the whole class, which has made for the record attendance.

The plan adopted was a contest with captains, who chose sides. Red, white and blue colors and buttons were adopted. E. Surridge leads the Red, Murdoch McNeill the white and Mrs. Steincamp, the blue. The latter leads by one point, but the Reds and the White declare they will finish in the lead. Two more Sundays are yet to come in the contest. The first Sunday one attends he is only counted as a visitor. One must attend two Sundays before being counted as a member, and we might mention just here that if you attend two Sundays you'll want to stay.

The president of the class is Mr. Bert Thomas, the secretary, Dunc. Cameron, and the treasurer, E. McKelar.

With the visitors in the count on Sunday there was an actual attendance of 150. The Times gives the invitation to all its readers to attend this class the next two Sundays. Take your car or your horse out and spend an hour in Tiverton Presbyterian church. The farther the distance you go the more you'll enjoy the treat. Honestly, it would be an inspiration for teachers and pastors in this section who hold their schools in the morning, to go to Tiverton for the afternoon.

But there is another part to this Sunday school. After the opening exercises from 65 to 75 boys and girls go down stairs to a splendidly equipped Sunday school room. There they sit round in circles and listen to their teachers. There were 7 classes. Mrs. Robertson has charge of the primary. The order was excellent and the attention was good.

The officers and teachers are: Miss McLaren, Miss Matheson, Miss Brown, Miss Dewar, Miss Cameron, teachers; George McKay, secretary treasurer.

Superintendent Brown should feel the biggest man in these parts, being head of a school of over 200 scholars in a little village like Tiverton.

Wants 'Em All

A list of contributors to the Y. M. C. A. cause for concessions 6 and 7, Bruce Tp. has been sent to The Times. This list will appear next week. Last week a list of those on con. 6 did appear. There must be other concession lists, and The Times would like them all.

Gravelling in Bruce Township

Sealed tenders, (marked gravel tenders) will be received by the undersigned up till 8 o'clock p. m. Saturday June 16, 1917, for the placing of the following gravel on the Goderich road in Bruce Tp. viz., 280 yards south of Underwood and 240 yards north of Underwood. Tenders to be at so much per yard of gravel delivered on the road where directed by the inspector in charge. Contractor to pay for gravel and half of the inspector's salary, which amounts may be retained by council.

Only good, clean gravel satisfactory to inspector to be used. Contract to be completed by Sept. 15th 1917. Security satisfactory to council required. The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Applications for the office of inspector will also be received till above date.

Peter Dobson, Geo. Baker, committee.

WOOL WANTED
We are ready to pay the highest price for wool. We will canvass the country. Have it ready for us.
B. Zelkind, PORT ELGIN

A Message From Ole Ebenezer Strong

The Times last week received a letter from "Ebenezer Strong." It will be remembered that he contributed some pithy articles to The Times in favor of "Reepocrafy" just before the election of 1911, when the Liberals went down to defeat on the Reciprocity issue.

It will also be remembered that the local Conservatives very fittingly celebrated the event by a big bonfire at the corner near The Times, and the boys good naturedly burned in effigy "Ole Ebenezer Strong"

But things have changed since then and we now have free wheat, one of the Reciprocity articles, and our readers will be interested in the little message from Ebenezer Strong, who is none other than the Rev. W. C. South, of Leaf River, Ill., and who paid a visit here and preached in the U. B. church three weeks ago.

Mr South is now a presiding elder, having a territory covering 300 miles in Illinois state. He is a leader among the officials of his church, and many friends here will rejoice in his steady rise. He is a practical preacher, and a man greatly liked among men

Lief Ribber, Sick. (Ill.)

Dear ed—[illegible] i thot i'd rite ye'z agin i wuz [illegible] glad to c yeaes agin when i wuz up thar so i cudn't help but smile out loud when i [illegible] that yez had free wheat [illegible] jist nother way of spellin ree-poc-ra-ty and when ye sez that feller what bernt ole uncle Ebe in efigy that he shakes the ashes off and rubz his fase an sinds congradulations, an is willin to let bi gons be bi gons for keeps.

If yez c eny ov the peples what ust-ter no me and Mandy, tel em how de-due for me an her. Mandy sez we uns is a commin back up thar sum da but law me i kaint tel yez whin that wil be but yo'se no muster editer whin the wimmin fok's got their hed ye k'not tel what will apen.

i often thinks ov the gud times i usta to have—but i must not rite ov that cauze there comes a tug at mi pur ole hart whin i think ov that.

Now i speckted I'd better quit, for this time kauz Mandy sez its time tu plant more taters an beens an korn an tomatoes an beats. it sort o makes me tired to rite let let a lone to do hit an don't hit beat all how sum foks kin think ov sumfin to due sort o disagreeable like. whin yez don't want to due hit. an whin ye wants to rite, but i must quit rite here kauz Mandie may kum in any minit.

So gud bi Ebenezer Strong.

Messrs. Louis Bloch, of Owen Sound, and W. J. Taylor, of Tara, were in town Tuesday.

TURNER'S

BORN—On Monday, June 11, to Mr. and Mrs. John Schrauk, a daughter.

A number from here attended the Liberal Convention in Tara on Thursday. The delegates appointed from this ward were: Dan Currie, Wm. Muir and Reeve Christie.

Miss Baden, from St. Louis, is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. S. Schrauk.

Mr and Mrs. Dunc McKinnon, of Paisley, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Peter McKinnon.

The Honor Roll of the school section No. 4, 5, and 6, which was on view at Colonel Cameron's on Friday night has been placed in St. Andrew's church Saugeen. This Roll was cut out by a number of the young people in charge of the committee work and they deserve great credit for the skilful way in which it was done.

A successful raising was held at R. D. Pollock's on Tuesday evening when a bent was raised to the barn. Mr. D. McLeod of Port Elgin was the framer and made a very neat and well fitting frame. After tea Piper Colonel McLeish delighted the Scotchmen with his bagpipe selections and as darkness came upon the audience they repaired to the house where they honored their partners and corners addressed till another day came upon them.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Christie attended the funeral of the late Miss McLaren, at Paisley, on Monday.

Mrs. D. Currie, of Port Elgin, is visiting Mr. Neil Bell.

The logs that were bought here in the winter for the Knectel Co. were loaded and shipped to Walkerton last week.

Miss Alma Karcher spent a few days with her aunt Mrs. Schwab, of Chesley.

Mr. and Mrs S. M. Lowry, of Port Elgin, motored to Muir Bros., on Sunday.

Mr. Neil Cameron of New Brunswick, and sister Miss Phemia of Paisley spent Saturday with their uncle, Colonel Cameron.

Red Cross Women Working for Dominion Day

The Red Cross have decided to prepare for the big crowds on Dominion Day and are to serve lunches on the grounds and up town as well.

At the meeting last Wednesday evening the president, Mrs. Barber, presented the matter to the ladies, and they will undertake the task of assisting to look after the large crowd, and to this end all the ladies in town and country who are interested, are invited to assist.

Booths will be erected on the grounds, and a suitable place will be found up town.

The ladies' are meeting to-night for further plans.

The proceeds of the big celebration, over and above the expenses, go to Red Cross this year, and everyone can unite in making this the banner celebration. Begin now to invite your friends here for Dominion Day.

Liberal Convention

There were 171 accredited delegates at the Liberal convention at Tara last Thursday, and along with many ladies and gentlemen there were nearly 300 people in Wain's hall.

President Joe R. Chambers opened the meeting, and after a few brief remarks, announced that he would retire from office this year. A good deal of organization business occupied the attention of the gathering until 4 o'clock. A resolution relative to conscription was put forward by Wiarton delegates, asking that the candidates support conscription. The men in nomination practically agreed to this.

Recommendations of the retiring executive were presented to the meeting by E. R. Sayles, the recommendations including a regular organized association with constitution and a fee for membership. It also suggested the holding of a picnic, where the chiefs of the party would be invited, and the people given a chance to hear and meet the party leaders. These recommendations were adopted, and the incoming executive empowered to draft the constitution.

President Malcolmson, who succeeded Mr. Chambers, then cleared the decks for the nomination of the candidate.

Those nominated by the convention, are given in order nominated, as follows: C. M. Bowman, W. McDonald, J. E. Campbell, E. Roy Sayles, John McAuley, Alex Mewhinney, Warden Izzard, A. McCannel, Archie McLean, James Malcolm., Dr. Hacking, P. A. Malcolmson, Dr. Hough, J. J. Hunter, F. E. Coohme, T. Dolphin, Gid. Kastner, James Douglas.

All the above men, in brief speeches, withdrew with the exception of Messers J. E. Campbell, John McAuley, Alex Mewhinney, Alex McCannel and P. A. Malcolmson.

The first vote showed McAuley, 58, Mewhinney, 36, Campbell, 35, McCannel, 27, Malcolmson, 14.

The second vote showed McAuley 71, Mewhinney 42, Campbell, 23, McCannel 27.

The final vote elected McAuley by a good majority, Messers Campbell and Mewhinney withdrawing their names.

The convention closed at 7 o'clock with the usual cheers and the singing of the National Anthem.

There were quite a number of women present, who whiled out the proceedings by knitting socks, while the men talked. Wiarton had a number of prominent ladies present, including Mrs. (Dr.) Bay, Mrs. Parke, Miss Miller, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Legan.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Officers of the association elected were:

President—P. A. Malcolmson, Kincardine.
Vice-president—E. Roy Sayles, Port Elgin.
Secretary—W. J. Taylor, Tara

The township vice presidents and district chairmen were:

Kincardine Tp.—Vice-president, Geo. Norman.

Bruce Tp.—Vice-president, James McEwen. Chairmen: Alex G. Montgomery, James Johnston, Archie McLean, Alex. McGillivray, Geo. Brown, Dan McLean.

Saugeen Tp.—Vice president, D. Smith. Chairmen: Alex. McCannell, Alex. Bell, Alex Lamont, A. J. Lamont, A. J. Ross.

Eastnor Tp.—Vice-president, L. Brown.

Lindsay Tp.—Vice-president, Charles Wicher.

St. Edmunds Tp.—Vice-president, William Gillies.

The Conservative convention is being held to-day at Wiarton. The gathering will be a large one. It will select a man to oppose Wm. MacDonald, and the choice will likely be H. A. VanDusen, of the Tara Leader.

Tenders for Bill Posting

The Dominion Committee asks for tenders for bill posting to be in the secretary's hands not later than Monday, June 18th, at 6 p. m. Plan of route may be seen at The Times office. The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

E. R. Sayles, Secy treas.

Mrs. Johnson of Toronto, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Falconer.

Mrs. H. D. McLaren is visiting at Bayfield.

STILL CONTINUES
Our big Underselling Event is still continuing. A big lot of new goods added. Bargains galore
H. KATZ

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for 300 lines or over in a year 5c a line; regular weekly users of liners, 8c per line casual users of liners, 10c per line Black type, count two lines for one.

McMurray's for pure ice cream.

Oats for sale. North End Store.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

Fleet Foot shoes at F. R. Barber's,

Leave your order for Aster plants at Falconer Bros.

Some seed corn still on hand. North End Store.

The new straw hats are being shown at F. R. Barber's.

If you want a pint of good cream try McMurray's.

Another shipment of feed wheat. North End Store.

McMurray keeps good milk for sale,

Boys wool and cotton Jersies at South End.

Just arrived, 12 varieties of Gong soup at Eaton's. Try them. Five cents.

Aster plants—the very choicest varieties, for sale at Falconer Bros.

Dyola Dyers in Black, Navy and all scarce colors, now in stock. South End.

Chick feed—5c lb. the right kind. North End Store.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

Crego Aster plants—and all best kinds for sale at Falconer Bros. Leave your order.

A nourishing food is Gong soup. 5c. at Eaton's.

Men's Balbriggan and Merino underwear at the South End.

Reliable work shirts and heavy shoes priced away below present market prices now being offered at F. R. Barber's.

Full Stock field seeds, mangel, turnip, carrot. Rennie's. North End Store.

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koebke's

Flower and Garden seeds—Rennie's and D. M. Ferry's. North End store.

Try Eaton's Butcher shop for Coleman's hams and rolls.

Try Koebke for your next grocery or fruit order

Have you tried Gong's soups? They are all new and fresh at Eaton's Only 5c per package.

William's shoes, solid leather goods at lower prices, at South End.

Koebke sells Neilson's soldier chocolate Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front

Just arrived, a splendid assortment of Misses and children's wash dresses. Prices 50c to $1.75 each. North End Store.

Red Cross supplies. Special prices in grey Scotch fingering yarn. South End.

Worth while savings—Every shrewd individual will consider these savings worth while when he sees the extra values we are offering in men's and boy's suits, raincoats, summer underwear, shirts and fine and heavy shoes. F. R. Barber.

Hogs dropped to $14.50 per cwt.

BORN—On June 7th, to Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Hyde, Bruce Tp., a daughter.

BORN—On June 5th to Mr. and Mrs. Vorwerk Ernst, 44 Alma St. Kitchener, a daughter. (still born).

Notice to the Public

We have received word from headquarters that there will be no reduction in price of Ford cars this year, but there is no guarantee that the price will not be increased. If you are thinking of cars let us demonstrate the Ford to you. It may be your best buying time NOW.

L. M. Sees, Agent.

A New 1918 Model Chevrolet

A new model Chevrolet is shown at Power & Coulter's garage. This model is built on the same lines as the famous McLaughlin. Beginning first with the top, it is the one-man design. The body is enameled with the McLaughlin green, stripe, and contains robe rail and foot rest. The front has extending fenders, while the radiator is of the interchangeable type. Demountable rims, are an extra feature of this model, with an extra rim and carrier in the rear. The new model is very graceful, and with its tilted windshield is right up to the minute in the automobile world. Of course, the price of this car is a trifle higher than the regular model. We are also showing three handsome new Gray-Dorts. If interested in a car call upon Power & Coulter, or drop us a card. We will be pleased to demonstrate any of our McLaughlin, Chevrolet or Gray-Dort models.

Special Prices on Fruit
This week at McMurray's
EXTRA FANCY SUNKIST ORANGES . . . .
Reg 40c oranges for 35c per doz
" 30c " " 25c "
" 20c " " 17c "
Choice pineapples at 15c each
Extra fancy California lemons at 20 cents per doz.
Strawberries for Friday and Saturday, at 20c per box
Bananas 25c per dozen

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for more than forty years.
Enough for 5c. to produce 50 large loaves of fine, wholesome nourishing home made bread. Do not experiment, there is nothing just as good.
MADE IN CANADA
E.W.GILLETT CO. LTD
TORONTO, ONT.
WINNIPEG MONTREAL

ACROSS AUSTRALIA.

Forty One Miles Undone On Transcontinental Railway.

Only forty-one miles of track are now needed to complete the Italian transcontinental railway. The importance of his news can hardly be overestimated, for the completion of the small piece of trackage promises to have an influence on Australian development comparable in a way with that exerted upon the development of this country by the opening of the Union Pacific nearly half a century ago. The immediate effect will be to link up the capitals of the five continental states of the Australian commonwealth by establishing an unbroken line of communication through Brisbane, on the east, through Sydney, Melbourne and Adelaide, to Perth, on the west, a distance just a little short of thirty-five hundred miles.

The Australian transcontinental railway has been long in the building, and is the result of the linking up of isolated stretches of lines constructed in and by the different states rather than of a carefully matured programme of development. By the year 1889 railway communication had been established between the four capital cities of Brisbane, Sydney, Melbourne and Adelaide, a distance of 1,790 miles, through the connecting at the borders of the state railway lines of Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia, which line was in time extended from Adelaide northwest to Port Augusta, a distance of 260 miles. About the same time Western Australia had built a state railway eastward for 375 miles from Perth to Kalgoorlie, in the heart of the gold fields.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY
KINGSTON ONTARIO
ARTS
MEDICINE EDUCATION
APPLIED SCIENCE
Mining, Chemical, Civil, Mechanical and Electrical Engineering.
HOME STUDY
Arts Course by correspondence. Degree with one year's attendance.
Summer School July and August
Navigation School December to April
15 GEO. Y. CHOWN, Registrar

Nothing was done looking toward the tracking of this 1,063 mile gap between Port Augusta, in South Australia, and Kalgoorlie, in Western Australia, until 1907, when the Commonwealth government ordered a preliminary survey of a line to connect these extremities of the existing lines from the east and west. As a result of that survey the commonwealth decided, four years later, to construct the railway as a government line. Work was started at both ends in September, 1912, and the construction has progressed so rapidly that there now remain only forty-one miles of track to connect the Port Augusta and Kalgoorlie division.

It is probable that the opening of the first Australian transcontinental line will have the same immediate effect as did the opening of the first American transcontinental line. The Australian railway, and more particularly the thousand-mile stretch between Port Augusta and Kalgoorlie, passes through a relatively poor and barren land, which does not seem now susceptible of the same agricultural development as the land pierced by the Union Pacific. And again the largest results cannot be anticipated from the Australian trunk line because of the lack of uniformity of gauge throughout its length, a defect traceable to the different gauges adopted by the different states in the first [illegible] of railroad building. In the trip from Brisbane to Perth four transfers of passenger and freight will be necessary, and the trouble, delay and added expenses to these transfers, already of appreciable magnitude along the eastern section of the line, will naturally become more serious along the entire line as the volume of business increases.

Notwithstanding the existence of this present defect, which the Commonwealth government is already to remedy, the completion of the Australian transcontinental railway will undoubtedly facilitate interstate trade and, in conjunction with its principal branches, will allow the produce of inland areas to find its natural outlet at the nearest port.—Philadelphia Commercial Museum.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE
SPECIALISTS
Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.
Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Consultation Free
DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.
Please Mention This Paper.

Wrong Quarry.

With a wild sweep the wind tore round a corner and removed the hat from the head of a respectable and near-sighted citizen, who chanced to be passing, says Tit-Bits.

Feeling wildly round, the man thought he saw a hat in his yard, behind a high fence. Hastily his yard, behind a high ed to chase it, but each time he thought he had caught it, it got another angry move on. Then a woman's angry voice broke on his ear.

"What are you doing there?" she demanded, shrilly.

He explained mildly that he was only trying to retrieve his hat. Whereupon the woman said, in wonder:

"Your hat? Well, I don't know where it is, but that's our little black hen you're chasing."

A PERFECT MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Baby's Own Tablets is the ideal medicine for little ones. They regulate the bowels and stomach; break up colds; cure constipation and indigestion; expel worms, and make teething easy. They are guaranteed to be absolutely free from injurious drugs and may be given to the youngest child with perfect safety. Concerning them, Mrs. T. M. Forknall, Mise City, B. C., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my three little ones and have found them the best medicine a mother can give her children." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FUMIGATE.

Sulphur is a Splendid Deodorizer and Disinfectant.

Sulphur is a powerful disinfectant and deodorizer. The fumes or gas is intensely irritating to the throat when inhaled and may produce dangerous inflammation of the respiratory passages. For this reason, when burning sulphur for the purposes of disinfection it is always important to avoid exposing oneself to the gas.

The sulphur to be burned should be placed on a shovel or iron steel plate, in the room to be fumigated, all outlets to be closed. Break the sulphur up in small bits and pour alcohol over it; then set fire to it and close the door to the room or closet.

For every 1,000 cubic feet of air space to be disinfected five pounds of sulphur are necessary.

The time of exposure required for bacterial infections is 24 hours. For fumigation necessary to destroy mosquitoes and other vermin a shorter time will suffice, about six or eight hours.

Sulphur gas bleaches fabrics r material dyed with vegetable or aniline dyes. It destroys linen or cotton by rotting toy fibre. It injures most metals.

Sulphur is very destructive to all forms of animal life, and this property renders it a valuable agent for the extermination of rats and other vermin.

During the housecleaning season sulphur may be used with advantage in disinfecting dark closets and musty rooms. It is useful in all localities where rats and mice are found.

It must be borne in mind, however, that all draperies in carpets will fade; also wallpaper, if exposed to the fumes of sulphur; hats and clothing are also bleached by it.

After a locality has been disinfected it should be thrown wide open to admit the air and sunshine for twenty-four hours.

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN!!
LET a woman ease your suffering. I want you to write, and let me tell you of my simple method of home treatment, send you ten days' free trial, postpaid, and put you in touch with women in Canada who will gladly tell what my method has done for them.
If you are troubled with weak, tired feelings, headache, backache, bearing down sensations, bladder weakness, constipation, catarrhal conditions, pain in the sides, regularly or irregularly, bloating, sense of falling or misplacement of internal organs, nervousness, desire to cry, palpitation, hot flashes, dark rings under the eyes, or a loss of interest in life, write to me today. Address: Mrs. M. Summers, Box g Windsor, Ont.

MAN AND WIFE IN DUEL.

Father and Mother of French Poet Fought With Swords.

Charles Coypeau, Sieur d'Assouci, a French poet and musician of the seventeenth century, relates in one of his "Adventures" that his father and mother were one day engaged in a discussion upon questions of law when a dispute arose between them with regard to the precise signification and bearing of a provision in Justinian's code with respect to the rights of brothers.

Ultimately the quarrel waxed so furious that the disputants lost all control of themselves, defied each other to single combat and proceeded to settle their difference and determine the mind of the ancient legislator by a fight with swords.

This singular duel took place in their son's presence. Coypeau pere was an advocate by profession and a member of one of the French parliaments. Madame was exceedingly diminutive and had to wear exceptionally high pattens to approach the ordinary stature of women, but she was fierce and domineering in temper. The combat appears to have been a draw battle, and the sense of Justinian remained as obscure and debatable as ever.—Exchange.

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

"I am convinced that Tompkins is beginning to make a lot of money." "Why do you think so?" "He's been going around lately boasting how much happier a man is when he's poor."—Puck.

She—What do you suppose Harold meant by sending me those flowers? Also She—He probably meant to imply that you were a dead one.—Jack o' Lantern.

That's it! Clean and—
—Free from Dust
"SALADA"
Sealed Packets Only • Never in Bulk
Black—Mixed—Natural Green E212

SAND PAINTING.

Strange Old Art of the Navajo Indians.

In Gallup, New Mexico, in the land of the painted desert, where the flaming colors of every sunset are outdone by the bright, barbaric hues of rocky hill and canyon, says Frederic J. Haskin, there flourishes one of the least known and most beautiful of the arts of primitive people. In the fastnesses of the Navajo reservation, hedged about by miles of lava-strewn mesa, dwell the sand painters, priests and artists of a barbarian tribe.

Their art is like music, in that it has a form and beauty but no permanence. No one knows how well the masters of the past worked on it; of their works no trace remains. There is nothing but word-of-mouth tradition, handed down from father to son, to keep green the memory of those who wrought patiently and well. Literally their names are written in the sand.

Like all the art of savage people, the work of these Indian craftsmen is fraught with a mystic religious significance, but in and for itself, it has all the claims to respect of any of the arts. The sand painter has for his canvas of circle of pure, smooth, white sand, 10 or 12 feet in diameter. This sand has been carefully selected from a country side of sand; it has been cleaned and purified with endless patience. The artist smooths its surface until it is as plane as a polished table.

On that smooth surface he traces queer and intricate designs—designs formed of jagged lines—of broken triangles, of the conventionalized whirling cross of fire and the swastika.

Nowhere does the pattern merge slovenly into the background. Pure white meets pure red or blue as though the colors were blocks of stone cunningly ground to fit each other. Every line and angle has its hidden significance; but in striving to tell a tribal legend with grains of desert sand, the wrinkled old priest has caught the spirit of beauty itself.

The art of sand painting is not confined to the Navajos, but this tribe has brought it to the highest pitch of perfection. The method in which each painting is made has been conventionalized by many centures of usage. The sand painting is probably the oldest of the Navajo arts, although it was one of the last to come to the knowledge of the white man, being kept secret even after Arizona and New Mexico came into United States possession on account of the religious character of the ceremony.

Even in fishing for suckers it's a good plan to bait your hook with flattery.

TITLES IN RUSSIA.

Where There Are Only Two Classes, Nobles and Peasants.

Contrary to the laws existing in England and Sweden, in Russia when a lady belonging to a titled family marries a Russian gentleman without a title she takes her husband's name entirely, and the only right left to her of her former title is to write on her visiting cards and official papers, "Mrs. So-and-so, born Princess, Countess or Baroness So-and-so." Her children are called by their father's name. There are only a few exceptions to this rule.

In Russia no middle class or gentry are known. There are only nobles and peasants. The Czar, however, grants sometimes for special merit the right to be styled a nobleman and also for the same reason the titles of count and baron and occasionally that of prince.

All those merchants who have kept their firms always flourishing for a hundred years have the right to receive the foreign title of baron. This law was made by Peter the Great over 200 years ago, but the merchants very seldom accept this title and generally decline the privilege.

In former days when the peasants were still slaves they had no family names, but were called by their father's Christian name. Peter's son was called son of Peter—in Russian Petrov; so also Smornov—Simon's son; Ivanov—Ivan's (John) son, and so on. When slavery was abolished and the emancipation proclaimed by the Emperor Alexander II. they all kept these names. Since then many of them have received the right to belong to the class of nobles.

The Russian clergy, belonging to the class of peasants, for it very seldom happens that nobles become priests, have special family names. Their names mean always a feast day or a precious stone or something connected with the church. In former days the clergy was a class apart, and a son of a clergyman was bound to be a clergyman, and when they first entered the Church they chose a name for themselves.—London Answers.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

For Round Shoulders.

An excellent exercise to straighten round shoulders for women who have to sit a good deal is performed by placing a thin stick or wand across the back and letting it run out through the bent elbows. The arms are bent so that the hands rest on the chest. Keep the arms and sholders pressed back and down and walk about the room in this way for five or ten minutes.

A musket in the hand is worth two in the armory.

EIGHTH ANNUAL
TORONTO
FAT STOCK SHOW
UNION STOCK YARDS
TORONTO
December 7th and 8th, 1917
Write for Premium List To-day

White Cake 10c.
White Liquid 10c.
for
Men's, Women's and Children's Shoes
Looks Better
Lasts Longer
Easy to use
Best for Shoes
2 IN 1 WHITE SHOE DRESSING
F. F. DALLEY CO. OF CANADA LTD. HAMILTON, CAN.

Causes of Worry.

Things to Worry About—That the coal supply can't last more than two or three centuries longer.

That eternity is just as long in the nether regions of the next world as in the more exalted portions where the climatic and other conditions are more generous.

That there is getting to be so much prosperity in the country that even the farmers and the wage workers are trying to get hold of some of it.

That if the hair cut off each day in the barber shops of New York City were placed end to end, it would reach from New York to San Francisco, with a ten days' stopover at Grand Canyon.

That the market price of dinosauruses has risen eighteen thousand per cent. since the paleozoic period.—Judge.

ZAM-BUK
Purely Herbal—No poisonous coloring
Antiseptic—Stops blood-poison
Soothing—Ends pain and smarting, etc.
Pure—Best for baby's rashes.
Heals all sores.
50c. box. All Druggists and Stores

PEAKS 11,000 FEET HIGH

Made Accessible by Kootenay Central Branch, C.P.R.

The wonderful icefields and eleven-thousand-feet-high peaks of the Purcell range, which the construction of the Kootenay Central branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway has rendered accessible to mountain climbers, are described and illustrated by Mr. C. W. Stone in the Canadian Alpine Journal for 1916. The approach to Mount Ethelbert, a peak which arrests the attention at Spillimacheen Station, seems almost to have overwhelmed the writer with its beauty. "Before us," he says, "lay a lake of exquisite blue color resting like a jewel in a setting between two rugged peaks, which mirrored in the clear water, rose abruptly thousands of feet on either hand like grim guardians of a lovely treasure. Beyond the lake the lifted eyes rested on a terrace stretched across the valley like a giant curtain eighteen hundred feet above the lake, down whose verdant slopes two gleaming cascades traced their foaming course and filled the whole amphitheatre with the sounds of falling water. Still farther and higher in the background, great snow crests appeared, inscrutably looking down upon us."

Three considerable parties of Alpine climbers, numbering nearly forty in all, mostly from the United States, made ascents in this region during the past summer in the invitation of Mr. A. H. MacCarthy, an enthusiastic member of the Canadian Alpine Club, who has a fine ranch at Wilmer in the Windermere district. Under Mr. MacCarthy's leadership important explorations have been made up the various creeks piercing the eastern slopes of the Selkirk and Purcell ranges, Mr. MacCarthy being of the opinion that for interest and variety and spectacular beauty this mountain region is without rival on the North American Continent, and as soon as roads and trails are built will attract many tourists who have hitherto been content with the more beaten path of the C. P. R. main line.

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN
Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.
Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $5.00, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.
GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $25.00 and $35.00, that defy detection when worn.
MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING ST. W. HAMILTON, ONT.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

Charm of Prahova.

No traveler who has visited Roumania returns without praising the wonders of Prahova. Here, after one has passed the heights of Predeal, is a charming valley in the midst of forests, of great rocks and spouting waters. The landscape evokes recollections of Switzerland, with architecture that recalls the orient. Azuga, Bustena, are seated on the bank of a tumultuous river. Farther away is Sinaii. The court and the Roumanian aristocracy have built in this delightful valley their summer homes. There are no large hotels. All that made life at Bukharest is taken by summer sojourners to the shadows offered by Prahova and its sweet freshness. Near Sinaia the valley widens and Campina appears, the chief city of the coal lands and of the salt mines. Animals that are at liberty assemble about a block of salt to lick it, for salt, like petroleum, is everywhere.

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, Etc.

Primitive Reptiles.

The tautara, or tuatera, is an almost extinct lizard-like reptile (Sphenodon punctatum, now found only on certain rocky islets in the bay of Plenty, northern New Zealand. It is of great scientific interest for the reason that it is the only surviving representative of the order of prosauria, or primitive reptiles, and is therefore a sort of "living fossil." It was formerly hunted for food, but is now protected by law in New Zealand.

ISSUE NO. 24, 1917

HELP WANTED.
WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Wellandra Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.
BUY YOUR OUT-OF-TOWN SUPplies with Dominion Express Money Orders. Five dollars costs three cents.

Gary's Recipes for Success.

Judge Gary gives his recipe for success. He says about a young man:

First—He should be honest, truthful, sincere and serious.

"Second—He should believe in and preach and practice the Golden Rule.

"Third—He should be strong and healthy, physically and morally.

"Fourth—His habits and mode of living should be temperate and clean and his companions selected with regard to their character and reputation.

"Fifth—He should possess good natural ability and a determination constantly to improve his mind and memory.

"Sixth—He should possess a good education, including particularly the fundamentals such as mathematics, grammar, spelling, writing, geography and history; and also a technical education concerning the lines he proposes to follow.

"Seventh—He should be studious and thoughtful, keeping his mind upon a subject until it is mastered.

"Eighth—He should be conscientious, modest, but courageous, persistent, energetic, even tempered, economical, faithful and loyal to his friends and the interests he represents."—American Magazine.

I bought a horse with a supposedly incurable ringbone for $30.00. Cured him with $1.00 worth of MINARD'S LINIMENT, and sold him for $85.00. Profit on Liniment, $54.
MOISE DEROSCE.
Hotelkeeper at St. Phillippe, Que.

FAT STOCK SHOW

"Better than usual" is the slogan of the Toronto Fat Stock Show directors, who announce their eighth annual exhibition in this issue, to be held at the Union Stock Yards, on December 7th and 8th next. Our readers will remember the record prices paid at the auction sale at last year's show, the grand champion being bought by the T. Eaton Company at 50c per pound, live weight. Premium lists will be out in a few days and will contain all the old and several new classes.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

Africa Will Lead in Railways.

Africa already has the foundation for one of the completest and most evenly distributed railway systems of all of the great continents of the world. Save Europe, the railways of all the other great geographical divisions are largely located in certain highly developed areas—as in the United States and southern Canada in North America while other regions are left blank and promise to remain so indefinitely. In Africa, a vigorous pushing of any considerable proportion of the projects that were in contemplation before the war will give that continent a decade hence, not only a fairly even network of lines over the greater part of its area, but also more ranscontinental lines—both latitudinal and longitudinal—than either South America or Asia will be able to boast at the same date. Also in the imminent completion of the tion which will be considerably ac Cape-to-Cairo project—a consummation which will be considerably accelerated by certain work done during the war—it will have a line traversing its entire length from north to south long before any continent but Europe can lay claim to such a railway. The Cape-to-Cairo—with metals all the way and steamer transport on Nile and the lakes eliminated—might easily bring Capetown within ten or twelve days of London and Paris, and a day or two could certainly be cut from even this schedule by a line the French plan to run from Tangier—opposite Gibraltar—across the Sahara, via Lake Tchad and the Belgian Congo, to northern Rhodesia.—World Outlook.

When beating eggs, use pinch of salt and they will be much lighter for cake.

Hard to Drop Meat?
All depends on what you eat as a substitute. It is a good time to study "food value." You may be eating the wrong foods, the foods that cost most and give the least nutriment. Shredded Wheat Biscuit contains more real, body-building nutriment, pound for pound, than meat, eggs or potatoes and costs much less. Two of these Biscuits with milk and a little fruit make a nourishing meal at a cost of a few cents. Make Shredded Wheat your "meat." A satisfying breakfast on which to start the day's work. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-eat. Made in Canada.

GERMANY IS GREATLY WORRIED OVER THE AUSTRIAN OUTLOOK

Opening of Parliament Causes Consternation—Anti Germans in Big Majority.

The relative lull in the war theatres has had no counter-part in the field of politics, where events are mounting rapidly. The opening of the Austrian Parliament has caused something akin to consternation in the German press, and the pan-German organs especially are filled with gloomy predictions over the political situation in the Dual Monarchy. Their uneasiness is largely based on the fact that the German party is in a very marked minority in best service they can afford the state.

All factories, public utilities, etc., necessary to the carrying on of the war to be taken over by the state on fair compensation.

All incomes and wealth over reasonable needs to be placed at the Government's disposal for prosecution of the war, equitable retribution to be made after the war.

Ample provision under any compulsory service scheme for the maintenance of those disabled and their dependents, as well as the dependents of those killed in the war.

Resolutions affecting the question of pensions, recommending the substitution of a department of demobilization to be run on business and non-partisan lines in place of the various commissions now in existence to deal with all phases of the returned soldier problem, the settlement of soldiers on the conscription plan, urging the adoption of means to expedite the work of paying the troops and their dependants, favoring the Government absorption of the last post fund, and Government action on behalf of the orphans of soldiers killed in battle, were presented and favorably received by the members of the committee.

PEACE PLANS TO BE MADE CLEAR

Allied Labor's Condition as to "End-War" Conference.

British and French Protest to Russ Workers.

Petrograd Cable——Arthur Henderson, British Minister without portfolio; Albert Thomas, French Minister of Munitions, and Emile Vandervelde, Belgian Minister of Munitions, have sent a letter to the Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates, expressing surprise that a call has been issued by the conference for an international conference to consider means of ending the war before the negotiations between the British, French and Belgian delegations and the council had been concluded. The letter mentions the fact that the council invited the British majority and minority organizations representing the laboring classes to come to Russia to discuss conditions under which such a gathering would be called.

The note says: "We could not expect you would convoke a conference under conditions which the previous negotiations did not allow us to foresee. During these negotiations we showed our agreement with you on the express condition that this peace formula should be clearly defined and drawn up in such a manner as to exclude neither liberation of territories, in accord with the wishes of their inhabitants, nor reparation for damage caused to invaded countries. On the other hand, we formally declared it was impossible for us to support a plenary conference before having drawn up in common agreement a series of conditions definite enough to remove all doubt, to discourage all diplomatic manoeuvres by our enemies, which would not be willing to co-operate in the work of anti-imperialism for which you are convoking the Internationale. We are more than ever convinced that a plenary meeting to which would be admitted those supporting the present policy of the majority Socialists in the central empires would be harmful and dangerous."

The letter adds that it would be possible to think of common action only when the German Socialists have issued a declaration proclaiming a rupture with the imperialism of aggression and with the Emperor. It concludes:

"Finally, we draw your attention to the passage in your declaration concerning political liquidation with imperialist governments and classes. We are in complete agreement with the council in affirming the necessity of a rupture between Socialism and Governments and classes whose war aims are tainted with imperialism, but we have not ceased, and shall not cease, to consider that national union against aggressive imperialism is the duty incumbent upon all classes, and one from which the Socialist proletariat could not hold aloof without abdicating and compromising vital interests of democracy and socialism. We shall be glad to attend the meeting in order to explain ourselves more fully."

FARM CONDITION WEEKLY REPORT

Spring Seeding Over, Catch Never Better.

Orchard Prospects Also Are Brightening.

The weekly crop reports made to the Ontario Department of Agriculture by District Representatives are to the following effect:—

Field Crops—The seeding of spring grains is completed, with the exception of some late millet and buckwheat. The catch was never better, and the young fields are looking most promising, although a week or more later in growth than usual.

Fall wheat is improving, but it has been thinned out nearly one-half in places by adverse spring weather.

Clover is also picking up, but it has not grown very high, although quite stocky, waiting for really warm weather. Alfalfa is doing much better than red clover, but there is no first cutting yet, as the season has been so late.

A good deal of corn has been got in already, but the cold, wet weather of the week has greatly delayed planting, which is likely to be much greater than usual.

Beans will also be extensively planted in some quarters where they have not been raised before as a field crop.

Orchard prospects are looking better as blossoming unfolds. Apples and peaches are likely to be light in yield in many cases, but plums, pears and cherries will be more generous in bearing. Bush fruits and strawberries promise good yields.

The rainy and otherwise backward weather of the week has arrested the growth of vegetables, but townsfolk are still busy with spade, rake and hoe, and are hopeful of great results. Large areas of early tomatoes have been planted during the week for field culture.

Live Stock—The market for horses has been improving. Some heavy animals have been sold during the week at from $175 to $250.

Nearly all cattle are out on pasture, but the grass is still too short for the best results. Prices for market animals range from 9c to 12 1-2c per pound, according to quality. Many calves are selling at from [illegible] to [illegible] per pound.

The milk supply keeps up to normal. The latest offering for cheese in Oxford County was 19c a pound, but little is being disposed of at that figure.

Hogs are scarce, but have been slightly lowered in price, being bought at from $15.75 to $16.25 per cwt.

Sheep are slightly on the increase, and are in good general condition. Wool is now selling at 42c a pound.

Fodders of all kinds except hay are very scarce, but the heavy drain has been largely lifted by most of the live stock being turned on the grass.

Labor—The labor situation has been much eased, largely by the help of youthful laborers. Some Boards of Trade, Clubs, etc., in towns and cities are rendering good service in arranging for help during the coming rush of hoeing, haying and harvesting.

TEUTONS TRY TO RECOVER ON THE CARSO

Three Heavy Attacks Between Gorizia and the Sea Against Italians.

TEMPORARY GAINS

But These Are Soon Everywhere Lost to Them Again.

London Cable—Telegraphing from Italian headquarters under date of Tuesday, the Times correspondent writes:

"The pause in the fighting on the Carso was not of long duration, but renewal of the action has come from the other side. It was obvious that if the enemy was in a position to attempt a further counter-offensive he would not delay a moment longer. From Vippacco to the sea consolidation of the ground gained takes time owing to the impossibility of constructing even a passage trench without the assistance of rock drilling. At certain places it is possible to adapt the old Austrian systems of trenches and caverns. A week ago it seemed as though the Austrians were near the end of their tether so far as men were concerned, but in the interval they have succeeded in collecting reinforcements, presumably from the eastern front, and a desperate attack has been launched on the whole front from Gorizia to the sea.

"The Austrian infantry attack, which was prefaced by a tremendous bombardment, began Sunday evening at the northern edge of the Carso. The Italian trenches had suffered badly. The fighting was severe, but the Austrians established a temporary footing on the Italian lines. Their triumph was short. Yesterday morning our allies went forward under cover of a heavy fire and drove the enemy back to his old positions east of Fajti and Hill 464. The Austrians resisted desperately, and came back again and again in determined fashion, but did not loosen the new Italian grip, and our allies hold the old line. The enemy effort seems exhausted for the moment, and is evidently awaiting fresh reserves. Possession of Fajti means a great deal to both sides, and if, as it appears, he is able to add considerably to his strength in guns and men he will certainly come again to the attack.

ATTACK FARTHER SOUTH.

"Meanwhile farther south the Austrians made a great attempt to regain lost ground. A heavy bombardment was continued Sunday night until dawn yesterday, when the infantry attacked on the southern half of the Carso on the lower slopes of the Hermada. Here, too, temporary successes were won. The Italians were driven off the stony hillock 1,200 yards west of Selo. This hill is a difficult point to hold. It was taken by our rallies on May 24, lost on May 25 and retaken the following day. This time the enemy's success was no more permanent. The hill fell into our hands again yesterday.

"The line from Kostanjevica to the Drestovica valley has been slightly improved. The enemy made a still more violent attack on the newly won Italian positions on the slopes leading up the main Hermada ridge. Here his temporary success was of a wider extent. Our allies were driven back down the slopes towards the Flondar lines, which they wrested from the Austrians on May 25. But here again the enemy could not make good his temporary advantage. Italian guns shelled him unmercifully. Italian infantry pushed him steadily up the hill. Most of the lost ground has already been won back, and the fighting continues.

"Last week the Carso appeared to lie wrecked and lifeless after the fierce struggle. Only the region of Fajti smoked and thundered. Even Hermada seemed dead. Since, yesterday all has come again into dreadful life. The Italian army has never been so highly tried as during this long struggle, not even last year in the Trentino. Not even then did the soldiers reach such a level of endurance and heroism."

THE AUSTRIAN CLAIMS.

The Austrian War Office reports are evidently now being written in Berlin. This was issued Tuesday:

"It is evident from a careful estimate that the Italian losses in the tenth Isonzo battle surpass all the previous sacrifices of the enemy. In the course of the 19 days of the battle at least 35 Italian divisions were engaged in the first line, so that along a front of 40 kilometres half of the Italian army attacked. The enemy's losses in killed or wounded positively surpass 160,000 men. Moreover, we took 16,000 prisoners, making the total Italian losses 180,000 men. For his part, the enemy occupied Mount Kuk and the destroyed village of Jamiano, which gains hardly justify the cry of victory on the second anniversary of the war with Italy. Indisputable success remained ours."

ITALIAN REPORT.

Rome Cable says War Office statement read:

"There was a brief artillery action and slight patrol activity on the Trentino and Carnia fronts.

"Fresh attempts by the enemy upon our lines east of Gorizia and on the Vodice Sunday night and during yesterday were all repulsed. We took 25 prisoners, including one officer.

"On the Carso, after several days of violent artillery preparation, the enemy attacked in mass on Sunday night, from Dosso Faiti to the sea. Although the Dosso Faiti positions were completely destroyed they were strenuously defended by brigades of the 215th and 216th Regiments, who succeeded definitely in repulsing the enemy after severe fighting, notwithstanding a heavy barrage fire. Prisoners to the number of 62 were captured.

"Our troops gallantly resisted determined enemy attacks from Castagnavizza to the ridges north of Jamiano, and by counter-attacks and heavy hand-to-hand fighting succeeded in maintaining their positions and even in occupying new advanced positions near Castagnavizza and Versic.

"South of Jamiano, while maintaining our wing positions, we were obliged to rectify somewhat the centre of our new line to avoid the enemy fire, at the same time carrying out frequent counter-attacks, establishing almost completely our previous positions."

U-BOAT TOLL GROWING LESS

Weekly Report to Tell of More Shrinkage.

Britain Confident of the Outcome.

London Cable.—The weekly report of losses of British merchant vessels in the submarine campaign will again show a favorable total when it is issued to-morrow. In some respects the last week has been the best since unrestricted submarine warfare was inaugurated. Last Friday was a blank day on the records, that is, no losses of British merchantmen occurred. It is the first time this has happened for a long period.

British naval people believe the improvement is cumulative, and that there is not the slightest chance, with the improved allied organizations, that the Germans ever will repeat their performance of the "black week," when nearly sixty boats were sunk. The weather continues to favor the boats which are fighting the submarines, and the co-operative organization of the patrols, aircraft and other anti-submarine services is improving constantly.

Progress of the technique of the anti-submarine campaign includes more careful supervision, together with various vigorous offensive measures, which it is impossible to detail. In the last week there have occurred numerous encounters, the results of which have been entirely satisfactory to the Admiralty.

"And what is this?" "My bathing skirt." "Oh, yes, I thought it was a belt."—Kansas City Journal.

RUSSIAN ARMY IS IMPROVING

Correspondent From Roumanian Front is Hopeful.

Order and Discipline Better, Men More Willing.

London Cable.—A correspondent of the Times with the Roumanian army at Jassy telegraphs:

"I have just returned from a visit to the Russian front in Roumania, where I was able to get in contact with the troops. Although there has been practically no fighting activity on the whole front, I have the impression that things have improved during the last two weeks, and will continue steadily to improve. I saw troops going into the trenches to relieve other regiments, and was struck with the order and discipline, which is much better than during the early days of the revolution. Judging from exterior signs, such as the salute and attitude when talking to superiors, the soldiers seem to obey and respect their leaders more than a few weeks ago. From conversations with soldiers I gathered that there has been an improvement in the spirit of the troops, many realizing that in order to have peace soon, as well as strengthen the new form of government, the enemy must be beaten. War Minister Kerensky's order of the day produced an excellent effect on the troops at the front. I believe all that is necessary now is a little effort on the part of the officers who understand the situation to influence the men, not in the same way as before, but as soldiers on the western front are treated by their officers. To sum up my impressions of the Russians, the Russian army is now convalescent, and it depends mainly on the officers whether this process shall be short or long."

WOULD STICK TO GERMAN EMPIRE

Say Leaders of Landtag of Alsace-Lorraine.

Socialist Would Form a German State.

Amsterdam, via London, Cable.—Landtag of Alsace-Lorraine was opened at Strassburg on Wednesday by the Imperial Stadtholder, Dr. von Dallwitz. In his opening speech Dr. von Dallwitz said:

"The unbending will to end the war victoriously will further protect our German Alsace-Lorraine."

At the first session of the second Chamber, Dr. George Ricklin, a Centrist, was re-elected President by 29 out of the 46 votes. Dr. Ricklin said: "We Alsatians and Lorrainers will never forget that our Emperor, by his peace offer, showed his readiness to end the miseries of the war. We bless every action tending to shorten the war by a single day, and reject everything which, allegedly undertaken to better our lot, in fact only serves to prolong the war and our sufferings.

"An overwhelming majority of Alsatians and Lorrainers did not want the war and only wanted to work out to completion their position as members of a state in union with the German Empire, and to further proceed with peaceful labor. In this connection the war has made no change, as far as we are concerned. We make this confession of faith in the face of the whole world. May you be heard everywhere, and may peace be restored soon."

A SOCIALIST VIEW.

Copenhagen, via London, Cable.—A leading article in the Berlin Vorwaerts to-day, signed by the Socialist Deputy, Hermann Wendel, argues that the only possible solution of the Alsace-Lorraine question is the formation of the two provinces into a federal state, on the same basis as the other states of the empire. Herr Wendel does not even contemplate the possibility of a voluntary return of the provinces to France. He rejects the principle of a plebiscite to determine the fate of the provinces, owing to the difficulty of determining who is entitled to vote.

The Socialist deputy declares that a division on the basis of nationality is impracticable, if not impossible, owing to the complicated manner in which the two races are intermingled. Though admitting that Lorraine is [illegible] the Socialist solution is [illegible] within the German Empire.

BERLIN ADMITS IT.

Loss of Destroyer S-20 is Confirmed.

Berlin Cable via London.——The loss of the German destroyer S-20 is admitted in an official statement issued by the War Office in regard to the attack on Ostend by British ships. The statement follows:

"Enemy monitors shelled Ostend on the morning of the fifth, killing and wounding a great number of Belgian inhabitants, and causing some material damage to homes. Strongly superior reconnoitering forces, attached to the advancing monitors, encountered two of our torpedo boats which were on guard. After fierce fighting the S-20 was sunk, firing to the last moment. A portion of the crew was rescued by us.

"The enemy forces received several hits, and retired before the fire of our coast batteries."

INDEPENDENCE OF ALBANIA IS PROCLAIMED BY THE ITALIANS

Step Taken in Realization of Allies' Principles of Nationality.

Rome Cable via Paris Cable.——June 6, 7 a.m.—(Delayed)—A semi-official statement in respect to the proclamation of the Unity and Independence of Albania by Italy says that this step is taken in realization of the principle of nationality, "which is one of the objects of the Allies in the war."

The statement continues:

"Albania, through Italian influence, will become an element of development in the Balkans, while its vicinity to Italy and the protection of the latter, guarantee to that region a tranquil existence, no more threatened by Austria or other peoples.

"Since the cessation of Ottoman dominion, Italy aimed to reconstruct Albania, while Austria used Albania as a means to exercise dominion through the Balkans. She promised a deceiving autonomy, which, if accepted, would soon put the country under the Austrian yoke."

The foregoing despatch is the first intimation reaching America of the proclamation of Albania's independence by Italy. On March 10 the official announcement was made in London that Austria had issued a proclamation to the Albanians, granting the country autonomy under an Austrian protectorate. The London statement asserted that the proclamation was intended to justify the levy of Albanians for the Austrian armies. After the occupation of Serbia and Montenegro by the Central powers, Austrian troops overran the northern portion of Albania. The Italians have held the southern portion of the country, including the important port of Avlona, and have recently extended their gains.

BRITONS IN U.S. TO THE COLORS

British Recruiting Station in N. Y. Was Thronged.

Gen. Mewburn and Col. McInnes There.

New York Report.—More than 500 Englishmen, including a number of actors who had been appearing in this country, applied for enlistment in the British army when a recruiting station was formally opened here today under the command of Brig.-Gen. W. A. White.

"Ninety per cent. of them were accepted, it was said. A number of prominent New York physicians who volunteered to aid the British recruiting force were kept busy all day examining the applicants.

Conscription will not have to be invoked to enlist Great Britain's half million of fighting age in this country if the throng of youths which crowded the doors of Gen. White's offices is any criterion.

Within forty-eight hours every United States Government army and navy recruiting station in the country will be authorized to recruit for Great Britain under Gen. White's direction. The British expect the number of recruits to run into the thousands within a short time.

"It looks very, very promising," Gen. White said to-day.

Gen. Mewburn, Director of Canadian recruiting, and Col. MacInnes, of the Adjutant-General's Department, of Canada, were here on their way home from Washington.

U-BOAT TOLL IS DWINDLING YET

15 Vessels Over 1,600 Tons Sunk Last Week.

Three Under That Figure, and 5 Fishers.

London Cable.—The weekly report of the British Admiralty concerning British shipping losses by mines or submarines says that fifteen vessels of 1,600 tons and over and three vessels under 1,600 tons and five fishing vessels were sunk last week. The summary:

"Arrivals numbered [illegible], and sailings 2,912.

"British merchant ships sunk by mine or submarine, of over 1,600 tons, including one previously sunk, 15; under 1,600 tons, 3; British fishing vessels, 5.

"British merchant ships unsuccessfully attacked, including four previously, 17."

The above report, compared with that of the previous week, shows a decrease of three vessels of 1,600 tons and over sunk, but an increase of two in the category of less than 1,600 tons.

Don't hit a man when he is absolutely broke. He has already been knocked centless.

Do not be troubled because you have not great virtues. God made a million spears of grass where He made one tree. The earth is fringed and carpeted, not with forests, but with grasses. Only have enough of little virtues and common fidelities and you need not mourn because you are neither a hero nor a saint.—Henry Ward Beecher.

HUNS POISONING FRENCH HORSES

Wholesale Deaths in Southern France Occurring

And Veterinaries Are Growing Suspicious.

New York Report.—A special cable to the New York Herald from Paris, dated yesterday, says:

There is great perturbation in horse dealing circles in France over the great mortality among horses in the southern regions of this country, notably in Bordeaux, Toulouse, Albi, Narbonne and Perpignan. The Matin states that the loss amounts to sixty to seventy per cent. of the animals affected.

The animals arrive apparently robust, but die soon after their arrival at the cavalry centres. Death comes to them so rapidly that treatment is useless, and, indeed, impossible.

Horse dealers in Toulouse have confirmed the statement contained in the Matin, and have acknowledged their inability to suggest the cause of the mortality.

Out of [illegible] horses despatched from Finistere, seven died during the journey, or immediately after their arrival.

Veterinaries are divided in opinion on whether the animals were poisoned previous to their start from the shipping centres.

At Albi the losses have numbered thousands of horses during the last fifteen months. All of the deaths have occurred under identical conditions. Some veterinary surgeons have expressed the opinion that the horses are dying of an infection of the grip. Whatever may be the cause the opinion is unanimous that nothing similar was experienced before the war.

WAR PRISONERS.

Britain Holds 48,133 Foes; Germany, 42,831 Britons.

London Cable.—In the House of Commons to-day the Postmaster-General stated that the number of British prisoners of war in Germany was [illegible] last year. The number of German prisoners in the United Kingdom was 48,133, compared with 40,821 last year.

Since the beginning of the war the number of postoffice applications for war loans, exchequer bonds and war savings certificates totalled £151,000,000. This had not affected savings bank deposits, which were now £185,415,000 as compared with [illegible]. This, he said, was a remarkable tribute to the financial strength of the country. The announcement was received with cheers.

NAVAL BATTTE OFF ZEEBRUGGE

Further Details of British Victory Tuesday.

Foe Were Escaping From Ally Air Raiders.

London Cable.—A German destroyer was [illegible] sunk and another damaged in a running fight between six German destroyers and Commodore Tyrwhitt's squadron, the Admiralty announces. When Commodore Tyrwhitt's squadron first sighted the Germans they were [illegible] miles distant. They had apparently [illegible] of bombardment from the air and the water which was being conducted on Zeebrugge and Ostend. When they tried to escape [illegible] the British squadron divided into two lines. A British destroyer opened the engagement and our fire damaged the S-20 almost immediately.

Then a British cruiser joined in the engagement. The S-20 soon began to sink. A destroyer rescued seven survivors during the chase of the remaining five German destroyers. The [illegible] ceased until the Germans had reached [illegible]

[illegible] with the [illegible] upon sounding [illegible] and were chased back to the base a German flotilla of eleven destroyers. On this occasion the enemy got away. To-day Commodore Tyrwhitt got another chance and with better luck sank one destroyer and badly injured another. The [illegible] was evidently part of another combined sea and air attack on the German strongholds of Zeebrugge and Ostend, such as was carried out on April [illegible] and May 22. For nearly a week past the Belgian ports and other military stations in the neighborhood have been made the objective of the Royal Naval Air Service.

"Short of tackling these places on the land side, which must require military co-operation, there is no more effective treatment than the unceasing attacks by air and sea.

"In spite of their occupation of 'Hornet's Nest,' Zeebrugge, the Germans have utterly failed to interfere with the Channel communications, but have made themselves so objectionable that strenuous measures have long been indicated as necessary."

Grocery . . Department

WE seldom speak of our grocery Department, simply because this department is always so much alive we forget to advertise it. However we would impress these facts on you when buying your Groceries.

We are large buyers, therefore our price is always right.

We have an immense turnover, therefore our stock is always fresh.

We quote special prices in quantity. Consult us and live cheaper.

Two Specials
Good Butter and Fresh Eggs

We pay cash for eggs

N. McGillivray
North End Store

BANK OF HAMILTON
Established 1872.
Capital Authorized, $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up, - $3,000,000
Surplus, - - - - - $3,500,000

Opportunity

does not come to you every day. Neither can you count upon finding it when you want it. It is the part of wisdom to prepare for it and be ready to grasp it when it comes. Some capital will probably be required. Open a saving account in the Bank of Hamiton and begin to save now.

PORT ELGIN BRANCH
R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
40-C

Can you afford to be without The Times?

Children's
Ready-to-Wear
Garments

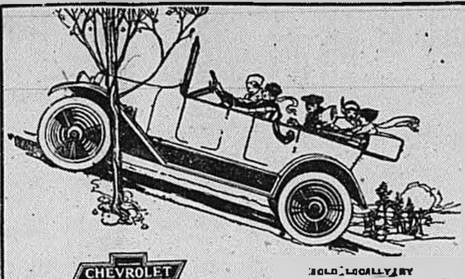
In prints, galateas, and other cotton materials, at the cost of materials only, much below to-day's values.

Children's aprons at 15c
Childrens dresses, good styles, 40c to 50c
Middies at 50 cents
Rompers and play suits from 40 to 75c
Womens' overal aprons and house dresses 50c to $1.25

We pay Cash for Eggs.
Produce wanted.

See our big display in our north window

South End Store
N. McGillivray & Co.



CHEVROLET

Over three hundred dealers throughout Canada sell Chevrolet parts and give service to Chevrolet owners.

SOLD LOCALLY BY POWER & COULTER,
Port Elgin

The New Series
CHEVROLET

UNRIVALLED AS A HILL CLIMBER

The power furnished by the valve-in-head motor enables the driver of a Chevrolet to take on high gear, hills which baffle other makes of cars.

The Chevrolet delivers maximum power to the rear axle which accounts for the gasoline economy and hill climbing ability.

Own a Chevrolet and enjoy the thrill of passing the other fellow.

$695 f. o. b. Oshawa, Roadster $680, including electric lights and starter, speedometer, oil indicator light equipment, non-skid tires on rear wheels, etc.

Chevrolet Motor Co. of Canada, Limited
OSHAWA, ONTARIO
Western Service and Distributing Branch, REGINA, SASK.

The Port Elgin Times
MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

ADVERTISING RATES

Farms or Real Estate for Sale 50c each insertion; Miscellaneous articles, To Rent, Wanted, Lost, Found, etc., each insertion 25c. Local Readers, Notices, etc., 10c per line per insertion, 5c each subsequent insertion. Cards of thanks 50c. Legal advertising 10 and 5c a line. Black-faced type, count 2 lines for 1. Display rates, yearly contracts, 12c per inch, 6 mos. 15c per inch. In memoriam poetry 5c per line. Professional cards $5 per year in advance.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A new grist of knighthoods has come to Canada. Some people rather blame the King and his advisers for this. But it must be remembered that the list of suggested knights and barons comes from this side of the water, and is usually given by the government in power. Canadians do not need these titles. But it is one of the things that those who occupy high positions sometimes seek. The hereditary title is the one that Canadians should not tolerate, and a strong, healthy opinion against them should be encouraged.

* * *

Liberals in convention selected John McAulay, of Wiarton as the candidate to oppose Hugh Clark, M. P. in the North Riding. There were five contestants, for the honor, all of them good men, but of course it had to fall to one only. There were many who believed that an agriculturist might have been chosen, but business men seem to be in demand, everywhere these days, as well as in North Bruce. The candidate is not well-known in the riding. His work in connection with the Dominion Fish Co. of Wiarton, has occupied practically all of his time for many years. With the news of election in the air, the campaign drums will soon be beating. It is rather unfortunate that in these strenuous times we must step aside for an election.

Dominion Day

In a few days Port Elgin Citizens' committee will have their usual big celebration.

This day here has become almost a Provincial event, for in this section of Ontario, very few miss the opportunity to visit the pretty town of Port Elgin, on the shores of old Lake Huron.

This year the celebration should mean more than it has ever meant. We celebrate this time the jubilee of Canadian Confederation. It is an important event. It represents the time when the leaders of the various provinces cast aside certain differences, and united in one great movement for the good of all the people of this great Dominion. They were leaders then. Would that we were blessed with men of such type now.

The Times would have liked very much to have seen a place provided on the program for Dominion Day in Port Elgin for a speaker to set forth to the assembled thousands something of Canadianism.

Perhaps it is not too late yet to have this feature included.

Cecil McMurray Likely in France

The following has been received from Gunner Cecil McMurray:

"I am on a draft for France, and by the time this reaches you I will be in France. This is getting us in the fight quickly, for I am only here a few weeks. We are being sent without leave, so they need us badly.

The last draft from Toronto batteries was turned into infantry at Liverpool, England. They need the infantry, and naturally if they have too many in batteries they go to the place where they are needed

(We hope to have a picture of Gunner McMurray printed in The Times soon.—Ed.)

The extra work in the gardens is beginning to show, and they are looking fine. A neat lawn, neatly trimmed trees, and a well-kept garden make a very attractive property, and there are more of them than ever in Port Elgin.

Big Garden Party For Red Cross

Last Friday was the first garden party of the season. Somebody said it was too early, and then the weather man ordered rain for Thursday and Friday. But at 4 p. m. on the latter day the sun peeped out from behind the clouds, and the telephones were busy, with the result that the party arranged by the Red Cross workers of S. S. No. 5 assisted by the workers from Nos. 4 and 6, went ahead, and it was a bumper success. Think of 500 people gathering on a couple of hours notice.

Col. Cameron looked happy, and he was happy, for he is quite well now from his long sickness, and many were glad to see him, too. He had the big union jack floating to the breeze, and his grounds looked fine.

The ladies had placed the list of young men who had gone from S. S. Nos. 4, 5, and 6, on a canvass, and around it were decorated flags and evergreens. The record was placed in one of the windows of the second storey of the house, and the names shone forth in red. The effect was impressive, when one of the speakers asked the crowd to join in cheers, and the hills re-echoed with the loud hurrahs and a tiger. One name appearing in white was Pte. Geo. Muir, who gave his life at Vimy Ridge.

The supper was one of the best, and that means a great deal, for this district is noted for the good things in cookery. The pies and cakes were extra. We know, because we saw Mr. Bowman, the Liberal member, take not only a sample of everything passed, but took it in liberal portions, say two of each. As for ourselves we liked the salads, because eggs and potatoes are scarce. But, it was a good supper, and well served.

Bart Raynor had his orchestra on the grounds, and they made an excellent impression. Lots of good music, made people feel sociable.

The program was a first class one. Mr. Bowman made a stirring speech, while Dr. McDougall, as chairman kept things going right, and pointed up the program with suitable remarks. The choir also helped. Others taking part were: Sandy McDonald, Donald McArthur, Jean Fullerton, R. E. Smith, Ed. Smith, Misses Lamont and Wells, James Scott, McLean Young, Sandy Brunton.

At the conclusion, E. R. Sayles and Charlie Nelson drew the tickets for the half bushel of alfalfa. The winners of the draw were Wm. Cassidy and Wm. Gray. A half bushel was donated by Alex. J. Lamont, and also by Neil Muir. This is expensive seed, and the winners were indeed lucky.

The National Anthem was then sung, and the gathering dispersed. The party was well conducted, the program beginning promptly at nine, and concluding about 10.30. The order was good, and all had a good time. The proceeds, admission, booths, clover seed and all amounted to $240.

The Pembroke Post is the latest weekly newspaper to succumb to the strain of the increased cost of publishing. The publishing business in these strenuous days is no picnic.

A convention of the Conservatives of North Bruce as constituted for Provincial purposes will be held in Wiarton on Thursday, June 28th, to select a candidate for the next election contest about one year hence. Among the names mentioned that will go before the convention are: Wm. H. Brown, reeve of Chesley; James Rushton, farmer orator of Elderslie; Jos. Grant, ex-Reeve of Tara, and Dr. Foster, dentist of Wiarton.

85 Years

The fact that this bank has been in business for the long period of 85 years, and has grown until its Total Resources have passed the hundred million mark, is proof of careful, conservative, and yet progressive management on the part of directors and officials. Safe banking methods appeal both to the conservative business man and the savings bank depositor. 43

The Bank of Nova Scotia
PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 110,000,000

PORT ELGIN BRANCH
A. L. Wyant, Manager

Pointed Paragraphs

We are somewhat fussy, but we do not object to a man yelling when he has a tooth pulled.

A really nosy person never knows how much he weighs.

Every time we throw a cigar away we resolve to quit smoking.

A man has his clothes made to fit him: a woman makes herself fit her clothes

A man is usually as far from being a devil as a woman is from being an angel.

Don't induce anyone to tell you his secrets. You will be very much better off without them.

A man is never free from temptation; in summer it is ice water, and in winter it is a warm room and lack of fresh air.

When we are driving to a strange place in the country, and ask directions, the man who directs us says: "Go south a ways and then turn to the right. You can't miss it." And then we find the road a particularly crooked and difficult one. A road you are familiar with seems easy.

Potatoes sold at $3.75 a bag in Owen Sound last week. The town has still some to sell.

There is a well-to-do farmer living about seven miles from Tilbury, who has 800 bushels of last year's wheat, and he says he is going to hold it until he gets $5 per bushel for the same.

Take Pictures

It's Enjoyable

WE have just received the new pocket size camera, which takes a picture nearly post card size.

See it at our store

R. C. Crawford
Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent

Real Estate — Auctioneering Life Insurance

WE have opened an office in Port Elgin, and will deal in real estate. Property bought and sold.

Auctioneering—The old-time attention given to all farmers contemplating a sale.

Life Insurance—We are agent for the New York Life Co.

D. O. Davin : Port Elgin

Lots of Good
SEED CORN
At Roppel's

Very closely priced

Improved Leaming

White Cap Yellow Dent

Wisconsin No. 7

Mammoth Southern Sweet

Leave your order now before our stock goes.

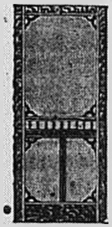
Good seed corn is very scarce.

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Thursday at 12 o'clock noon

Roppel Bros.
Rural phone, Underwood

Swat . . The Flies



Now is the time to prepare to protect yourself and your family against expensive sickness. The fly is the carrier of disease. Therefore keep him out of the house by using our

SCREEN DOORS AND WINDOWS

We have seven styles of fine doors, and they range from $1.25 up.

Keep The Lawn Nice

By using our hose, sprinklers and lawn mowers.

Rubber hose 9, 10 and 15c per ft.
Any length

Remember your old friend Sherwin-Williams Paint

McLAREN'S HARDWARE

CANADA

1867 1917

Dominion Day Patriotic Jubilee Celebration at PORT ELGIN

FOR thirty years Port Elgin citizens' committee has celebrated Dominion Day, and this year being the Jubilee of Confederation, especial efforts are being made by the committee to fittingly observe the day. All over and above expenses will be given to the Red Cross ladies. The program includes Races and Bands for the afternoon, also parade of decorated automobiles. Relay race and great display of Fireworks for the evening, these are the outstanding features.

THE committee makes this announcement as an invitation to Port Elgin people to co-operate in this Jubilee Year to make the biggest celebration ever. Especially invite every man, women and child in the surrounding country to plan to spend Monday, July 2nd, at Lakeview Park, Port Elgin. Make this Jubilee Year the record year for attendance.

Everyone will be welcomed to the old town

At Sherbrooke, Quebec, during the anti-conscription demonstration an officer procured some eggs with which to pelt the crowd as it paraded the streets. They were taken from him and he was compelled to eat some of them. He was then kicked around until the police rescued him.

Alarm Clocks

Why do most people go to Busby's for alarm clocks?

Because we have the best stock, also when repairs are necessary you know our reputation.

We have in stock.

Big Ben Vigilant
Cyclone Turnout
Vantite Icallu
Giant Spasmodic
Luminous Sunrise

J. J. BUSBY,
The Quick Repair House

An appeal to the eye of the woman who is looking for perfection in her footwear will be found in "Empress" Shoes for Women, ann what means more to her, satisfaction and comfort.

Needs no breaking in.

James George & Son

Pte. Sterling Writes From the Trenches

"I am better now and may soon be in the firing line again. I shall be indeed glad when this wicked war is ended. I have been very lucky so far, but have had many close shaves. The other day a Jack Johnson shell broke near us, and killed several of my pals, and sent me to a dressing station, but I am recovering from the shock. It gets ones nerves. If anything drops on the floor it goes right through my head. It is the general talk of the soldiers that peace may come any time, but who can tell for sure."

SCHOOL REPORTS

The following is the report of S. S No. 7, Saugeen and Arran for month of May.

Class 5—Ruby McIvor.

Sr. 4—Hazel Moore, J. D Lyness, Kenzie Bell, Alex Geddes, Richard Webster, Stanley Reany, Marie Gowanlock.

Jr. 4—Hazel Kaufman, Jessie Bailey, Florence Geddes, Gladys Busch, Muriel Reany, Bevie Gowanlock.

Jr. 3—Robbie Geddes, Oral Gowanlock, Heather Gowanlock, Murray Chappell

Sr. 2—Earl Busch, Robbie Chappell.

Jr. 2—Clifford Reany, Harry Gowanlock, Alexander Heard, Harris Gibbons, Pansy Gibbons, Maggie Moore

Pr.—Caroline Schwass, Willie Chappell, Florence Young, Ewart Young, Ellie Reany.

Average attendance 25.

Felicia Wallace, teacher.

The following is the report of No. 12 Bruce, for the month of May.

Sr. 4—Mina Riebel 195, Celestia Holtzman 172, Minnie Sieffert 148, Pearl Maas 104.

Jr. 4—xVera Smith 215, Douglas Riebel 181, xHoward Sieffert 148.

Inter 3—Lizzie Dobson 278, Harvey Sieffert 209, xCharlie Schell.

Jr. 3—Allan Nelson 207, Ernest Riebel 204, xJames Hearn 132.

Sr. 2—James Scott 268, Hilda Jennings 266, Chester Smith 214, Percy Collins 194, Donald McLeod 155, xAngus Mc Donald 139.

Jr. 2—Bertha Scott 251, Nellie Sieffert 240, Gertie Schell 230.

Sr. Pt. 2—Muriel McVittie 280, Norman McLeod 250, Gordon Dobson 238, Willie Smith 216.

Jr Pt. 2—Myrtle Collins 255 xVera Holtzman 209, Andrew Smith 206.

Sr 1—Muriel Christman, Murle Scott, Ena Guthrie, Wesley Smith, Joseph Cottrill, Mary Nelson.

Jr. 1—David Cottrill, Emil Scott, Ruby Collins, Della Russel, Lily Russel, Lloyd Hearn, Irene Guthrie.

No enrolled 44. Average attendance 36.

Belle Robertson, teacher.

Poor Horace

A village church was holding a revival and placards were placed round in public places each day announcing the services for that night. The villagers were much surprised to read the following on one of the placards

Revival Services Tonight
The Evangelist will preach on "Hell"
Horace Smith, well-known singer will sing "Tell father I'll be there".

Advertise it in The Times.

Kaiser's Fear of Truth

The "Matin" and other French papers state that while Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia, who was recently brought down by a British airman over our lines, was on his death bed he was authorised by the British and French authorities to telegraph to his cousin, the Kaiser, asking permission for his wife to come to Rouen. The German Emperor returned the application with the word "Refused" written across it. Before he died the Prince himself furnished the reason for the Kaiser's refusal. "The Emperor" he said, "did not wish my wife to come here because he feared she would have revealed the real internal condition of Germany, the famine which threatens it, the lamentable state of our material and the approaching collapse of the Imperial Court." The Prince expired two days later.—London (Eng) Times.

The Home Paper

(To the Man in France)

When the evening shades have fallen,
At the ending of the day,
And a fellow rests from labor
Smoking at his pipe of clay;
There is nothing pleases better,
By his fortune up or down,
Than the little country paper,
From his own home town.

It's not a thing of beauty,
And its print's not always clear,
But it straightens out his temper,
When a fellow's feeling queer;
It takes the wrinkle off his face,
And brushes off the frown,
That little country paper,
From his own home town.

Now I like to read the dailies,
And the story paper too,
And at times the yellow novel,
And some other trash, don't you?
But when I want some reading,
That will brush away a frown,
I want that little paper,
From my own home town.

Lance-Corp A. S. Crossley, 227th Batt. in Manitoulin "Expositor."

CHIPPEWA HILL

(Intended for last week)

Monday was council day in the village.

Rev. D. Sharpe is attending the Methodist Conference at Brantford.

Mrs. C Eby, of Elsinore, visited friends in the vicinity last week.

Mr. Warmington and family of Park Head; Mr. and Mrs McBeath, of Paisley; Miss Myles, of Owen Sound; and Miss Forsythe of Elsinore, were visitors at Mr. D. Kennedy's on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Stout and family motored to Tiverton on Saturday. They brought back with them Miss Janet Wells, of Fort William, a niece of Mrs. Stout.

The child of the late Elijah Wesley, was buried on Tuesday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Kennedy spent June 4th, at Mr. Crockett's, Spring Creek.

Saugeen Township Sunday School Convention

The Saugeen Township S. S convention is meeting in the Presbyterian church to-day. The organizer, Mr. W. A. Mitchell, who is a leading superintendent, has the arrangements in hand, and there will be a good attendance. The special speakers are Rev. Mr. Prudham, of Wiarton, and D. H. Wing, of Toronto, the secretary of the Ontario association.

All are invited, and welcome, to the sessions this afternoon and evening.

Following is the program.

2.45—Song service
3.00—Devotional Exercises
Rev. W. S Buckberrough
3.15—Organizer's Report
3.30—Appointing Nominating committee
3.35—"Blocking Out and Presenting the Lesson," D. H. Wing, Toronto.
4.00—Discussion
4.15—5-minute addresses by delegates
4.50—Question Box led by Rev.
W. W. Prudham
6.10—Township Investigation. Hymn and closing.
7.45—Song service
8.00—Devotional exercises led by Rev. Mr. Soules, Southampton
Address of welcome W. A. Mitchell
8.20—Report of Nominating Committee
President's address.
8.30—Duet by the Misses Blindas
8.40—Address "The Teacher's Candlestick" Rev. Mr. Prudham, Wiarton
9.00—Chorus and collection
9.10—Address, "The Junior's Teaching Opportunity" Rev. Mr. Wing
9.35—Chorus—Methodist S. S. girls' Hymn and closing

Bruce Presbyterial W. M. S. Raises $2,163

The annual meeting of the Bruce Presbyterial W. M. S. was held in Hanover on Thursday. Mrs. A McNabb, Underwood presided. More than one hundred delegates were present.

Encouraging reports were presented from the different departments. Contributions from all sources totalled $2,163.

Southampton was selected as the next place of meeting.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Honorary president, Mrs Norman Robertson; president, Mrs. Thomas Wilson, Walkerton; first vice, Mrs. McNabb, Underwood; second vice, Mrs. McLean, Hanover; third [illegible] secretary, Miss Scott, Paisley; recording secretary, Miss Miller, Paisley; treasurer, Mrs. McLaren, Port Elgin; mission band secretary, Mrs. Warren, Walkerton; stranger secretary, Mrs. Young, Tara; supply secretary, Mrs. A Warren; messenger secretary, Mrs. J. A. McArthur, Paisley; home helper secretary, Miss Tolmie, Southampton.

A terrible tragedy happened near Tilbury Monday, when 13 year old Ione Morris was dragged to death by a horse she was leading, while she had the halter tied around her waist.

Keep The People Informed

There are many organizations of various kinds in this town and countryside, and they all have secretaries. Quite frequently meetings of public interest are held and there is no report given of the session.

The Times would like notes of these affairs, and we believe the members look to the secretaries to provide these items. Secretaries can create a greater interest in their organizations if they will co-operate in giving publicity to their meetings through The Times. We want all the news, and the assistance of the officers is requested.

New Way of Making Bread

Experiments have been made at Paris bakery, belonging to the Poor Law Department, with an Italian system of bread-making. Instead of being ground into flour the wheat is soaked from forty-eight to sixty hours in water, at a temperature of 77 deg. Fahr., until germination begins. It is then placed in a cylinder and mixed for five minutes into dough, which is then machine-baked in the usual way after the addition of yeast.

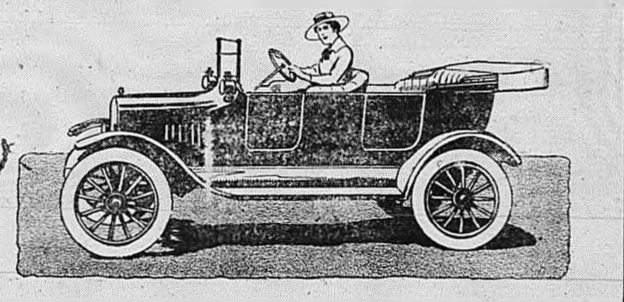
The bread thus made retains all the nutritive qualities of the wheat, but has a dark colour which will probably prejudice the public against it. The free use of the idea is offered to the Government for the public services. It is claimed that this process gives 13 lbs. of fresh bread for every 10lbs. of wheat. This bread has been made regularly since February 1916 by the municipal bakery at Bergamo, Italy.—London (Eng) Times.

GENTS' DEPARTMENT

Felt hats 75cts to $1.50
Caps 25 cts to $1.50
Mexican hats 25cts to 50 cents
Negligee shirts $1 to $1.50
Working shirts from 50c to 85c.
Cotton night shirts $1.
Neckwear 25c to $1.50
Cashmere hose from 25c to 50c
Silk hose 50 cents per pair
Working sox 10c to 50c per pair

Bring Us Your Produce

B. HILKER



Give Your Wife One

THOUSANDS of wives and daughters run their own Ford cars. They use them for shopping, calling, attending the theatre taking the children for a run in the country or to school.

The Ford is as easy to operate as a kitchen range, no knowledge of mechanical details being necessary. Inexpensive to operate. A woman can call around town all afernoon, or take a 25 mile spin in the country, at the minimum of cost for gasoline, oil, wear in tires, etc.

You couldn't give "her" a present she would appreciate more than this beautiful, modern car, with its stream-line effect, tapered hood and crown fenders.

Ford

Runabout	$475	Town Car	$780
Touring	495	Sedan	890
Coupelet	695	F. O. B. FORD, ONT.

L. M. Sees, Agent, Port Elgin

Over 700 Ford Service Stations in Canada.

DISTRESSING RHEUMATISM

How many people, crippled and lame from rheumatism, owe their condition to neglected or incorrect treatment!

It is the exact combination of the Purest Cod Liver Oil with glycerine and hypophosphites as contained in that has made Scott's famous for relieving rheumatism when other treatments have utterly failed.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

If you are a rheumatism sufferer, or feel its first symptoms, start on Scott's Emulsion at once.

IT MAY BE EXACTLY WHAT YOU NEED.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont. 16-9

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson XII. [illegible] 1917.

The Risen Lord.—John [illegible] 18.

Commentary.—I. Mary [illegible] Sepulchre (vs. 1, 2). 1. The [illegible] of the week—It was very early Sunday morning. The body of [illegible] was placed in the tomb before sunset on Friday and lay there until Sunday morning. A part of Friday, the whole of Saturday and a part of [illegible] were together, according to Jewish usage, called three days. The [illegible] Christians desired to celebrate the day on which our Lord arose from the dead, hence Sunday was observed as the Sabbath, rather than the day during which his body lay in the tomb. Mary Magdalene—She was most earnestly devoted to the Master, and [illegible] that her zeal led her to the tomb in advance of the other women. Their mission was to embalm the body of Jesus. Yet dark—Before light. The sepulchre—It was the new tomb of Joseph of Arimathaea, who requested the Roman officer to permit him to provide for the burial of the body of our Lord. The tomb was in a garden near Golgotha, or Calvary, the place of crucifixion. It was probably close to the hill resembling a skull, which is situated a short distance north of the north wall of Jerusalem. The sepulchre was a chamber made in the solid rock. The stone taken away—The women had inquired as they were on the way to the sepulchre, who should roll away the stone (Mark 16: 3). The opening into the tomb was like a door in a wall of rock and was covered by a large stone like a mill stone. 2. Runneth—In her disappointment in not finding the body of Jesus she hastened to inform the disciples of its unexplained disappearance. The other disciple, whom Jesus loved—From this and other passages it is clear that it was John himself.

II. Peter and John at the sepulchre (vs. 3-10). 3. [illegible] came to the sepulchre—The two disciples hastened to the tomb with the hope of finding some clue that would lead to the recovery of the body. 4. [illegible] Did outrun Peter—This verse shows the anxiety of the disciples in this matter. 5. Yet went he not in—[illegible] was able to see the interior of the tomb without entering, and he saw the grave clothes, but not the body of Jesus. Reverence of his Lord may have kept him from entering. 6. Peter...... went into the sepulchre—Peter was too impetuous to stop outside. This was in keeping with his disposition from the time he first became a disciple of Jesus. 7. The napkin ...... in a place by itself—The linen clothes with which the body was dressed for burial lay in one place and the napkin that was about his head in another. There was no indication of violence or haste. 8. He saw, and believed—As reverence at first kept John at a respectful distance from where the body of Jesus had lain, so faith, upon a more complete understanding of conditions within the tomb, led him to enter and to believe that the body of Jesus had not been taken from the tomb, but that he had risen from the dead. 9. They knew not the scripture—We can but admire the faith of John in the resurrection of Christ, in the absence of an understanding of the scripture which foretold that resurrection. Our Lord had told them that he would suffer death and rise again on the third day, but the disciples had failed to comprehend his meaning. John's faith was sublime.

III. Jesus appears to Mary (vs. 11-18). 11. Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping. Her devotion to the Master prompted her to linger after the disciples had gone away. It was the same devotion that had brought her very early to the tomb. Her sorrow at the disappearance of her Lord's body found expression in tears. Her devotion to Jesus was deep, but her faith was not as active and strong as was John's, who "saw and believed." 12. Seeth two angels—Her love led her to look at the place where Jesus had lain. "Matthew and Mark mention but one angel, probably that one only that spoke."—Clark. One at the head, etc.—In the most holy place the cherubim were placed at each end of the mercy-seat. See Exod. 25; 18, 19. Jesus was crucified between two thieves, but two angels guarded his body in the tomb. 13. Woman—A respectful manner of address. Why weepest thou—Had she understood that Christ had risen, there would have been no tears of sorrow.

14. Turned and saw Jesus standing. Something attracted her attention and she turned back from the abode of death to behold "the life," her Lord, although she did not at first recognize him. Knew not that it was Jesus—Mary was looking for the body of her Master, whom she believed to be dead, and not for her risen Lord. It seems that the thought of his resurrection had not entered her mind. She did not pay particular attention to the personage who was there, because of the intense grief of her soul. 15. Woman, why weepest thou—The first words of our Lord after his resurrection were addressed to one of his most devoted followers and brought comfort to her sorrowing heart. The gardener—Mary had not yet carefully observed Jesus, and thought he was the man who had charge of the grounds containing the tomb.

16. Jesus saith unto her, Mary—Her acts and words of devotion had won their way, and Jesus spoke her name, and spoke it with such tenderness that she at once recognized him. Turned—She had not been looking toward him whom she supposed was the gardener, but upon hearing the voice of Jesus she at once turned to see him. Rabboni—This was a title expressive of the highest honor, equivalent to "most honorable master." 17. Touch me not—The verb means to cling to. The relation between the glorified Christ and His followers was somewhat different from what it was between them before the crucifixion. Jesus had an errand for Mary to do, and that was more important then than to cling to his feet. For I am not yet ascended to my Father—This seems "to imply that, since he had not yet withdrawn himself from earth, there would be time enough for expressions of affection, and she would not lose the opportunity by going quickly now to his brethren, the disciples with the glad news." Go—She was at once sent forth as a witness. To my brethren—Bishop Hall remarks that they were, at first servants, then disciples, then friends, and after the resurrection, brethren. I ascend—He had his resurrection body, but was still on earth. He would soon ascend to glory, to my God, and your God—"A tender intimation that even on high he is their divine brother." 18. Told the disciples—She instantly obeyed her Lord's command. The gladness of her own heart prompted her to make the good news known to the others.

Questions.—For what reasons is the doctrine of the resurrection an important one? Who went early to the tomb of our Lord? How long had the body of Jesus lain in the tomb? What did Mary say to Peter and John as she met them? When Mary looked into the sepulchre, what did she see? Describe the appearing of Christ to her. Upon what errand did Christ send Mary? How did the disciples receive her message?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—A Glorious Revelation.

I. Of Christ's resurrection.

II. Of Christian brotherhood.

I. Of Christ's resurrection. For three years Jesus had declared among his followers that his Messiahship would be proved conclusively in his resurrection from the dead, and yet his disciples and his closely associated apostles had never taken in his meaning. When they were forced to give up their hopes of an earthly kingdom and see him submit to crucifixion, they forgot for the time all his assurances that he would rise again. They continued to conclude things according to their own reasoning. Mary's discovery of the empty tomb was the first indication of the fact of his resurrection. The two apostles, John and Peter, left the tomb convinced that Jesus had risen, but were unable to fathom the mystery of the resurrection. Mary stood resolute. She resolved to question until she learned the whole truth about her Lord. Her devotion to Jesus was seen in her persistent lingering, in her increased courage and in her intense feeling. She did the only thing which love prompted under the circumstances. She trusted the angels with the secret of her sorrow, then turned away to weep alone uninterruptedly. She did not consider that her Lord might be preserved to her under new conditions. A deep feeling of bereavement excluded from Mary's mind, for the time, every other thought and perception. In her ignorance and deep grief she had turned her back upon her Lord. Jesus interpreted and accepted her love regardless of her errors. His question, "Why weepest thou?" aroused the spirit of search and expectation anew in Mary's heart. She was ready to undertake the care of his body if it could be restored to her. That was sorrow in its resolute and hopeful aspect. In a tone of faithful remonstrance Jesus said, "Mary." Tenderness and revelation came in that one word. When Mary's eyes were opened and her ears caught the sound of his voice, there was no longer any doubt or hesitation. Mary recognized not only her own name, but the voice that uttered it. She comprehended the situation without further remark and turned direct to him. It was not merely an old-time greeting which Mary received. It was a new and measureless benediction. The salutation made real to her all she had ever dared to hope. From the sense of absolute loss she passed to the sense of full possession. That was a moment of reaction from blank despair to boundless ecstasy. When Mary had known but part, she wept. When she knew all, her joy was full.

II. Of Christian brotherhood. Mary, a Galilean woman, who had enjoyed a rich experience of Christ's healing power, and who had ministered to His temporal needs, and who had witnessed His crucifixion, was the first to bear witness of His resurrection. She was first to see her Lord and to hear His voice. "Rabboni" was the word in which Mary's soul expressed its love and wonder and concentration of feeling. The spirit of loving discipleship was crystalized in that one word. With all the intensity of her affection and the greatness of her courage there was imperfection in her faith. The words of Jesus, "Touch Me not," were designed to discipline and raise her faith and to break to her the truth that He was no longer to be associated with His disciples in the flesh. After His ascension to His Father the new life would be complete, when in her heart and spirit she could cling to Him forever. Mary needed to be taught that the fellowship of the future would be very different from that of the past. Her dependence upon Christ must be changed into a holier relation. All this Mary had to learn until her joy that her joy might not be taken from her when he should ascend. To Mary it was the historic and physical revelation of the risen Saviour and the spiritual establishment of all her hopes in life and in eternity. The laws of the new life and relationships were revealed to Mary first. She was made an apostle to the apostles by the Master's own direction and commission. Her direct errand was to bear gracious words of cheer and encouragement to those who had been enduring suspense, sorrow and depression. Mary hastened to tell the whole story and to declare the whole message.—T. R. A.

Cheering Him Up.

He (anxiously, after popping the question)—Why do you cry, my love? Did I offend you by my proposal? She (quietly sobbing)—Oh, no, dear. Mamma always said to me, "Lil, you are such an idiot that you will not even get a donkey for a lover," and now I have got one after all.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Old Dutch

Fruit Jars and other Glassware can easily be kept immaculate with Old Dutch

And remember, this cleanser never harms your hands

Old Dutch Cleanser

FEEDING BEEF CATTLE GRAIN ON PASTURE

Before Grain Can be Profitably Fed to Cattle On Pasture This Summer They Would Have to Sell for $15 to $20 Per Cwt.—6 to 8 Lbs. of Grain is Required to Produce 1 lb. of Fattening Increase.

Up until the last year or two prices have been distinctly discouraging to producers of beef cattle, with the result that large numbers of them have gone out of the business. Since the war, however, prices for meat, as well as for all kinds of food products, have shot upwards, with the result that the average price for cattle on the Toronto market during the last winter are higher than ever they've been before. Cattle prices have been rising steadily since the year 1913. In 1913, during the week corresponding to May 6-12, the top price for choice steers on the Toronto market was $7.15, in 1914 $8.45, in 1915 $8.60, in 1916 $9.40, and at the present time choice heavy steers are selling for about $12.65. Receipts of cattle during 1915 were particularly heavy, due chiefly to the high price of feed. In 1916 and during the first four months of the present year, receipts of young calves have exceeded those for the year 1915 as well as for the year 1914, so that everything points to a scarcity of cattle and correspondingly high prices for at least several years to come.

It takes three years to produce a prime steer, whereas a crop of wheat can be produced in six months. Those farmers who have been wise enough to "hang on" to their young stock are reaping, and will reap in the future in even greater degree the reward of their wisdom, in cold hard cash.

The old system of producing beef was to carry the animals along until they weighed 2,000 pounds or more at four or five years old. This was all right when cattle had to be walked often several days' journey to market, but under modern market conditions the sooner animals, generally speaking, are marketed, the better. When we say this, of course, we do not mean to market young stock before they are properly finished, but we mean that it is more profitable under average Ontario conditions to market an animal at 15 months old, having it weigh 1,000 pounds, than to market the same weight, but as a two-year-old.

Whether it will pay better to buy and feed stockers or raise and finish the animals oneself will depend chiefly on one's skill in buying and selling. For the average man who only feeds a few animals each year, it it is more profitable as a rule to raise and finish the animals.

To make money buying and feeding cattle requires considerable skill and judgment. In the first place a good eye for cattle is required. One must be able to distinguish between the thin animals of strong constitution that will make use of all the feed that is given it from the animal that is thin because it is a "bad doer." Many experienced cattle feeders claim that if there is a difference of 1½ to 2 cents between the buying price and the selling price they can make money. One experienced feeder that we are acquainted with reckons that on the average each animal costs $25 to house and feed during the winter and early spring. He figures on making a profit of from $25 to $20 per steer.

The great advantage of finishing the animals quickly is that less food is required to produce a given amount of meat, and profits are correspondingly greater. Whether an animal is at hard work or is simply kept quietly in the stable at rest, a certain amount of food is required to keep up the vital functions of the body. The mere act of breathing uses up energy and this energy comes from the food. Only when more than enough food is supplied to furnish the energy necessary to carry on the vital bodily functions can an animal increase in weight. To keep a 1,000 pound steer at rest without losing weight, 20 pounds of hay is required per day. The longer an animal is kept the more food is wasted in supplying this food required for maintenance. If an animal is kept a year longer than is necessary to get it into market condition, it means that the food required to maintain that animal during the year (20 pounds of hay per day in the case of a 1,000 pound steer), is wasted. The modern tendency is therefore to market beef animals as soon as is consistent with finish. The heavy steer still commands a good price provided he is of good-beef conformation and well fattened, but finish is what is looked for on the market, and an animal that is properly finished when it is 1,100 pounds will command a higher price per hundred weight than an older animal weighing 1,500 pounds. At the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, it was found that three-year-olds made a daily gain of 1.65 pounds at a cost of $6.52 per cwt.; two-year-olds, 2.16 pounds per day at a cost of $6.99 per cwt.; and yearlings, 2 pounds per day at a cost of 4.30 per cwt. The younger the animal is when finished the less outlay there is per pound of gain for food consumed. The production of baby beef, although profitable if one can keep the animal from going off its feed while it is being heavily fed for rapid gains, requires skilful feeding, and probably the safest plan for the average man is to aim to have the cattle finished weighing from 1200 to 1,400 pounds at from 20 to [illegible] months old.

The cheapest gains are made, of course, when the animals are on pasture. If animals are to be sold less than two months after they are turned out to pasture, it is better to keep on feeding them in the stable until they are sold. The reason for this is that no matter how carefully the change from winter to summer feeding may be made, it is practically impossible to prevent the animal losing weight for the time being. Two weeks after animals are turned to pasture it is not unusual for them to weigh 120 pounds or more less than when they were turned out. The gains made on pasture will, of course, depend on the quality of the pasture. Animals should gain from 1½ to 2 pounds per day. When pastures dry up and afford but little sustenance, then supplementary feeding should be resorted to. With the shortage of labor this year this will be expensive, quite apart from the cost of the feed. A good plan, therefore, is to seed down a certain acreage with the annual pasture mixture that has given such good results at the Ontario Agricultural College. The mixture consists of one bushel each of wheat, oats and barley, and from 5 to 7 pounds of red clover seed per acre. About one month after sowing the mixture, when 6 or 7 inches of growth has taken place, the cattle may be turned into it. This pasture will carry about one steer per acre. Last year, which was exceptionally hot and dry, 77 head of cattle were pastured on 34 acres of this annual pasture and 36 acres of permanent pasture from the last of May to August 2th, without feeding one pound of silage or other coarse feed, and growth of beef cattle and young stock were kept at normal during the entire period. On August 25th one-half the cattle were removed to other pasture, but the annual and permanent pasture was sufficient for the remaining cattle during the balance of the season.

Whether it pays to feed grain to cattle on pasture is an oft debated question at farmers' meetings. Cattle given grain or meal certainly have more finish, but it is doubtful whether the slightly extra price obtained for the extra finish more than pays for the cost of the grain.

Foods are valued chiefly for the protein and starch or its equivalent they contain. The protein forms flesh or muscle and the starch forms fat and gives the animal energy to do work. A good pasture usually provides enough protein, so that when supplementary feeds are given fattening foods (that is, foods that are rich in starch or its equivalent) should be given rather than foods that are very rich in protein. Protein-rich foods may be given as protein can also be converted into fat as well as into flesh, but as a rule foods that are rich in protein are more expensive than those that are rich in starch, that is, protein normally is dearer than starch. At present prices, however, as will be seen from our market pages, feeds such as cotton seed meal and oil cake that are very rich in protein are cheaper reckoned both as a source of protein and of starch equivalent than corn and other foods that are rich rich in starch or carbohydrates.

As has been said, starch or its equivalent is the chief food constituent that puts fat on the animal body, so that a fair way to compare foods for fattening purposes is on the basis of the amount of starch or its equivalent they contain. When animals are fed a properly balanced ration, it has been found that three pounds of starch or its equivalent added to a maintenance ration will produce one pound of fattening increase. Expressing this in terms of corn we find that 3.6 pounds of corn if added to a maintenance ration would produce one pound of fattening increase. From this we might expect 3.6 pounds of corn when fed to cattle on pasture to produce one pound of gain, but practical experience has shown that in some cases it will take from 6 to 8 pounds of corn or more to produce one pound of fattening increase under these circumstances. What is the reason for this apparent discrepancy?

The reason, no doubt, is that a steer fed a grain ration on pasture will not graze so closely and will not make such good use of the pasture. If no grain is fed the steer will fill himself up with grass and eat more than enough for maintenance, but when fed grain he eats less grass and some of the grain has to furnish the [illegible] for maintenance. Under average conditions we may reckon on from 6 to 8 pounds of grain producing 1 pound of increase when fed on pasture. With grain selling for 2 1-2 cents per pound, this means that it will take from 15 to 20 cents worth of grain to produce 1 pound of gain. This means that cattle must be selling at $15 to $20 per hundredweight to return a profit on the grain fed. Prices for cattle are usually highest in the month of July, but even though they are at the present time about $3 per hundredweight more than last year, we do not expect choice steers to be selling for as high as $20 this coming July. Grain feeding may be profitable in some cases where prices for feeding stuffs are not exorbitant, but with present prices grain cannot be profitably fed to steers on pasture.—The Canadian Countryman.

What is Life?

"What is life?" I asked a child,
Care-free, happy all the day.
"What is life?" the child replied,
"Lady, life is play."

Next I turned to maiden fair,
Sweet and lovely beyond measure,
"What is life?" I murmured her;
"Life," she murmured, "Life is pleasure."

Turning to a soldier brave,
Like to those oft sung in story;
"Just a moment's time I crave
What is life?" "Why, life is glory."

Mother toiling all the day
For the child whose radiant beauty
Brightens all the weary way—
"What is life?" "Ah, life is duty."

Sailor, sailing o'er the sea,
Where the angry waters foam,
"What is life?" I [illegible]
Quickly answered, "Life is home."

Then I whispered to my heart:
"What is life where'er we roam?"
Soft and sweet my heart replied;
"Life? Ah, life is only love."
—May E. McMillan, in Golden Age.

THE HOLLYHOCK.

A Flower That is Interwined With Colonial History.

The hollyhock gets its name from two words that indicate its origin in the Holy Land and its membership in the mallow family. But apparently it was known in India before it flung its cheerful banners to the air in Palestine.

Wherever the first home was, it has become thoroughly acclimated in New England. We think of it as a characteristic New England flower. It decorates our colonial history almost back to the days of Governor Bradford and Roger Williams. It is forever peering out of the pages of New England fiction and poetry. There is no flower that more completely embodies the spirit of our eighteenth century romance.

Some of the old colondial blossoms are shy and modest, but the hollyhock has the courage of its convictions. It knows its beauty, as it should, and has no mind to hide it under a bushel or beneath a hedgerow. It is the province of loveliness to display itself, not vauntingly, but with a due sense of its worth. And the hollyhock, the stateliest of our "old fashioned" flowers, aspires unabashed.

In two books of "popular quotations" there is no reference to the hollyhock, though the holly has its fair share of space. But it can afford to be thus ostracized.

Preserve all you can

Make the most of the season's fruit crop. Use only

Lantic Sugar

"Pure and Uncolored"

The best preserving sugar on account of its high sweetening power and "FINE" granulation

2 and 5-lb cartons 10, 20 and 100-lb sacks

Ask your Grocer for LANTIC SUGAR

MARKET REPORTS

TORONTO MARKETS.

FARMERS' MARKET

Dairy Produce—
Butter, choice dairy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Eggs, new-laid, doz.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cheese, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., fancy, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dressed Poultry—
Turkeys, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fowl, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spring chickens	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fruits—
Apples, 6-qt. bkt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., 11-qt. bkt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Rhubarb, 3 bunches	[illegible]	[illegible]
Vegetables—
Asparagus, Can., bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Beans, new, small measure	[illegible]	[illegible]
Beets, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cucumbers, each	[illegible]	[illegible]
Carrots, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Celery, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cabbages, each	[illegible]	[illegible]
Horseradish, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Leeks, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lettuce, doz. bchs., small	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., doz. bchs., large	[illegible]	[illegible]
Onions, bundle	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., 11-qt. bkt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., Bermuda, bag	[illegible]	[illegible]
Potatoes, per bag	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., per peck	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., new, peck	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., small measure	[illegible]	[illegible]
Radishes, per bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spinach, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sage, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Savory, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Turnips, bag	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., per peck	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]

MEATS—WHOLESALE

Beef forequarters, cwt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., hindquarters	[illegible]	[illegible]
Carcases, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., common	[illegible]	[illegible]
Veal, common, cwt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., medium	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., prime	[illegible]	[illegible]
Heavy hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Shop hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Abattoir, hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mutton, heavy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., Spring, each	[illegible]	[illegible]

SUGAR MARKET.

Lantic, granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Redpath, granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Royal Acadia, granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
St. Lawrence, granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Dominion granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
No. 1 yellow	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Dark yellow	100 lbs.	[illegible]

10-lb. bags, [illegible] granulated bags

20-lb. bags, [illegible] granulated bags

Two and five-pound cartons, [illegible] granulated bags

TORONTO CATTLE MARKETS

Export cattle, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butcher cattle, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. medium	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. common	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butcher cows, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. medium	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. canners	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. bulls	[illegible]	[illegible]
Feeding steers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Stockers, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Milkers, choice, each	[illegible]	[illegible]
Springers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sheep, ewes	12 00	13 00
Bucks and culls	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hogs, fed and watered	[illegible]
Calves	[illegible]	[illegible]

OTHER MARKETS.

WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE.

Wheat—	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Oct.	[illegible]
Oats—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Flax—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK

Cattle, receipts [illegible].
Market steady.

Beeves	[illegible]	[illegible]
Stockers and Feeders	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cows and heifers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Calves	[illegible]	[illegible]

Hogs, receipts [illegible].
Market slow.

Light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mixed	[illegible]	[illegible]
Heavy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Rough	[illegible]	[illegible]
Pigs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bulk sales	[illegible]	[illegible]

Sheep, receipts 7,000.
Market slow.

Wethers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs, native	[illegible]	[illegible]
Springs	[illegible]	[illegible]

QUICK LUNCH NAMES.

Strange Way the Waiters Call Their Orders.

The doctor writes Latin on your prescription in return for a five dollar fee; the lawyer may venture into Greek. The chef says "Potage Parmentier" when he means potato soup; the sport writer describes his favorite form of [illegible] in flowing imagery that seems to mingle with the English idiom. Stockbrokers affect the deaf-and-dumb alphabet in preference to their own; poets, and railroad folder writers all show a considerable scorn for the common or garden variety of speech. And then, there is the quick lunch expert. Not all speedy restaurants are equipped with these experts, but on occasion they are to be found and their free translations of the items on the bill of fare are at once the fascination and bewilderment of the [illegible]. A writer in the Boston Post introduces us to one of them.

The other day in a down-town restaurant, after I had polished off a platter of beans, I tarried to converse with one of the waiters who is a friend of mine. He was very busy of course, yet, with waiting on customers, he found time to converse with me.

"Gimme an order of pea soup," said one customer.

"One splash of split peas," cried the waiter.

"Couple of sinkers and a cup of coffee without cream," says a guy, climbing on a stool.

"Two submarines and a mug of murk—no cow!" bawled the waiter.

"I ain't seen Jim for two weeks," he went on addressing me. "He always used to come in here mornin before—"

"An order of ham and eggs," interrupted a customer.

"Roast two on a slice of squeal!" the waiter shouted into the tube.

[illegible]

"I've been thinking that Jim must have the grip or something [illegible]"

"A dozen raw oysters," said a [illegible] man.

"Twelve alive in the shell!" [illegible] the waiter.

"Where's my eggs on toast?" complained a man in waiting.

"Rush the birdies on a raft," [illegible] the waiter.

"I want a rump steak rare," ordered another man.

"Slab of moo—let him chew it!" the waiter called.

"If you see Jim," he went on, "tell him I was askin' about him, will you?"

I told him I would and slid off my stool.

"I want a bowl of tomato soup," began the man who grabbed my stool, "a plate of beans, bread and butter, a piece of apple pie, and a glass of water."

I figured that the translation of this order into lunch-lingo would be worth listening to, so I lingered. The waiter seemed to be puzzled but for an instant only, then he shouted into the tube as follows:

"One splash of red nose, platter of Saturday nights, dough well done with cow to cover, Eve with the lid on, and a chaser of Adam's ale!"—Literary Digest.

She—What do you suppose Harry meant by sending me those flowers? Also She—He probably meant to imply that you were a dead one.—Jack o' Lantern.

Don't work in heavy, leather boots this summer. Wear "Fleet Foot" Shoes. They are honest and sturdy enough to stand the farm work.

Easy and comfortable—light—sensible—and so much cheaper than leather.

When you go out in the evening, wear "Fleet Foot" White Shoes. There are plenty of different styles and shapes, for every occasion, day as well as evening—and they are far less expensive than leather boots.

Next time you go to town, be sure to see the "Fleet Foot" Shoes for summer wear.

206

A PUZZLING CASE

"Arrest you," I cried, more in the dark than ever. "and for what?"

"For the murder of my sister."

"Great heavens! Did you murder Mazzucata?"

"Yes; I alone committed the crime."

Thunderstruck with amazement, I turned towards Tancred, who was looking at both of us in silence, and touched my forehead significantly with my hand.

"Mad."

"No, I am not mad," cried Miss Maxwell, sinking into her chair. "I am a miserable, wicked woman, who killed my twin sister out of jealousy."

"Tancred, this is absurd."

"Unfortunately, it is the truth," he replied, sadly, motioning to me to seat myself. "I have heard the story, and there is no doubt that it is as she says."

"Miss Maxwell," I said, addressing her directly, "I have not heard your story, but I cannot, and will not believe that you committed this crime."

A faint color flushed her cheeks, and she half involuntarily held out her hand, but withdrew it immediately with a sigh.

"You are very good to speak so kindly, Major Granby, but you will change your opinion when I tell you all."

"Well, Miss Maxwell, it will take a lot to convince me of the truth of this statement, but I am ready to hear what you have to say."

"Must I tell the story again?" she said, in an appealing manner to Tancred.

"I am afraid it will be necessary, Miss Maxwell," he replied, coldly, upon which, sensitive to the marked sternness of his tone, she shuddered slightly.

"It is part of my punishment," she said, faintly. "But it is only what I deserve. Yes, Major Granby, I will tell you all, and then you will see how wicked I have been."

"I am all attention, Miss Maxwell," I replied, a doubt beginning to creep into my heart, in spite of my desire to believe in her innocence.

"Myself and Marietta Mazzucata were twins," she began, in a firm tone, "but ever since I can remember, there existed no sisterly affection between us in any way. We were physically very much alike, but our natures were quite dissimilar, as she had a soft, sweet disposition, while mine was hard proud, unyielding and jealous. She had a beautiful voice, she was a brilliant musician, and attracted much attention, while I, possessing no accomplishments, was also blind from birth. She, adorned with beauty, talent and ambition, was attractive in the highest degree; but I was neglected on all sides, while she was present. My father is a hard, self-contained man, very bigoted in matters of religion, but even he yielded to the fascinations of my sister and treated her kindly, far more kindly than he ever treated me. Seeing, then, that she possessed all, and I nothing, I began to grow madly jealous of her in every way, and at last hated her so much that I refused to speak to her.

"An unwomanly feeling," I murmured, astonished at this unexpected revelation.

"Yes, it was unwomanly; I own," she answered quickly, "but do you know what it is, Major Granby, to sit on one side, despised and neglected, while another is praised and loved? Yes, I hated my sister. I would gladly have seen her dead, and all her perfection buried in the grave."

"You are mad to talk like this."

"Yes, I was mad; I am mad. Mad with neglect and scorn. Who was she, to gain all, while I was lower than the dust? Oh, how I despised and hated her! As I said, we never spoke to one another, nor did she tell me any of her secrets; therefore I was much astonished to hear one morning from my father that she had left the house with the intention of going on the stage as a singer. He is an eminently religious man, who is narrow in his views, a follower of Calvin, and one who looks upon the theatre as a pit of iniquity. Many times have I heard him say that he would rather see his daughter dead than on the stage; therefore when I heard, that in direct opposition to his wishes she had gone away to appear as a singer, I was not astonished when he forbade her name to be mentioned, and cursed her as an undutiful daughter. I was glad she departed, as it relieved me from the hatefulness of enduring her presence, and I encouraged my father in his detestation of what she had done."

"Spare us these remarks, Miss Maxwell," said Tancred, in a tone of disgust; "remember she is dead."

"Dead!" repeated the woman in a melancholy tone "yes, she is dead and I would I were also.

"For many months we heard nothing of my sister," she resumed, quietly, "but at length the news came that she had appeared on the stage with great success, under the name of Marietta Mazzucata. As I told you, my father forbade her name to be mentioned to him, but, notwithstanding that I managed to hear all about my sister and of her many triumphs. It is true I am blind, and therefore unable to read the papers, but an old servant, who has to-day come up with me to town, used to procure from the railway book-stalls all the newspapers containing notices of the celebrated Mazzucata, and read them to me. Many sisters would have been pleased at her success, but I was not, for it only made me feel the more acutely how thoroughly my infirmity cut me off from the world. I hated to hear of her triumphs, yet could not resist desiring to know all about them; consequently, when my sister came back to England to appear at Covent Garden, I was thoroughly enraged, and cast about in my own mind as to some means of preventing her appearance."

"What a horrible nature!" I said, in a low tone.

When you buy Sugar—look for the Red Diamond

It is your guarantee that the sugar is all pure cane of the highest quality,—that the weight is exact, that the grains are either coarse, medium or fine,—as you may have chosen—(your dealer can meet your choice).

USE RED DIAMOND
ST. LAWRENCE EXTRA GRANULATED SUGAR

for every purpose, but especially for those which exact the best.

FOR JAMS AND JELLIES

St. Lawrence sugars have stood the test of time and have never caused preserves to ferment, or prevented jellies from setting, because St. Lawrence Red Diamond Granulated is free from the organic impurities which cause these troubles.

Buy a 100 lb. bag of St. Lawrence Red Diamond Granulated now and have a supply of the best sugar at hand for every purpose.

Sold also in many other sizes and styles of packages.

ST. LAWRENCE SUGAR REFINERIES LIMITED, MONTREAL.
3-4-17

"Yes, very horrible, but I could not help myself," she replied, with unnecessary vehemence. "I heard of her rich, famous and courted; I, her twin sister, was poor, unknown and neglected, and I hated her for it—oh, how I hated her! In some way or another, I determined to harm her, and when Mr. Dallas came to Lippinton in search of the black carnation, I determined to punish her, if I could, for her success."

"Did Mr. Dallas steal the black carnation?"

"Yes, he did, and I also, unknown to my father, plucked a bud."

"But your reason?"

"Because I wished my sister to know that I was the cause of her punishment."

"Of her death, you mean."

"No!" replied the wretched woman, vehemently; "I did not wish to kill her, but only to harm her, in some way; to disfigure her beauty, not to take her life."

"You are a fiend," I cried, indignantly.

"I am what I am," she answered, stolidly; "let me go on with my tale of revenge.

"Mr. Dallas, I presume, sent the flower, as I knew he did, from the mouth of Signor Ivan, who came to Lippinton to ask my father about the black carnation. After he had conversed with my father, I saw him, and he spoke about Mazzucata, when I told him she was my sister. During our conversation, he pulled out his pockethandkerchief, and with it a dynamite cartridge—one which I afterward learned would explode when the spring was touched. It fell into my lap, and I picked it up, when he snatched it from me with a cry of alarm, and explained how dangerous it was. Then the idea came into my head that, if I could only obtain possession of that cartridge, and, placing it in the handle of a bouquet, give it to my sister, she would, unwittingly, touch the spring and the explosion would take place."

"A devilish idea."

"I did not wish to kill her. I swear I did not wish to kill her," cried the woman, clasping her hands. "I only wished to disfigure her—to end her career on the stage, but I did not desire her death."

She was now sobbing bitterly, but, despite a naturally generous nature, I could not find it in my heart to pity this woman, so desirous of the death of her sister—that sister, whose only fault was success.

"How did you get this bouquet sent to Mazzucata?" I said, repressing my disgust.

"I generally make up bouquets myself," she replied, drying her eyes; "and, in order to let my sister know that this special bouquet came from me, I made it of white flowers, with a black carnation in the centre. The handle, as I have told you before, was made of the cartridge of Signar Ivan."

"But how did you get the cartridge?
MAJOR GRANSBY'S THEORY. taken it from you."

"So he did, and placed it for safety in his overcoat pocket. Then my father saw him again for a few minutes, and while his back was turned I picked his pocket."

"Thief as well as murderess."

"Oh! have pity, pity," she murmured, stretching out her hands. But I felt no pity, for this woman was vile in the extreme, and quite undeserving of any kindness.

"Go on, Miss Maxwell," said Tancred, stolidly. "Let us finish this painful business as soon as possible."

"When the bouquet was finished," she said, recovering herself with a powerful effort, "I did not know how to give it to my sister, and determined to go to town in order to do so. My father was sending some flowers up to Phillis & Co., so, with our old servant Jane, I went up to town with them. On arriving at Phillis & Co. I showed them my bouquet, when one of the girls asked me if I would give it to them for Sir Gilbert Tressinger, who had ordered one similar to it for Mazzucata that night. I saw at once a chance of getting it given to Mazzucata without any danger, therefore I left it. The rest you know. Sir Gilbert took the bouquet, which was thrown to my sister, and when the explosion took place it killed her."

"Yes, I know that, Miss Maxwell. But you are wrong in thinking Sir Gilbert threw the bouquet, for he went to the Hotel Europa when the bouquets were changed."

"What bouquets?"

"Mr. Dallas also ordered a bouquet for Mazzucata similar to that of Sir Gilbert, and with the desire of his own being given first to Mazzucata, he changed the bouquets; therefore, as he took Sir Gilbert's, which was the one you prepared, it was Mr. Dallas who threw the fatal bouquet."

"Then Sir Gilbert will now be released."

"Assuredly, and you will be arrested."

"I am willing to be arrested at once," she cried, rising to her feet. "Call in a policeman and give me in charge."

"I don't wish to give you in charge just yet," said Tancred, awkwardly, for, basely as she had acted, the woman was blind, and deserving of pity.

"Why not? I swear, if you do not give me in charge, I will go and do so myself. Why will you not have me arrested?"

"Because I don't know if your story is true."

"It is true," she said, earnestly, "I swear it is true."

"I have my doubts of that," said Tancred, quietly. "People who commit crimes, don't, as a rule, give themselves up."

"I did so because I would have been arrested sooner or later. That Jew you sent down to Lippinton knows all. He overheard my confession to my father, and would have arrested me at once; but I thought it best to come up and see you, Mr. Tancred, to say that I was guilty, and ask you to release Sir Gilbert."

"What do you think, major?"

"Her story seems likely enough," said I, with a sigh. "There is no doubt she committed the crime."

"Then I am afraid I must call a policeman, and give you in charge."

"Yes; do! do!" she cried, anxiously. Tancred looked doubtfully at her.

"Miss Maxwell," he said, at length, "you have told a vile story, and accused yourself of a vile crime; but I will not give you in charge."

WANTED

A first-class reliable man to sell securities of an INDUSTRIAL MANUFACTURING concern, in ONTARIO CITIES. Will pay salary or commission or both. Apply

P. O. Box 107
Hamilton, Ont.

"But, why?" she murmured, faintly. "What is your reason?"

"The best of all possible reasons—I don't believe you murdered Mazzucata."

MAJOR GRANBY'S THEORY N. 6.

I am inclined to agree with Tancred, and believe that Miss Maxwell is innocent of the crime, my reasons for such belief being as follows:

The whole story is extremely unlikely.

Miss Maxwell does not account for the superstition believed in by her sister—that the warning of the black carnation would be the forerunner of her death.

Miss Maxwell says she placed a black carnation in the fatal bouquet; and, if this was the case, two buds would be missing from the tree, whereas, to all showing there is but one lost.

If there had been a black carnation in the bouquet, Phillis & Co. would have noticed it; and, after the evidence of Ilma Celinski had been made public, would have given notice to the police.

Phillis & Co. said nothing about her visit to them; whereas, her striking resemblance to Mazzucata would surely have been commented upon.

CHAPTER XVII.

Before I left Tancred's chamber, it was arranged that Miss Maxwell and her servant should go, for the present, to an hotel in Fleet street, close to the Temple, where she could be watched. Tancred, after due consideration, refused to believe her extraordinary story, and decided to take no step until he had communicated with Melchizedek. Neither of us could understand why Miss Maxwell should accuse herself of this crime, unless, as I surmised, it was because Ilma Celinski's idea was true and she was in love with Dallas. This being the case, all would be easily accounted for, seeing that the evidence against Dallas was so strong; and presuming him to be guilty of the crime, her love for him would be sufficient excuse for her accusing herself wrongfully in order to shield him.

Tancred, however, scouted this theory as ridiculous, though I, the author of it, thought it a very feasible one, but what his own ideas were on the subject, I was quite unable to learn, owing to the obstinate silence he preserved.

"I have made quite enough mistakes, major," he said, as I took my leave, "and I am not going to make any more by suspecting the wrong people. There is only one man who will find out the truth, and that is our friend Melchizedek."

"Who is still at Lippinton?"

"Yes, but when he finds Miss Maxwell has come up to town he'll follow her at once. In fact, I would not be surprised if he came up by to-night's train."

As a matter of fact, Tancred proved to be a true prophet, for the next morning, which was Sunday, just as I was finishing breakfast, somewhere about 10 o'clock, Melchizedek made his appearance in my room.

"Mornin', sir," he said, with a satisfied smile, "I'm back again, sir."

"When did you arrive?"

"By the night train, sir; but it was too late to look up either you or Mr. Tancred, so I waited till now. I'm just on my way to the Temple, sir, and thinking you'd like to hear how I've got on, I called in here, sir, to ask you to come with me."

"Have you been successful?"

"Yes, sir; I've found out everything."

"But how, Melchizedek, how?" I cried, quickly, putting on my coat, which Pointer brought to me. I may mention that I was not sitting in my shirt sleeves, but had on a smoking jacket.

"How, sir?" said Melchizedek, calmly, "why, sir, by playing a game of bluff."

"Wait a moment; Now, there, I'm ready; Pointer, a cab."

Pointer went off at once to get a hansom, and I followed slowly with Melchizedek.

"Who is guilty?"

Melchizedek smoothed his hat, put it on his head, and winked his eye in a most vulgar manner.

"I'll tell you that, sir, when I see Mr. Tancred."

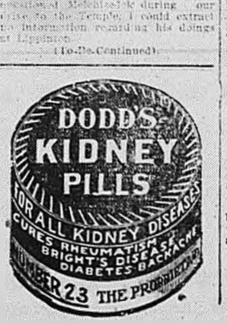
"What about Miss Maxwell?"

"Oh, she did her best, sir, but it was no go with him."

"What do you mean, Melchizedek?"

"I'll tell the story to both gents at once," replied this dreadful person, obstinately, and with this promise I was fain to be content, for though I questioned Melchizedek during our drive to the Temple, I could extract no information regarding his doings at Lippinton.

(To Be Continued.)



The Tests of a Bore.

Do you monopolize the conversation wherever you go with breathless accounts of your own affairs?

Do you live over some trip you have taken with a friend until those around you never want to visit the regions you discuss?

Do you tell pointless jokes?

Do you talk round and round a subject before you finally get up to the point you want to emphasize?

Do you interrupt another's conversation with "That reminds me——" or "By the way——"?

Do you insist on pointing out every place of interest which is interesting to you but not a stranger?

Do you talk mutual acquaintances and then ask your hearer's opinion upon them?

Do you chatter on for the sake of filling up a silence?

Do you take delight in explaining the why-wherefore and when of something in which your companion may take slight interest?

Do you fill up conversation with stories of people whom your audience does not know, never will know, nor has any desire to know?

Do you jump at every opportunity to trace a person's family connections and ancestry to the fourth generation?

Do you read the letters of the movies for the benefit of the entire theatre?

Do you annoy a concert by beating time to the music or humming with the singer?

Do you talk shop out of shop hours?

Do you laugh at your own jokes before any one else has a chance to emphasize it?

Do you say, "Oh, yes, I've heard that before," and take away the pleasure of another's story?—Irish World.

◆

THIN-BLOODED MEN AND WOMEN

Need the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

Thin-blooded people do not remain so from choice but from indifference, in some cases form despair. People who are pale, languid, with palpitation of the heart, some difficulty in breathing and a tendency to be easily tired are suffering from thin blood. They need only the resolution to take the right treatment and stick to it until cured, the remedy that can be relied upon is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. With every dose they make new blood, and new blood means health and strength. The red cheeks, good appetite, increased weight and strength that follow the use of these pills prove their great value to thin-blooded people. Here is an example: Mrs. J. McDonald, jun., Hay, Ont., says: "I honestly believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life. Some years ago I had anaemia, and I did not realize the seriousness of the trouble I soon became a complete wreck. I got so weak I could hardly walk. I neither ate nor slept well, and could not go up stairs without stopping to rest. At times I had almost an unbearable pain in my back and would have to remain in bed. I suffered almost constantly from a dull headache and when sweeping if I would stoop to pick up anything I would get so dizzy that I would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. At times my heart would beat so fast that I would have a smothering sensation. My eyes were sunken and my hands and limbs would be swollen in the mornings. I tried several kinds of medicine without benefit and my friends thought I would not recover. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and before long could see and feel that they were helping me. I gladly continued the use of the pills until I was completely cured and I cannot say enough in their praise, and I strongly recommend them to all run down girls and women."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

◆

BIRDS LEAVE WAR ZONE.

Curious, Ominous Change On Europe's Battlefields.

There are queer changes in the bird life of Europe. The birds seem to be all upset. It is the awful racket of the war which frightens them? There are inexplicable facts on a large scale.

On the firing line it has become notorious that the birds in mass were habituated to trench war early in 1915. For two they fluttered nonchalantly in the "no-man's land between the hostile trenches." They chirped in blasted trees between shells.

The contradictions are extraordinary; and they began almost with the war. In the autumn of 1914, around Dijon, in Burgundy, far from the war, the regular passage of migrating birds became different than it had been from time immemorial. The immense flocks of migrators, wild geese, and ducks, thrushes, larks, finches, were visible less numerous than usual and none seem to stop more than a few days in all Burgundy. The diminution of the flocks and their evident hurry was more remarkable still in 1915; and in 1916, except for water fowl, which seemed to increase, the migrators practically disappeared.

Not a single flock of larks; and in an entire afternoon across the fields one could not scare up a dozen, solitary or in couples. Not a thrush in this land of vineyards, where, habitually, when the grapes are ripe, the children have to be mobilized to fight off the flocks of thrushes. In vintage of 1915 they came one by one; but last autumn Jenan Voguet, who is a character of the Cote d'Or, saw exactly three thrushes in his vines, where he had habitually shot them by the hundreds.

It is the same with the birds of prey. No more buzzards, no more sparrow hawks and few hawks. Of course, it may be argued that the birds of prey have quit the land because there are no little birds, nothing but mice, for them to prey on; but why, then, have the crows acted in the same manner—crows never attack a living bird. They eat anything, yet never touch mouse, rat, rabbit or man unless wounded or dead.

Why have they gone? Intelligent farmers, hunters, [illegible] men, even who have studied the matter on all sides, declare they do not know. It is a mystery. The peasants, who have a reason for everything, say it is the war. "It frightens the birds," they say. "It's natural."

But, wait!

Why should the war make birds quit a land so far from the war as Burgundy? Why have they not been seen flying high over the land, in habitual migration. There is no war in Holland, or in Norway, or in the Far North. It is a fact that in the zone of the armies, where the cannonade never ceases, the birds were not frightened away. For two years of war they remained as numerous as usual and seemed to pay no attention to the smashing and the carnage.

◆

Mrs. Gnaggs—You should remember, Mr. Gnaggs that I made you what you are. Mr. Gnaggs—Well I am doing my best to forgive you.

"Love laughs at locksmiths," quoted the Wise Guy. "Which proves that love isn't a serious matter, after all," snickered the Simple Mug.

Don't give yourself away. Charity begins at home.

Rubber Soled Canvas Footwear

Fleet Foot & Life-buoy Lines . . .

Summer comfort for little money. Drop in and see the range we are showing. Some real dressy ideas in ladies lines.

This week we clear the balance of our felt and straw hats. Your choice for 90c. Good shades and shapes. Sizes only 6 3-4, 6 7-8 and 7.

A real bargain in 10 splendid raincoats. Do not miss this chance.

Butter and Eggs Wanted

Falconer Bros.

Delayed Shipments

Just Arrived . . .

Now is the time to get goods that have been almost impossible to get. We have just got in delayed shipments, bought last fall at last last year's prices.

Cotton, Silk and Real Cashmere Hosiery

From 15c to 60c. To-day's values 25c to $1.00

Gloves in kid, silk and mercerized lisle, and chamoise lisle. Floor coverings, linoluems, and oilclothes. Get them quick, they are going fast. We cant replace them.

Bring your butter and eggs
And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.

Lawn Supplies

- Taylor-Forbes Lawn mower
- Rubber hose
- Hose nozzles
- Couplings & clamps
- Hose reels
- Garden shears
- Cultivators

Thomson's
Hardware Store

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS

To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Kawartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round-trip tourists tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares, with liberal stop overs.

GET YOUR TICKET IN ADVANCE

J. S. Cameron, Agent, Port Elgin, Both telephones.

Ten million men registered as eligible for service the first day of the United States registration plan.

There were two changes of ministers in the conference of Methodists for this district, affecting Mildmay and Eden Grove. The next conference will be held in Guelph.

ELSINORE

The young people of Elsinore Presbyterian church has organized a young people's society, to meet every Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Officers for first six months are: Pres., Mr. Herman Rowe; Vice Pres., Miss Ena Sporrel; Secy, Miss Nellie Forsythe; Treas. Miss Haldie Nelson.

Miss F. Eby spent a few days with friends in this vicinity.

A Handy Thing

The handiest thing in the world is a wrist watch, and especially so in the summer weather. You'll be interested in looking at them.

Let us show you one of our fine line of clocks

Rowlands
The Jeweller

TOWN TOPICS

School reports will appear next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Angus George were in Toronto last week.

Herb Ranney was in Milverton last week for a day or two.

Miss Gladys Stephenson is home from Toronto.

The W. C. T. U. county convention meets here next Wednesday.

Mrs. Stanley Eby, of Galt, is visiting Mrs. Hiram Ebe.

Mr. and Mrs. Kiltie are enjoying a holiday in Owen Sound.

Mr. and Mrs. Eaton spent Sunday in Tiverton.

Master Duncan Falconer has been very seriously ill the past few weeks, but is now improving.

Pte. Earl Hendry has recovered from his wounds and is again in the trenches.

The picture show on Monday night was well attended, and all report the battle pictures as very good.

Mr. O. Crawford, of Ripley, was in town last week, visiting Mr. R. C. Crawford.

Owen Sound has established the half-holiday for June, July and August, using Wednesday afternoons.

North Bruce Conservatives meet in Wiarton next Wendesday to select a candidate for the Ontario House.

June brides cannot go to the United States for the honeymoon, unless they marry a man over 40. There are some fine bachelors in this part who are dangerously near.

Miss Janet Wells of Fort William is visiting for a few days with Mrs. McTavish and with Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Lamont, Saugeen.

The 59th annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association is meeting in Toronto this week. Mr. E. R. Sayles, as chairman of the Weekly Section, is in attendance.

Mr. McKinnon, who has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Begg, has returned to his home in Bruce. He is in his 90th year, and enjoys the best of health, and able to be around as actively as the best of us.

The first convention of the Bruce Tp. Sunday school association, was a great success. It was held at Underwood yesterday afternoon and evening, an extended report of which will appear next week.

Mr. Wm. Cassidy, who won half a bushel of alfalfa seed by a draw, at the Red Cross garden party in Saugeen, has instructed the secretary to sell the seed and use the money for the cause.

Mr. Will Falconer was taken to the Walkerton hospital on Friday, suffering from pneumonia. Latest reports are that he is quite ill, but holding up splendidly.

A prominent man, Milton Davis, died in Owen Sound last week. He was many years a councillor, and held many public positions there. He has relatives in Port Elgin, Mrs. Robert Chalmers being a cousin.

Some Port Elgin people we know should ponder over the following from the Flint (Mich.) Journal:—"After finding fault that there is no business life in their home towns many people send money away to other places to help produce business life somewhere else."

Dept. 2, of the public school, Miss Gilbert's pupils, took charge of the tea rooms Saturday and served lunch. The tea rooms are being patronized liberally, and the town and countryside are reminded that they can help in a good cause by having tea there each Saturday.

The marriage was celebrated in Toronto last week of Miss Morrow and Archibald W. Campbell. The groom is well-known here, being a nephew of Mrs. John Henderson. After a honeymoon spent in a trip to the west, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will reside in Toronto.

A Gray County exchange announces that it will publish each week a full page advertisement of a Toronto departmental store, and goes on to say: "It is not our desire to advertise outside firms, but if our home merchants do not appreciate the home paper enough to give it the support that it merits and outside firms like our space well enough to buy it, we feel that it is good business to sell what the other fellow wants."

The wedding of a former Port Elgin young man took place on Saturday, June 2nd, at Orillia, when Dr. Harold I. Kinsey was married to Miss Helen Blackstone, daughter of Mr. H. T. Blackstone, proprietor of the Orillia Times. After a honeymoon at Algonquin park, at the Highland Inn, the young couple will take up residence in Toronto, where Dr. Kinsey has a medical practice. The sincerest congratulations are extended from Port Elgin people, where the groom is so well and favorably known for a joyous and prosperous wedded life to Dr. and Mrs. Kinsey.

WONDERFUL STUFF!
LIFT OUT YOUR CORNS

Apply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

This drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have freezone have him order it for you.

Summer Millinery

Straw hats, Crepe hats, Also Sport hats in pique corduroy and ratine.

Also the latest styles and shades

MISS M. BAKER
Arlington Block

Mrs. T. J. Smith is visiting in Galt.

Rev. Mr. Hallman is attending U. B. conference at Stevensville.

The contract advertised last week by Saugeen council at Philips' bridge was let to Dan Campbell at $183.

Mrs. Kalbfleisch, of Calgary, is visiting friends here, and all are glad to see here.

All ladies interested in Bruce County hospital are invited to attend a meeting at Mrs. Gilbert's on Saturday at 2.30 p.m.

A wedding of interest to many friends in this district was celebrated on Friday at the bride's home, when Rev. Douglas McCulloch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McCulloch, of North Bruce, was married to Edith Irene Watson, daughter of William Watson, of Severn Bridge. After a honeymoon at Niagara, Mr. and Mrs. McCulloch will take up residence at Appin, where the groom lately assumed the pastorate of the Presbyterian church there. Many friends will join in congratulations.

There was another fine meeting of the Dominion Day committee Monday night. Reports from the Relay race committee, the track committee, and the auto parade committee were received. The Kiltie band has been engaged. Everything looks fair for a big day. The price for the afternoon admission is 35 cents and 15 cents for children. The evening is 25 cents and 15 cents. Next Monday night the tenders for bill posting will be opened. The meetings open at 7.30, and business is transacted promptly in order that the men may attend to other engagements. The committee urge all citizens to assist. The profits go to Red Cross, and the officers are very anxious to have a surplus this year.

UNDERWOOD NEWS

Get your gasoline at The Hardware.

Save wood and coal, use an oil stove. We have some coal oil stoves which will save the women work, and save money too. Thede & Brill.

Rev. Holtzman, 12th Bruce, conducted the service in the Methodist church on Sunday. The pastor, Rev. Hawke is attending conference at London.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Collins, visited friends in Bervie on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Inkster's baby, who has been ill with pneumonia, is slowly improving.

Messrs. J. Keppen, Wm. Brown, D. McNaughton and R. A. Mackay were the delegates from here to the Liberal convention at Tara.

The Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian church meet this week at a special meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. A. McLean.

Mrs. Jno. Schmidt is very ill at present. Her son, Mr. George Schmidt of Moncton was home to see her last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cottrill and family of Paisley visited in the neighborhood on Sunday.

BURGOYNE AND DISTRICT

Burgoyne beef ring No. 1 started the season's business. Mr. S. Smith has charge.

A. Underwood and wife of Toronto, are holidaying here.

R. Crawford is enlarging his barn. Jno Grieve is the contractor.

James McLean of Toronto, is visiting here. All are glad to see him looking so well.

Many farmers report losses of mares during foaling.

Autos are more common among farmers here now than buggies were forty years ago. No fewer than a dozen can be counted in this circle.

Garden parties are all the go now. A full meal for 25c is big value for the eater.

Rev. Thomson, of Toronto, preached here Sunday. Rev. Cameron of New York, preaches next Sunday.

NORTH BRUCE

Mr. and Mrs. Allan McKinnon and Mr. Alex McDonald are delegates to the Baptist Association being held in Durham this week.

Mrs. (Dr.) Airth of Chatsworth, with Leslie, Elsie and Miss Young, visited at Mr. W. Airth's and H. D. McCulloch's on Sunday.

Mr. O. Nicholson is attending Annual Conference as delegate from the U. B. church. The conference will be held at Stevensville from the 14th, to 18th.

Miss Mamie Bell, who is in the Walkerton hospital, is improving nicely after an operation for appendicitis.

Mrs. Thorburn and Lindsay are able to be around again after an attack of scarlet fever.

One of Wm. Robinson's young cattle was killed by lightning last week. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Glamis

Messrs. D. C. and Finnie McKinnon have purchased Ford cars from Irwin Patterson.

The I. O. O. F. order purpose attending Divine services in the Baptist church here on Sunday morning.

Mr. Charles McKinnon has gone on an extended visit to Cape Breton and the Maritime Provinces.

Messrs. Joseph Wrightson and James McKinnon have finished their contract on Roman Catholic church.

Extraordinary Values In Men's and Boys' New Suits

The very best production of Canada's foremost clothes designers and makers are now shown here. Our clothing is known as the finest and best in town and sold here for less money than at any other store.

Men's fine blue serge suits at
$15, 16.50, 18, 20, 22.50 and $25

Men's tweed and worsted suits
$12, 13, 15, 18, 20 and $25

New Shoes

Men's and boys positively the best values on earth. Shoes are one of our hobbies and we are still offering some lines at prices away below present manufacturer's prices.

Headquarters for
Hats, Caps, and Neckwear
and everything that man or boy wears.

Come and see the new goods. It will do you good to see them. It will do us good to show them to you. COME.

F. R. BARBER
MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

Wallpaper, Wallpaper

Wallpaper at Pattison's is selling as Cheap as ever. Over 500 lines to choose from. We carry the largest and best stock in Bruce county. Call in and inspect our goods and be convinced. You can save money, by buying wall paper at Pattison's. No trouble to show goods.

All papers trimmed free of charge

Eggs taken in exchange for Wall paper . . .

Electric Vacuum Cleaner For Rent

J. W. Pattison
Furniture Dealer and Undertaker

Purity! Purity! Purity!

The one dominating note that runs all through the making of Sunlight Soap is Purity. The $5,000 Guarantee you get with every single bar is not a mere advertisement. It marks a standard set for the buyers who select the choice Sunlight Soap materials—for the soap boiler—for the expert chemists—for the girls, even, who wrap and pack Sunlight.

All are mindful of the Guarantee—it is a source of gratification to all the Sunlight workers.

Sunlight

Plan to Spend Dominion Day in Port Elgin

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 25 PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20, 1917 $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

COMING EVENTS

10c. per line
No notice less than 25c

SPECIAL—Meeting of Red Cross on Wednesday at 8 o'clock in Library.

GARDEN PARTY—Plan for the big garden party by the Burgoyne Patriotic society, on Thursday June 28th. Good program of speeches, songs and music. Admission 25 and 15 cents. This is held to assist the cause of the soldiers at the front. All attend. Kincardine Pipe Band will furnish music.

WAIT FOR IT—The Bazaar by the Ladies Aid of the Underwood Methodist church which will be held afternoon and evening on Thursday June 21st. All are invited, from town and country to come to the Methodist church at Underwood on above date. A good time is promised. Don't miss it.

GARDEN PARTY under auspices of Willing Workers of Methodist church, 12th Bruce. July 5. at George Brooks. North Bruce.

SHOWER—The ladies of Port Elgin will give a shower of towels, bed and table linen, money, groceries, etc., for the Bruce County hospital in the public library on Friday and Saturday afternoons. Let all help in this worthy cause.

Teacher Wanted

Teacher wanted S. S. No. 4 Saugeen. Salary $600. State Experience. School within three miles of Port Elgin. Apply D. A. Campbell Sec'y, Port Elgin, Box 55. 25-2 tc.

Tenders for Painting

Tenders will be received by the undersigned, up to July 5th., for painting the walls and ceiling, and oiling the woodwork in the school house, S. S. No. 14, Bruce.

Geo. Luttrell, Port Elgin, R. R. 3. 25 2 tc.

Tenders Will Be Received

By the under signed for the construction of a concrete spillway, pier and wing walls at its Southampton dam, on and up to this 25th day of June, instant. Plans and specifications may be seen at the Company's office, Southampton. Dated 16 June 1917.

The Saugeen Electric Light & Power Co. Ltd. 25-2-tc.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

STABLE FOR SALE—A stable 16x18 in size. If not good enough it will do for a woodhouse. Wm. Ribey, Underwood. 25 1tp.

FOR IMMEDIATE SALE—Good frame house with all the modern conveniences, good fruit bearing trees. A piano also for sale. Apply at The Times office.

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE—Indian, single cylinder motorcycle in perfect running condition. Will sell for $100. Arthur Abbs, Tiverton R. R. 3. 25 2 tp.

HELP WANTED—A few good boys and girls can secure employment during the summer vacation by applying at the Brush works 25 2tc

WOOL WANTED—We are ready to pay the highest price for wool. We will canvass the country. Have it ready for us. B. Zelkind, Port Elgin.

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. 429 G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communications in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at 8 p.m. Visiting brethren cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Gus Smith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE No. 179, I.O.O.F., of Ontario, meets at 8 o'clock, p.m., every Monday in their hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N G. T. Rankin, Rec. Sec.; D. Geddes, Fin. Sec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer of marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office in Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE

Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address

LOUIS BLOCH,
Owen Sound, Ont.
29-ltc

WOMEN WAR WORKERS

Young women can render the country real service by preparing to take positions in business offices and banks and relieve some men for war service.

Fifty thousand men will be called up very soon under the Militia Act for home defense—who will take their places in the Business offices and banks? Young women should prepare now at

NORTHERN Business College

Owen Sound, Ontario
SPRING TERM OPENS APRIL 10TH
Circulars Free.
C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal

Dunblane Patriotic Picnic

The Dunblane patriotic league held a picnic on Thursday afternoon June 14th on Campbell's flats, Sturton's bridge and was well attended, despite the unfavorable weather. Showers threatened at noon but by 3 o'clock the sun came out and shone on the beautiful grounds by the river side and soon dispensed with the society's fears of a small attendance. When strolling through the grounds one could notice a somewhat excited crowd hovering around, what on investigation proved to be a fish pond, where eager fishermen landed some unusual species of fish.

On arrival of Mr John Rowland of Walkerton, Reeve Christie, acting as chairman, called the crowd to order and the program commenced, opening by a selection from the Dunblane orchestra which rendered some excellent music during the afternoon, followed by splendid addresses by Dr. McDougall, Mr. John Rowland, and Ex-Warden McCannel. Others taking part in the program were Miss Alma Fraser, J. D. Lyness, Jessie Bailey, Hazel Kaufman, Muriel Reany, and the Pierson family. The National Anthem was then sung and the crowd found its way to the well-laden tables, and did justice to the good things provided for them. At the conclusion Mr. Rowlands and Mr. Alex McCannel drew the tickets for the pig and pup, donated by Mr. Robert McKechnie and Mr. Duncan Campbell. Miriam Campbell was the lucky winner of the pig and Murray Chappel the pup. The proceeds, admission, booth, fish pond, pig, pup and all amounted to $185.

PERSONAL

Mrs. Wyant was in Sutton last week.

Morris Hendry was home from Harriston over Sunday.

Mr. Walden Thomson, of Owen Sound, was in town on Monday.

Mrs. J. A. Chapman has returned from spending a month in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Eby of Toronto, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. G. Eby.

Dr. and Mrs. Chambers were in Toronto last week.

Miss Margaret McLeod, of the Soo, is visiting Miss Reta Bell.

Mr. B. Hilker was in Guelph over Sunday.

Miss M. Crawford of Toronto, is visiting her brother, Robert in Arran Tp.

Mrs. G. McLaren has returned from Toronto.

Miss Duncan and Miss MacDonald leave this week for their homes.

Mr. W. Falconer is improving rapidly.

Clarence Upshall, who has been ill, is recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McLaren, have returned home.

Mr. D. McLaren, of Chicago, was in town for a day on his way to Ottawa.

Stanley Hessenauer was home over Sunday.

Miss F. Christian is home for a holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Drummond, of Toronto, are visiting at James Struthers'.

Mr. Harry Koebke motored to Hepworth on Wednesday.

Mrs. Sees returned to Sault Ste. Marie with Mrs. W. S. Edwards.

Miss Florence Bell of Sault Ste. Marie spent a few days at Mr. Ronald Bell's.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton McLean of Toronto are spending a few days at Mr. D. McLean's.

Mrs. P. Barrett and little daughter of St. Mary's, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. D. McLean.

Mr. Cyril Currier and family have settled at Ottawa, where they have purchased a residence.

Mrs. Roy Walker sang a very acceptable solo in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Hooper of Tara, were guests of Mrs John McCallum, on Sunday.

Mrs. Angus McKay and Florence, of Tiverton, were visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Keokey.

Miss Annie Kelly who has been for the past year at Pipestone Man., has returned to her home at North Bruce.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fisher were in Kitchener last week attending the wedding of Mr. D. Krauth, a former Port Elgin young man.

Port Elgin ladies are arranging for a shower of bedding, towels, linens, money, etc. for Bruce county hospital, at the library Friday afternoon.

President McFarlane, of Montreal, and Div Superintendant Dunstone, of Bell Telephone System, visited the local central this week

The marriage takes place to-morrow of Miss Jessie Pearl Mackay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacKay formerly of Underwood, to Wm. Howard MacDuff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McDuff of Port Elgin. Miss Eva MacDuff will attend the wedding.

WOOL WANTED

10,000 pounds wanted. Highest market price will be paid Cash or trade
50 to 55c for unwashed wool, 60 to 65 cents for washed wool
Bring your wool to the old reliable wool dealer
F. R. Barber

LIEUTENANT ROSS

There sailed from New York last week a party of nurses for France, among whom is included, Miss Ross, a sister of Mrs. Dan. Currie, Saugeen township.

Miss Ross has the rank of lieutenant. She is a specially qualified young woman, and has been occupying important positions in New York hospitals the past ten years.

Death of James Warren

The death of James Warren, in his 80th year, at Walkerton, on Friday, June 8th, removes a man who has occupied a prominent position in Bruce County for over forty years. Mr. Warren was born in Esquesing Township, County of Halton. For some years he taught school and later completed his course as a Dominion Land Surveyor, which he followed successfully for many years. He was a man of wonderful strength and physique and during his surveying career did work in the northwest from Winnipeg to the Rockies. He worked near Winnipeg when it was known as Fort Garry. He was a man who was the soul of honor and in all his dealings was noted for his integrity. He was a consistent christian and won the respect of all with whom he came in contract. He was a Liberal in politics.

160th Batt'n's New O. C.

Lieut. Col. Sutherland

(Reproduced by courtesy of Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

Col. Sutherland is of Scotch-Canadian ancestry having been born in Zorra about 40 years ago. He graduated in medicine at the University of Toronto in 1905, and before the war practised in the village of Norwich. This will mean Col. Sutherland's third trip to France. He was with the first Battalion, first Canadian Contingent, and after being wounded at Ypres returned home. He went a second time to France and was again wounded. A few months ago having recovered from his injuries, he left his home in Norwich for England, only a few of his most intimate friends being aware of his departure.

Mrs. W. J. Barrett is visiting in Toronto.

W. Robinson of Bruce Tp. was in Walkerton Saturday.

Mr. L. H. Wismer attended the Mennonite camp meeting at Elmwood on Sunday.

Mr Arch McDonald passed away Tuesday after a brief illness, in his 78th year An obituary will appear next week

Mr. Stevens is having a number of improvements placed in his summer home at the lake, also a clay tennis court is being constructed.

A coroner's jury at Walkerton found that Mrs. Welsh, of that place, had died from a criminal operation performed by some unknown person.

Miss Jennie George of near Port Elgin, was operated on by Dr. Hall in the Bruce County Hospital on Saturday afternoon for abdominal trouble.—Walkerton Herald.

DROP IN AT
FALCONER BROTHERS
And see the new range in
Women's Misses and Children's white canvas shoes and slippers
VERY REASONABLY PRICED

Proclamation

A proclamation has been issued by the Lieut. Governor of Ontario calling on all citizens to set aside Sunday, July 1st, as a day of solemn and religious recognition by our people of the benefits and blessings that have been vouchsafed to us by Providence as a Dominion, and all churches and Sunday schools and associations are urged to fittingly commemorate the occasion.

It is also further proclaimed that Monday, July 2nd, is a day to be set aside for the purpose of public and patriotic organizations to fittingly celebrate the day

Displays of flags are also desired at the home and business places.

It is to be hoped that all people in this district will use every effort to make suitable religious devotions on Sunday, and suitable observance of the day on Monday.

TOWN TOPICS

Entrance exams begin to day.

Large quantities of wool are being brought to local dealers. It brings a good price this year.

Pte. Stanley Morton is in Dundee Scotland, hospital, with an attack of trench fever.

Patriotic money will be paid at The Times office on Saturday June 23, at 2.30 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. MacDuff and Mrs. Smeaton attended the funeral of Miss Mary McNeil at Tiverton Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Krauth were in Kitchener last week attending the wedding of his brother.

Mr. Gib. McLaren attended a meeting of the Provincial coal dealers at Toronto last week.

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Walker of Newmarket, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wyant.

Auctioneer Cavin conducted a sale at Southampton on Friday last for Mr. James [illegible] Cows sold for $70 and $92, implements also went high.

Sergt. Jack MacDuff is holidaying in England and has seen a number of the 160th boys. Jack has had about two years of fighting and has not lost a day. He is entitled to a holiday.

Mr. A. F George was in Guelph for a couple of days. Mrs. George is not well, and is at Guelph hospital for treatment.

While wheeling on Thursday Roy Wankel and Walter Miller collided and were thrown into the ditch. Roy was knocked unconscious and had to be driven home in a car. Walter escaped with a slight shaking up.

Wiarton Liberals held a big meeting on Monday night, passing resolutions favoring conscription of wealth and men. Mr. J. J. Hunter and James Malcolm, of Kincardine, were the speakers, also Mr. Campbell of Hepworth.

There were a lot of delegates at the Tara convention who wanted Warden D. J. Izzard to stand for the nomination but Mr. Izzard thought enough were in the field. His retiring speech was loyalty to the man who got the convention.—Kincardine Reporter.

Sugar is certainly a big price when a hundred weight brings $50. This was the sum realized for the bag that J. H. Wallace donated to the Red Cross.—Ravenswood correspondence of The Forest Free Press.

The dog poisoner has let up in his operations the past few days. A citizen reported to The Times that a biscuit had been found on the cricket grounds covered with strychnine. This was no doubt laid out for dogs, but we shudder to think what would have happened had an innocent child picked up the biscuit and eaten it. The dog poisoner is going so far as to jeopardize human life.

The first of July celebration promises to be probably the largest in our history, providing, of course, the weather man favors us. The attendance at the meetings has been very good. The business men of the town are showing more interest than ever, and as the profits are for Red Cross they are offering to assist in any capacity in order to see that the program of the day is well carried out.

The ladies of the Red Cross will have all the privileges of the grounds on Dominion Day to serve lunches and sell anything they desire. It is understood they will have their rooms up town also. Now the women need the assistance of everybody, and it is to be hoped that everyone who possibly can, will set aside this day for Red Cross work. With five or six thousand people visiting here on Dominion Day there will be opportunity to do the biggest day's work for the Red Cross the ladies have had. Mrs. Barber, the president, appeals to every woman to sacrifice for this special effort, as such a large opportunity does not come often.

FRUIT!

Falconer Bros. Weekly Fruit Special

The last Sunkist California oranges of the season clear this month.
5 cases again at 30c a doz.
Choice Bananas
Fancy Lemons
West India Grape Fruit

Our own Strawberries shortly

Falconer Bros.

Killed at Vimy Ridge

Pte. George Muir, who has been officially reported killed in action on April 10th., was the second son of John and the late Mrs. Muir, formerly of Con. 2 Saugeen.

He was born at Piano, Ill., 27 years ago. Previous to the war he was engaged in farming at Tyner, Sask. He enlisted in June, 1916, and went overseas in November, of the same year. There are no particulars as yet, only a letter from a comrade, who saw him fall, presumably at Vimy Ridge. Pte. Muir is survived by his father, who is now at Sidney, Montana; two sisters, Mrs. Wood, of Miami, Man., and Mrs. Malc McArthur, of Paisley; and two brothers, Arthur in Sask and Albert in England with the 176th. battalion, also his grandmother, Mrs. Wm. Muir, and two uncles, Messrs. Wm. and Neil Muir, Con. 2, Saugeen.

W. C. T. U. Delegates Meeting Here To-Day

The delegates to the county convention of the W. C. T. U. are meeting in the Methodist church to-day and Thursday. All are welcome to the sessions. Following is the program:

WEDNESDAY

9.00—Meeting of Executive
9.30—Thankoffering Service, Mrs. Ashcroft, County president.
10.00—Opening of Session.
Minutes of Executive meeting.
Appointment of resolution and plan of Work Committee.
Introduction of pages.
10.30—Reports.
Evangelistic—Miss M. Smith, Walkerton.
Proportionate Giving—Mrs. Butchart, Lion's Head.
Lumbermen—Miss Smellie, Chesley.
Franchise and law enforcement—Mrs. Halliday, Chesley.
Parlor Meetings—Mrs. (Rev.) Ferguson, Southampton.
Hymn—
Scientific Temperance—Mrs. Stauffer, Walkerton.
Moral Education and Mother's Meetings—Mrs. Melton, Wiarton.
Railways—Mrs. E. Eidt, Port Elgin.
Fairs—Mrs. Wismer, Port Elgin.
11.55—Noontide Prayer.
1.30—Devotional—Mrs. (Rev.) Williamson, Chesley.
2.00—Opening of Session.
Minutes of morning session.
Reports.
Unfermented Wine—Mrs. J. Chapman, Wiarton.
Temperance in Sunday Schools—Mrs. (Dr.) Philps, Port Elgin.
Flower Mission—Mrs. George Grant, Paisley.
Solo—Miss Ebert, Port Elgin.
3.00—Greetings from Sister Societies.
Address of Welcome—Mrs. Saley, Port Elgin.
Reply—Mrs. Watt, Wiarton.
Collection.
4.30—School of Methods—Mrs. McKee.
8.00—Public Meeting, chairman Rev. Dr. Scanlan
Music, Union choir
Address, by Chairman
Music, Girls' chorus
Address of welcome, Ministerial Association, Rev. Mr. Buckberrough, Reply Mrs. Ashcroft.
Solo, Miss Smellie
Collection
Chorus by boys
Address Mrs. McKee, subject "The Responsibility of the Ballot,"
Duett, Mrs Walker and Miss Ewald
New members
Music by choir
Benediction

THURSDAY

9.00—Meetings of Committees,
9.30—Consecration Service—Mrs. McKee, Barrie.
10.00—Opening of Session and Minutes.
Report of Corr. Secy., Mrs. Chapman, Wiarton.
Report of Treasurer, Mrs. Moore, of Teeswater. Roll Call Election of Officers
11.55—Noontide prayer.
Announcements.
1.30—Meeting of Executive.
2.00—Devotional—Mrs. (Rev.) Ferguson, Southampton.
2.30—Opening of Session and minutes.
Report of Resolution Committee.
Solo—Miss Francis Hanbidge.
Report of Plan of Work.
Collection.
Unfinished business.
Appointment of delegate to Provincial Convention.
Minutes
Closing exercises.

LITTLE LOCALS

Hogs dropped to $16 per cwt this week

Saturday June 23rd is the last day of service for July 5th Division Court.

Mrs. E. A. Piper and children, of Alpena, Michigan, are visiting a few days at Mr. J H McIntosh's.

Mr Irving McVittie has sold his farm to Mr. C. Nicholson. He is moving this week to a farm he has purchased near Southampton.

Mr. E. R. Sayles was again called to Brantford on Tuesday on account of the serious illness of his mother, who is not expected to recover.

DIED—At Toronto Sick Children's hospital, on Sunday June 17th, Woodrow Walker, aged 3 years, son of Capt and Mrs Angus Munro, Southampton.

The Dominion Day committee met on Monday night. There was a good attendance and business despatched in quick order. Three tenders were received for bill posting. Wm. McCullough received the contract at $22.50. The committee meets on Monday night All members should attend promptly

Saugeen Sunday School Convention

The first convention of the Saugeen Township Sunday School Association was held in the Presbyterian church on Wednesday Jan. 13th when a good crowd and others listened with interest to the instructive address given by Rev. D. H. Wing of Toronto, Superintendent of Rural Associations on the Blocking out and presenting the lesson. A good discussion on the subject was afterwards dealt with Rev. Mr. Prudham of Wiarton, also addressed the gathering.

In the evening despite the downfall of rain a good attendance turned out, when Rev. Mr. Wing gave an address on "The Sunday School a big business" and set forth the great work that is before us in winning the member of our Sunday School to the knowledge of the gospel. Rev. Mr. Prudham gave an address on the Teachers candle stick. The choir consisting of the Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school children gave a chorus also the Misses Hildebrand a duet.

The officers elected for ensuing year are:

President—W. A. Mitchell, Port Elgin
Vice President—M. Poole, Southampton.
Secretary Treasurer—E. R. Sayles, Port Elgin.
Supt. of the Elementary Division—Mrs Busby, Port Elgin.
Supt. Secondary Division—Mr. Arch Bell, Saugeen.
Supt. Adult Division—Mr. J. J. George, Port Elgin.
Supt. Teacher training—Rev. D. O. Soule, Southampton.
Supt. Home Department—Mr. J. B. Muir, Saugeen.
Supt. Missionary Division—Mrs. C. W. Conway, Southampton.
Supt. Temperance—Mrs. J. N. Vandyke.

Choice Beef

We have in our stables seven of the finest stall fed cattle. This will be the kind of sweet, juicy meat you will get if you order from Eaton. We also have cold meats, and other dainties in the meat line.

Barber is paying 50c to 55c for unwashed wool, 60 to 65c for washed wool.

STRAYED—Came to the premises of Gus Smith, Port Elgin, on Friday, June 15th, a collie dog. Owner may have same by paying for this ad

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for [illegible] lines or over in a year 3c a line; regular weekly users of liners, 5c per line; casual users of liners, 10c per line. Use Black type, count two lines for one.

McMurray's for pure ice cream.

Oats for sale. North End Store.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

Fleet Foot shoes at F. R. Barber's.

Some seed corn still on hand. North End Store.

The new straw hats are being shown at F. R. Barber's.

Fresh oranges, and lemons always on hand. North End Store.

If you want a pint of good cream try McMurray's.

Another shipment of feed wheat. North End Store.

McMurray keeps good milk for sale.

Boys wool and cotton Jersies at South End.

Dyola Dyers in Black, Navy and all scarce colors, now in stock. South End.

Chick feed—5c lb. the right kind. North End Store.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

A nourishing food is Gong soup. 5c. at Eaton's.

Fleet foot running shoes, all sizes, white, tan, navy. North End store.

Men's Balbriggan and Merino underwear at the South End.

Reliable work shirts and heavy shoes priced away below present market prices now being offered at F. R. Barber's.

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koebke's

Try Koebke for your next grocery or fruit order

William's shoes, solid leather goods at lowest prices, at South End.

Koebke sells Neilson's soldier chocolate. Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front

Just arrived, a splendid assortment of Misses and children's wash dresses, Prices 75c to $1.75 each. North End Store.

Red Cross supplies. Special prices in grey Scotch fingering yarn. South End.

Worth while savings—Every thrifty individual will consider these savings worth while, when he sees the extra values we are offering in men's and boy's suits, raincoats, summer underwear, shirts and fine and heavy shoes. F. R. Barber.

PHONOGRAPHS!

How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.

Louis Bloch's Music Store
Owen Sound

GINGER CAKES.

Two Recipes of Cakes Good for Luncheon or Tea.

To make white ginger wafers, rub a half pound of butter into a pound of flour, add half a pound of sugar, one teaspoonful of baking powder, add an ounce of ground ginger. Make into a stiff dough with half a pint of milk, roll out thinly and cut into shapes.

This mixture can be flavored in various ways.

Instead of the ginger, use a few drops of essence of pineapple or ratafia, a teaspoonful of mixed spice, or the grated rind of a lemon; or use a quarter-pound less of flour and add that weight of cocoanut, ground almonds or chocolate, or a mixture of the three is very good, and this cut into pretty shapes makes delicious "little pastries."

Ginger fingers go well with stewed pears or apple dishes. Beat three ounces of butter to a cream, add a saltspoonful of mixed spice, and the same of ground ginger, thoroughly mix in two ounces of treacle and two ounces of brown sugar, add a quarter pound of fine flour and an ounce of rice flour, one teaspoonful of cocoanut and a teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake 25 minutes in a shallow tin, and when cold cut in fingers.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

BELGIUM RELIEF

To the Editor

Dear Sir,—In view of the recent statement issued by Mr. Hoover, chairman of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, which points out the impossibility at present of obtaining the necessary shipping tonnage to forward to Belgium the food supplies in the same quantities as in the past, and also draws attention to the fact that the United States Government have made arrangements to loan to the Belgian Government the sum of $45,000,000—payable to the Commission for Relief in Belgium in six monthly instalments—which sum will cover the cost of such food supplies as can be shipped in that time by the limited number of ships available to the commission—the central executive committee of the Belgian Relief Fund in Canada finds it unnecessary for the present to make appeal to the generously disposed people of Canada on the plea of the urgency of support in order to stave off starvation.

The needs of Belgium continue, however, as pressing as in the past, and the situation may be considered as being even more pitiable as, through the forced decrease in imports, Belgium will be compelled to fall back on her lost native resources, already so denuded. In order to maintain that so limited ration that has been doled out in the past it will be necessary to encroach upon the country's stock of milk cattle, which has been reserved to maintain a supply of fresh milk for the children.

In the hope, however, that the recent swiftly developed shortage in the world's shipping—the cause of this new departure of the relief work—may not permanently endure; in the hope that the necessary funds may be available should any emergency or special occasion arise, and in view of the fact that in any event relief in many forms will be required after the war, the committee hope that all generous supporters of the fund in the past and all those who have pledged themselves for future payments will continue to support the fund, and thus continue to show their sympathy with the people who gave their all for the cause of humanity.

All such donations received after the 15th of June will be disposed of to the best advantage of this stricken people, according to the wish that may be expressed by any donor or according to the actual or more pressing needs of any of the already organized channels of relief work, such as:

"Help to the children removed from Belgium front."

"Queen's fund for the wounded soldiers."

"Home for the Belgian soldiers."

"Relief of Belgian prisoners in Germany."

"Anglo-Belgian committee of the Belgian Red Cross."

"Relief of Belgian children suffering from tuberculosis and rickets."

"Belgian orphan fund."

"Belgian national relief fund for war orphans, etc."

All donations received prior to the 15th of June will be held at the disposal of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, for the purchase in Canada of Canadian produce, according to our previous pledges.

The central executive committee will issue in the immediate future a report covering the whole of their operations up to the 15th of June.

Thanking you for publishing the above, we remain.

Yours truly,

A. De Jardin,
Hon. Secretary Treasurer.
Montreal, Canada, June 2, 1917.

For Pimply Faces Try Cuticura Soap and Ointment

Samples Free by Post

A simple, easy, speedy treatment. Smear the pimples with Cuticura Ointment, wash off in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. Use night and morning.

For pimples, redness, roughness, itching and irritation, dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair, red, rough hands and baby rashes, these fragrant emollients are wonderful as well as ideal for the toilet.

For free sample each address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. N, Boston, U. S. A." Sold by dealers throughout the world.

HAIR GOODS

—FOR—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $3.00, $4.00 and $5.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send us your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $25.00 and $35.00 that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM

62 KING ST. W. HAMILTON, ONT.

(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

A Floral Peerage.

In a railway carriage in England two men were talking rather loudly:

"Lord French is rather sick," one of them observed.

"Yes," said the other, "so is the Marchioness of Powys, but the Duchess of Cleveland is getting on famously. The Earl of Rosebery seems to be dwindling away. I can't make it out."

When they left the carriage a passenger remarked to a friend that these two fellows seemed anxious to impress the company with the fact that they were acquainted with every one in Burke's Peerage."

"Peerage be blowed," he said, rudely, "they were talking about dahlias." —Pittsburgh Chronicle.

Minard's Liniment for sale everywhere.

GET RID OF RATS.

Costly and Dangerous, They May Be Driven Out

Many a seemingly unexplainable illness in our homes may oftentimes be traced to the presence of rats. These little animals travel everywhere, and in their journeyings go in and out among filth and where disease prevails. They thus become carriers and disseminators of disease and pestilence.

The only wild animal that lives under the same roof with man is the rat, says Literary Digest. We pay for his keep, although we are not on friendly terms with him. In return, he plagues us in many ways; he steals our food, and, above all, is active in the spread of disease. The annual rat bill of the United States for food alone is estimated by Mary Hudderidge, writing in the Forecast, at $160,000,000.

The rat not only disseminates bubonic plague, but carries tapeworms, trichinae flukes, round worms and other parasites, besides being suspected as an active agent in communicating leprosy and infantile paralysis. It can gnaw through any common building material except stone, hard brick, cement, glass and iron. It destroys whole fields of grain, climbs trees to steal fruit, eats both fowls and their eggs and destroys game. It steals costly furs and laces for its nests when it can get them. Much of our annual loss by fire is due to the rat, and he also starts floods by burrowing into dams and levees. He is a great traveler and fond of living on shipboard, though, fortunately, he journeys little by rail. Finally, his fecundity is prodigious, the fond mother presenting him with numerous additions to the family circle sometimes as frequently as once a month.

"The modern way of attacking the rat, this writer continues, "is to build it out." The rat-proofing of buildings is described as "a cheap form of insurance against fire and pestilence." Miss Hudderidge continues:

"When rats get into rat-proof buildings we have to resort to traps and poison to get them out, the former being the least objectionable. In the use of traps it must be borne in mind that the rat is cautious and will not enter strange-looking contrivances in search of food if plenty of other nourishment is available. The trap should be strong enough so that the rat can not force its head between the wires and escape, and should be dipped in boiling water or cooked before being set to kill the human smell or that of rats previously caught. It should not be placed in an open space, but along the wall or in a narrow runway, for the rat's vision is somewhat defective in the daytime, and depending on its whiskers as a guide it has to keep close to some wall or other boundary. Such makes an excellent bait but as [illegible] different from the animal's customary diet is likely to attract it. Poisoning should not be resorted to in dwellings, and some of the most efficient poisons are so dangerous that they should be used only by experts.

"Dogs, cats, weasels and ferrets are all useful, but the ordinary house-cat is too well fed to care for such diet, and if not inured to the hard things of life is not equal to a combat with a full-grown brown rat. Non-poisonous snakes have been employed with considerable success in warehouses."

◆

Odd and Interesting Facts.

The Cameroons, the German colony in Africa, recently occupied by British forces, regarded as a great potential rubber zone. The first attempts at rubber exploitation were made some years ago in the northern part of the colony, where the Landolphia florida, which is regarded as the greatest rubber-producing plant, was found.

Scientists are working upon a method whereby a commercially satisfactory paper pulp can be made from flax straw. Hitherto the straw has to be burnt for want of proper methods of treatment.

Between the steel helmet used by the troops and its lining of felt and wadding, are fixed a number of rubber studs, which take up the shock of a blow. The wadding comes next the head, so that in case of penetration and a resulting scalp wound it acts as a dressing.

An electric fare box that has been invented for street cars, automatically registers the correct number of fares paid by each kind of coin dropped into it.

This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family for years, and consider it the best liniment on the market. I have found it excellent for horse flesh.

(Signed)

W. S. PINEO.

"Woodlands," Middleton, N. S.

Unconscious Humor Gems.

While nosing through exchanges, John D. Wells, managing editor and column conductor of The Buffalo News, unearthed this choice collection of unconscious humor which is said to have been copied from the New York state regent's examination papers:

Ithaca, at the foot of Cayuga Lake, has a large university for the insane.

The main provision of the Mayflower compact with potatoes.

The function of the stomach is to hold up the petticoat.

Pompeii was destroyed by an eruption of saliva from the Vatican.

Six animals peculiar to the frigid zone are three seals and three polar bears.

Three kinds of teeth are false teeth, gold teeth and silver teeth.

The permanent set of teeth consists of canines, eight bicuspids, 12 molars and four cuspidors.

Typhoid can be prevented by fasci nation.

Guerilla warfare is where men ride on guerillas.

The Rosetta Stone was a missionary to Turkey.

Three heavenly bodies are the Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

The invention of the steamboat caused a network of rivers to spring up.

The qualification of a voter at a school election is that he must be the father of a child for eight weeks.

After a while the Republican party became known as the Free Spoil party.—Youngstown Telegram.

"The world owes every man a living." "True, but every man has to be his own collection agency."—Detroit Free Press.

Argentina's Preparednes.

Argentina has a population of only 8,000,000. Its area is a little less than one-third that of the United States. The average American mental picture of it is that of a country whose inhabitants are occupied mainly with agriculture and raising of cattle.

But Argentina could, in time of necessity mobilize an able-bodied army of 186,000 soldiers between the ages of 19 and 30.

The first article of the magna charta of Argentina provides that "every Argentine is liable to military service and instruction in accordance with the provisions of this law."

Between 50,000 and 60,000 Argentine youths reach the age of military service each year. Of these, the Government takes about 30,000, drawn by lot, and from these assigns 18,000 to the army for a year's training, and 5,000 to the navy for a two years' term of service. But those not drafted still receive a kind of military training at home, in the rifle clubs that are organized all over the country.

The regular army consists of only 5,000 officers and privates, but with the annually drafted 18,000 conscripts there is always an army of 23,000 in active service. Those who have passed through the year of training constitute the reserve upon whose services reliance is placed in case of war. They are already so numerous that, as stated above, an efficient force of nearly 200,000 could be called to arms if its services were required.

Being a country that has about one-thirteenth the population of the United States and one-third of its area, Argentina has made better progress toward preparedness than the United States.—Albany "Journal."

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

TREATING BURNS.

French Surgeon's Method Has Splendid Results.

The daily press and certain medical reports from the European fighting front have frequently mentioned a new and successful treatment of burns by French surgeons. Since the special dressing was known by a coined word and since the composition was not definitely stated, the profession has been awaiting an official description. In the first place, it is not very new, says the Medical Report, since its employment goes back to 1904. It has been in use in the present war almost from the outset, but has only recently come into anything like general employment. It consists of a mixture of paraffin and resin, and while no chemical change is set up, it possesses peculiar physical properties which make it advisable for the treatment of burns.

In the Archives de Medicine et de Pharmacie Militaires for August Dr. Barth de Sanfort reported over 300 burns in soldiers treated with the remedy, which is described in detail. The name "ambrine," with which it was christened, came from its amber hue, and seems to be purely descriptive. This surgeon states that he first devised the formula in 1904. Toussaint used it in 1907 in the Military Hospital at Lille, while another colleague, Michaux, has also had long experience with it. Recently Kirmission presented some patients before the Societe de Chirurgie in which the remarkably favorable action was well demonstrated.

The substance is a solid which fuses at about 50 degrees centrigade and may be sterilized by boiling without injury. It is applied hot (at 70 degrees Centrigade—158 degrees F.), causing no pain whatever, and even after 24 hours is still warmer than the body. The favorable action is due in part to local hyperthermia. Occurring as it does in cakes of paraffin consistency it is broken up into bits of various sizes, heated to 125 degrees C. (257 degrees F.) and then cooled to 70 degrees C. (158 degrees F.), the temperature of application. Its use is not confined to burns, for it is excellent in freezes and is even superior in the treatment of certain wounds. It is first applied in very small quantities with formation of a thin pellicle. Over this is placed a very thin layer of cotton, which is followed by more of the remedy. This simple dressing is painless and inexpensive. It is removed in 24 hours and comes away en masse and without pain. It is true that considerable pus, often of foul odor, is found beneath. This, together with loose sloughs, is carefully wiped off and the surface dried with a hot air douche. The dressing is then reapplied. In no type of burn is it contraindicated. In general, rapid healing takes place, with superior end results.

LINGERING WEAKNESS FOLLOWING DISEASE

Banished by the Wonderful Tonic Powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

How often victims of disease, such as la grippe, fevers, or contagious troubles are left weak, ailing and despondent after the disease itself has disappeared. They do not pick up strength as they ought; remain listless, tired and discouraged. The reason for this is that the blood has been impoverished by the ravage of the disease through which the victim has passed. Strength will not return until the blood has been enriched. The blood can be purified and enriched by no other medicine as quickly and as surely as by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—to enrich the blood and strengthen the nerves is the whole mission of these pills. Thousands have found them beneficial in bringing strength and energy after disease had left them weak and run down. Miss Hanah Hamilton, Everett, Ont., says: "After an attack of la grippe I was so run down and anaemic that I could scarcely walk. I had no color, no appetite, and constant headaches. The medicine I was taking was doing me no good and I had almost lost hope of getting better. I was asked to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and it was not long until I could feel that they were helping me and after taking them for a couple of months I was completely cured. I now never fail to recommend these Pills to anyone needing a blood builder."

You can get these Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

◆

FOCUS EYE FOR COLOR.

Reading by Blue-White Electric Light Requires Close Vision.

Nowadays many people when reading books or newspapers hold them nearer to the eye than used to be customary. By most people this is regarded as evidence of short sightedness, and is advanced as an illustration of the constantly declining physical standard. As a matter of fact, the reason is entirely different, remarks the Washington "Post."

Most reading is done under electric light, and electric, while brighter than gas light or lamp light, is blue and contains a different proportion of light rays. The variance between the yellow light and the blue-white light is of a modern tungsten vacuum electric light requires a difference in focus of almost two inches. A book or a newspaper, to be read with equal ease, then should be held two inches nearer to the eye under electric light than under lamp light.

The reason for this can be made quite clear. The eye is a single lens, and, as a photographer would say, it is not corrected for chromatic aberration, or, in other words, it has to correct itself for various colors. Now, the eye naturally adjusts itself for yellow and green. It is therefore, out of focus for blue. Color is merely the number of light waves, the red waves are slower and blue waves faster than yellow ones.

A newspaper printed on a pink paper, therefore, for the average eye should be read at a distance of sixteen inches, somewhat on a cream colored paper at fourteen inches and one on a blue-white paper at twelve inches. Or, to put the matter another way, reading a newspaper or book on white paper under a pink light or a blue-white light requires just the same adjustment of distance.—New York "Tribune."

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia

◆

Line and Staff Officers.

Broadly speaking, the distinction between a line officer and a staff officer is that between the fighter and the non-fighter. The staff officer has non-military duties. He may, for example, be a member of the medical corps, an instructor at a military institute or have charge of some administrative department of the army or navy. The word is also used for those men attached to the staff of the commander-in-chief. A line officer is literally that; he is the man in the field or on a battleship to do the actual fighting. —New York Sun.

ISSUE NO. 25, 1917

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Wellandra Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

DOMINION EXPRESS MONEY ORders are on sale in five thousand offices throughout Canada.

Profitable Beef Production

The results obtained at the Experimental Farm at Nappan in feeding good stockers, heavy fed vs. good stockers, light fed, were as follows:

Eight steers were selected, in such condition that they could be classed as good stockers. These were dehorned and fed a preparatory ration for a few weeks previous to starting the test, in order to get them accustomed to their feed and surroundings, then divided into two lots of four each. The four heavy fed, or Lot 1, were given 50 per cent. more roots and meal than were the four light fed, or Lot 2. Number of days in test 92, total weight at the beginning for Lot 1, heavy fed, 4,573 pounds; at finish, 5,295 pounds, an increase of 722 pounds. For Lot 2, light fed, at beginning 4,206 pounds; at finish 4,880 pounds, an increase of 674 pounds.

The original purchase price was 6.25 cents per pound, live weight. The selling price was 8.1 cents per pound. The gross profit for Lot 1 was $143.00; for Lot 2, $132.40. The total cost of feed for Lot 1 for 92 days was $99.16; for Lot 2, $75.29, leaving a net profit for Lot 1 of $43.93, or a profit per steer of $10.98; for Lot 2 a net profit of $57.11, or per steer $14.28, a difference of $3.30 per steer in favor of the light fed.

The average profit for steer for three years, over and above the cost of feed at market prices, was for Lot 1, $16.06, for Lot 2, $18.05, a difference of $1.99 per steer in favor of the light fed. The average cost for three years to produce one pound of gain was 11.04 cents in the case of heavy fed and 9.27 cents for the light fed. The ration fed to Lot 1 at the beginning of the period was 60 pounds roots, 6 pounds meal, 1 pound molasses. At the finish 40 pounds roots, 18.5 pounds meal, 2 pounds molasses. For Lot 2 at the beginning, 40 pounds roots, 4 pounds meal and 1 pound molasses, at the finish 20 pounds roots, 11 pounds meal and 2 pounds molasses. The meal mixture was made up of 200 pounds of ground oats and barley (equal parts by weight), 200 of bran, 50 of oilcake, 50 of cotton seed.

The meal mixture cost $1.50 per hundredweight; roots were valued at $2 per ton; hay at $8 per ton; and molasses cost 20 cents per gallon.

It will be noted that the greater profits were realized for the lighter fed steers. Similarly the light fed good butchers, as per results given in Series 1, gave the greater profits, but a greater difference was noted in the good butchers, light fed, then in the above instance, which would naturally be expected because the former are too advanced to make the same profitable use of the food consumed as would the latter. Nevertheless, there appears to be a profitable limit in the amount fed, even to good stockers, as the above test verifies, as it also does, that good profits can be realized by the proper finishing of good beef.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

◆

Olive Oil.

It's good.
Especially in winter.
Serve it in salads.
It's the basis of French dressing
And some take it alone, to build up.
It is very necessary to have it pure.
But, alas! it is very, very often adulterated.
But there's a way of telling the pure olive oil.
It is of a greenish color, has a curiously thick consistency, and has the odor of the olive.

A woman isn't always as old as she looks, or as young as she thinks she looks.

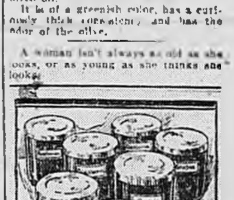
SUMMER SHOES

CAN'T trust yourself to slippery leather, in canoe, sail boat or yacht. And, of course, you have to have Fleet Foot Shoes for tennis, baseball, golf and lacrosse. Fleet Foot Pumps or low shoes are the proper accompaniment of Summer apparel. And Fleet Foot Summer Shoes cost so much less than leather, that it is real economy to wear them.

DOMINION RUBBER SYSTEM

Look trim and neat—enjoy yourself—and save money, by wearing Fleet Foot this summer.

202



Jellies have high food value

Make as many as you can. They will be worth a great deal to you next winter.

Lantic Sugar

"Pure and Uncolored"

makes clear, delicious, sparkling jellies. The purity and "FINE" granulation makes success easy.

2 and 5-lb cartons 10, 20 and 100-lb sacks 130

Ask your Grocer for LANTIC SUGAR

CANADIANS IN GOOD ADVANCE

Foe Strong Points On Souchez River Captured.

Nearest Point Yet Reached to Centre of Lens.

(By Stewart Lyon, Canadian Press Correspondent With the Canadian Forces.)

Canadian Headquarters in France, Cable.—Another well managed minor operation this morning on the Canadian front, resulted in the capture and occupation, with low casualties to us, of enemy strong points which have been a menace to the security of our left flank ever since the capture of the electric station. The Souchez River at this spot has been dammed by the Germans and in marshy area along its banks had been placed skilfully concealed machine guns, which have swept all possible means of approach from the south bank of the stream. Some of these positions were destroyed in the raid of Saturday morning, but others remained in the enemy's hands.

The artillery not having been able to smash them, it was decided that the only effective way of putting them out of business and ending the annoyance and loss was by a night surprise attack with bomb and bayonet. Only a few men were engaged in the enterprise, which succeeded beyond expectation. The enemy showed little fight, and in a few minutes the strong points, with five machine guns and six prisoners, all that were left of the gun crews, passed into our hands.

At once steps were taken to incorporate the captured ground within our lines.

The post captured this morning is only twenty-seven hundred yards from the centre of Lens. It marks the farthest advance toward the city. One of the prisoners captured stated that his battalion had just relieved another which had suffered very heavy losses during a short period on the front line, especially from gas and shell fire.

The enemy artillery was less active to-day on our front, but to the south it has been shelling Arras and other points on the Scarpe with a 15-inch naval gun.

ATHENS HEARD NEWS QUIETLY

Other Pro-German Officials Must Go, Also.

Allies' Forces Have Entered Larissa.

London Cable.—An official despatch received in Venizelist quarters in London from Saloniki says the abdication of King Constantine has been made known officially to the people of Athens and that perfect order prevails. It is expected by the supporters of former Premier Venizelos that he will be recalled to power over united Greece and will work cordially and loyally with the new King.

It is felt absolutely necessary, the despatch adds, to remove from Athens those men who, if possible, are more responsible than Constantine for the events which led to the crisis, namely, General Dousmanis, Colonel Metaxas and former Premier Gounaris.

An official statement issued in Paris says:

"Thessaly—Our cavalry entered Larissa in the region at 6 o'clock in the morning."

A statement in regard to the abdication of King Constantine was made in the House of Lords to-day by Earl Curzon, member of the War Council. He was questioned by Lord Camperdown as to what decision had been reached in regard to Constantine's future movements, but reserved information on this point, promising another statement at an early date.

HUNS MASTER OF TURKS' EMPIRE

Christians Buy Exemption, Now Forced to Fight.

Famine and Disease Sweep the Land.

[illegible] Cable.—An Armenian who has arrived in Holland from Constantinople gives the Telegraaf particulars of the conditions in the Turkish Empire. He depicts the administration as wholly under German control. While the Ministers there are Ottomans, the Vice-Ministers who really manage the Ministers, are Germans. Turkish inscriptions have been removed from the offices of the Ministries and replaced with notices in German.

The Germans have in short established themselves as masters of Turkey. An espionage system under German supervision is at work in Constantinople. Christian families especially are spied upon. Everyone is being mobilized—men, children and even one-eyed men and men without fingers. Enver Pasha has summoned to the colors all men under 51, including members of the Christian population. This action was taken after the visit of Prince Waldemar of Prussia, who in October brought a marshal's baton to the Sultan in the Kaiser's name, and pressed on the Sultan the enactment of this law.

Christians in Turkey were dispensed from military service for the whole period of the war under a law passed when hostilities began on condition that they paid £45. A year ago Christians were made pay an additional £30. Having thus paid £75 exemption, the Christians are now compelled to serve.

With all the Turkish officers depressed and discouraged, the German soldiers in Constantinople are thoroughly enjoying themselves, but the efforts of the Germans to popularize their methods among the Turks meet with little success. The allied prisoners are well treated, but food is bad and dear. A Turkish mercantile marine no longer exists. Famine stalks throughout the land and typhus is causing terrible ravages. Tens of thousands have fallen victims in the last few months alone. There are no doctors left. Over 400 died in Constantinople in a short time, including the physician to the Sultan and the director of the Greek hospital. The Turkish authorities are characteristically indifferent to the situation, while the Germans are contented. All races of the empire, Musselman, Christian and Jewish, are maltreated by the authorities.

TOLL OF U-BOAT HAS INCREASED

Ten More Ships Than During Previous Week.

22 Over 1,600 Tons, and 10 Under That.

London Cable.—The week's shipping losses through the submarine warfare, as officially announced to-day, showed 22 vessels of more than 1,600 tons sunk, and 10 under that tonnage. Thirty-three ships were unsuccessfully attacked by the German U-boats.

A summary of the official report follows:

"Arrivals, 2,767; sailings, 2,822.

"British merchant ships over 1,600 tons, sunk by mine or submarine, including one previously, 22; under 1,600 tons, including one previously, 10.

"British merchant ships unsuccessfully attacked, including seven previously, 33.

"British fishing vessels sunk, six."

This week's figures show a considerable increase in submarine activity as compared with recent weeks. Last Wednesday's statement reported a total of 23 vessels sunk, against the 32 now announced. The aggregate is the largest to any for a month past. Last week only 15 vessels of more than 1,600 tons were sunk, and three of less than that tonnage.

The figures of submarine sinkings began to show a falling off early in May from the heavy totals of April when during one week, that which ended on April 22, forty vessels of more than 1,600 tons were sunk and 15 of smaller tonnage. During the week ended May 6 the total of the larger merchantmen sent to the bottom fell to 24. For each of the three following weeks, the total of vessels of the larger class stood at 18, while the number of smaller craft sunk each week was covered by single figures. Last week the minimum for the entire period since February was struck.

HUNS BUSY IN BOTHNIA GULF

U-Boats and Zeppelins Harrying Scandinavians.

One Taught a Lesson by Swedish Torpedo Boat.

Havre, France, cable says:—The German war craft are active, together with Zeppelins, are continuing their activity in the Gulf of Bothnia. Hardly a day passes without one or more Scandinavian vessels being sunk. The Zeppelins scout regularly along the Swedish coastline, occasionally crossing inside the territorial limits.

A Swedish naval patrol yesterday drove away a Zeppelin to the eastward of Stockholm.

Recently the Swedish torpedo boat Castor rescued Denmark's largest sailing vessel, the Per-Ulgand, from capture. The Per-Ulgand was stopped by a German armed trawler. Just then a Swedish steamer bound for Finland appeared. The trawler towed the Per-Ulgand [illegible] the Swedish vessel, putting a prize crew aboard the latter. The [illegible] then returned to the Per-Ulgand.

The commander of the Castor observed that the Danish vessel had been towed just inside the Swedish territorial waters. He headed toward her just as the Germans attached a tow line, and fired a shot at them. The Germans protested, but the Castor's commander stood his ground and compelled the release of the Per-Ulgand.

German submarines are operating on the west coast of Norway against the valuable Norwegian sealing and whaling fisheries.

The Dagblad says, according to the correspondent, that yesterday the whaler Sve II. was sunk outside Tromsoe, and that another whaler, the Sverdrup, was sunk near Falso, the latter having a cargo of 500 seals. The crew was given two minutes to enter the ship's boats.

Lawyer (to witness at a booze trial)—Did you take cognizance of the man who sold him the liquor? Witness—I took the same as the rest.—Awgwan.

97 KILLED, 439 WOUNDED, IN AIR RAID ON LONDON

Greatest Yet In Loss of Life, But the Military Damage Was Nil.

Women and Childern the Chief Victms—No Panic In the City.

London Cable.—A squadron of German aeroplanes raided London shortly after eleven o'clock this morning and dropped thirteen bombs. The casualties in the raid, it is officially announced, numbered 97 killed and 439 wounded.

KILLED.

Men	55
Women	16
Children	26

INJURED.

Men	223
Women	122
Children	94

No damage of a military or naval nature was done. The raid over the city lasted about fifteen minutes. The largest number of casualties occurred in the East End, but the downtown business section was also visited by three of the raiders and considerable damage was done.

In his statement Chancellor Bonar Law said twelve to fifteen aeroplanes crossed the coast of North Foreland and proceeded across Essex to London. Two bombs were dropped on North Foreland, and at 11.30 o'clock the bombs began to drop in the East End of London. Thirteen bombs fell in the city.

The Chancellor said that all the anti-aircraft guns defending London were brought into action, and that a large number of aeroplanes went up in pursuit of the raiders. Several engagements occurred in the air, but the results at present are uncertain.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT.

The following official statement was issued:

"The first bombs were dropped on the eastern outskirts of London at about 11.30 a.m. Numerous bombs fell in rapid succession in various districts in the east end. One bomb fell in a railway station, hitting an incoming train. Seven persons were killed and seventeen injured here. Another bomb fell on a school, killing ten and injuring close to fifty children. A number of warehouses were damaged and fires were caused.

"A few bombs were also dropped near North Foreland and opposite the banks of the Thames, four persons being injured.

"The air raid over London lasted about fifteen minutes. The raiders were engaged by guns of the East London defences and a large number of aeroplanes of the Royal Flying Corps and Royal Naval Air Service were sent up as soon as the enemy was reported off the coast. Several engagements took place in the air but the results at present are uncertain."

IN DOWNTOWN LONDON.

London Cable.—Three hostile aeroplanes appeared over the busiest part of the downtown section of London at half past eleven this morning and worked a rapid transformation in the busy streets. The sound of the explosions of bombs in the east end and of anti-aircraft guns from points around the business districts gave the public warning of danger. Vehicular traffic stopped instantly. Omnibus drivers ordered all passengers to alight, and 'busses, taxis, wagons and horses were left stranded in the streets until the danger was past.

Shopkeepers and their patrons, barbers and their customers, bankers and lawyers and their clients quickly and promptly adjourned their business and hurried to places of safety as the mental state of each particular person demanded.

Special constables appeared in the streets, as if by magic, in every nook and corner of the narrow-laned downtown district and ordered pedestrians within doors. It was difficult, however, to keep the populace under cover, as many of the people were more interested in getting a glimpse of the battle overhead than in seeking safety from danger.

FLEW VERY HIGH.

There was no way to keep the crowds off the flat roofs of the downtown buildings, where presumably the danger of falling shrapnel was greatest, but where a superb view of the fighting could be obtained. From the roof of the Associated Press office the [illegible] could be [illegible] of the raiders was [illegible] in the [illegible] formation which is a familiar one [illegible] the western front. The five were so high that they appeared like great flakes of snow against the blue sky. The anti-aircraft gunners were doing fairly creditable work for their first battle practice in many months. The raiders apparently were a little too high for the guns, which, nevertheless, were very useful in forcing the enemy to keep at an altitude where it was impossible to locate any objectives.

The fluky smoke from thirty or forty shrapnel bursts, sent in repeated salvoes from a dozen or more eager guns, hung long minutes in the sky, outlining the three aviators in a framework of light puffs. It was plain to see that the snarling bursts were too close to the visitors for their comfort, calling forth a frantic series of machine-gun signals from the squadron leader, directing his brood to retreat quickly.

The little squadron's route over London, as viewed from below, was like a great hairpin—a straight arrow flight into the city, then a wide curve and a straight arrow flight out again. The whole visit of this trio occupied less than five minutes, and no other raiders were visible from this observation point.

Three times the explosion of bombs shook the roof, with a slightly different tremulo than the rocking of the earth under the anti-aircraft guns, but the bombs were evidently at some distance from this point, and the vista over the city roofs showed no effect of their explosion.

NO PANIC IN EAST END

The East End stood the strain of the raid well and there was no panic such as one might expect to find among a population of this class, which is largely foreign. Business was at a standstill in many sections for a few minutes and great throngs gathered about the wrecked buildings, but they were orderly crowds, bent on seeing what damage the Germans had done.

And there was plenty of damage to see, for scores of buildings suffered and more than [illegible] was still smoking from fires which the engines were working upon.

In the sections of the city where bombs had been dropped the traffic was held up almost entirely owing to the dense crowds and to the work being done by police and firemen in the damaged buildings. Every available policeman was called to the scene, even the night policemen being routed out to assist in handling the situation.

Throughout the bombed area there was a steady movement of ambulances, collecting the injured and rushing them to the hospital. These soldiers did yeoman's work as the injured arrived, not in caring for those hurt, but in giving comfort to relatives who gathered about the building to learn the fate of those being carried within. In and out among the crowd of women, many of them with infants in their arms, wounded soldiers on crutches stopped here and there to drop a word of sympathy and encouragement.

While the damage done in the east end was widespread, it is probable that the monetary loss will not be heavy, for many of the buildings wrecked were those of small business men. The raid had been over but a short time when the King, having heard of the damage in the east end, motored into and through the district. His promptitude in thus manifesting sympathy with the sufferers appeared to be deeply appreciated, and he was warmly cheered as he rode slowly around. Later the King visited the hospitals.

NO MILITARY DAMAGE.

The main result of to-day's raid, as in past cases, has been the killing of civilians, including many children. No military damage was done, as there was no military objective in the section visited. It was not a case of accurate dropping of bombs when once the planes were over the city. In the east end, for instance, a bomb could not have been dropped without doing damage. The bombs cut a wide circular path through the eastern part of the city, and while the raid was short-lived, a large number of explosives were dropped in rapid succession. The course the raiders took can easily be traced by the damaged buildings, which in many cases are close together.

In some places a whole block of buildings is lacking every window and much other damage was done. One school in the district had a lucky escape, as there are a thousand pupils in the school and fifteen minutes after the little ones returned to the building upon [illegible] a bomb fell where hundreds of them had been gathered.

There were many evidences of the coolness with which the people greeted the appearance of the raiders over London. For instance, despite the reports that a raid was in progress, King George proceeded with an investiture in Buckingham Palace, the recipients of the honors walking in and out of the palace grounds without a trace of nervousness being apparent.

For an hour after the raid the telephone system of London was swamped with calls from business men who were anxious to learn the fate of their families in the suburbs. Despite the loud reports of the explosions the [illegible]

CROP, OUTLOOK IS FAVORABLE

Weekly Reports Say Prospects Are Promising.

Spring Sown Crops, Fruit and Potatoes Good.

Toronto Report.—A summary of the weekly crop report as sent in to the Provincial Department of Agriculture by the various district representatives throughout the province covering the past week indicate that spring sown crops, on the whole, look most promising, although much of the early planted corn is rotting in the ground owing to the wet and backward weather. The counties of Essex and Kent have suffered more particularly, but it is expected that with large areas still to be seeded to corn there will be an increased acreage this season, notwithstanding the setback to the earlier-sown varieties.

Grass seed has now caught splendidly in all districts, and as clover, timothy and alfalfa are improving rapidly with every day of the more favorable conditions now prevailing hopes are entertained generally that a fair crop of hay may yet be cut.

The wet weather has delayed the completion of root sowing. A larger acreage will be put under mangels than in former years, but turnips are apparently losing in favor. Potatoes, which have been late in appearing, are showing up nicely, and there is every reason to believe that the potato crop this year will be well up to normal. Vegetable gardens, both in town and country, are giving encouraging indications of a bountiful crop. The early planted tomatoes, mostly for cannery consumption, are looking well, and there will be a greatly increased area given to this crop. Beans are also commanding a much larger acreage.

The fruit outlook is bright as blossoms have so far totally escaped frost. There are some indications that the apple crop may be lowered, but in view of the embargo and existing conditions the crop prospects are not such as to provoke any particular concern.

The improvement of pastures is reflected in the bettered condition of all classes of live stock. Market prices dropped during the week. Fat steers sold at 12 cents per pound, but ordinary cattle ranged from 8 to 10 cents per pound. Most of the fat stock has already been picked up. The milk supply has been rather above the average. Hogs have dropped in value from 20 cents to $1 per cwt., the figures now offering ranging from $15 to $16. Sheep are doing well and top prices for wool are being secured everywhere.

The labor situation is favorable and, though farm help is not in demand for immediate service, requests are being made for the services of boys to work during their summer holidays, as the farmers are appreciating the efficient work the school-boys have already done. Skilled farm hands are very scarce.

EX-RULERS ARE YET IN ATHENS

But Ally Military Measures There Are Complete.

Britain Pleased With the Latest Move.

London Cable.—Former King Constantine and the other members of the Greek royal family are still in Athens, although, according to reports received here, Constantine desires to leave.

Reuter's correspondent at Athens says that all military measures in Thessaly, the Gulf of Corinth and elsewhere have been carried out satisfactorily.

The abdication of King Constantine will cause no regrets in England. In the days before the war he frequently visited English resorts with his family and was a popular figure here, but his actions since the war began, which have been interpreted as strongly pro-German, lost him almost all his friends. For many months there has been a strong party, in and outside Parliament, which demanded that stronger measures be taken to curb his anti-Entente activities.

The more active of Constantine's opponents even suggested in Parliament that efforts were being made in influential circles to save him, but this was contradicted repeatedly by the Government. In this matter, as in all others, the Government has acted in accordance with wishes of a majority of the Allies. Before the Russian revolution it was suggested also that the Imperialist party of Russia was exerting itself to save Constantine's throne.

The former Greek Crown Prince George is no more popular in England than Constantine, as it is believed that he, like his father, is under the influence of his German mother, who is a sister of Emperor William. Prince Alexander, who is to be King, is expected to act more in accordance with the wishes of former Premier Venizelos, who so often has come to the rescue of Greece in her days of trouble.

Constantine had a difficult career. After the disastrous first war with Turkey he was hardly able to show his face in his own country, and it was only after his victories in the second war that he regained and increased his popularity among his own people. [illegible] that followed.

SPAIN'S NEW CABINET.

Premier Declares for Absolute Neutrality.

Paris Cable.—A despatch to the Havas Agency from Madrid says the new Spanish Cabinet is composed as follows:

Premier, Eduardo Dato; Minister of Foreign Affairs, Marquis de Lema; Minister of Justice, Senor Burgos; Minister of War, General Fernando Primo Rivera; Minister of the Navy, Admiral Flores; Minister of the Interior, Sanchez Guerra; Minister of Finance, Senor Bugallal; Minister of Labor, Viscount D'Eza; Minister of Public Instruction, Senor Andrade.

Madrid, via Paris, June 12—Premier Dato declared today that the return of Marquis de Lema to the post of Foreign Affairs Minister was a guarantee that the new Spanish Government would continue to follow a policy of absolute neutrality. The Premier also announced that he did not intend to dissolve the Cortes.

The present Chamber of Deputies contains a majority of Liberals, but Count De Romanones the former Premier, has already announced that he will support Premier Dato. This assures Dato a working majority in the Chamber.

HUGE NEW SHIPS REACH U. S. PORT

Eleven Great Vessels Arrive From Overseas.

Largest, 32,234 Tons, is British Owned.

New York Report.—An Associated Press despatch "from an Atlantic port" to-day says:

"Eleven large steamships, aggregating 163,664 tons, six of them being under the American flag, with a total tonnage of 77,274, have reached here within the last day or two, it was announced by the International Mercantile Marine, owners of the vessels.

"Among them were the Minnesota, 20,718 tons, being the largest merchant ship afloat under the Stars and Stripes. The other American ships were the St. Louis, St. Paul, Philadelphia, Manchuria and Finland.

"The largest of the eleven arrivals was the British ship Justicia, a new vessel of 32,234 tons. She is the biggest steamer to come into a port of this country, it was stated, since the Olympic left in 1914. The other British ships belonging to the company to arrive were the [illegible], Celtic, [illegible] and [illegible]."

LONDON RAIDERS BOMBED A TRAIN

London Cable.—Terrible scenes were witnessed at a crowded station during the air raid today. Two bombs were dropped here. Luckily they missed the busy portion of the station, but struck a train at the far end of the platform, fairly full of passengers, waiting to start. Two [illegible] carriages were destroyed. One bomb hit the train squarely and the wreckage caught fire. Several passengers were killed and others badly injured and unable to escape were incinerated. It is believed that [illegible] persons were killed or injured in this train.

Another coach standing on an adjoining line was in the service of a travelling medical board. This also burst into flames, and soon became a charred mass. Some of the bodies were so burned as to make identification difficult.

SEQUANA SUNK; 190 DROWNED

Paris Cable.—The South Atlantic liner Sequana with 550 passengers on board, has been torpedoed and sunk with a loss of 190 men.

The Sequena was sunk in the Atlantic. Among the passengers was a detachment of the Senegalese Rifles.

The Sequana, formerly the City of Corinth, was owned by the South Atlantic Navigation Company of Paris. Her gross tonnage was 5,557. She was 430 feet long and was built in Belfast in 1898.

Boston Cable.—The Leyland liner Anglican, which left Boston May 30 for Liverpool, has been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine, according to cable advices received by agents here to-day.

A cablegram received here to-day stated that five men from the Anglian were missing.

Officers of the Leyland Line said they had no information regarding the attack or where the Anglian was sunk.

The Anglian, formerly the Megantic, was a British steamer of 5,532 tons gross, and was built at Glasgow in 1896.

500 BELGIANS WERE STARVED

[illegible] Cable.—[illegible] hundred [illegible] months [illegible] statement given out here today.

According to [illegible] received by the Belgian [illegible] civilians deported to a German camp near [illegible] refused to work. Out of 2,000 [illegible] died of starvation in three months. [illegible]

TEUTONS FEAR A NEW RUSS DRIVE

London Cable.—[illegible] German and Austrian newspapers are predicting an imminent Russian offensive. The Vienna [illegible] and the [illegible] Gazette point to signs of Russian activity behind the lines and prepare for an advance by Brusiloff's armies soon.

The [illegible] official [illegible] states that on the Dvina and at some points the fighting activity has again become brisk.

There have been many rumors in London of a coming drive by the reorganized Russian armies.

Albany.—Professional boxing will be illegal in New York after Nov. 1. Governor Whitman to-day signed the Slater bill, which is to become effective on that date, and which repeals Frawley laws governing the sport.

Grocery . . Department

WE seldom speak of our grocery Department, simply because this department is always so much alive we forget to advertise it. However we would impress these facts on you when buying your Groceries.

We are large buyers, therefore our price is always right.

We have an immense turnover, therefore our stock is always fresh.

We quote special prices in quantity. Consult us and live cheaper.

Two Specials

Good Butter and Fresh Eggs

We pay cash for eggs

N. McGillivray

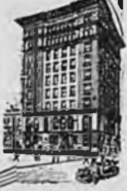
North End Store

BANK OF HAMILTON

Established 1872.

Capital Authorized, $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up, - $3,000,000
Surplus, - - - - - - $3,500,000

The Farmer's Convenience



THE Bank of Hamilton is always ready and glad to help the farmer regarding his cattle business, Sale notes, Drafts or Deposits.

Consultation invited.

R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
PORT ELGIN BRANCH
40-C

Can you afford to be without The Times ?

Children's

Ready-to-Wear

Garments

In prints, galateas, and other cotton materials, at the cost of materials only, much below to-day's values.

Children's aprons at 15c	Rompers and play suits from 40 to 75c
Childrens dresses, good styles, 40c to 50c	Womens' overal aprons and house dresses 50c to $1.25
Middies at 50 cents

We pay Cash for Eggs.
Produce wanted.

See our big display in our north window

South End Store

N. McGillivray & Co.

The Port Elgin Times
MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

ADVERTISING RATES

Farms or Real Estate for Sale 50c each insertion: Miscellaneous articles, To Rent, Wanted, Lost, Found, etc., each insertion 25c. Local Readers, Notices, etc., 10c per line per insertion, 5c each subsequent insertion. Cards of thanks 50c. Legal advertising 10 and 5c a line. Black-faced type, count 2 lines for 1. Display rates, yearly contracts, 12c per inch, 6 mos. 15c per inch. In memoriam poetry 5c per line. Professional cards $5 per year in advance.

He Told the Truth

It is not pleasant and profitable to always to tell the truth in a newspaper. Editors who have tried it have generally come to grief. A few weeks ago an editor grew tired of being called a liar and announced that he would tell the truth in the future. The next issue of his paper said:

John Black, the laziest merchant in town made a business trip to Belleville yesterday.

William Sykes, our groceryman is doing a poor business. His store is dirty and dusty. People wont buy in a dirty store.

Rev. Brace preached last Sunday on charity. The sermon was punk. Half of the congregation and four of the choir slept through it all.

David Dawes died at his home this a. m. The doctors say it was heart failure, but we all know how Dave would booze.

Harry Brown is moving his family away to Harperville. His neighbors presented Harry with a razor and his wife with a carving set. It is hoped they will start quarreling and use their presents to the best advantage—of the community.

Miss Susie Hatt of Pipinville, sang in the village choir Sunday night. Her voice is not unlike the whistle of the basket factory. The fellow who told Susie she could sing, ought to be vaccinated and then burned at the stake.

Married—Miss Sylvan Rhodes to Mr. Jas Conlen, Saturday in the Baptist Parsonage. The bride is a very ordinary town girl, who does not know any more about cooking than a jack rabbit, and never helped her mother three days in her life. She is not a beauty and has a gate like a duck. The groom is an up to date loafer and has lived off the old folks all his life. The match is one that will amount only to costing the tax payers to care for another batch of feeble minded.

The morning after the paper was printed the editor was hanging to a telephone pole.

Pte Ewald Writes From Vimy

"I suppose all Canada has been talking of Vimy Ridge. It was at the foot of old Vimy where we spent the long winter months and we all knew it was our task to take the Ridge. And the way our fellows went after those fellows with the long boots wasn't slow.

The French had sacrificed thousands of men trying to take it. When the English took over the line they took the Ridge but the Germans retook it; but they will never take it again.

We have a great view from the summit of the Ridge. I often used to wonder what was beyond it. There is a great level plain spread out before us with a lot of ruined towns where great battles are being fought. We have already been there and what a sight after night. The whole country lit up with the flashes of big guns, the awful explosions, villages in flames, well it is beyond me to describe it. Now we cling tight to good old Mother Earth when those big shells come our way.

I met Roy Parr and Wesley Wackel after the Vimy Ridge battle. A terrible bombardment is on now which makes the earth tremble where we are, but we are quite safe here."

WILLOW CREEK

The Young People's Alliance had their election of officers on Saturday evening last.

On the Sunday following the Y P A had their Rally. There was a large attendance.

Quite a number of the I O O F members attended the church parade in Glamis last Sunday.

Mr. Reuben Wittie Sundayed in Port Elgin.

Some of the potato crops will stay in ground, while some washed into the adjoining fields. Millet would be a good substitute to sow.

Bruce Township Sunday school organization was a grand success.

Everything points to a heavy crop of cherries, plums, and small fruits. Prospects are also good for a fair crop of apples.

Times' Subscription Rates

One year	$1.50
Eight months	$1.00
Six months	75
Four months	50
Three months	40

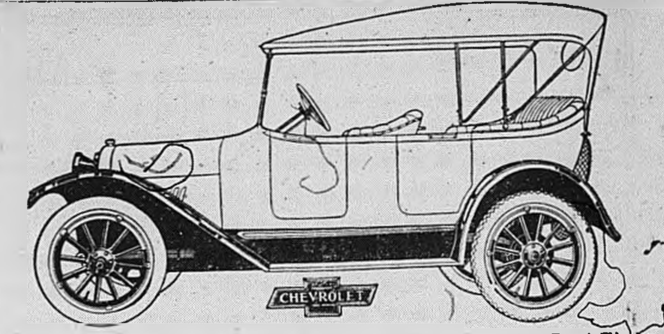
To United States $2.00 per year strictly in advance.

MEDICAL

DR. F. H. WELLS, Office and residence on Green street, one door west of Bank of Hamilton.

W. J. CHAMBERS, M. D., L. R. C. P., L. M., Edinburgh. Office and residence "Lakeview Hall" opposite South End park Port Elgin.

DR. W. S. LAIRD, Oculist, Specialty in Nose and Throat diseases. Guarantees all his fitting of glasses. Office hours Wednesday afternoons. Next to Metropolitan Bank.



1918 model Chevrolet shown by POWER & COULTER, Port Elgin

Glamis

(Intended for last week)

Mr. McFadyen of Sunderland, has been renewing acquaintances in this locality.

Mrs. Neil McKay gave a tea in aid of Red Cross at her home on Thursday afternoon. The sum of $12.45 was realized.

Messrs. J E McCauley, James McLennan, George McKinnon, Christopher Young, Mrs George Webb Mrs James McLennan, Misses E. H. Howson Margaret McKinnon, and Laura Cunningham, attended the Baptist Association in Walkerton last week.

An auto load of young men attended the sports in Lucknow June 4th.

Thos. McIntosh Jr., of Stratford, has been home seeing his father, who is seriously ill.

Mrs W. H Gilchrist was removed to Walkerton hospital last week, where she underwent a serious operation. At latest reports she is doing nicely. All hope for her speedy recovery.

The Ladies Missionary society of St. Paul's church met at Mrs. Capt. P McKinnon's on Wednesday.

Miss Beatrice Johnston of Toronto, is a guest of her friend Miss Florence Webb.

Mr and Mrs George Harrison, of Chesley, were Sunday visitors of J. C. McIntyres. They were accompanied home by Mrs. R. F. Harrison who will spend a week there.

Mr. and Miss Beacock of Wiarton, spent a couple of days with his sister, Mrs. W. J. Graham.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Miller, son, and daughter, Mrs. Walker, and Mr. James Miller of Creemore, motored here on Saturday and spent over Sunday at Neil Currie's.

Alex Kirktown and son, have purchased a new Ford car.

Those who attended the Bruce Presbyterial of the Women Missionary society convention at Hanover were: Mesdames W. H. McNally, W. J. McKeeman, Alex McKenitt, James Thompson, (Rev.) P. Keith, Misses Elizabeth Campbell, Maude McKay and Phyllis Moffatt.

Charles F. McKinnon has purchased Joseph Ferris' young drivers.

S. S. Convention at Underwood

A great success was the Sunday school convention at Underwood. It was the first convention for Bruce, and under such a splendid beginning the future should be very promising for Sunday school work.

The Provincial office some time ago selected Mr. Fred Schnittker as organizer for the township. His work was to get the various workers together. This was done, and under the leadership of President Blair and Messrs. A. E. Jones, W. Avis and Milton Dahmer the new organization was got under way.

The selection of dates was not the very best for this district, as a number of the ministers had their conference and assembly gatherings which demanded their attendance and kept them from the Sunday school convention. However, the program was well carried out by the office in charge, and the attendance at both afternoon and evening was a great surprise, the church being filled.

The chief speakers were Rev. Mr. Prodham of Wiarton, and Rev. D. H. Wing, the Provincial secretary, of Toronto. These gentlemen had in hand the more technical part of the program. They organized the association on a proper basis, with a constitution, and a general plan in order that the work so well begun may be continued. Especially interesting was the address of Mr. Wing on building up the country Sunday school, and many teachers and the superintendents secured the plan which will help them in their work.

Others on the program were Rev. Mr. Guchler, Rev. Waddell, Rev. McNabb, Rev. J. C. Robinson, E. R. Sayles.

The choir assisted in making the sessions enjoyable by rendering acceptable selections.

The officers are: President, W. J. Blair, vice-president, J. B. Strothers, secretary-treasurer Milton Dahmer.

The delegates were billeted to the various families in the village for tea, and all report a very pleasant and profitable time.

Contributions to Y. M. C. A. On Lower 4th. of Bruce

$10—R. Kinmond.
$5—C. McDougall, R. Carleton, J. Nicol, W. Nicol, D. McLean, R. Campbell.
$3—J. Wittig.
$2.50—E. Farrell.
$2—Jno. McNillidge, Wm. Kopas, Alex McIntyre, Mrs. Thede, Hugh McDougal & Son, Jas. Kipren, Wm. Cole, Jno. Young, T. Hutton, Jas. Jones, L. McDougall, Mrs. Steinhoff, W. J. Farrel.
$1.50—Thos. Morrison.
$1—A. Bruce, Jno. Hunter, C. McDougall, West, C. Gibson, D. Matheson, M. McNeil, Geo. Nicholson.
50 cents—F. Schnittker Sr., D. Thomson, M. Dahmer.
25 cents—Mr. Geitz, A. Brown.

Real Estate — Auctioneering Life Insurance

WE have opened an office in Port Elgin, and will deal in real estate. Property bought and sold.

Auctioneering — The old-time attention given to all farmers contemplating a sale.

Life Insurance—We are agent for the New York Life Co.

D. C. Cavin : Port Elgin

Special In Teas This Week

We are offering some very special values in tea. Now is the time for you to secure a supply at a very low price.

MonarchCeylon blend reg 50c at 5 lbs for $2.50

Choice Young-Hyson reg 35c lb, now selling at 5 lbs for $1.50

Ludella package tea 35c per pound

In fruit we offer choice valencia raisins at 2 lbs for 25c, also seeded and seedless raisins.

Our Ready-to-Wear dept. is fully stocked and in such seasonable articles as children's rompers, wash suits and dresses. Ladies' house dresses, tea and over all aprons, made in good quality of print which is hard to get this season.

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon

Roppel Bros.

Rural phone, Underwood

SPECIAL

We have a few of Dr. Pierce's Family Medical Adirsors. Good cloth binding which we offer at

50 cents each

while they last.

R. C. Crawford

Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent

Alarm Clocks

Why do most people go to Busby's for alarm clocks ?

Because we have the best stock, also when repairs are necessary you know our reputation.

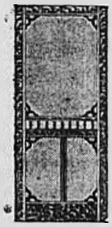
We have in stock.

Big Ben	Vigilant
Cyclone	Turnout
Vantite	Icallu
Giant Spasmodic
Suminous Sunrise

J. J. BUSBY,

The Quick Repair House

Swat . . The Flies



Now is the time to prepare to protect yourself and your family against expensive sickness. The fly is the carrier of disease. Therefore keep him out of the house by using our

SCREEN DOORS AND WINDOWS

We have seven styles of fine doors, and they range from $1.25 up.

Keep The Lawn Nice

By using our hose, sprinklers and lawn mowers.

Rubber hose 9, 10 and 15c per ft.

Any length

Remember your old friend Sherwin-Williams Paints

McLAREN'S HARDWARE.

CANADA

1867 1917

Dominion Day Patriotic Jubilee Celebration At PORT ELGIN

¶ FOR thirty years Port Elgin citizens' committee has celebrated Dominion Day, and this year being the Jubilee of Confederation, especial efforts are being made by the committee to fittingly observe the day. All over and above expenses will be given to the Red Cross ladies. The program includes Races and Bands for the afternoon, also parade of decorated automobiles. Relay race and great display of Fireworks for the evening, these are the outstanding features.

¶ THE committee makes this announcement as an invitation to Port Elgin people to co-operate in this Jubilee Year to make the biggest celebration ever. Especially invite every man, women and child in the surrounding country to plan to spend Monday, July 2nd, at Lakeview Park, Port Elgin. Make this Jubilee Year the record year for attendance.

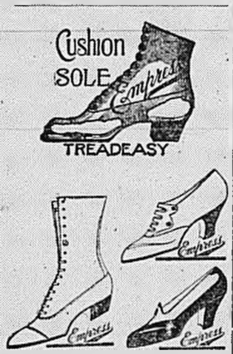
Everyone will be welcomed to the old town

NOT ENOUGH CHILDREN

ever receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong and active.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.



An appeal to the eye of the woman who is looking for perfection in her footwear will be found in "Empress" Shoes for Women, ann what means more to her, satisfaction and comfort.

Needs no breaking in.

James George & Son

Sunlight Soap

The inducements offered with common soaps cannot make up for the purity of Sunlight Soap. It costs US more to make pure soap. But it costs YOU less to use it, for Sunlight pays for itself in the clothes it saves. It does not wear and rub the fabrics as common soaps do.

$5,000 guarantee of purity with every cake of Sunlight Soap all Grocers.

Y. M. C. A. Collections in Part of Bruce Township

Con. 6 and 7.

$5—Jas. Johnson, J. B. Leggett, Chas. Robinson, Chas. Drummond, John Henderson, Geo. R. McKay, Mrs. D. Mathieson, Ed. Drummond, Colwell Bros, D. McNaughton, Miss Clarkson, Wm MacKay.

$3—Alex Russell, Arch Brown, M. Avis, R. M. McKay, Wm. Foster.

$2.50—Nell Russell.

$2—John West, Wm. Steinhoff, Mrs. A. MacKay, Miss E. Henderson, J. W. Johnson, Jas. Avis, R. S. Robinson, Jno. McGillivray, W. J. Johnson, Mrs. W. J. Johnson, F. R. Curry, Mrs. A. Hewkinney, Jos. Shipley, Mrs. D. [illegible] Brown, J. A. McLean.

$1.40—Wm. Fletcher, Louis Schwass.

$1—Mrs. Fletcher, H. Drummond, H. McLennan, A. Inkster, Louis Field, Chas. Hellwig, Sam George, Thos. McGregor, J. R. MacKay, Jos. Foster, Miss Bell Shipley, Mrs. Wm. Russell, G. W. Snowdon, Mrs Jno. McKinnon, Frank Hyde, Dave McKinnon, Henry Roppel, 30 cents—Thos. Robinson, Geo. Tennyson, John Repetke.

25 cents—Mrs. A. Schnittker.

Underwood.

$20—Mr. and Mrs. P. McColl.

$10—Miss McRae, Roppel Bros., Thede & Brill.

$5—Mrs. Hooey, Rev. A. MacNab.

$4—J. B. Richardson.

3—A. G. MacKay, Hugh McLean, Geo. Roppel, Jr., A. Bradley.

$2 50—W. A. Cole.

$2—Thos. Brown, W. F. Summers, Henry Dent, Wm. Ribey' Jas. Johnson.

$1—Bert Russel, C. R. Johnson, Mrs. Geo. Hood, Mrs. Murray, Miss Sadie McKay, Miss A. J. McCoubrey, Wilfred Abbs, Wilmot Abbs, Wm. Sumpton, Robert Cole, Geo. Oxford.

25 cents—J. B. Knapp, W. F. Skipper, J. Coleman.

Con. 8 and 9.

$5—Alex McKenzie, W. J. Ruxton, J. G. MacKay, Thos. Nelson, Robt. Brown, J. B. Struthers, Wm. Cassidy, James Rose.

$2—R. Murdoch, R. Struthers, Mrs. Jno. McDougall, Lyman Kaake, A. McArthur, Wm. Rose.

$1.50—E. Abbs.

$1—Geo. Potter, J. McLennan, Mrs. Wm. McDonald, H. D. McLean, Chas. Rowe, Jno. Berndt, Geo. Cottrell, Mrs. H. Cameron, Wm. Stanley, P. Dobson, Wm. Young, Geo. Bailey, Mrs. W. J. Nelson, Jos. Irwin, D. McDougall, Alex. McDougall, J. G. MacKay. Lovat—D. McGillivray, D. Currie, Miss F. A. McDonald, Mrs. R. T. McGregor, Mrs. Allan Pace, Geo. Brown, J. A. Pace, A. McKinnon.

50 cents—Wm. Corganven, Geo. Pace, Len Shipley, A. McGillivray Sr., G. W. Brownscombe.

25 cents—Mrs. J. Metcalf.

Con. 10 and 11 west.

$5—R. Dobson, Jos. Dobson, Jno. Nuttall, Jas. Stephenson, M. Wardrop, D. D. McKenzie, W. L. Jones, T. A. Howe, A. B. James, Jas. McKenzie, Jno. Coulter.

$3—Alex. McDonald.

$2.50—H. C. McLean, A. McLean.

$2.00—Geo. E. Smith, J. W. Smith, Jno. Woods, White Bros., H. B. McLean, W. J. Shannon.

$1 50—Dan McLean.

$1 00—A. Christman, Ben Vennard, Josh Vennard, Jas. Sampton, Hugh McLeod, Jno. C. Turnbull, Mrs. N. McGillivray, Mrs. Geo. Leeds, Andrew Smith, H. F. Bennett, J. Seiffert, N. McLeod, Geo. Smith, A. McDonald.

50c—Ira Dennis, H. McDonald, W. A. McCulloch.

Con. 14.

$5.00—Jas. Brunton, J. B. McGillivray, Hugh McCulloch, Rev. J. McDougall, Geo. Lottrel.

$2.00—Robert Brown.

$2—A. Salmon, J. Turnbull, Wm. McAngus, N. D. McDonald, W. Bottrill, Ab. Robinson.

$1—Wm. Forrester, H. Stafford, C. Walker, G. Seiffert, Jas. Cinley, Wm. Robinson.

50 cents—Wm. Scott, Arch Schell, Miss J. Richardson.

30 cents—D. Stafford.

25 cents—Chas. Schell.

SCHOOL REPORTS

The following is the report for the month of May.

Primer

Over 50%—1st. class—A. Barber, B. Wipp, E. McCulloch, M. Blindauer, M. Burke, W. Bell, C. Vogt, G. Bell, L. Ferguson, F. Collins, O. Hurlock, D. Booth.

Jr. class—K. Bolender, B. Starling, W. Booth, C. Finlayson, S. McLean, E. Smith, M. Hammond, H. McBride, J. Wipp, B. Smith.

Sr. class—T. Smith, E. Schrank, R. Philips, M. Wankel, H. Dennis, D. Langford, F. Bray, J. George, M. Schwartz, C. Eby, D. McKenzie, F. Fleming, F. Thede, F. McPherson, R. Brigden, O. Nodwell, C. Bannister, G. Henri, M. Henderson.

B. Currie, teacher

Dept. 1

Srs.—Excellent—M. Bell, F. Barber, G. Cottrell, M. Wilson, F. Wipp, G. Stephenson.

Good—F. Perry, C. Hessenauer, I. Schwass, B. Scammell, E. Weishuhn.

Fair—xL. Gamble, xE. Strathy, xJ. Johnston, xJ. Hill, xL. Hill.

Jrs.—Excellent—W. Schierholtz, N. Webb, V. Perry, N. Wilson, H. Osborne.

Good—F. Buschlen, F. McKenzie, xA. Rowlands, L. Saleman, xL. Smith, C. Becker.

Fair—J. Hendigson, xN. McArthur, I. Snider, O. Bell, xL. Miller.

Those marked x were absent from tests.

W. M. Struthers, teacher.

Dept. 2

Sr. 2—Over 75%—S. Langford, M. Schaus, M. Wankel.

Over 60%—C. Strachan, M. Smith, E. Gischler, M. MacPherson, W. Thomas, M. Park, N. McFadden, L. Weishuhn, J. Miller.

Over 50%—E. Gray, S. K. Thomas and L. Nodwell equal. G. Goar, H. Snyder, E. Fisher.

Jr. 2—Over 75%—E. [illegible], W. McBride, J. Bolender.

Over 60%—R. Nodwell, L. Blindauer, M. Kettles, C. Tapley, [illegible] Collins.

Over 50%—G. Bray, L. Schrank, C. Dennis, P. Thede, M. Finlayson.

Kathleen Cassidy, teacher.

Dept. 3

Sr. class—Excellent—K. Robinson, S. Anderson, G. Bock and H. Brigden (equal), M. Cottrill, J. Sayles, H. Vennard.

Good—A. Miller, N. Miller, D. Collins, G. Harrison, A. Flemming, M. Everitt, A. Buschlen, V. Hessenauer, J. Schrank, Le V. McFadden.

Fair—J. Goar, V. Schwass, W. Gray, G. McLean, C. Schwass.

Jr. class—Excellent—L. Begg, A. Mitchell, E. Saleman, K. Stephenson, J. Mitchell, W. Smith.

Good—E. Thomas, R. Smith, A. Scammel, R. Thede, George McLachlan, V. Ball, V. Wilson, C. MacKenzie.

Fair—M. Overton, F. Kettles, C. Bannister, S. Begg.

B. Gilbert, teacher.

Dept. 4

Sr. 4 class—Excellent—Edna Thornburn, Ellen George.

Good—Henry Vogt, Nora Chambers, May Shrank, Marguerite Bell, Harry Stephenson, Margaret Rushton, Lyla Chic, Marie Manser, Gordon Thede, Ruth Gischler, Myrell George.

Fair—Elroy Bolender, Lyda Blindeaur, Ellen Hessenaur.

Jr. 4—Excellent—Milton Millar, Paul Gischler.

Good—Florence George, Don. McArthur, Margaret Barber, Helen Blindaeur, Arthur Gilbert.

Fair—Basil Eby, Dorothy Ranney, Francis Wells, Wilma Becker, Margaret McCullough, Irene Thede, Silina Goar.

F. W. Aylesworth, Principal.

SOUTHAMPTON

(INTENDED FOR LAST WEEK)

Pte. Vine McLellan and Russel Knowles of the R. F. C. were home over the week end from Mohawk Camp, Deseronto.

Mrs. W. J. Cameron is spending the week in Toronto.

A memorial service was held in the Methodist church last Sunday morning for Sergt. Major Bert Buckley who was killed in action in the Vimy Ridge battle.

Badge-Boy Arthur DeLong of the H. M. C. S. Niobe, is home from Halifax on extended leave till June 30th.

Mr. J. Steinoff has enlisted with a Forestry Battalion.

Mr. E. Mintz, Mr. Malcolm McNeil and Mrs. S. Knechtel are delegates at the Baptist conference at Durham this week.

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati authority tells how to dry up a corn or callus so it lifts off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone cost very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. It is fine stuff and acts like a charm every time.

There ain't much use in spending good money travelling after a feller has seen all the moving picter shows.

I never heard of a pig that would chew tobacker or drink whiskey.

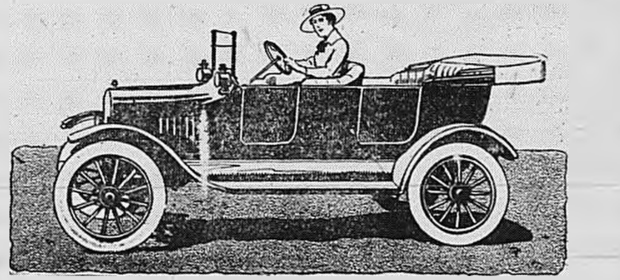
It ain't no place for an innocent bystander when a woman gets to swattin flies with a broom.

GENTS' DEPARTMENT

Felt hats 75cts to $2.50
Caps 25 cts to $1.50
Mexican hats 25cts to 50 cents
Negligee shirts $1 to $1.40
Working shirts from 50c to 85c.
Cotton night shirts $1.
Neckwear 25c to $1.50
Cashmere hose from 25c to 50c
Silk hose 50 cents per pair
Working sox 15c to 50c per pair

Bring Us Your Produce

B. HILKER



Give Your Wife One

THOUSANDS of wives and daughters run their own Ford cars. They use them for shopping, calling, attending the theatre taking the children for a run in the country or to school.

The Ford is as easy to operate as a kitchen range, no knowledge of mechanical details being necessary. Inexpensive to operate. A woman can call around town all afternoon, or take a 25 mile spin in the country, at the minimum of cost for gasoline, oil, wear in tires, etc.

You couldn't give "her" a present she would appreciate more than this beautiful, modern car, with its stream-line effect, tapered hood and crown fenders.

Ford

Runabout - $475
Touring - - 495
Coupelet - - 695
Town Car - $780
Sedan - - - 890
F. O. B. FORD, ONT.

L. M. Sees, Agent, Port Elgin

Over 700 Ford Service Stations in Canada.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson XIII., June 24, 1917.

The Purpose of John's Gospel—Review.—John 21, 15-25.

Summary.—Lesson I. Topic: The works of God. Place: Jerusalem. On the Sabbath day Jesus was passing along the street and saw a man who was both blind. He anointed his eyes with moistened clay and sent him to the pool of Siloam to wash. His sight was restored and to the questioning Pharisees he gave a clear testimony. He believed in Jesus as the Son of God and the Jews cast him out of the synagogue.

II. Topic: A sympathizing Saviour. Place: Bethany, about two miles from Jerusalem. Word was sent to Jesus that Lazarus, the brother of Martha and Mary and a friend of Jesus, was sick. Jesus arrived at Bethany four days after Lazarus died. To Martha he said, "I am the resurrection, and the life." At the tomb He called Lazarus to come forth and he rose and came out of the tomb still "bound with graveclothes." Jesus said, "Loose him, and let him go."

III. Topic: Christianity portrayed. Place: Jerusalem. Jesus taught His disciples the great truth that it was only by Him that entrance could be gained into the kingdom of heaven. He said, "I am the door." He expressed the relation between Him and His followers under the figure of the shepherd and His sheep. The hireling shepherd flees at the approach of danger, but the good Shepherd lays down His life for His sheep. The Father loves the Son for this sacrifice.

IV. Topic: Love vindicated. Place: Bethany, about two miles east of Jerusalem. On Saturday evening, six days before the crucifixion, Jesus was given a feast in Simon's house. Martha, Mary and Lazarus were present. While Jesus was at supper, Mary anointed him with costly ointment. The disciples, but chiefly Judas, criticised this act as a waste of money that might be given to the poor. Jesus approved of her act, as it was an anointing for His burial and there would be constant opportunity to give to the poor.

V. Topic: Acknowledged Kingship. Place: From Bethany to Jerusalem. On Sunday Jesus and His disciples went from Bethany to Jerusalem. Jesus rode on a colt which was obtained by the disciples in a village near by. A crowd of people followed Him and another crowd came out of Jerusalem to meet Him. The people welcomed Him with great enthusiasm as the King of Israel. Some Greeks sought Jesus and He spoke to them concerning His mission.

VI. Topic: Love's service. Place: An upper room in Jerusalem. Jesus and his disciples were eating the Passover together, and Jesus rose from the meal, took a basin and towel and began to wash the feet of his disciples. He was taking a servant's place. Peter objected at first, but later he became willing when Jesus told him that he could have no part with him if he did did not allow him to wash his feet.

VII. Topic: Christian identity. Place: An upper room in Jerusalem. Jesus delivered an extended farewell discourse to his disciples before they went to Gethsemane. He told them that he was the true vine and they were the branches. The Father was the husbandman. The branch must continue in the vine in order to produce fruit. Unfruitful branches were taken away. He told them to love one another. There is nothing that can take the place of love. True Christians have love one for the other.

VIII. Topic: A ruined nation. Place: Jerusalem. The temperance lesson is from Isaiah. Israel had become a nation of drunkards, and Samaria, "the crown of pride," was doomed to destruction because of the sins of the people. The beauty of the hill and the valleys would be changed to desolation. The nation of Judah was also becoming weak through intemperance. The evils of drunkenness are portrayed.

IX. Topic: Christian perfection. Place: An upper room in Jerusalem. In Christ's farewell discourse he gives his disciples much instruction and encouragement. Among other things he gives them the promise that the Comforter, the Holy Spirit, will come to them if he goes away. The Comforter would remain with them for ever. He would testify of Christ, and would reprove the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment. He would remind them of what Jesus had said to them while he was with them.

X. Topic: Love wounded. Places: Gethsemane and the high priest's palace. After leaving the upper room Jesus and his disciples went to the garden of Gethsemane, where Jesus prayed. Judas, who had bargained with Jewish officials to betray Jesus to them, led a crowd into the garden and pointed Jesus out to them by kissing him. Peter undertook to defend his master from the officers, but Jesus rebuked him. In the high priest's palace Peter denied Jesus, according to the warning the Master had given him.

XI. Topic: Finished work. Place: Jerusalem. After the trials of Jesus before the Jewish council and Pilate, Pilate having delivered him up to be crucified, he was led to Golgotha, where he was placed on the cross between two common thieves. While on the cross Jesus committed the care of his mother to his disciple John. He spoke seven times from the cross. John records two of his sayings.

XII. Topic: A glorious revelation. Place: Jerusalem. Jesus was placed in the tomb on Friday before sunset and rose from the dead early Sunday morning. Mary Magdalene and other women came early to embalm the body of Jesus, and found the sepulchre open, the stone having been rolled away. Mary went to tell the disciples what they had learned. Peter and John came and found the tomb empty. Jesus appeared first to Mary and she told the disciples that she had seen him.

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Atonement Through Christ

I. His divinity manifested.

II. His sacrifice accepted.

III. His resurrection attested.

I. His divinity manifested. As the opposition of the hostile Jews grew more and more intense against Jesus, it became more and more evident that the secret of their continued and increasing hatred was their determined refusal to believe in his divinity. They were persistent in refusing all scriptural evidences that he was the Messiah. They repulsed every testimony to his wonderful miracles of mercy. They regarded every teaching as blasphemous and contrary to their established customs and religion. They regarded the increase of disciples as an effort to destroy the Jewish theocracy. They despised those upon whom Jesus bestowed physical or spiritual healing. They sought to turn the truth of God into a lie. They would not enter into the kingdom of God, nor willingly allow others to go in. They labored to prevent the inauguration of a Christian dispensation. They clung to the old system rather than to be transferred by its fulfilment into the Father's completed plan for their redemption. They refused to accept God's chosen sacrifice, demanding by their attitude that he should send one whom they were willing to receive, one whose dignity they thought befitting the Messiah.

II. His sacrifice accepted. The raising of Lazarus from the dead made it necessary for Jesus to retire from the vicinity of Jerusalem. Such a miracle as that and the healing of the man born blind were unmistakable scriptural evidences of Christ's Messiahship and such as the Jewish nation were taught to expect in the Messiah. While many of the people were being convinced, the Jewish rulers were losing the pre-eminence in matters of religion. They plotted secretly and labored openly to mould popular opinion against Jesus. They could not deny the graciousness of his works. They could not find him guilty of crime. They could only clamor against what they interpreted as disregard for their traditions. They could not endure his claim of equality and oneness with the Father. Nothing but his death would satisfy their frenzied hatred. Only through Roman decree could they reach that end. Expecting to find in Judas a valuable assistant in carrying out the capture of Jesus, they satisfied his greed for money by hiring him to make it possible for the Roman soldiers with representations from the Jewish authorities to get Jesus into their power. All that Jesus had said about his atoning sacrifice and his purpose to lay down his life for the redemption of the world was being carried out.

III. His resurrection attested. Much careful instruction was given to Christ's disciples to prepare them for his departure. The promise of the last comforting assurance to the grief-stricken disciples. His coming was dependent upon Christ's going. Assurances of his intimate union with his disciples were repeated when Jesus was spending his last hours with them. By his example in washing their feet Jesus taught them the best rule of conduct for unity among themselves. The vital connection with himself in the figure of the vine was a lesson, the spiritual import of which would best be understood after his resurrection. "Unto the end" Jesus ever guarded and loved his disciples. At the cross his most self-forgetful love was exhibited in behalf of his mother, to whom he gave his disciple John as a son, and to him he gave a mother. When death reigned and hopes were blighted, the joyous climax of all was revealed in the glorious resurrection of Jesus. Then was his divinity attested. Then was the spiritual life of his disciples begun. Then was the way opened for his ascension and the coming of the Comforter. Then was the undying love of Mary rewarded by the revelation of Jesus to her in the midst of her grief. Unfoldings of new relationships were made and the great opportunity of declaring a risen and ascending Saviour to the apostles was granted to Mary. Atonement and resurrection through Christ were attested. A new dispensation began and spiritual things were understood.

T. R. A.

FARM AND GARDEN

THE BEST GRAINS.

(As recommended by W. Saxby Blair, Superintendent Experimental Station, Kentville, N. S., for Ontario).

Spring Wheat—Red Fife and White Fife are good standard sorts but rather late in ripening in northern localities.

Huron, Marquis and Early Red Fife are earlier in ripening.

All the varieties mentioned are good for bread-making, but Huron is not equal in this respect to the others. It is however, particularly vigorous and productive and is highly recommended.

In extreme northern districts, Prelude will be found valuable if the soil is fairly rich and the rainfall sufficient.

In Southern Ontario, the very late variety, Blue Stem, gives good results. It is rather more resistant to drought than most sorts. Goose wheat is useful in extremely dry localities though the price of this variety is often quite low, as it is not used for bread-making. Kubanka, closely resembling Goose, making excellent bread, but it is so different from ordinary wheats that millers object to grinding it. Goose is usually more productive than Kubanka.

Oats—Banner and Ligowo are two of the best sorts. Ligowo is slightly the earliest in ripening, but generally produces a smaller crop. Daubeney may be used where extreme earliness is desired. O.A.C. No. 72 (a selection from Siberian) is a very productive, late-maturing variety.

Barley—Manchurian and Ontario Agricultural College No. 21 are recommended among the six-row sorts.

Duckbill and the best strains of Chevalier are recommended among the two-row sorts.

No varieties of beardless or hulless barley can be recommended. Success (beardless) is of very early ripening habit.

Peas—Among yellow peas, Arthur is most highly recommended for earliness and productiveness. Golden Vine, Chancellor and White Marrowfat are also good sorts.

Prussian Blue, Wisconsin Blue and English Grey are good colored peas.

SEEDING HINTS FOR BEST RESULTS (Grain).

Fall-plowed sod and fall-disced or fall-ploughed root, corn, and potato land are most suitable.

Fall plowing, disc harrowing, drag harrowing, rolling, drilling and drag harrowing are operations necessary to complete seed-bed preparations and seeding.

When the seed-bed is considered just right, give an extra stroke of the harrow. More cultivation means bigger crops.

What is a good seed-bed? It is suitably rich, mellow, uniformly level, fairly fine at the surface but firm below. Example: Well-prepared sod, hoed and cultivated land.

After plowing, the disc harrow is the most suitable implement for preparing the seed-bed. Some types are more suitable than others. Double disc harrows are now being used to speed up this operation, lower the cost and ensure a thoroughly pulverized surface soil.

What is it like? This harrow consists of two disc harrows, one in front of the other, cutting, the one with an in-throw and the other with an out-throw. It requires from three to six horses to operate, whereas its chief value is for firming and crumbling the soil previous to seeding.

On light soils it is essentially to use the roller immediately after seeding, but it should be followed by the draw harrow to slit the smooth surface; in other words to restore the mulch, to check evaporation of moisture.

The roller should not be used on damp soil, clay especially; first allow the surface to dry, after which rolling will have a beneficial effect by breaking the crust and making the necessary mulch. Rolling when the grain is a few inches high is sometimes advisable. It helps firm the soil and breaks the crust as before stated.

Seed drills of modern make are worth the money. The disc drill is popular and efficient. Use as large size as conditions warrant. A large machine lowers the cost of seeding. Most drills are abused. Oil well and protect from the weather.

SEED PER ACRE.

The right amount of seed per acre is very important. No set amount can be stated, suited to all conditions. Following rates of seeding are a guide—for one acre:

Corn for ensilage, 20 to 25 pounds.
Corn for grain, 15 to 20 pounds.
Swedes (drills), 2 to 4 pounds.
Mangles, 6 to 10 pounds.
Wheat, 1 1-2 to 1 3-4 bushels.
Barley, 2 to 2 1-2 bushels.
Rye, 3-4 to 1 1-4 bushels.
Buckwheat, 3-4 to 1 1-4 bushels.
Oats (depending on size), 2 to 2 bushels.
Peas (depending on size), 2 1-2 to [illegible] bushels.
Peas and oats (mixed) for grain (oats, 2 to 2 1-2 bushels; peas, 1 to 1 1-2 bushels).
Peas and oats for green feed or hay (equal parts by weight at the rate of 3 to 4 bushels per acre).
Alfalfa, 25 to 30 pounds.
Clovers and grasses, 15 to 25 pounds (in varying proportions according to conditions of soil, location, cropping system and purpose). Potatoes (according to size), 12 to 20 bushels.

DRAINAGE AND CROP YIELDS.

The cost of tile drainage will be more than repaid by the increase in crop yields. In a recent experiment in southwestern Ohio it was found that land that was well drained and treated with fertilizers yielded 21.7 bushels more per acre in 19[illegible] than did land similarly treated to fertilizers but lacking the underdrainage. Where manure was used on corn land there was an increase of 34.4 bushels of corn per acre where the land was underdrained, over manured land not drained. Fertilized wheat land having the drainage yielded 5.7 bushels more per acre than undrained land receiving the same treatment. Black soils of glaciated regions need underdrainage, say soil experts.

APPLE SPRAY SCHEDULE.

Before buds start, dormant spray—lime-sulphur 1 to 8, for scale and blister mite.

When leaves of blossom buds are out a quarter to half an inch—delayed dormant spray—lime-sulphur 1 to 8 for scale and blister mite; "black leaf 40" three-quarter pint in 100 gallons for aphis; arsenate of lead 5-6 pounds in 100 gallons for leaf roller and case bearers. (If this spray is applied it will not be necessary to make the "dormant" application.)

When blossoms show pink—blossom pink spray; lime-sulphur 1 to 40 for scab; arsenate of lead 5-6 pounds in 100 gallons for bud moth, case bearers etc.; "black leaf 40" 1 pint in 100 gallons for dark apple red bug.

When the last of the petals are falling—calyx spray, lime-sulphur 1 to 40 for scab; arsenate of lead 5-6 pounds in 100 gallons for coddling moth; black leaf 40 [illegible] pint in 100 gallons for bright apple red bug.

Later sprays to be determined by weather conditions and control of scab. Arsenate of lead 5-6 pounds in 100 gallons for coddling moth and other caterpillars.

CLOVER AND MANURE BEST FOR POTATO CROP.

Selection of a good clover sod where potatoes have not grown for at least five years and the use of barnyard manure with acid phosphate are given by the Ohio Experiment Station as ideal conditions for fertilizing potatoes. After twenty-three years' investigations with this crop the experiment station advises farmers to plow under twelve to sixteen tons of manure an acre if plenty is available, and then to apply about [illegible] pounds of acid phosphate an acre as a surface dressing. If manure is scarce four or five tons an acre may be used, and then [illegible] pounds of acid phosphate along with [illegible] pounds of nitrate of soda will yield about the same results. These experiments have shown that fertilizer should be spread over all the land and not confined to the potato rows; for in this way the potato roots spread out more widely and succeeding crops make better use of what potatoes leave.

Pork Cake.

Here's an old recipe:

Chop fine a pound of pork.

Only fat salt pork can be used.

Add a pound of raisins, seeded and chopped.

Also a quarter of a pound of sliced citron.

Next two cups of sugar and one cup of molasses, in which a teaspoon of saleratus has been rubbed.

Now mix all together, stir in sifted flour to a consistency of cake mixtures, add an ounce each of nutmegs and cloves, two ounces of cinnamon and bake slowly.

CARE NEEDED TO PROPERLY ADMINISTER MEDICINES

Serious Consequences May Follow Too Rapid Administration of Liquids—Powders Placed On Tongue Safe and Handy—Use of Bolus Popular But Requires Skill—By Vet.

The art of administering medicines to animals without endangering the life of the patient, is not as simple a matter as many think. This is especially the case when the medicine is in a fluid state, and is given by the mouth. In order that a drench may be given, it is, of course, necessary that the animal's head be held in such a position that its mouth is at a higher level than the throat. When a fluid is poured rapidly into the mouth of a patient whose head is elevated for the purpose, it is not uncommon for a greater or less quantity of the fluid to enter the larynx and pass down the trachea (the wind pipe) to the bronchial tubes, and cause more or less serious trouble, according to the nature and quantity of the liquid that has passed. This unfortunate occurrence may happen from different causes.

HOW INJURY OCCURS.

When an animal's head is elevated as described, and fluid introduced into the mouth, it at once reaches a cavity, called the pharynx, just beyond the root of the tongue. From this cavity, or box, originates the gullet and also the larynx, a cartilagenous box, which is continued by the trachea. The entrance into the larynx is guarded by a valve, called the epiglottis. If from any cause the fluid is not swallowed promptly, and its introduction into the mouth continues, the pharynx becomes filled and the entrance into both gullet and pharynx submerged. After a limited time the patient is forced to breathe and the expulsion of air from the lungs forces the valve open, and a greater or less quantity of the fluid enters the larynx and passes, as stated, to the bronchial tubes. This cause more or less violent coughing. If sufficient fluid to fill the tubes has passed, the animal will die from suffocation in a few minutes. This occurs more frequently in pigs and sheep (especially the former), than in other classes of animals, but its occurrence is by no means uncommon in horses and catle. If a small quantity passes it sets up mechanical bronchitis, and, if the quantity of the fluid in the tubes be quite small, it may become absorbed, and the patient recover, while, in the other cases, the animal suffers for a few days and dies, notwithstanding the most skillful treatment.

There are different reasons why this unfortunate accident may occur during the administration of fluids to animals. The fluid may be passed into the mouth so rapidly that the patient cannot swallow it quickly enough on account of the position of the head, which tends to prevent rapid swallowing. There may be a soreness of the throat which prevents the patient endeavoring to swallow on account of the pain it causes. There may be a partial or complete paralysis of the muscles of deglutition (swallowing), or there may be merely a stubbornness on the part of the patient.

In order to safely administer medicines in this way, called "drenching," it is necessary to closely observe whether the patient is swallowing, and to pour only a little into the mouth until he commences to swallow regularly.

There are many methods of administering medicines, some of which require special instruments, and are practised only by veterinarians, such as the hypodermic method (injecting the active principal of the drug in a fluid form under the skin); the intravenous (injecting into a vein) and the intracheal (into the trachea). All these methods, to be successful, and avoid untoward results, require great care as regards pureness of the drugs and cleanliness of the instruments and hands of the operator, and it is necessary to have instruments especially designed for the purpose, hence they are practised only by veterinarians, who favor these modes of administration where practical, as the actions of the drugs are often more certain and more durably produced.

Other methods are in the form of powders, balls, drenches and the introduction of fluids into the mouth out of a syringe. Powders are given either in damp food, in the drinking water, mixed with water and given as a drench, or placed on the back of the tongue out of a spoon. The latter is a safe, handy and sure method of giving powders that dissolve readily. The powder is placed in a perfectly dry spoon, an assistant holding the horse's head. The operator catches the patient's tongue with his left hand, which keeps the mouth open and with the right hand he introduces the spoon into the mouth, passes it well back and upset it. The powder drops on the root of the tongue, dissolves and is swallowed. Of course when the quantity is large, or does not dissolve readily, this plan is not satisfactory, as the patient will often drop more or less of it out of his mouth. When the appetite is good and the powder is not of a very disagreeable taste, it is convenient and satisfactory to give it mixed with damp food, as boiled oats, dampened chop, bran, etc.

The administration of medicines in the form of a ball is much practised, but it requires some practice and skill on the part of the operator. The drugs are reduced to powder, made moist by adding glycerine, treacle or other moistening substance, rolled into cylindrical form, not more than an inch in diameter and 2½ inches long and neatly wrapped in tissue paper. If an assistant be present, it is well to get him to steady the horse's head and prevent him holding it too high. The operator grasps the ball with the fingers of the right hand and the patient's tongue with the left hand, thereby keeping the mouth open (it should be stated that the ball should be moistened by coating with oil before administration is attempted). He then passes the ball backwards in the mouth, keeping the hand well in the centre of the mouth, resisting the lateral action of the tongue to carry either the hand or the bolus between the molar teeth on either side, and drops it behind the root of the tongue. If this be done the animal cannot chew it; he will either swallow it or cough it up.

ADMINISTERING A BOLUS.

It requires a little practice to enable a man to administer a ball without danger of the horse getting it, or the hand of the operator, between his molar teeth. If the hand should become enclosed between the teeth it should not be forcibly drawn out, as this will surely cause severe scarifications. It should be held still, and the left hand, which still holds the tongue, used to get the horse to relax his hold. If the tongue be kept out well to the right side of the mouth, the patient will not close very firmly on the hand that is on the other side of the mouth, as he will not be able to do so without biting his own tongue. There are instruments called mouth speculums which keep the mouth open and thereby secure the safety of the operator's hand, but few farmers have one, and the veterinarian seldom requires one for the purpose. There are also instruments called balling guns, which cost but little, and are very handy for a person who has not acquired the necessary skill in using his hands.

With any of these methods of administering medicines, the principal danger is waste, and, of course, if some be wasted, more can be given.

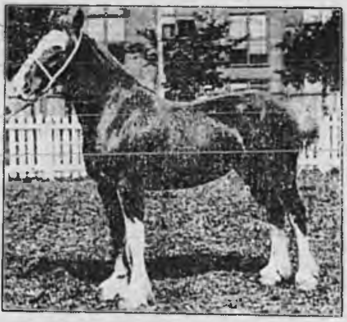
In drenching we should always allow for a little waste, and at the same time guard against injuring the animal. In order to drench a horse or other animal, his head must be held up. He should be backed into a stall or against some solid object that will prevent him from going further backwards. A hame strap, a looped rope or something of that nature is put into his mouth. A strap or rope is attached to this, passed over a beam or run through an elevated ring or pulley and drawn until the head has reached the proper height, or a stick may be fastened to the loop, and an assistant, by the use of it, can hold the head up. The operator now inserts the neck of the bottle or drenching horn into the side of the mouth and allows a little of the fluid to run out. If the patient swallows readily the liquid may be allowed to continue to run slowly, but if he refuses to swallow the flow must be checked, or else the trouble already described will result. The operator should rub the roof of the mouth with the neck of the bottle. This usually causes him to swallow. He may swallow the fluid that is now in the larynx, before any more is allowed to enter. The tongue must not be pulled out nor the throat pinched, as the latter will cause him to cough, hence the epiglottis will be forced open and trouble follow.

Some pour the fluid into the nostril, but this is a very dangerous habit. If, during the process of drenching, the patient commences to cough, his head should be immediately lowered, even though the medicine be wasted. There is generally more or less wasted, and if the waste exceeds the allowance made for it, more should be given.

A very nice method of administering fluids to horses, when the bulk is not too great, is out of a two-ounce syringe. Special syringes, called "Dose syringes," are made for the purpose. The calibre of the nozzle is large and the syringe is made of such a pattern that it can be readily used with one hand. It is filled with the fluid, the patient's tongue held by the left hand of the operator, and the syringe introduced well back into the mouth by the right hand, and the fluid forced into the pharynx. The patient usually swallows it readily, and there is no waste, and no danger. Several syringe fulls may be given when necessary.

Under no circumstances should a horse or other patient, with a sore throat, or one having difficulty in swallowing from any cause be drenched. Where necessary to give fluids in such cases they should be given by a syringe or by passing a rubber tube down the gullet and pouring the fluid into it.

—The Canadian Countryman.



Valuable animals may easily be injured and some may die from inexperienced and careless administering of medicines.

MARKET REPORTS

TORONTO MARKETS.

FARMERS' MARKET.

Dairy Produce—
Butter, choice dairy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Eggs, new-laid, doz.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cheese, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., fancy, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dressed Poultry—
Turkeys, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fowl, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spring chickens	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fruits—
Rhubarb, 2 bunches	0 00	[illegible]
Vegetables—
Asparagus, Can., bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Beans, new, small measure	[illegible]	[illegible]
Beets, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cucumbers, each	[illegible]	[illegible]
Carrots, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Celery, per bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cabbages, each	[illegible]	[illegible]
Horseradish, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Leeks, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., doz. bchs., small	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., doz. bchs., large	[illegible]	[illegible]
Onions, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., 11-qt. bkt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., Bermuda, doz.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Potatoes, per bag	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., new, peck	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., small measure	[illegible]	[illegible]
Radishes, 2 bunches	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spinach, new, peck	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sage, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Savory, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Turnips, bag	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., per peck	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Tomatoes, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]

MEATS—WHOLESALE.

Beef, forequarters, cwt.	$15 00	[illegible]
Do., hindquarters	[illegible]	[illegible]
Carcases, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., common	[illegible]	[illegible]
Veals, common, cwt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., medium	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., prime	[illegible]	[illegible]
Heavy hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Shop hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Abattoir hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mutton, heavy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., Spring, each	[illegible]	[illegible]

SUGAR MARKET.

Wholesale quotations on Canada refined sugar, Toronto delivery, in effect after May 18:

Lantic granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Royal Acadia granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Redpath granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Dominion Crystal	100 lbs.	[illegible]
No. 1 yellow, all refiners	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Dark yellow	100 lbs.	[illegible]

[illegible]

OTHER MARKETS

WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Wheat—
Oct.	2 12	[illegible]	2 12	[illegible]
Oats—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Flax—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	2 68	[illegible]

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

Minneapolis—Wheat—July, $2.[illegible]; September, $1.9[illegible]; cash, No. 1 hard, [illegible]; No. 1 Northern, [illegible]; No. 2 Northern, [illegible]. Corn—No. 3 yellow, [illegible]. Oats—No. 3 white, [illegible]. Flour unchanged. Bran, [illegible].

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

Duluth—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $2.9[illegible]; No. 2 Northern, [illegible]; July, [illegible] nominal.

MONTREAL MARKETS

[illegible]

BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

East Buffalo, Report—Cattle, receipts, 175, steady.

Veals, receipts 100; active and steady; $5 to $15.25.

Hogs, receipts 1,000; slow; heavy $15.90 to $16; mixed $15.75 to $15.90; yorkers $15.75 to $15.85; light yorkers $14.75 to $15.50; pigs $14.50 to $14.75; roughs $13.85 to $14; stags $12 to $12.75.

Sheep and lambs, receipts 400; active and steady; lambs $8 to $18; clipped lambs $6 to $15.15; others unchanged.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Cattle, receipts 8,000.
Market firm.

Beeves	9 30	[illegible]
Stockers and feeders	7 40	[illegible]
Cows and heifers	6 35	[illegible]
Calves	9 75	[illegible]
Hogs, receipts 2,000.
Market steady.
Light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mixed	14 70	[illegible]
Heavy	14 70	[illegible]
Rough	14 70	[illegible]
Pigs	10 00	[illegible]
Bulk of sales	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sheep, receipts 3,000.
Market strong.
Wethers	8 50	[illegible]
Lambs, native	9 50	[illegible]
Springs	12 25	[illegible]

LIVERPOOL MARKETS.

Hams, short cut, 14 to 16 lbs.—[illegible].
Bacon, Cumberland cut, 26 to 30 lbs.—[illegible].
Short ribs, 16 to 24 lbs.—[illegible].
Clear bellies, 14 to 16 lbs.—[illegible].
Long clear middles, light, 28 to 34 lbs.—[illegible].
Short clear backs, 16 to 20 lbs.—[illegible].
Shoulders, square, 11 to 13 lbs.—[illegible].
Lard, prime western, in tierces—[illegible].
American, refined—[illegible].
Cheese, Canadian, finest white—New—[illegible].
Australian Tallow in London—[illegible].
Turpentine, spirits—[illegible], 6d.
Resin, common—[illegible], 2 1-4d.
Petroleum, refined—[illegible].
Linseed oil—[illegible], 6d.
War Kerosene, No. 2—1s, 2 1-4d.

A Political Genius.

Congressmen, chatting, admit there are [illegible] the good will of their constituents. Years ago a member from a western state was afraid that his first term would be his last, and he had not managed to make himself a power in Congress. While he was debating what he should do a friend said, "You live near the centre of the United States, don't you?" "Yes." "Then, why don't you introduce a bill to have the capital moved to the principal town in your district?" The Congressman introduced the bill, and the people of his district at once concluded he was a great man and sent him back for another term. He reintroduced the bill in the next Congress, and, although it was promptly pigeonholed in committee, his constituents gave him a third term as a reward for his genius.—Exchange.

The prodigal son had just arrived in the back way between two days. "Owing to the greediness of the Beef Trust," explained the old man, "we are entirely out of fatted calf, but here's a can-opener. Get busy."—Indianapolis Star.

All Pure Tea
Free from Dust

Sealed Packets Only
Never Sold in Bulk

"SALADA"

Black—Mixed—Natural Green. E213

A PUZZLING CASE.

When we arrived, Tancred was also at breakfast, but when he saw us, ran forward to greet not me, but Melchizedek, whom he welcomed with effusive joy. Really, this little man was a most offensive person, and put me in mind of a ferret, but as he was the only individual who could cure my detective fever, I was obliged to put up with his odious familiarity. Still, he had brains, this disreputable Hebrew, else he would never have played such a bold game at Lippington and won as he did.

"I am glad to see you, Melchizedek," cried Tancred, forcing the little Jew into a chair. "Have you anything to tell me?"

"Lots, sir."

"And the major?"

"I know nothing."

"No, sir, he knows nothing," replied Melchizedek, with a grin. "I said I'd put you two gents together, and that's what I'm going to do."

"Good. Put us out of this misery of suspense at once. Have you discovered who killed Mazzucata?"

"I have, sir."

"You are certain?"

"Got his confession here."

"His confession," we both cried at once. "Then it wasn't Miss Maxwell who killed her sister?"

"No, sir, it wasn't," replied Melchizedek, lowly. "But it was Mr. Maxwell who killed his daughter."

"Impossible," we said in chorus.

"Not a bit of it. I've got it here in black and white."

"This, then, is why Miss Maxwell confessed," said Tancred.

"To save her father," ended I, with a gesture of admiration.

"Well, it didn't save him," retorted the little Jew, producing a roll of paper, "for I've got the whole truth here."

"Sufficient to hang him?"

"Twice over, but it won't hang him, gents both."

"Why?"

"Because he's hanged himself."

"Suicide!"

"That's so, gents both."

"So Mazzucata's assassin has escaped the clutches of the law," said Tancred, after a pause, "a strange ending to a strange case. Well, I'm not sorry, for his daughter's sake!"

"She came up to split on him, didn't she, gents?" said Melchizedek.

We both indignantly repudiated the insinuation.

"No! she came up here to take the burden of her father's crime on her own shoulders."

"I'm glad he didn't know that, or I wouldn't have got this," observed Melchizedek, patting the confession affectionately. "Well, it don't matter now. Have you got a drink, Mr. Tancred, sir?"

Tancred brought out a bottle of cognac and a glass, and after Melchizedek had refreshed himself with what he vulgarly called 'a drain,' he wiped his mouth and began to talk.

"I suppose you want to know all about it, gents both?"

"From the beginning," said Tancred emphatically.

Melchizedek rubbed his hands with delight.

"Well, what a game, sir, what a game! All skill, every bit, and nothing [illegible]"

He was so pleased with himself that [illegible] Tancred and myself, who were impatient to hear all the particulars of this affair. Formerly I had been under the impression that [illegible] that reticent individual, who knew the value of words, and was, therefore, sparing of his speech, but now, that [illegible] was quite destroyed, as he talked [illegible] about his discovery at Lippington.

"When I heard of that row, gents [illegible]," he began as soon as his [illegible] were under control, "I says at once, I did, that the truth was to be found at Lippington, so to Lippington I went."

[illegible]

"[illegible] Carnation [illegible] Mr. Dallas [illegible] black carnation [illegible] committed the crime and I went down to Lippington with the intention of getting the truth out of [illegible]. I can't tell you, gents, how [illegible] dark I was, or how difficult it was to find out the truth; for day after day went by, I could discover nothing, until I began to think all my time was wasted."

"And what put you on the right track?"

"That Miss Cellaski, who gave evidence in court. Yes. She went down a couple of days ago, and 'went' for Miss Maxwell like a fiend. This occurred in the garden, where I, also, was waiting to buy flowers. I bought flowers nearly every day, gents both. Oh! I was a good customer there, sirs. Well, gents both, this Miss Cellaski and Miss Maxwell were in love with Mr. Dallas, and made all sorts of statements, at which I pricked up my ears. Miss Maxwell denied everything, so Miss Cellaski 'flung' out of the garden in a rage, and I went after her. I saw she was jealous, and, [illegible]—on—her jealousy, I managed to get everything out of her. She told me——"

"Oh, we know all that," interrupted Tancred, quickly; "go on."

"I am going on, sir," said Melchizedek, a little offended. "I say, I found that Mazzucata was the old man's daughter, and one day, in the garden, when he thought I wasn't listening, I heard him 'cussing' her like a pickpocket. Oh, then, I thought to myself, 'you hate your daughter, because she went on the stage; you own the Black Carnation; she expected one to be the signal of her death, so I wouldn't be surprised if you had killed her.' Well, gents both, I thought, and I thought hard, and then I came to the conclusion that as Mazzucata was the old man's daughter, he'd have gone up and seen her that first night. So, off I goes to the station, and makes a 'pal' of one of the porters, and there I found that old Maxwell had been up to town on that night—the sixteenth of May—and had come down to Lippington by the night mail—in evening dress!"

"But why in evening dress. A man in his position wouldn't own an evening dress."

"Oh! but he did, though," replied Melchizedek. "He was a bit of a swell, was old Maxwell, and a deacon of the church, too. Anyhow, he had an evening dress, and put it on to go to the opera."

"But his reason?"

"Well, sir, he couldn't have got into the stalls of the theatre unless he'd been in evening dress."

"He had no business in the stalls," I said, angrily, "a gardener."

"Of course not, sir," said Melchizedek, with a wink, "but he wanted to throw that bouquet, d'ye see?"

"Then those bouquets at Sir Gilbert and Mr. Dallas—"

"Were quite innocent. Yes, gents. There wasn't any cartridge about them. The old gent was in the front row of the stalls with his bouquet, and threw it himself. After he saw his daughter killed, he walked out of the theatre and came home again."

"How did you find all this out?"

"By bluffing him. I went to see him the other morning and says to him, 'Look here, I'm a detective, and I've a warrant for your arrest for the murder of your daughter, Mazzucata.' He began to bluster and says he had no daughter of that name and that he knew nothing. So I told him what I've told you, that he'd gone up in evening dress on the first night, and killed her with the bouquet."

"What did he say, then?"

"Began talking about Mr. Dallas stealing the Black Carnation, so I said that he had given the carnation, and that there was no stealing about it. Well, gents, I had a long tussle with him, but at last I got him on his knees, and he confessed everything. When he was at this, I heard a noise at the window, and saw Miss Maxwell disappear, so I knew she had heard everything."

"Brave woman," I said with admiration, "and at once came to town to try and save that old villain by taking the blame on her own shoulders."

"I guessed as much," said Melchizedek, quietly, "but I didn't tell him so. When I found her gone, I said, 'Your daughter has gone up to town to denounce you, so you'd better make a clean breast of it.' Well, he raged at me, and I bluffed him with the warrant, which, of course, was all stuff, and then he tried to kill me, but, though I'm not strong, I'm pretty tough, and I licked him. In the end, I made him write out this confession, and sign it, and so here it is."

"And Maxwell?"

"I was going to wire to you to send down a warrant, and keep my eye on him till then. After I'd got his confession, he saw he was 'up a tree,' and as I wouldn't let him out of my sight, he asked me to let him destroy the Black Carnation. I didn't care if he did so or not, and thinking he couldn't hurt himself in the greenhouse, let him go in, while I kept guard near the door. Then I heard him smashing away at the carnation, and after a bit, getting tired, went in to see him. Lord, sirs, he'd hanged himself, and the Black Carnation was all in bits under his feet. I cut him down, but he was as 'dead as a door-nail'; so I called in the police, told them all, and came up last night by the late train. And now, gents both, I will read you the confession of the 'dead un.'"

"By no means," said Tancred, annoyed by the man's vulgar familiarity. "I will look over it myself, and Major Granby can peruse it afterward."

Melchizedek, rather crushed, held his peace, and Tancred proceeded to skim the document, while I sat still, waiting until he had finished. After a time, however, I grew somewhat tired of this, and, as it did not interrupt Tancred, conversed in a low tone with the Jew.

"How did Maxwell get the dynamite cartridge?"

"There was a singer called Ivan, sir, who went down to Lippington, and had the cartridge in his pocket. While he was talking to Miss Maxwell, it rolled out, and she picked it up. Signor Ivan took it from her, and described how dangerous it was, as, if she touched the spring, it would set the clock-work in motion and explode. Then he put it for safety into his overcoat pocket."

"And Miss Maxwell stole it?"

"No, she didn't, sir, but I dare say she says that to shield her father. Signor Ivan's overcoat was lying on the back of a chair some little distance away, and while he was talking to Miss Maxwell, the old man, who had overheard the conversation, picked it out of the pocket and kept it himself."

"Did he intend to use it in killing his daughter?"

"Yes, sir. He came up to town on the sixteenth, and intended to just set the clock-work in motion, and throw it on the stage, at Mazzucata. But business took him to Phillis & Co., where he saw those two bouquets being made up for Mazzucata. He had a black carnation with him, which he intended to throw on the stage, along with the cartridge; so that his daughter would know he had thrown it. The bouquets gave him an idea, so he went off to another shop, bought some white flowers, and placing the black carnation in the centre for a sign, completed the bouquet by making the dynamite cartridge into the handle."

"By the way, Melchizedek," interrupted Tancred, at this moment, "you have made one mistake, for I see Maxwell did not possess a dress suit."

"I thought he did."

"No. He confesses that he came up, as you state, to kill his daughter; and, wanting to get as close to the stage as possible, went to buy a stall. As it was the night of the performance, all the stalls were sold; but as one or two had come back, he purchased one in the front row by giving a long price. The clerk at the box office, seeing that he was a shabby old man, told him evening dress was indispensable, so he went off to an [illegible] street and hired an evening dress for the night. The rest you have described, went to the theatre, and killed his daughter."

"[illegible] reason for so doing?"

"Well, I think he was mad. In your investigations, Melchizedek, did you ever hear people say that Maxwell was out of his mind?"

"I heard something about him having [illegible] fallen down from a ladder on his feet, and that the shock unsettled his brain."

"It's very likely," said Tancred, [illegible] the confession. "This is the work of a religious maniac. It appears he thought his daughter was doomed to perdition, because she went on the stage, and thought by killing her in the midst of her sins he would save her soul. [illegible]"

"So that was the reason he said a black carnation would be a sign she would die a violent death."

"Precisely. You can see what a madman her father was. Of course he gave the black carnation willingly to Dallas in order that his erring daughter might receive it and repent."

"Do you think he intended to kill her on the stage, Tancred?"

"I'm sure I don't know what he intended to do," replied Tancred, thoughtfully, "but there was no doubt that the incident of the dynamite cartridge gave him the idea of killing his daughter without harm to himself."

"But if he was mad, he would not care about harm to himself so long as he succeeded in killing Mazzucata."

"Not at all, major," said Tancred, smiling; "madmen are very cunning, and always contrive to save their own skins."

"Do you think he was mad?"

"Mad as a March hare—as a hatter. Read that manuscript, major, and you will see his mania, which was to save his daughter's soul by slaying her body."

"It was rather quixotic of Miss Maxwell to accuse herself of the crime simply to save her father, especially as he is a madman."

"Yes, but perhaps she does not think him mad. Besides, I don't think she quite understood the risk she ran of thus accusing herself. She did not love her father, either."

"Nor her sister. At least, she spoke badly enough about her."

"That was the very reason I refused to believe her story," said Tancred, quickly; "she overdid the matter. No, she loved her sister very dearly, and all that feigned hate was put to render her story of the murder more likely to be true. But, as I have said before, she overdid it; therefore, I guessed that it was all a false story."

"And did you suspect it was told to shield her father?"

"Well, to tell you the truth, I did," answered Tancred, candidly, putting the confession away in his drawer, "but I had made so many mistakes before that I did not care about revealing my suspicions until I was certain. Now, of course, thanks to Melchizedek, I see they are correct."

"I bluffed him fine, did I not, gents both," said Melchizedek, making preparations for his departure, a thing we were not sorry to see.

"Well, you will be rewarded for your trouble," answered the lawyer, coldly. "I will tell Mr. Gilbert he owes his freedom to you."

"And what about Dallas, Tancred?"

"Oh, he will leave England, as, after his disgraceful behavior, I don't think he will desire to face Tressider. But Nemesis is on his track in the person of Miss Cellaski."

"I'm glad the case is over," I said, frowning; "no detective fever, I fancy, will [illegible] me from the risk of getting another. No matter how carefully one's plans are laid, the truth is generally revealed by chance."

"Or Melchizedek," said Tancred, with a laugh; "but, after all, I think the whole discovery is due to the Black Carnation."

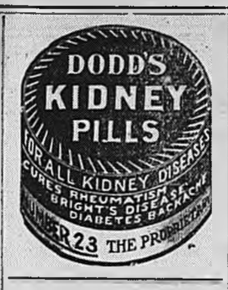
(To Be Continued).

The Star.

The silver star of Bethlehem
Awoke the shepherd boy,
And with its glory [illegible] the lamps
Who followed it with joy.
Across Judea's silent [illegible]
Resplendent [illegible]
To Mary and [illegible] Child
Upon the manger bed.

A little while its splendor hung
Above the stable door
And crowned the heaven's Babe with light,
And then was seen no more.
But though no mortal since has found
Its lustre in the skies,
In each the star is shining yet
In every mother's eyes.
—Minna Irving in New York Sun.

One East Grinstead man, Miss [illegible], of Grinstead, has subscribed for [illegible] New York World.



Hun Wreckers at Their Task

First, outside Rheims, then Paris, May 24.—"I fear that the North tower is about to fall." So spoke the architect of Rheims cathedral. When a week later, the Paris papers were allowed to quote these, all knew what it meant. The French public must be prepared, little by little, for the blow struck at its heart—the final destruction of the incomparable old basilica which stands for the purest splendors of French history, from Remi, Clovis and the Christianizing of the land, to Joan of Arc and the crowning of the kings.

Thus, when a soldier has been killed, they prepare the family by a printed form notice: "Your son (or husband, or brother) has been seriously wounded."

Three days later the Paris papers were permitted to quote "L'Eclaireur de l'Est," still then printed in Rheims: "The bombardment continues furiously against the cathedral district, with the use of their heaviest shells. It is impossible to estimate the number, even approximately. On Friday the shelling continued day and night. On Saturday a calm of a few hours, then the bombardment recommenced more violent than ever, notably between noon and 2 p.m. and 7 and 9 p.m. Sunday a succession of smaller shells all day with fury."

All will, doubtless, be known before these lines can be printed. There have been days when 10,000 shells were counted, 7,700 shells, 4,250 shells. Rheims was practically empty, yet an average of from six to eighteen persons were killed daily. One morning fifteen women were killed together like flies by poison gas shells in the street of the cloister beside the cathedral.

Now we come to the remaining question.

On the battle front—miles and miles beyond—they found a German picture postcard, all trampled and soiled. It represents, in three colors, amid a city in red flames and yellow explosions, a Rheims cathedral standing, purple and glorious, marvellously intact and spared.

A common German feldgrau, resting on his rifle, watches in the foreground. By the reverent expression of his face it is clear to see that if the valorous German knows how to fight he also knows how to appreciate and spare the marvels of art, history and faith. To make sure that the interpretation shall reach all minds, even the weakest, these words on a flowered device curl and flutter like a satin banner above the flame framed cathedral: "Den Deutschen ein Heiligthum!" ("A thing sacred for Germans!")

This is how the German government and high command explain Rheims cathedral—and the cathedrals of Soissons, Laon, Arras, Verdun and St. Die to the more innocent and reverent elements of the German population, particularly country folks, that soldiers may mail the postcards home and prove their innocence.

For more robust consciences the explanation type is that of Major Gen. von Disfurth, in the Hamburg Nachrichten: "If all the glorious monuments ever created be destroyed it is of no consequence, so that by their destruction we promote Germany's victory! The humblest gravestone of a German grenadier is more beautiful than all the cathedrals of Europe. Let neutrals and enemies cease their empty twitter. Let them cease to talk of Rheims cathedral. Our troops must achieve victory!"

German artillerymen, however, know better.

Cathedrals are not merely damaged, as it were, by accident, because of their position in the midst of necessary cannon fire. For artillerymen who do the [illegible], the high command comes down to tacks. Artillerie-Kommandant von Stecht is (or was) a great personage on the French front. When he fled in the recent retreat he left behind him the munition books of three heavy batteries "watching" Soissons (at a distance of seven miles, with French armies and railroads in between). I give two entries:

"April 14. The Dickel battery fired nineteen percussion and fuse shells on the cathedral. Aeroplanes report the tower and nave touched. In the nave the commencement of a fire was noted. Up to date have not been able to materially damage the tower.

"April [illegible]. The Stenger battery, from [illegible] to [illegible], fired twenty nine-shrapnel shells on the cathedral tower, of which sixteen are reported reaching the mark."

The French Government will publish the entire note-book in facsimile, along with a mass of similar matters [illegible]

[illegible] America [illegible]

"We have taken under our fire"—says the German communique—"French batteries observed by us in Rheims and environs!"

Batteries in Rheims!

As for "environs," the cathedral is not in the environs, but in the centre of the ancient crowded city!

When You Eat Bread you are entitled to everything in the whole wheat grain. Dr. Wiley says: "Wheat is a complete food containing all the elements necessary for human nutrition." But be sure you get the whole wheat in a digestible form. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is whole wheat made digestible by steam-cooking, shredding and baking—the best process ever devised for preparing the whole wheat grain for the human stomach. Two or three of these crisp little loaves of baked whole wheat with milk and berries, make a delicious nourishing meal. Made in Canada.

BLIND MAN'S SMOKE.

This Victim of World War Still Enjoys the Weed.

A kiltie is a rare sight in New York. No matter how busy the street he chooses for his stroll he may feel certain of being the most conspicuous object in the crowd.

But a big braw Highlander swinging down Fifth avenue the other day was quite unconscious of the attention he attracted. All eyes turned to look after him, but his own eyes saw nothing. He was one of the blind from the battlefields of Europe. A man on one side and a woman on the other guided his rapid steps.

While most of the passersby stopped to look after him probably very few of them noticed something which did draw one man's comment. This was the fact that the Scotchman was smoking a cigarette.

"You know," said this man to his companion, "it is the common belief that there is no pleasure in smoking in the dark. To enjoy a cigar or a cigarette you must be able to see the smoke.

"But a blind man once told me a different story. He happened to be lighting a cigar when I met him. He seemed to know what I was thinking for he actually answered my thoughts.

"'I suppose,' he said, 'you wonder whether I really enjoy smoking in the dark. You think I can't see the smoke. But I do see it in my mind's eye. I smoked for years before I became blind, so I know just how it looks and in my imagination I see it as vividly as you do. Of course I smell it, and taste it as you do.

"'When you smoke a cigar you hold it between two fingers, with the lighted end pointing outward from the hand. When I hold one I take it with the tips of my thumb and first two fingers, with the lighted end pointing into the palm of my hand. In that way I feel the warmth of the coal and also the warm current of smoke curling up between my fingers. That helps the illusion; helps me to visualize the light and the blue spirals. Shut your eyes some time and try it. You won't find it so bad as you think.'"—New York Sun.

SCOOPING UP WATER.

Fast Train Fills Its Locomotive Tank Without Stopping.

Mr. Cecil J. Allen, chief of the civil engineers' department, supplies in the Great Eastern Railway Magazine some interesting facts on "the picking up of water" by trains at full speed on long journeys. Locomotives, he says, are exceeding bibulous creatures. The engines of one large British railway alone consume some 12,500,000 gallons of water per annum. An express engine under normal conditions of running will consume from thirty to thirty-five gallons of water for every mile covered, taking a general average. On such a journey as that made by the "Cornish Riviera Limited Express" of the Great Western railway, from London to Plymouth, 225 3/4 miles—the longest daily nonstop run in the world—some four tons of coal are consumed against an average of no less than forty tons of water.

The troughs, Mr. Allen explains, have usually a length of just over a quarter of a mile and are laid perfectly level in the centre of the "four foot." Water is taken from them by means of a moveable shovel shaped "scoop" under the tender, which is lowered into the trough as the train passes over it at full speed. The sharp edge of the scoop slices off, as it were, the "top layer" of the water, which is forced up into a large vertical pipe and delivered through a mushroom head or an elbow at the top of the tender into the water tank. As soon as the water gauge on the tender indicates that the tank is full the scoop is raised again. According to the speed at which the train is travelling, it is possible to take from 2,000 to [illegible] gallons in about fifteen seconds.

CHILDHOOD CONSTIPATION

Constipation in children can be promptly cured by Baby's Own Tablets. They are a mild but thorough laxative which thoroughly regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach, and thus drive out all childhood ailments. Concerning them Mrs. [illegible] Tantenbach, Rieber, Man., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets and have found them an excellent medicine for constipation." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Falls of Iguazu in South America are [illegible] feet higher than Niagara and twice as wide.

Redpath SUGAR

From "Ye Olde Sugar Loafe" of grandmother's day, to the sparkling "Extra Granulated" in your own cut-glass bowl, Redpath Sugar has appeared three times daily, for over half a century, on thousands of Canadian tables.

"Let Redpath Sweeten it." 7

2 and 5 lb. Cartons—10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.

Made in one grade only the highest!

Buy Footwear

At Falconer's

BY doing so, you will save money, we are determined to make our shoe department as active in sales as our grocery department, and until Saturday June 30th, we will give unrivalled values in solid leather footwear. Every pair guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Don't miss this golden opportunity
Come in and let us show you through.

2 Specials to Offer This Week

18 prs. women's dongola, bucher cut, bals, nice soft kid, med. heel and toe, well trimmed worth $4.25 Special price $3.70

18 prs women's box calf, bluch cut bals, med heels and toe, well trimmed, a good serviceable shoe worth $4 Special price $3.40

Butter and Eggs Wanted

Falconer Bros.

Delayed Shipments Just Arrived . . .

Now is the time to get goods that have been almost impossible to get. We have just got in delayed shipments, bought last fall at last last year's prices.

Cotton, Silk and Real Cashmere Hosiery
From 15c to 60c. To-day's values 25c to $1.00

Gloves in kid, silk and mercerized lisle, and chamoise lisle. Floor coverings, linoleums, and oilclothes. Get them quick, they are going fast. We cant replace them.

Bring your butter and eggs
And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.

Lawn Supplies

Taylor-Forbes Lawn mower
Rubber hose
Hose nozzles
Couplings & clamps
Hose reels
Garden shears
Cultivators

Thomson's
Hardware Store

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS
To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Kawartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourists tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares, with liberal stop overs.

GET YOUR TICKET IN ADVANCE

J. S. Cameron, Agent, Port Elgin. Both telephones.

CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE
Stratford, Ontario

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your courses now and be qualified for a position by Midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for Over 200 Office Assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN, PRINCIPAL

Miss Katherine Kolb of Toronto is spending her vacation at her home here.

Russia has decided on a big offensive against the Germans.

A Handy Thing

The handiest thing in the world is a wrist watch, and especially so in the summer weather. You'll be interested in looking at them.

Let us show you one of our fine line of clocks

Rowlands
The Jeweller

BURGOYNE AND DISTRICT

During the heavy thunder storm Wednesday ditches were filled to overflowing and fields literally covered with water in a short space of time, some districts suffered worse than others.

Last Sunday those putting their rigs in the church shed had to walk circumspectly with their feet the floor being in a worse condition than any stock yard. Road cattle, of course, was the cause. It seems a shame that the village folk should suffer night and day with all sorts of live stock on the roads.

Mrs. and Miss McAndrew, Miss Menzies and Miss McTaggart were attending the funeral of the late Mr. McIntosh of Glamis, a former acquaintance, on Saturday. Mr. James Ferguson drove them over and back in his auto.

Relatives of Mr. Dick and Mr. W. McIvor are visiting their respective friends in this district.

Mr. Robt. Crawford had the misfortune to lose a valuable mare last week.

Mrs. Campbell is recovering from her late illness.

The road grader is busy in Saugeen and statute labor will commence shortly to make more good roads for auto travel.

Rev. Mr. Campbell of New York preached here Sunday morning and evening. His son, Rev. M. Campbell, is minister in Allenford congregation. Mr. Campbell will preach again next Sunday. The congregation now having heard six candidates, may be asked after the morning service next Sunday to give expression by a show of hands as to their being ready to extend a call to any of the men who have had a hearing.

TURNER'S

Mr George Karcher and brother of Galt, visited at Wm Karcher's on Sunday

Mrs Wm Murkar spent a couple of weeks visiting friends in Port Elgin.

Quite a number from here attended the Dunblane picnic at Dona Campbell's on Thursday Will Scholl took the hay rack and gathered a load down the line All report a good time

Mrs Boddick of Toronto, Mrs Harper of Bolton, and Mrs Robt Cumming of Port Elgin, spent Tuesday calling on friends here

Mrs Jno McCallum and Mrs Wm Forrester of Port Elgin, visited with Mrs Adam Cairns on Tuesday

Mrs Andy Miller, Isabell and Jack, spent the week end at Burgoyne

Miss Margaret Rounton of Toronto, visited her sister Will Thede last week

Mr Albert Dier is under the doctors care at present

The farmers are busy these days making bad roads good and good roads bad

Ebenezer

Beautiful weather, crops doing fine. Elderslie S. S. convention Monday June 11th, at Gillies Hill.

Mr and Mrs. J. W. Grant, Mr. and Mrs C. A. Thomas and Richard Grant, attended the convention at Gillies Hill, also a meeting at Salem June 15th, to arrange for a union picnic in the near future. W. B. Grant and Richard are the delegates.

The Tories are busy preparing for the convention in Wiarton on June the 20th

There is considerable talk as to will be the lucky member. There are quite a number of good men who would be willing to carry the standard if they were chosen, some of those mentioned were Mr. Biehn, of Chesley, Jas Rushton, C. Crawford of Elderslie. Mr. Foster, of Wiarton, C. Start, F. Walker, A. H. Vanonsen, and J. E. Grant, ex Reeve of Tara.

George and William Martin have signed recently for overseas service. This is the fourth to sign in that family.

NORTH BRUCE

Report of G. S. C. meeting held at the home of Rhoda Carr: 15 present, 6 pairs pyjamas finished, 60c collection. Next meeting to be held at the home of Olive Riebel.

Mr and Mrs Geo Ribey, Mrs Nelson and Mrs T A Howe, went to Owen Sound on Friday.

The Methodist Sunday school intend having their picnic on Saturday next at the lake on 10th Bruce, and the U B picnic will be the following Saturday, at Ross Grove.

Mr J T Ager and family motored to Durham on Sunday.

Next Sunday afternoon will be children's day in the U B church. There will be addresses, also a program by the children. An offering will be taken for African mission work. Everybody welcome

Mr and Mrs E Johnston and Mrs W Howe spent Saturday and Sunday at Dundalk

Good Times

In spite of the high cost of living, these are prosperous times. Wage earners have steady employment and good wages. Those who are wise will save a part of their weekly earnings and deposit it in our Savings Department, for no one can tell just what labor conditions will be two or three years hence.

Enquiries are solicited.

The Bank of NovaScotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 110,000,000

PORT ELGIN BRANCH
A. L. Wyant, Manager

Summer Millinery

Straw hats, Crepe hats, Also Sport hats in pique corduroy and ratine.

Also the latest styles and shades

MISS M. BAKER
Arlington Block

UNDERWOOD NEWS

Get your gasoline at The Hardware.

Save wood and coal, use an oil stove. We have some coal oil stoves which will save the women work, and save money too.—Thede & Brill.

Mr. E. Abba has purchased a Ford.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dell, and Miss G. Dell, of Port Elgin, spent week end with Mr. and Mrs. John Bentley.

Mr. Wm. Schmidt is home from Oregon to see his mother who is very ill. Little hope is held for her recovery

A number of I.O.O.F. brethren attended the service with the Glammis brethren on Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs F. Elliott and family, and Miss Richardson, of Harriston were week end visitors at J B Richardson's

A large number of friends and also a number of Oddfellows, attended the memorial service in the Baptist church, Tiverton, Sunday evening, for the late Jack Giles, who died in France, two weeks ago. The service was conducted by the I O O F. lodge of which the deceased was a member.

Mrs Lyman Kaake, who has been ill for the past week, is able to be around again.

The latest shipment of the Underwood Red Cross Workers consisted of 42 flannel shirts, 30 pairs of sox, 6 [illegible] suits, 2 sheets. Donations. Mrs A $1 25, Mrs N Cole $1, Mrs M Dahmer $1. Mrs Hooey $3

Mr S F Smith has purchased a Chevrolet

Mr. and Mrs. R. Crawford of Arran, are on a trip up the lakes to Marquette Michigan

TIVERTON

The Ladies Aid friends of the Tiverton Methodist church presented Mrs. Hawke with a handsome piece of table linen last week. The ladies met at the parsonage for the purpose of making further plans for the bazaar and lawn social.

While J McPhail was waiting at the butter factory to unload his load of cream, his horses started and on turning on to the road the tongue of rig broke, and they ran to Roppel's Mill before being stopped. However no further damage was done

I Patterson had 25 new Fords brought to Tiverton last Tuesday

Rev Mr Robinson is rather happy looking these day We wish him luck with his pair of twin colts

The Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs W Hendry Friday afternoon and report a good meeting The centre piece donated by Miss McKenzie was handed over to its owner Mrs T Semple being the one to draw the lucky ticket It is said to have made $23 for them

The death occurred on Saturday morning of Mary A McNeill after a lingering illness There are three brothers and a sister left to mourn The funeral was held on Monday

The Bible class is increasing, there were 170 in attendance Sunday

Memorial service in the Baptist church Sunday evening honor of Jack Giles son of Mrs. H Giles, Tiverton, who died of wounds while fighting for his country in France The church was crowded Mr Waddell, pastor, Mr Robinson Presbyterian minister and Mr Hawke, Methodist also took part

Townline, Bruce and Saugeen

The North Bruce base ball team has started again this spring and is ready to play any other team in the district

North Bruce is getting to be a great place for autos. A couple of week ago there were three cars and a Ford in the ditch in front of Mrs Scholl's house, and through the assistance of Wm Bottrill all were got out of the ditch Be very careful boys, when a fog is on Julius Koch has bought a Ford car.

Charles Scholl is putting a cement wall under his barn

John Seiffert 12th of Bruce, is putting up a fine house, the carpenter work is being done by G A Brooks.

Frank Cottrill has been around the burg cutting wood, Frank is a hard man on rail fences.

The beef ring has started at W Airth's and the people of this section are sure of getting some good beef to eat.

Mr William Bottrill is building a straw shed

Mr and Mrs Geo. McIntee, Margaret and Ora, spent Sunday in Paisley.

The Times, as good as a letter from home. Send it to your friends.

DENTAL

W. P. POWER, D. D. S., Dentist, office over South End Store. Hours 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

LEGAL

W. BURGESS, LL.B., Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public, &c, &c. Office, Hutton's Block. Private and other funds to loan.

UNDERTAKING

J. W. PATTISON, Funeral director and embalmer. Residence on premises. Bell phone No. 22.

BLACKSMITHING

N. [illegible], Blacksmithing, horseshoeing and general repairs. Tire-setting a specialty

Extraordinary Values In Men's and Boys' New Suits

The very best production of Canada's foremost clothes designers and makers are now shown here. Our clothing is known as the finest and best in town and sold here for less money than at any other store.

Men's fine blue serge suits at
$15, 16.50, 18, 20, 22.50 and $25

Men's tweed and worsted suits
$12, 13, 15, 18, 20 and $25

New Shoes

Men's and boys positively the best, values on earth. Shoes are one of our hobbies and we are still offering some lines at prices away below present manufacturer's prices.

Headquarters for
Hats, Caps, and Neckwear
and everything that man or boy wears.

Come and see the new goods. It will do you good to see them It will do us good to show them to you. COME.

F. R. BARBER
MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

Wallpaper, Wallpaper

WALLPAPER at Pattison's is selling as Cheap as ever. Over 500 lines to choose from. We carry the largest and best stock in Bruce county. Call in and inspect our goods and be convinced. You can save money, by buying wall paper at Pattison's. No trouble to show goods.

All papers trimmed free of charge

Eggs taken in exchange for Wall paper . . .

Electric Vacuum Cleaner For Rent

: : J. W. Pattison : :
Furniture Dealer and Undertaker

baby's garments

will be soft, spotless and snowy white if you use LUX. You can make the foamiest, creamiest lather, in hot water, with a few of these dainty silken little flakes, that cleanses perfectly without rubbing. Hence unshrunken, unthickened little garments that are a delight to feel. Try LUX—your baby will be sure to appreciate the difference.

LUX

WONT SHRINK WOOLLENS

British made, by
Lever Brothers Limited,
Toronto

Sold by all good grocers —take no substitute.

44

Grand Jubilee Celebration in Port Elgin on Monday July 2nd.

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 26 PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1917 $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

West Arran Red Cross

During the past winter the ladies of West Arran society have sent to the Canadian Red Cross society 92 flannel shirts, 47 hospital shirts, 190 pairs sox, 21 pyjama suits, 9 pillow slips, 78 towels, 36 wash cloths, 2 sheets, 2 quilts, 13 comfort pillows, 20 comfort bags, 46 personal property bags, 3 trench caps, 30 hospital handkerchiefs, 450 mouth wipes 32 cakes toilet soap, stick shaving soap, comb, 2 tooth brushes, 3 tubes toothpaste, 18 housewives, roll toilet paper, 6 pieces old cotton and linen. They also sent 25 Christmas boxes to the soldiers overseas. This society raised $575 during the past year, of which $260 was sent to Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. funds.

THE RED CROSS

will serve a 25 cent dinner and supper in the AMERICAN HOTEL JULY 2ND from 11 a.m.
Ladies providing baking, cream, etc. kindly send to American hotel as early as possible Monday

COMING EVENTS

10c. per line
No notice less than 25c

SPECIAL—Meeting of Red Cross on Wednesday 7.30 o'clock in Library.

GARDEN PARTY—Plan for the big garden party by the Burgoyne Patriotic society, on Thursday June 28th. Good program of speeches, songs and music. Admission 25 and 15 cents. This is held to assist the cause of the soldiers at the front. All attend. Kincardine Pipe Band will furnish music.

PATRIOTIC GARDEN PARTY—At John Cook's Tuesday, July 31st. Watch for particulars.

GARDEN PARTY—By the Ladies Aid of Methodist church North Bruce, on the lawn of Mr. Albert Brooks, at the Elbow. Thursday July 5th. Lots of music and a fine supper will be served from 6 to 8. The Southampton orchestra will be present. Admission only 25 and 15c. Everybody come. Meet your friends at this big party.

Oats For Sale

We expect a car of feed oats by first of week. They will be sold off car at 82 cents per bushel. Get your order in early.

J. McVittie, Southampton.

Kincardine is to have races on July 6th.

Mr. Thomas Underwood has purchased a Gray-Dort car.

A new serial will begin in The Times next week. "A Puzzling Case" finishes this week.

Prof Banks, president, and Rev. E. Plumley, agent, of Huntington College, will hold evening meetings at 8 o'clock, in U. B. church North Bruce July 3, 4th of Bruce July 4th, and Port Elgin July 5th.

Messrs. Fisher and J. Ludwig, of Preston, visited Mr. N. Snyder last week. They are interested in some property here.

NOTICE

The post office will be closed from 2 p. m. to 6 p. m. on Thursday, the business half holiday during the months of June, July, August, and September.

White tennis trousers, $1.75 a pair at North End.

Congoleum border, 36 inches wide, 60c per yard at North End.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

CABBAGE PLANTS FOR SALE—In large or small quantities, 20c per 100. Thos. Ashwill, Fruit Farm, North of town.

LOST—A pail of syrup, which was misplaced last week. Information kindly received by R. Lamont.

FOR SALE—Two fields of Alfalfa hay. Six and thirteen acres. Apply Alex J. Lamont, Aberdour or phone rural. 26 2 tp.

FOR IMMEDIATE SALE—Good frame house with all the modern conveniences, good fruit bearing trees. A piano also for sale. Apply at The Times office.

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE—Indian, single cylinder motorcycle in perfect running condition. Will sell for $100. Arthur Abbs, Tiverton R. R. 3. 25-2 tp.

HELP WANTED—A few good boys and girls can secure employment during the summer vacation by applying at the Brush works 25-2tc

WOOL WANTED—We are ready to pay the highest price for wool. We will canvass the country. Have it ready for us. B. Zelkind. Port Elgin.

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE
Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address
LOUIS BLOCH,
22-4tc Owen Sound, Ont.

Gunner Cecil McMurray

SON OF MR. AND MRS. GEORGE MCMURRAY, PORT ELGIN. CECIL IS NOW IN FRANCE.

UNDERWOOD NEWS

Get your gasoline at The Hardware.

Save wood and coal, use an oil stove. We have some coal oil stoves which will save the women work, and save money too. Thede & Brill.

Mrs. R Cole and children Toronto, are at Mr. W. A. Cole's.

We are glad to learn that Mrs J. G. MacKay, who is taking treatment at Guelph hospital is improving

Messrs. Simon and George Roppel, left last week for a short holiday in the west.

Sacrament service, is to be held in Presbyterian church on Sabbath morning Preparatory services on Friday, conducted by Rev. Robinson of Tiverton.

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist church are to be congratulated on the splendid success of their bazaar and garden party last Thursday evening. The bazaar was opened at 4 p. m. by the resident ministers. The hall was nicely decorated for the occasion, and the booths, stalls, and fish pond were well patronized. Tea was served in the agricultural hall, after which Rev. Hawke, acted as chairman for the evening. A splendid programme was rendered both vocal and instrumental. The play, "The Sewing Circle meets at Mrs. Martins" put on by the young ladies, was well acted, and kept the audience in good humor for over an hour. Proceeds were $110.00.

Miss Lamont of Saugeen spent the week end with her sister Mrs. G. Hood.

The service of baptism was held in Presbyterian church here on Sunday morning last, when four parents offered their children for baptism.

Jas. Johnson 6th. Con., has had his barn re-shingled with steel roofing.

John Young 4th Con., has been busy during the week moving his house, to a more convenient spot. Tom Scott of Tiverton has the job on hand.

Contract to Let

The undersigned will be on the mountain, Town line Bruce and Saugeen, on Tuesday July the 3rd at 3 o'clock p. m. to let a contract of repairing ditches and gravelling hill.

Jas. Johnston
G. Christie

BURGOYNE AND DISTRICT

A large number of men with all sorts of tools turned out to the bee at the church, Thursday afternoon. A number completed shingling the old shed, others put new steps at the manse kitchen and cellar doors, doing a large amount of cement work on the latter, others renovated all the surrounding fences putting in new posts where required. A large number of ladies were out, too, but they were at some patriotic business by themselves inside, and planing the great event of the season, namely the garden party Thursday evening.

Mr. McCauley, the Liberal nominee, was visiting at ex Warden McConnel's last week.

Mr. A. C Esplen has had his barn raised and moved a short distance ready for basement stabling underneath.

Mrs. Henderson has had her house and other premises re-shingled. Messrs. Kaufman did the work.

Among other improvements, Mr. R. Conningham has begun a drainage system on his farm and had a government agent from Walkerton last week surveying and taking levels. This work of laying out is done free of charge any information about proper draining is freely given by the agent, who is usually a competent man. On many farms stone and board filled drains that were put down years ago to help certain parts in fields that hold the surface water have become choked and now useless, with the result that in a wet year much of the crop is spoiled. There is no doubt thorough draining would be a good investment and the government gives strong encouragement in the way of funds, but the trouble is to find time and help to do such work.

Rev. Mr. Campbell, after spending the week with his son in Allenford, preached here again on Sunday. Rev. J. M. Whitley, from Hagersville, will preach next Sunday.

All Ready For Big Celebration

Everything is in readiness for the big celebration on Monday. The track was never in better shape, and the fact that a number of men have intimated their intention of bringing their horses here, has put a new stimulus in the committeemen.

Up to the hour of going to press fifteen horses have been promised.

The big fireworks display has been shipped here, and everything is ready. The staff for ticket selling and taking will have it somewhat easier this year owing to the fact that there is no war tax to handle.

The automobile will be the means for bringing people from all over. The prizes offered for the best decorated auto are liberal and the secretary has been informed that some visiting autos will be here early to decorate and try to secure a prize. This should make the nearby auto owners take notice.

The committee are endeavoring to have the races start promptly at 1.30, and will have a starter on hand who will keep the horsemen right on the job.

Committee meets on Friday at 7.30 to make final arrangements.

Hogs sold at $14.25 per cwt. this week butter 35c lb., eggs 28c.

Mrs. Jos. A. Thomson is visiting at Gananoque.

Dr. and Mrs. Lane motored to Priceville for a few days last week.

Mr. Keely, of Listowel, was in town for a few days.

Put out some flags for Dominion Day. Decorate.

Mr. Alex Vandrick has improved his residence with nice cement walks.

Mrs. T. A. Stout of Chippewa Hill, was a visitor in town Saturday.

Mrs. Walker, of Paisley, spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. John Coulter, leaving for the west last week.

Mr. N. McGillivray is having repairs made to his house.

Mrs. Porter, who has been spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. Pattison, left last week for Wiarton.

Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Miller and Mrs. (Dr.) Hay of Wiarton were in town last week trying to interest the Liberal ladies of Port Elgin to form a Ladies Liberal Club.

While driving his team, attached to a roller the other day, Mr. Dave McKinnan, of Bruce Tp. suffered a severe bruise to his left foot. The horses took fright and although they did not get away, made things interesting for awhile.

The marriage took place quietly at the Baptist parsonage on Wednesday, June 20, of Miss Kathleen Kolb to Mr. Harry Kauffman. Both are well known and popular young people. After a honeymoon in Toronto and Niagara the young couple will take up residence in Kincardine, where the groom holds a responsible position with the Hunter Bridge Co. They were attended by Miss Viola Kolb and Mr. Jake Kaufman.

NOTICE

All persons who contributed to the building of the concrete road at foot of 6th con. are asked to leave the cash at Times office by Saturday. The road will be completed this week.

H. Nelson

NOTICE

All accounts against Dominion Day committee must be in the Secretary's hands immediately after celebration.

E. Roy Sayles.
Secy-Treasurer.

The American hotel stables will be open to the public for the first of July.

You'll Have visitors Dominion Day

Let Eaton help you out with the rush on Dominion Day. We have choice roasts of beef, pork, veal, lamb. Plenty of cold meats, jellied hocks, etc., also lettuce, radishes, strawberries, etc. Make your work light in entertaining your visitors by telephoning Eaton for all the nice things in meats.

Teacher Wanted

Teacher wanted for S. S. No. 2, Arran and Saugeen, duties to commence after holidays. Apply stating salary and experience. Must be Protestant. Address Geo. Harper, Secy, Port Elgin R. R. 2.

Teacher Wanted

Teacher wanted S. S. No. 4 Saugeen. Salary $600. State Experience. School within three miles of Port Elgin. Apply D. A. Campbell Sec'y, Port Elgin. Box 55. 25-2 tc.

Tenders for Painting

Tenders will be received by the undersigned, up to July 5th., for painting the walls and ceiling, and oiling the woodwork in the school house, S. S. No. 14, Bruce.

Geo. Luttrell, Port Elgin, R. R. 3. 25-2 tc.

DROP IN AT
FALCONER BROTHERS
And see the new range in
Women's Misses and Children's white canvas shoes and slippers
VERY REASONABLY PRICED

JOHN McAULEY

Liberal candidate in North Riding of Bruce

TOWN TOPICS

You'll meet your friends at Port Elgin on Dominion Day.

Mr. Armstrong, of Belleville, spent the week-end at R. Telfer's, Saugeen.

Miss Nellie Bailey was home from Harriston over Sunday.

Miss F. Thomson, of Owen Sound, is visiting relatives in town.

Miss F. Christian has returned to Toronto after a visit home.

Wm. Drummond and family have returned to Toronto after a visit at James Struthers'.

Mr. Kesselring has returned to Waterloo after visiting his daughter Mrs. H. Schwass.

The pupils of Miss Ewald's school had charge of the Red Cross tea rooms on Saturday. Although the day was very wet a good business was done.

Mr. R. J. Ranney spent last week in Hamilton as delegate from the local lodge to the C. O. F. grand lodge. Mrs. Ranney accompanied him.

Gunner Mart Welsh, of the 70th Battery, who has been in the hospital for some time with throat trouble, is home on leave.

Rev. A. H. Macgillivray of Hamilton, was here on Saturday. His two sons, Kenneth, and Cameron are to spend the holidays with their grandmother, Mrs. Ann Macgillivray.

After Jan. 1, 1918, headlights must be so arranged that direct rays do not rise more than 42 inches from the ground measured 75 ft. or more ahead of the car when on level surface. Spotlights and searchlights are forbidden.—Official Automobile Road Guide of Canada.

Through the courtesy of Col. Hugh Clark M. P. two dozen copies of Hansard containing the speeches of Monsieur Viviani, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir George Foster, have been received by The Times. Any of our readers are welcome to a copy of these speeches. These are memorable addresses made on the visit of General Joffre and Viviani to this country.

Mrs. Orilla Sayles, relict of the late Edwin Sayles, passed away at her home in Brantford on Wednesday, June 20th, in her 72nd year. Deceased had not been well for some time, and during the past week had suffered from cerebral hemorrhage which caused death. She had been a resident of Brantford for many years, having removed from Courtland, in Norfolk County. There are left two sons Sol. and E. R. the latter being the editor of The Port Elgin Times, also three daughters, Mrs. Ernest Orr, Chilliwack B. C.; Mrs. Edward Orr, and Miss Maud at Brantford. Interment took place in the family plot at Courtland cemetery, the Rev. H. D. Moore conducting the services.

The Red Cross women are being prepared for the biggest first of July celebration ever in Port Elgin. The ladies are to have all the booth privileges of the grounds on Monday. To-morrow they hope to have the assistance of a number of the men who have the afternoon off for the erection of a monster booth. The ladies of the town and country are rallying to the support of the committee, and are assisting in many ways in baking, and providing things. The American hotel has been handed over to the women by the former proprietor, Mr. McPherson, and the ladies will serve lunch and tea. All who come to town on that day will be well provided for. All can help a worthy cause by coming to Port Elgin Dominion Day.

FRUIT!
Falconer Bros. Weekly Fruit Special
The last Sunkist California oranges of the season clear this month.
5 cases again at 30c a doz.
Choice Bananas
Fancy Lemons
West India Grape Fruit
Our own Strawberries shortly
Falconer Bros.

OBITUARY

Mr. Archibald McDonald, one of the oldest pioneers in this section, passed away on June 18th, at the ripe old age of 78 years, 18 days. It is only a few years since he moved to Port Elgin from his farm in Bruce township. He was a fine type of old Scotland's gmen, and was a man greatly liked by all. He was born in Scotland, at the Isle of Mull. At the age of 11 he came to Canada with his people, settling first in Vaughan Tp., later moving to Bruce township, where he assisted in the strenuous work of clearing the forest and preparing the land for cropping. When 23 years old he was married to Mary McGillivray, and they took up land and made themselves a home, rearing a family of ten children. The deceased was a staunch Liberal in politics, and an active member of the Presbyterian church

He is survived by his widow and the following family: Neil D. of Bruce tp; Archie of Moosejaw; Mrs. McLeod and Mrs. Law of Moosejaw; Mrs. Elliott, Brier Creek, Sask; Mrs. W G. Graham, Gravelbourg, Sask; Mrs Dayman, Saskatoon; Mrs. Robertson and Mrs. Howie of Cranbrook, B. C.; all of whom will have the sympathy of many friends. He is also survived by two sisters and a brother, Mrs. Peter Bowie of Cottonwood; Mrs. John McGillivray, of Cottonwood; D McDonald, Southampton. He has 25 grandchildren and three great grandchildren. Funeral services were held on Saturday conducted by Rev. Mr. Mann, interment taking place in Port Elgin cemetery.

Spend your holiday in Port Elgin.

Mrs. Hicks is visiting in Tiverton.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Lippert, of Walkerton, were week-end visitors here.

Mrs. Raymond, of California, is visiting Mrs. Angus Currie.

Mrs. Jamieson, of Hespeler, is the guest of Mrs Geo. Jamieson.

Mr. J. H. Cook of Toronto, is visiting his sister, Mrs. J. A. Kepkey.

Mr. W. A. Mitchell has a wonderful field of sweet clover. The yield will be tremendous.

Rev. M. D. Hallman has been returned to Port Elgin circuit for the coming year.

At the school board meeting Monday night Principal Aylesworth was given an increase in salary to $1,000.

Miss Sarah and Master Abe Robinson, of Hamilton, are holidaying with their aunt, Mrs. Gluly.

Rev. M. D. and Mrs. Hallman are attending the Hallman re-union held in Waterloo Park, this week.

A number of Conservatives from here attended the Conservative meeting in Wiarton on Wednesday.

Mrs. M. G. Barber, Mr. and Mrs. Snyder and Arthur of Toronto will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Barber over the week end.

Dr. Foster of Wiarton was chosen as the Candidate for North Bruce at the Convention held on Wednesday of last week.

The marriage is taking place to-day of Miss Grace McKinnon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McKinnon, 6th. of Bruce, to Mr. Andrew Sturgeon, of Huron township.

Mr. Fred Schildroth, of 2nd of Saugeen, has purchased the 100 acres adjoining his farm, from Mr. Albert Osborne. Mr. Schildroth's barns were destroyed by fire a few weeks ago.

Pte. Geo. Eldridge was killed in action May 5th. He was a former Port Elgin man, having lived here for about eight years. He worked five years for Smith Bros. He enlisted early in the war and leaves a wife and large family at Port Hope.

The T. Eaton Company are to open up general stores in several Ontario towns. It is understood that Port Elgin has had a visit from an Eaton representative, but it is known that one of the stores will be located here.

The high school trustees are advertising for a Principal, Mr. Cameron having decided to return to his home in Kingston. Miss McDonald and Miss Duncan will return in the fall, the board being fortunate in securing their services for another year.

The directors of the fair board are getting busy for the fall fair. Last Saturday there was a meeting for the selection of judges and the appointing of committees. President Henderson occupied the occupied the chair. The attendance was small owing to the wet weather.

Mrs. Hugh Gillespie of Victoria, B. C. in renewing for The Times says: "Like all the rest of the industrious people, we are "back to the farm". We have rented our home in Victoria B. C. and are enjoying life on the farm." Mrs. Gillespie's address is now Rocky Mountain House, Alberta.

At the Press Association held in Toronto last week Mr. J. J. Hunter, of the Kincardine Reporter, was appointed chairman of the Weekly Section, and Mr. E. Roy Sayles, of The Port Elgin Times, a Director and member of the Advisory Board. We take off our hat, and at the same time remark that they will both do honor to the positions conferred.—Kincardine Review.

Walkerton, the chief town in the county, is advancing, and the best evidence of progress is the fact that The Telescope has discarded the ready print, and finds local news sufficient to print its paper all at home. The Telescope editor is getting good support from the people whom he serves. There is no better asset to any town than a good local newspaper and an editor with high ideals of journalism.

Makes Supreme Sacrifice

Mrs. R. G. Godfrey of McCarron, Mich. has received a message from Ottawa stating that her son, Clifford Roy Sparling had died from the effects of his wounds received while fighting somewhere in France. He went out west to Arcola in the spring of 1916 and joined the 152nd Canadian Infantry Co. of that place. Later he was sent overseas to London, then to France at which place he met his death. He was 24 years old. He leaves to mourn his death his mother, Mrs. R. G. Godfrey of McCarron, Mich., and one sister Mrs. P. M. Cleary, of Detroit. His death at McCarron is mourned by a large circle of friends. He was a sociable and good fellow, and was well liked by all who knew him. He was a grandson of Wm. Atkinson of Port Elgin.

A trial in which a number of Indians are concerned was held here Saturday. It arose from fowl trespassing on a neighbor's garden, which finally involved several families. It was postponed to this Saturday.

Don't forget Auctioneer Cavin's Exchange sale Saturday.

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for [illegible] lines or over in a year [illegible] a line; regular weekly users of liners, [illegible] per line casual users of liners, [illegible] per line. Black type, count two lines for one.

McMurray's for pure ice cream.

Oats for sale. North End Store.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

Fleet Foot shoes at F. R. Barber's.

The new straw hats are being shown at F. R. Barber's.

Fresh oranges, and lemons always on hand. North End Store.

If you want a pint of good cream try McMurray's.

Another shipment of feed wheat. North End Store.

McMurray keeps good milk for sale.

Boys wool and cotton Jersies at South End.

Dyola Dyers in Black, Navy and all scarce colors, now in stock. South End.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

Fleet foot running shoes, all sizes, white, tan, navy. North End store.

Men's Balbriggan and Merino underwear at the South End.

Reliable work shirts and heavy shoes priced away below present market prices now being offered at F. R. Barber's.

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koebke's

Try Koebke for your next grocery or fruit order

William's shoes, solid leather goods at lower prices, at South End.

Koebke sells Neilson's soldier chocolate Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front

Just arrived, a splendid assortment of Misses and children's wash dresses. Prices 50c to $1.75 each. North End Store.

Red Cross supplies. Special prices in grey Scotch fingering yarn. South End.

Worth while savings—Every shrewd individual will consider these savings worth while when he sees the extra values we are offering in men's and boy's suits, raincoats, summer underwear, shirts and fine and heavy shoes. F. R. Barber.

Choice Beef

We have in our stables seven of the finest stall fed cattle. This will be the kind of sweet, juicy meat you will get if you order from Eaton. We also have cold meats, and other dainties in the meat line.

The Times, as good as a letter from home. Send it to your friends.

PHONOGRAPHS!
How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.
Louis Bloch's Music Store
Owen Sound

ISSUE NO. 26, 1917

NO ALUM

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

MADE IN CANADA

ALL INGREDIENTS ARE PLAINLY PRINTED ON THE LABEL
MAKES THE WHITEST, LIGHTEST
MAGIC BAKING POWDER
CONTAINS NO ALUM

The Secret of Wireless

The question is often asked, How is it possible to operate several wireless stations in the same vicinity without mutual interference? To answer the question it is necessary first to explain the theory of their operation in general.

A frequently used yet perfectly good illustration is that of likening it to the action of throwing a pebble into a still pond, which causes ripples to form in all directions in a circular fashion from the spot at which the pebble disappeared. In the centre the ripples are well pronounced, but as they broaden out they gradually diminish in intensity until they disappear altogether finally. A larger stone will cause stronger and broader ripples to form. So it is with wireless or radio communication, in which the exciting force is the "spark" or discharge of high potential electricity, oscillating at a very high rate of speed. The power of the transmitter and the efficiency in "tuning" determine the distance of communication. We come now to the theory that science gives as an explanation of its operation.

Scientists tell us that wireless, or more properly, electro magnetic waves, are but another form of motion, as are light, heat and sound. These all move in the ether in the air, and wireless waves are likewise propagated in the ether.

To those at all familiar with the scientific theories of light, heat and sound, it is scarcely necessary to add that all these forms of motion have individual and measurable wave lengths.

It is in the measurement of radio waves and their adjustment that it becomes possible for numerous stations to operate simultaneously in comparatively close range to one another. Thus stations working on a wave length of 600 meters and properly adjusted would cause no disturbance with another station operating on a wave of 660 meters. In fact, not so very long ago Marconi, the perfecter of wireless communication, announced that he would soon have apparatus that would enable stations with but a variation of five metres to operate without each disturbing the other. (A metre is about 39 inches.)

At the present time, however, commercial ship and shore stations usually operate on wave lengths of 600 metres, 450 metres and 300 metres, with efficient means of rapidly changing from one to the other. Naval stations, ship and shore, commonly operate on wave lengths varying from 600 metres to 1,600 metres. The powerful station at Radio, Va., formerly Arlington, usually operates on a wave of 2,000 metres. Generally a change of 6 per cent. of a station's wave length is sufficient to overcome disturbance caused by the operation of nearby stations. To further eliminate interference the various Governments of the world have agreed upon certain wave lengths to be used by commercial stations and others by naval and Government stations. Some of these have been given above. Another reason for such wide divergence of wave lengths is that for the purpose of overcoming the effects of "forced oscillations." By this is meant the uncontrollable waves that are given off by every station, but which fortunately do not carry very far. Were they to travel any great distance there would be a great deal more of "jamming," as was the case when wireless was in its embryonic state. The advantages can be the more readily appreciated when one realizes that frequently there are a score or more of ships on the water within a radius of ten miles or so, as often happens on a big sailing day at New York, such as Saturday.

However it is not to be supposed that all these ships are able to carry on communication at one and the same time. It is an achievement if five of them are do so. Herein, also, can be seen the advantages of efficient apparatus properly adjusted, together with skill in operation. In efficient apparatus there is a minimum of "forced oscillations" given off, and the wave lengths are well and sharply defined, thereby enabling stations to "tune" closely and eliminate a great deal of disturbance from this source.

Knowing now that the number of stations that can operate at the same time in crowded areas is limited it is well to show the part that the operator plays in such instances. It is known that the wireless operator must constantly wear his "receivers," or specially constructed telephones, to be able to rapidly and efficiently operate his station. He must frequently change from one "tune" or wave length to another, to be on the lookout for a call or await an opportunity to do some calling himself. When the operator desires to communicate with another station and finds that some other station is already operating on his wave length he arranges his apparatus to operate on a different wave length. Often it so happens that all his available wave lengths are being used. In that event he finds it sometimes necessary to operate on, and directly through a wave length being used by other stations at that time. The factor that comes to his aid in such cases is the fact that all stations have "sparks" of varying tones or notes. Therefore, even though there be several "sparks" that are being heard on one particular wave length, and experienced operator can pick out the "spark" with which he is working, much the same as two persons conversing in a room in which there are quite a number of people all of whom are talking, listen to the conversation of some one person and who are practically oblivious of the other conversation about them.

Not only must he often work through other stations, he must constantly be on the alert, for he must be aware of the general drift of the "conversation" of other stations operating near him so as to be able to know approximately when such and such a station will discontinue sending. This is essential, for in crowded areas stations operate in turns according to the order in which they have signalled their intention of sending; the shore station usually taking note and later giving instructions. Should the operator have been "off tune" or inattentive, he is apt to cause interference by breaking in during periods of seeming inactivity, as, for instance, when a sending station has ceased transmitting and is awaiting the "O. K." of the receiving station or its perhaps awaiting correspondence that the latter may have for him.

LITTLE WORRIES IN THE HOME

These Bring the Wrinkles and Pallid Faces That Make Women Look Prematurely Old.

Almost every woman at the head of a home meets daily many little worries in her household affairs. The care of her little ones, the work about the house all contribute to these worries. Most of them may be too small to notice an hour afterwards, but they constitute a constant strain that affects the blood and the nerves and make women look prematurely old. The effect of these little worries may be noticed in sick or nervous headaches, fickle appetite, tiredness after slight exertion, and the coming of wrinkles which every woman dreads. To those thus afflicted, Dr Williams' Pink Pills offer a speedy cure, a restoration of color to the cheeks, brightness to the eye, a hearty appetite and a sense of freedom from weariness. Among the many thousands of Canadian women who have found new health and strength through these pills is Mrs. G. Strasser, Acton, West, Ont., who says: "I am the mother of three children, and after each birth I became terribly run down. I had weak, thin blood, always felt tired, and unable to do my household work. After the birth of my third child I seemed to be worse, and was very badly run down. I found the greatest benefit from the Pills and soon gained my old time strength. Indeed after taking them I felt as well as in my girlhood, and could take pleasure in my work. I also used Baby's Own Tablets for my little ones and have found them a splendid medicine for childhood ailments."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or you can procure them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

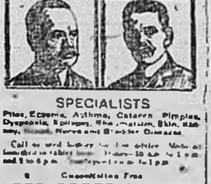
CRUDE WIRELESS.

Long Used by an Indian Tribe of the Amazon Valley.

In these days of wireless telegraphy it may be interesting to learn that as long ago as July, 1894, the Geographical Journal recorded the discovery of a wireless telegraphic apparatus in use among the Catuquinaru, an Indian tribe of the Amazon valley, in South America.

The apparatus, called cambaryssu, consists of a hole in the ground about half filled with coarse sand; above this, layers of fine sand, fragments of wood and bone powdered mica fill it almost to the surface of the ground. These materials are surrounded by a case of hard palm wood, which extends above the surface. The upper part of the apparatus consists of layers of hide, wood and hard rubber. Between them is a hollow space. With a club, much like the stick used to play a bass drum, the native strikes the layer of rubber that forms the top of the instrument.

One of these instruments is concealed in each hamlet of the tribe. The villages are not more than a mile apart and are placed in a direct north and south line. Although a person standing outside the building in which the apparatus is kept cannot hear a blow of the stick on the rubber top, it is quite distinct in a similar building a mile distant. When one of these instruments is struck the neighboring ones to the north and south echo the blow. The Indian stationed at each one of the posts answers the signal, and by means of code messages a long conversation can be carried on.



DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

Make your Strawberry Preserves with Lantic Sugar

the pure cane sugar with "FINE" granulation that dissolves instantly, giving a clear bright syrup.

In 10, 20 and 100-lb. sacks 2 and 5-lb. cartons

A book of preserving labels FREE if you send us a red ball trade-mark cut from a Lantic Sugar bag or carton.

Atlantic Sugar Refineries Limited

Power Bldg., MONTREAL

136

France Gives Her Answer

The French Government has not shrunk from making a plain answer to the Russian demand for peace on the basis of no annexations and no indemnities. France refuses to accept that principle in so far as it may be construed to prevent the return to her of the lost provinces of Alsace and Lorraine. In that she will have the support of all the rest of the Entente Allies, whatever may be the disposition of the Government now in power in Petrograd.

The no annexations, no indemnities demand has just been renewed by the Russian Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates. It must therefore be frankly faced by all the powers at war with Germany. The Government at Petrograd has fallen into the hands of various groups of radical Socialists, who aim at making over Europe through the use of the machinery of international socialism. That machinery broke down completely when Germany started the present war. The German Socialists forgot their fraternal obligations to the Socialists of France and Russia and backed the Kaiser in his policy of nationalistic aggression. They fought without a whimper to crush France and Russia to enslave Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro and Roumania. They have worked to create a greater Hohenzollern empire, stretching from the Baltic to the Gulf of Persia, consolidated through military conquest.

The German and Austrian Socialists are still the ready tools of German ambition. They are still stool pigeons for the Kaiser. They are going to the International Socialist conference at Stockholm with secret instructions from Bethmann-Hollweg. Their plan will be to cajole the Russian delegates with assurances that the Socialist proletariats of Europe can be welded into a combination strong enough to impose its will upon the Governments at war and to secure peace on terms which will make international socialism thereafter the dominant force in European politics.

The Russian delegates, intent on domestic reorganization and more or less indifferent to outside perils, will probably listen gladly to German promises. Having secured what they will construe as co-operation from the German Socialists, they will probably be tempted to bring pressure for an acceptance of the German promises by Socialists representing Great Britain, France and Italy. Thus Germany will have succeeded in creating a rift between Russia and the Western Allies for it is inconceivable that French, British or Italian socialists would accept at face value any pledges given by Bethmann-Hollweg's ability agent Herr Scheidemann, or that the French British and Italian Governments would be influenced by such pledges, even if accepted by Socialist delegates going to Stockholm with their consent.

What assurance can the German and Austrian socialists give that they are really able to influence the decisions of the German and Austrian Governments? They have not wrung any concessions for socialism from the two Kaisers. They have secured no internal political reforms they have dethroned no Emperor, as the Russian Socialists have done; only a few of them have dared to speak openly of the possibility of an anti-dynastic revolution.

If Russia is willing to be duped at an International Socialist conference why should France, Great Britain, Italy and the United States be willing to be duped? These countries know the meaning of German words. They have seen German brutality repudiate the most solemn treaty obligations. They remember Bethmann-Hollweg's justification of the invasion of neutralized Belgium. They are aware that nothing said or done at an International Socialist conference will bind the German and Austrian Governments, and that any programme of no annexations, no indemnities, approved there would be repudiated by the two Kaisers if they saw any advantage to themselves in repudiating it.

Germany is an international outcast. Her Government has put itself beyond the pale of law. The menace to civilization which Germany of to-day represents can be abolished only by defeating the German autocracy and putting Germany under bonds to keep the peace. The nation which forced this war on the world and which has broken every law of humanity in fighting it must make reparation before she can be accepted again into the family of nations.

No annexations and no indemnities is a programme which would protect her in her crimes—which would leave her free to run amuck again after she had recovered her strength. The world must be made secure for peace and international order, and there can be no security until Germany is stripped of all the gains which she has made in the war and forced to pay for the barbarities which she has committed on land and sea—her submarine murders and her atrocities in Belgium Northern France and the other territory overrun by her armies.

Germany's power for evil in the future must be circumscribed. Otherwise the war will have been fought in vain from the point of view of civilization. Other territorial readjustments than the recession of Alsace-Lorraine will be necessary to establish a permanent political system in Europe. The Allies, excluding Russia in her present mood, are at one on this point. It should not be yielded in the vain hope of creating a socialistic solidarity powerful enough to restore and maintain peace. Until socialism in Germany unseats the present Government, now using it as a plaything, there cannot be the slightest hope of permanent peace through such a concord. To defeat and then shackle Germany is the only policy on which the Allies can safely rely to bring about a world settlement which will be just and lasting.—New York Tribune.

St. Joseph, Levis, July 14, 1903.
Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—I was badly kicked by my horse last May, and after using several preparations on my leg nothing would do. My leg was black as jet. I was laid up in bed for a fortnight and could not walk. After using three bottles of your MINARD'S LINIMENT I was perfectly cured, so that I could start on the road.

JOS. DUBES,
Commercial Traveller.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

Waterton's Climb.

The steeplejack's ability to keep his head and feet while working on a "top," which is a ledge three feet wide between abysses 500 feet deep, is a gift. Like the poet, the steeplejack is born, not made. Charles Waterton, the naturalist, had the gift, and would have adorned the profession—the only one into which men do not drift.

When on a visit to Rome, Waterton determined to rival the feats of the Italian climbers who yearly scaled the dome of St. Peter's and the pinnacles of the castle of St. Angelo, to illuminate their summits on the feast of St Peter. Eighty men used to climb the dome of St. Peter's and the pinnacles, the boldest completed the spectacle by crowning the cross with a waving torch of fire. Each night's show was said, on the average, to cost a man's life. Waterton scaled the dome by daylight and left his glove upon the vane.—Los Angeles Times.

2 IN 1 SHOE POLISHES

A "2 in 1 Shoe Polish" is made for every use. For Black Shoes, "2 in 1 Black" (paste) and "2 in 1 Black Combination" (paste and liquid); for White Shoes, "2 in 1 White Cake" (cake) and "2 in 1 White Liquid" (liquid); for Tan Shoes, "2 in 1 Tan" (paste) and "2 in 1 Tan Combination" (paste and liquid).

10c Black—White—Tan 10c

F. F. DALLEY CO. OF CANADA LTD., Hamilton, Can.

QUICK—HANDY—LASTING

Sepulchre of Broken Hearts.

In the old Franciscan church of the Holy Cross rises one of the two monuments disdainful Florence condescended give her greatest poet, whose greatest honor lies in his gift to the world at one splendid sweep of a pure and recreated Italian language—until his time halting and feeble—in that immortal masterpiece of literature, the Divina Commedia.

This church might be well known as the Broken Hearts, instead of Saint Croce, for near Dante's cenotaph—his exiled ashes still rest in Ravenna—lies the body of that other terrific genius, Michelangelo, who, broken in spirit, died gladly when the city so dear to his heart fell once more upon dark and tyrannous days. And Galileo is here too, and Alfieri, and Macchiavelli; and many another, a brilliant train.

Michelangelo's last work is in the nearby Church of San Lorenzo, in the mortuary chapel of the Medici—the great house which deigned to favor him with its patronage or its enmity throughout his life.—National Geographic Magazine.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

Passing Tips On Fashions.

Sports hats are seen with crowns embroidered in heavy floss of rich Oriental colors. A hat of straw with removable brims converts milady's small travelling chapeau into a large afternoon affair with a lace of silk brim.

Sports hats are seen with bands painted with flowers or pastoral scenes.

Beautiful mushroom shaped hats are made of Georgette crepe in the new blue which Paris calls "bleu de la Marne."

Big, wire sailors are made of Paisley lawn, organdy, silk and other fabrics, to match the costume.

Veils naturally come in mind. Square and octagon weaves are good this spring.

A taupe veil or plain-weave, with a border of falls of Troy, is outlined with black velvet ribbon.

Veils of fine mesh have elaborate edges of braid in design.

COMBS.

"Excelsior!" is the motto for hair ornaments to-day, and the high shell comb of our grandmothers time is just the thing for her granddaughter.

One comb was inset with brilliants; another had a row of pearls across the square top, while a third had a pleating of tulle attached to make it yet higher.

IN SHOES ONE SEES.

Low shoes with toes of kid and sides of cloth.

Shoes with vamps of pink kid and upper of white embroidered in roses.

Gray or tan pumps with tiny tips on the toes and ornamented with steel buckles.

Siren pumps in pearl gray and biscuit color, two toned.

Laced English walking shoes with low heels, tan, with fawn-colored uppers.

Mules for the boudoir in Maya colors.

AND IN STOCKINGS.

Silk stockings inset with net embroidered in beads.

Hand-painted, of French gray, with pink and blue roses.

Sports stockings of white silk with narrow vertical lines of green embroidery.

Yellow silk with insets of yellow sequins.

Stockings rivalling the rainbow in color, some plain and others are striped.

And breathe low, there are silk hosettes for women, just a little longer than men's socks, in blue with stripes of white, and black with white stripes.

RELIEF AT LAST

I want to help you if you are suffering from bleeding, itching, blind or protruding Piles. I can tell you how, in your own home and without anyone's assistance, you can apply the best of all treatments.

PILES TREATED AT HOME

I promise to send you a FREE trial of the new absorption treatment, and references from your own locality if you will but write and ask. I assure you of immediate relief. Send no money, but tell others of this offer. Address

MRS. M. SUMMERS, Box 8,
Windsor, Ont.

ADMIRAL SIMS

Sketch of U. S. Navy Head in European Waters.

Rear Admiral William [illegible] Sims, now representing the United States Navy in co-operative action with the British and French naval authorities, who has as temporary headquarters in London, [illegible] his symbolic significance at the present moment, by reason of being a native of Canada. He was born in Port Hope. In fact that significance is enhanced by the fact Pennsylvania has the credit of having given him his early education and of having sent him to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, where he was graduated in 1880. His record, up to the beginning of this century, was creditable to him, but not especially significant or different from those of other competent men trained in the mixed service on land and sea which the Navy provides for its officers. Thus it had been somewhat different in one respect, namely, the opportunity which had been given him for study of international problems, naval and diplomatic, owing to his assignment as United States naval attache, first at Paris and later at St. Petersburg, now Petrograd.

With the duty of acting as fleet intelligence officer and inspector of target practice for the Asiatic squadron, Commander Sims had to concentrate on phases of gunnery. It was his fortune to carry on much of this work in waters where he had intimate association with Admiral Percy Scott, at that time gunnery expert of the British Navy. This special ration on ordnance, gunnery practice, and the mechanism of watching, recording, and shaping the shooting skill of a fleet or a navy's marksmen has been of great value to Admiral Sims, and to the United States, during the succeeding years.

For seven years following he served as inspector of the target practice of the navy, with the Bureau of Navigation as his department. When the Atlantic fleet torpedo flotilla was formed, in 1913, he was put in charge. Now the experience gained, through all these years of special study of the problem, is being put at the service of the anti-German naval forces, irrespective of national names. The man who transformed the target record of the United States navy, who has had more experience with craft built to combat the submarine than any other American, and who has shown inventive skill in devising ways and means for accomplishing professional and naval service ends, is on duty in waters off the coast of western Europe.

Admiral Sims' marriage with the daughter of Ethan Allen Hitchcock of St. Louis, former Secretary of the Interior, quite early in his career, gave him an opportunity of disclosing and developing social graces which are not the least of his assets, as he carries on his professional work in European capitals.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Wellandra Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

IT IS ALWAYS SAFE TO SEND A Dominion Express Money Order. Five dollars costs three cents.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY
KINGSTON ONTARIO
ARTS
MEDICINE EDUCATION
APPLIED SCIENCE
Mining, Chemical, Civil, Mechanical and Electrical Engineering.
HOME STUDY
Arts Course by correspondence. Degree with one year's attendance.
Summer School July and August
Navigation School December to April
15 GEO. Y. CHOWN, Registrar

Minard's Liniment for sale everywhere.

Why the Trail?

In reply to a question, Mr. Ernest Thompson Seton has this to say in the December Guide to Nature:

It would take eleven large volumes to discuss the functions of a quadruped's tail. It is commonly believed that the original ancestor of quadrupeds was aquatic and used its tail for a sculling oar; but since then it has taken countless different additional forms—in the giraffe and the elephant as a fly flapper; in the South American monkeys as a fifth hand; in the alligator as a flail; in the skunk as warning to enemies, the same in the rattlesnake; in the flying squirrel as a helm for volplaning; in the gray squirrel as a parachute to break a fall; in the porcupines as a dangerous weapon of offense; in the fox as a muffler for the feet in cold weather. In the cat its service is not very obvious, but it seems to be used as directive mark when signalling one of its kind from behind; that is achieved partly by the color pattern and partly by the nervous twist of the tip. These are only a few of the uses which occur to me and each illustrates another development of the tail. I would add that in the beaver it is used as a plunging paddle in diving, as well as a signal sounder.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia

Curious Andean Keyholes.

Curiosity of the Andean villages are the doors of the houses, which are hard to open and hard to close, but which, despite the intricacy of the locks, admits the air freely on all sides. Harry A. Franck describes one such door, writing in the Century Magazine of the town of San Pablo, Colombia: "The keyhole was in the shape of a swan. Others in the town and all through Narino have the form of a man, horse, goose and a dozen other ludicrous shapes. These homemade doors of Andean villages never fit easily, and their locks always have some peculiar idiosyncrasy of their own, so that by the time the traveler learns to unlock the door of his lodging without native assistance he is ready to move on."

Lighten the house keeping by serving a ready-cooked, ready-to-eat food that contains the maximum of nutriment at lowest cost, and with the least tax on the digestion. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the real autocrat of the breakfast table—the one cereal food that holds its own against all comers, with increasing sales every year. It is a boon to the busy housewife, a welcome relief to the jaded stomach that has wrestled with meat and other heavy Winter foods. Try it for breakfast with milk or cream; for luncheon or dinner with berries or other fruits. Made in Canada.

HUNS ABANDON FRENCH LINES

And Cling Desperately to Huge Shell Holes Now.

Stiff Fighting in Them Goes On Constantly.

British Headquarters in France, Cable.—The western front nowadays is marked by many changing [illegible]. East of bloody Monchy-le-Preux, on the Arras battlefield, and east of Warneton on the Messines battlefield, trench lines have been forsaken and fighting is being carried on day and night between large bodies of opposing troops lying out in the shell holes. Some of these holes, blown by heavy calibred guns, are really enormous craters, in which two score of men can establish and fortify themselves.

Shell holes lend themselves to quick conversion into machine gun emplacements, and those ghastly weapons form the chief means of defence. The offensive weapons in shell-hole warfare generally are hand grenades. Shell holes are not easy targets for artillery, whereas fixed trenches can easily be photographed from aeroplanes, and the heavy guns can be registered on them without great difficulty.

The Germans are showing a particular desire to cling to the shell holes as long as possible before retiring to their fixed lines in the rear. This is quite a change from their ordinary habits, for heretofore they have loved their deep dugouts in the trenches with a love that seldom brooks separation.

Some prisoners taken from shell holes recently pulled bodily out in nocturnal raids have frankly declared, however, that it is discipline and not desire that keeps them out in the open.

The Germans recently turned a hurricane of annihilating fire on the trenches they had lost to the British on Infantry Hill, east of Monchy, but the British troops suffered little from the lavish Teutonic expenditure of high explosive. The manner of utilizing shell craters is little short of marvellous. Thousands of men can take cover in these craters, yet from even the most forward observation post the battlefield looks absolutely empty. A considerable attack from shell hole positions can be watched without the realization that desperate fighting is in progress. Always there is noise from exploding grenades, but these missiles are so small that they cannot be seen in the air from a distance of 300 yards.

From time to time, a small group on Infantry Hill, east of Monchy, fell another, dragging machine guns with them and disappearing so quickly in the [illegible] that the earth seemed to have opened and swallowed them.

The carrying of supplies to shell holes and bringing back the wounded is very difficult during the mid-summer short nights. The battlefields have been enwrapped in a great heat wave, but are relieved temporarily now and then by violent thunderstorms.

HON. BALFOUR REPORTS ON TRIP TO U. S.

Confident America is in War for Allies With Her Whole Heart.

FOR CIVILIZATION

Unity of Britain and U. S. Will Endure for Long Ages.

London Cable says—Arthur J. Balfour, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, gave an accounting of his stewardship in connection with his mission to the United States, to members of the House of Commons to-day in a luncheon arranged in his honor by the Empire Parliamentary Association in the beautiful dining room on the terrace.

The guests were members of Parliament and Cabinet Ministers, with the American Ambassador, Walter H. Page, and a few colonial representatives the only outsiders.

Ex-Premier Herbert H. Asquith presided as a token of the non-political character of the occasion, with Mr. Balfour on his right and Ambassador Page and Premier Lloyd George on his left. The other members of the Cabinet sat at a central table.

After a cordial welcome home voiced by Mr. Asquith, Mr. Balfour said:

MUCH GOOD ACCOMPLISHED.

"I undertook the headship of the American mission with some reluctance and diffidence; I felt it so easy to do harm, and perhaps not so easy to do good. But, looking back, I feel that no harm has been done, and much good. My colleagues performed their various tasks with great skill—tasks which involved the bringing together of the tremendous forces of the United States and Great Britain.

"The success of the mission was not due to the personal qualifications of your representatives, but to far deeper and more permanent causes, which must give us all great cause for gratification. I say nothing of the hospitality of the United States, which is proverbial. I need not dwell on the boundless kindness shown us, which was so obviously from the heart. The American people would have given us that same hospitality under any circumstances.

DEEP SINCERITY OF UNITED STATES.

"What moves me, and all of Britain, and France, too, is something deeper, namely, the tremendous and spontaneous enthusiasm of America for what is now our common cause, and the deep feelings of sympathy which manifestly animate the entire American community, north, south, east and west.

"It was not in the power of any mission or any group of individuals to create that feeling. Our mission was merely the occasion for its manifestation; it gave the Americans a welcome chance to show what they felt in the cause of world freedom. And this is the greatest and profoundest result of our trip. This is a result of which the value cannot be measured by the mere effect it will have on the present war, but which will outlast many generations.

"Thus the mission has been the occasion of the most beneficent development of international relations in the history of the world. Most alliances in past history have been based on temporary agreements between nations for the pursuit of certain aims and ambitions, and therefore passed with the passing occasion. But the co-operation between England and America, because it is not based on the fact that each nation hopes to get something out of the present war, but on a deep congruity of ideals, will endure as long as the two nations are content to pursue these ideals, which, I pray God, may be forever.

WILL NOT TURN BACK.

"Our alliance is based on a great moral consideration. We alike do not wish to use war as an instrument of expansion, and so we here may be certain that the United States will not leave until our great end is accomplished. There is nothing I am more certain than this, that the United States, having put its hand to the plow, will not turn back.

"The Americans have carefully studied the origin and aims of the war, and have come irrevocably to the conclusion that with the victory of the Allies is bound up the whole future of civilization. They will not refuse any sacrifices or effort which may bring a happy fruition, on which they are convinced depends the whole trend of civilization.

"These are not the fruits of the mission, but the mission gave the occasion for their most emphatic expression. If that be developed, we may congratulate ourselves on the results of our efforts."

* * *

ROYAL FAMILY DROP HUN TITLES

Princes, Princesses Change Their German Names.

Four British Peerages Conferred Instead.

London Cable.—The following official announcement was made to-day:

"The King has deemed it desirable in the conditions brought about by the war that those princes of his family who are his subjects and bear German names and titles, should relinquish these titles and henceforth adopt British surnames. At the same time, and consequent upon this decision, the King has been pleased to confer peerages of the United Kingdom on the following: The Duke of Teck—Marquis; Prince Alexander of Teck—Earl; Prince Louis of Battenberg—Marquis; Prince Alexander of Battenberg—Marquis."

A further abolition of German titles held by members of the English royal family residing in England is indicated in to-night's court circular, which announces:

"Their Highnesses Princess Victoria and Princess Marie Louise of Schleswig-Holstein will henceforth be styled Their Highnesses Princess Helena Victoria and Princess Marie Louise, respectively."

The circular adds that the princesses of the royal family who bear the title Duchess of Saxony have, at the King's desire, relinquished that title, and the King has directed that royal warrants be prepared stating what they will be styled in the future.

The Times says it understands Prince Louis of Battenberg will take the title of Marquis of Mount Batten. "This," says the Times, "is simply an English translation of the German name, but it is not perhaps wholly accidental that the new name of the former sea lord's family should also be that of the little headland overlooking the old eastern harbor of Plymouth, from which the famous Drake sailed."

* * *

NOT REPUBLICAN.

South Africa Wants No Such Doctrine.

Cape Town Cable—The House of Assembly by a vote of 72 to 31 to-day passed a resolution condemning the republican propaganda which is being carried on in South Africa. The movement was referred to in the resolution as being fostered by the extreme Nationalists among the Dutch farmers.

Gen. Hertzog, leader of the Nationalists, said during the debate that theoretically a republican did not advocate a republic to-day because he realized that the only hope to make a republic a success would be when all sections of the country unanimously asked Great Britain for independence.

When doing washing, before you go out in the cold to hang up your clothes, wipe your hands dry and rub them with cornstarch. Your hands will not suffer with the cold.

MARSHAL HAIG REVIEWS RECENT MONTHS OF WAR

Reveals the Plans Which Made Possible the Great Spring Offensive.

Praises His Men and Officers, Thanks Canada for Railway Aid.

London Cable —— (Via Reuter's Ottawa agency)—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig has forwarded to the War Office a despatch covering operations from the 18th of December to the present offensive. It affords a connected story and a valuable historical record, elucidating much that has hitherto been obscure, and revealing the strategic plans behind the apparently isolated attacks and raids which continued throughout the winter, and showing all as fitting into a comprehensive and systematic scheme in order to prepare a favorable situation for the spring advance.

"Owing to the Somme battle, the enemy in the region of the Ancre valley had been forced into a pronounced salient between the Ancre and Scarpe valleys, therefore a further short advance would give us command of the Beaumont-Hamel spur. Accordingly, an attack was delivered against the defences overlooking the villages of Pys and Grandcourt on the 18th of November.

"The object was to advance within assaulting distance of the Le Transloy-Loupart line. Five thousand yards of valuable positions were acquired. The weather then held up operations until January, when the whole spur was captured, and we advanced a thousand yards up the Beaucourt valley, with exceedingly light casualties, owing to skillful co-operation between the infantry and artillery, and fine aircraft work. Possession of the high ground opened up an extensive artillery field, and further successes on the 3rd and 4th of February gave us an important section of the German second-line north of the Ancre, making the evacuation of Grandcourt inevitable.

CLEARING BEAUCOURT VALLEY.

"The next task was to drive the enemy from Beaucourt valley, which was begun on the 10th of February.

"The capture of fifteen hundred yards of trenches lying at the southern foot of Serre hill, made the village of Serre a pronounced enemy salient, and further progress in the Ancre valley would make it untenable. Therefore, a larger operation was begun with the view of acquiring the northern extremity of the Morval-Thiepval ridge, which commanded the southern approaches to Pys and Miraumont, and the observation of the upper Ancre valley. Simultaneously a smaller attack was designed to capture Miraumont.

"During the night of the 17th of February the assaults were delivered. Despite the heavy ground, a thick mist and an alert enemy, who barraged, the troops assaulted with great gallantry.

"We succeeded completely, and gained the desired observations, also command of the enemy artillery positions in the upper Ancre valley, and defences of Pys and Miraumont. Our subsequent bombardment, as anticipated, forced the evacuation of Pys on Feb. 24. On the following day positions from the north of Gueudecourt to the west of Serre were captured. The weather favored the enemy retirement. The thaw broke up the roads, the sides of trenches collapsed, and the acquired ground became the worst quagmire. Contrariwise, the roads behind the enemy improved the farther he withdrew, and a succession of misty days prevented rapid pursuit. Consequently, it is greatly to the credit of all ranks that constant touch with the enemy was maintained.

"Continuous and systematic advances drove the enemy out from successive positions until the 2nd of March, when we reached Le Transloy-Loupart line, except at Irles, which formed a salient. Seven days were then devoted to improving communications and bringing up guns, and on the 10th of March Irles was captured. Our casualties were less than the number of prisoners taken, who numbered 2,881. The way was thus opened for attacking Le Transloy-Loupart line, which was shelled so effectively on the 11th and 12th of March that the enemy fell back to parallel lines, whereupon Grevillers and Loupart wood were occupied and methodical operations began for attacking the next line.

THE HINDENBURG LINE.

"Prior to this there were indications that the German withdrawal would be further extended. It had been ascertained that he had been preparing a new defensive system, known as the Hindenburg line, running from Arras southeastward to Queant, thence west of Cambrai, towards St. Quentin. Various switches, branching off from this line, were also being constructed. The enemy's immediate concern appeared to be to escape from the salient between Arras and Le Transloy, which became increasingly difficult to hold. It was also evident, however, that the enemy contemplated eventually the evacuation of the greater salient between Arras and the Aisne valley.

The despatch then deals in detail with the operations between the 14th and 19th of April, in which the Allies took possession of Chaulnes, Bapaume, Peronne and numerous villages, from which the enemy retired.

On the 19th of April the advance reached the stage at which the increasing difficulty of maintaining communications compelled slackening the pace of the pursuit. South of Peronne the lack of bridges, which the enemy had destroyed, presented a formidable obstacle, while north of Peronne, the wide belt of devastated ground over which the Somme battle had been fought, offered even greater difficulties to the passage of guns and transport.

TOOK BIG CHANCES.

"We were advancing, therefore," continues the despatch, "over a country in which all means of communication had been destroyed, and against an enemy, whose artillery was still intact and capable of launching a vigorous offensive, should a favorable opportunity offer. Strong detachments of his infantry and cavalry occupied points of vantage along the line of our advance, keeping the enemy informed of our progress and screening his own movements. His guns had already been withdrawn to previously prepared positions, available at any moment to cover and support counter-strokes, while the condition of the country across which we were moving made the progress of our artillery slow. But the enemy's forces were known to be holding a formidable defensive system, [illegible] he could fall back, should his counter-stroke miss its aim. On the other hand, as our troops moved forward they left all prepared defences farther behind. In such circumstances the necessity for caution was obvious.

"Meanwhile despite the enormous difficulties which the condition of the ground and the ingenuity of the enemy placed in our way, the work of repairing and constructing bridges, roads and railways was carried on with the most commendable rapidity."

The despatch proceeds to describe how the enemy's resistance increased as we neared the Hindenburg line, emphasizing the great costliness of his many counter-attacks, particularly in attempts to recover Beaumetz-les-Cambrai.

PRAISE FOR THE FORCES.

Speaking of the outstanding features of the five months' fighting from the 18th of November, Field Marshal Haig says:

"Despite the unusual severity of the weather, the winter campaign was conducted to a successful issue, under the most trying and arduous conditions. The activity of our battle front was maintained without a break from the conclusion of last year's offensive to the commencement of the present operations. The successful accomplishment of this part of our general plan had already enabled us to realize an inconsiderable instalment of the fruits of the Somme battle, and has gone far to open the road to their full achievement. The courage and endurance of our troops have carried them triumphantly through periods of particularly trying fighting, in which they were subjected to the maximum of personal hardship and physical strain. I cannot speak too highly of the qualities of all ranks. The ability with which the troops in the Ancre were handled by General Gough, and farther south by General Rawlinson, was in all respects admirable. The retreat to which the enemy was driven by our continued successes introduced conditions approximating open fighting, in which cavalry was given an opportunity to perform its special duties. Although deliberate, the enemy's withdrawal enabled him to choose his ground for resistance, and to employ devices to inflict losses. Our casualties, which were exceedingly moderate throughout the operations on the Ancre, became exceptionally light during the period of retreat.

WELCOME OPEN FIGHTING.

"The prospect of a more general resumption of open fighting can be regarded with great confidence. The systematic destruction of roads, bridges and railways made unprecedented demands on the Royal Engineers, who were already heavily burdened by the work entailed in the preparations for the spring offensive. Our steady progress in the face of great difficulties is the best testimony to the energy and thoroughness with which those demands were met. The bridging of the Somme at Brie is an example of the nature of the obstacles which were encountered, and the rapidity of their removal. In this instance six gaps had to be bridged across the river, which is of considerable width, and where the current flows swiftly. The work was commenced on the morning of the 18th of March; by 10 o'clock the same night the infantry bridges were completed; by 5 o'clock on the morning of the 20th a medium-type bridge for horse transport and cavalry was completed, and by 2 in the afternoon of the 20th heavy bridges, capable of taking of all loads of traffic, had replaced the lighter type.

TRANSPORT SERVICE PRAISED.

"Throughout the winter the transport problems were most serious, both in the battle area and behind the lines, and on the rapid solution of these success or failure depended. The close of the year's campaign, the steady growth of our armies, and the rapid expansion of our material resources, had already taxed the roads and railways to the utmost. The existing broad and narrow gauge railways were insufficient to deal with the increasing traffic, an undue proportion of which was thrown upon the roads. With winter conditions deteriorating them, the difficulty of maintaining them became almost overwhelming. An increase of railway facilities of every type and on a large scale therefore became imperatively and urgently necessary. Great quantities of material and rolling stock were required immediately, while subsequently our wants in that regard were considerably augmented by a large programme of new construction in the area of the enemy's withdrawal. The task of obtaining the amount of railway material required and the carrying out of the work of construction at the rate which our plans rendered necessary, besides providing labor and material for the repair of roads, was one of the very greatest difficulty. Its successful accomplishment reflects the highest credit on the transportation service of whose efficiency and energy I cannot speak too highly.

THANKS TO CANADA.

"I desire to acknowledge in the fullest manner the debt which the country owes to all who assisted in meeting this most difficult situation, especially to Sir Eric Geddes, director-general of transportation, to whose great ability, organizing power and energy the results achieved are primarily due. I am also glad to acknowledge the valuable assistance of the Chemin-de-Fer miners (?). I also wish to place on record the fact that the successful solution of this problem would have been impossible, but for the patriotism of the railway companies at home and in Canada, who did not hesitate to give up the locomotives and rolling stock required, and even to tear up their tracks to provide us with the necessary rails."

The despatch concludes:

"The loyal co-operation and complete mutual understanding between our Allies and ourselves throughout the Somme battle has been continued and strengthened by the events of the winter, and particularly by the circumstances attending the enemy's withdrawal. During the latter part of the period under review a very considerable tract of country has been won back to France by the combined effort of the Allied troops. This is regarded with lively satisfaction by all ranks of the British army in France. At the same time I wish to express the feelings of deep sympathy and profound regret provoked among us by the sight of the destruction that war has wrought in France's once fair and prosperous country.

* * *

COURSE OF U. S. WORRIES HUNS

Her Joining Allies Causes Unrest in Germany.

Foe's Recent Trickery Shows His Fear.

Paris Cable —— Jules Cambon, general secretary of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, declared that the entrance of America into the war had caused serious unrest in Germany, in the course of an interview with a correspondent of the Associated Press today. He said:

"A feeling of serious unrest was caused in Germany by the entry into the struggle of a country which brings to the Allies, together with its entire strength, a freshness and ardor which have not been diminished by three years of war. Germany feels that the Americans, once engaged in the struggle, will not give up. It is to prevent this cementing of close ties that it is multiplying its efforts to spread dissension among the Allies.

"The incident of the Swiss Socialist Grimm's intrigue in Russia reveals Germany's handiwork, and is one of the straws showing how uneasy and troubled Berlin is because of America. In France everyone realizes that this uneasiness and fear are justified."

In regard to the publication of the peace programme of the German majority Socialists at Stockholm, M. Cambon said:

"It proves that their aims coincide with those of their Government, especially on the Alsatian question, which is to be the big question when negotiations begin. The American public must know that all our questions, such as those concerning [illegible], colonial, maritime, indemnity and Belgian matters must yield before it, and according to its solution posterity will know who triumphed."

M. Cambon refuted the claim that Alsace Lorraine was originally German territory, which was wrested away by the French in population and language and was given to France by treaty in the eighteenth century. As for Alsace, the Minister said that it came to France as a reward for French services in the Thirty Years War, and while its mixed population spoke German, it always preferred French domination.

Turning to the Greek situation, M. Cambon said that the French Government did not think it necessary to take any coercive measures regarding Constantine's residence, because [illegible]

* * *

TO ROB AUSTRIA.

Semi-official German Paper Demands Territory.

London Cable—[illegible] between Germany and Austria is indicated by an article in the Frankfurter Zeitung, which points out the [illegible] of [illegible] Germans living in Austria.

The [illegible] that the residents of the German-[illegible] section of Austria cannot be good Austrians and good Germans simultaneously. It intimates that these German portions of Austria should become German and that Austrian Poland should be [illegible] in the rehabilitated kingdom of Poland, though it is not suggested that the German parts of Poland should be included.

This is the most pointed expression on the subject yet given in the semi-official German press, though a considerable number of suggestions have been made lately looking toward Germany's expansion at the expense of Austria after the war.

* * *

Alcohol, when pure, is greenish in color, while water is distinctly blue in shade.

CLEAR THE WAY TO TAKE LENS

Canadians Drive Germans From Reservoir Hill Nests.

Three Enemy Counter-Attacks Were Failures.

(By Stewart Lyon, Canadian Press correspondent with the Canadian Forces.)

Canadian Headquarters in France, Cable.—The approach to Lens has been rendered less difficult by a successful minor operation north of Souchez River. The object of the attack was a nest of German trenches lying at the foot of Reservoir Hill. These trenches radiate from the ruins of mining buildings which are said to be the chief places of shelter for the enemy between our front and Lens.

Yesterday afternoon parties of bombers went out to capture these trenches by bombing operations. The attack was entirely successful. The trenches were cleared of the enemy and the dugouts in which the Germans were believed to have been lurking were blown in and the trenches incorporated into our system. Thirty-five prisoners were taken.

During the evening and night the enemy, after an exceptionally heavy bombardment, made three separate and sustained attacks with object of recovering the ground he had lost, but all were beaten off. The Germans are still hard at work upon their new line of trenches, concrete dugouts, and wire entanglements which run across the open ground east of Reservoir Hill.

A striking testimony to the growing supremacy of the British aerial service is contained in a letter captured during the Messines operation. A German infantryman, writing from a point near Ypres, on June 16, to a brother in the Flying Service, said:—

"One day we had a fine bombardment. All the dugouts were blown in, although they had a concrete cover. One gun was smashed up, too, and the artillery men had to clear out. This was mainly the work of the English airmen. They were so bold and impudent that they came down to a height of 100 metres and fired on us with a machine gun. None of our aeroplanes could show themselves. They were driven off at once. The English airmen did what they liked and this was why the bombardment was so good."

IN MACEDONIA.

British Withdrawal for Reasons of Health.

Paris Cable——The War Office report on operations in the Eastern theatre reads:

"Eastern theatre: Our artillery counter-shelled the enemy artillery in a lively fashion in the region of Monastir.

"Thessaly: Our troops have reached Furka Pass on Othrys Mountain, the southern limit of Thessaly, and hold important localities. A considerable quantity of arms and munitions has been surrendered to them by the population."

An official statement from British headquarters at Salonika, issued tonight, reads:

"Owing to the advent of the malarial season our troops east of the Struma have been somewhat withdrawn. Our patrols are active on the east bank and have cleared several villages, which small hostile detachments had occupied. The ground evacuated by us is completely dominated by our positions on the hills west of the river.

"British detachments are participating in the occupation of Thessaly and Piraeus."

A FOOD SUPPLY FOR AMERICA

Britain's Food Controller On Country's Dependence.

Confident Canada and U. S. Will Not Fail.

London Cable——"In this war, and especially at this stage, food power is co-equal with man power," said Lord Rhondda, the new Food Controller, in an interview to-day.

"The problem of Great Britain's food primarily depends upon the supply, and in the main the solution of the problem of supplies lies in America. [illegible]

[illegible] of Food Controller to-day, [illegible] the American press.

"The whole problem of the nation's food primarily depends upon the supply," he continued, "and unless we can be assured of food sufficient to enable this and the other allied countries of Europe to carry on the war to a successful conclusion it would be almost superfluous to appoint a Food Controller. The most perfect system of distribution and the most equitable regulation would be a mere waste of time and effort, unless every measure is taken to keep up the allied food supply. For this we depend to a vital degree upon the United States and Canada. No one recognizes that more fully than I do.

"My experiences in America before and since the war have given me an unusual opportunity of appreciating the vastness of her resources. If these are organized to their full capacity, I am confident that the German hope of starving the allies, or of causing civilians unrest by the scarcity of food or high prices, is doomed to failure."

Grocery . . Department

WE seldom speak of our grocery Department, simply because this department is always so much alive we forget to advertise it. However we would impress these facts on you when buying your Groceries.

We are large buyers, therefore our price is always right.

We have an immense turnover, therefore our stock is always fresh.

We quote special prices in quantity. Consult us and live cheaper.

Two Specials

Good Butter and Fresh Eggs

We pay cash for eggs

N. McGillivray

North End Store

BANK OF HAMILTON

Established 1872

Capital Authorized, $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up, - $3,000,000
Surplus, - - - - - $3,500,000

Success

SUCCESS is seldom attained without at least some capital. The thrifty man who saves regularly is the one who reaches the goal of his ambition. Start a Savings account to-day at the Bank of Hamilton.

R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
PORT ELGIN BRANCH

41-C

Can you afford to be without The Times?

Children's

Ready-to-Wear

Garments

In prints, galateas, and other cotton materials, at the cost of materials only, much below to-day's values.

Children's aprons at 15c	Rompers and play suits from 40 to 75c
Childrens dresses, good styles, 4c to 50c	Womens' overal aprons and house dresses 50c to $1.25
Middies at 50 cents

We pay Cash for Eggs.
Produce wanted.

See our big display in our north window

South End Store

N. McGillivray & Co.

The Port Elgin Times
MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

ADVERTISING RATES

Farms or Real Estate for Sale 50c each insertion: Miscellaneous articles, To Rent, Wanted, Lost, Found, etc., each insertion 25c. Local Readers, Notices, etc., 10c per line per insertion, 5c each subsequent insertion. Cards of thanks 50c. Legal advertising 10 and 5c a line. Black-faced type, count 2 lines for 1. Display rates, yearly contracts, 12c per inch, 6 mos. 15c per inch. In memoriam poetry 5c per line. Professional cards $6 per year in advance.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Among the requirements of these degenerate days are—more patriotism and less politics; more grace and less greed; more simplicity and less style; more Christianity and less church. Probably the world war now being waged was necessary to bring mankind to a realization of these needs. If so the end is not yet, as we are very slow to learn.

* * *

The German emperor endeavors to impress the world that he is the agent of Jehovah in punishing his enemies, perhaps for the sin of not recognizing the vaunted claims of Teutonic kultur. However that may be, this Teutonic kultur of alliance with Jehovah is not apparent in the recent report concerning the wrecking of the fruit trees of the villages recently vacated in France by the German armies. The kaiser who is fond of posing as a preacher on occasions, seems to have forgotten the Bible regulations on this point found in Deuteronomy xx. 19 20:

"When thou shalt besiege a city a long time, in making war against it to take it, thou shalt not destroy the trees thereof, by forcing an ax against them: thou mayest eat of them, and thou shalt not cut them down (for the tree of the field is man's life) to employ them in the siege: Only the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat thou shalt destroy and cut down, and thou shall build bulwarks against the city that maketh war with thee until it be subdued."

Jehovah says, "I am God. I change not." These principles of humane warfare given to Israel stand unchanged as the voice of God. Hence, we judge that the Kaiser is sadly mistaken in the idea that Jehovah will permit him to succeed with his arrogant ambitions, for God will not sanction his precepts to be trodden under foot, nor the Teutonic butcheries to go unpunished.

Empty Titles Not Wanted

Some time ago John Ross Robertson, proprietor of the Toronto Telegram, declined the honor (?) of knighthood. The Telegram of last Thursday referred to the subject as follows:—

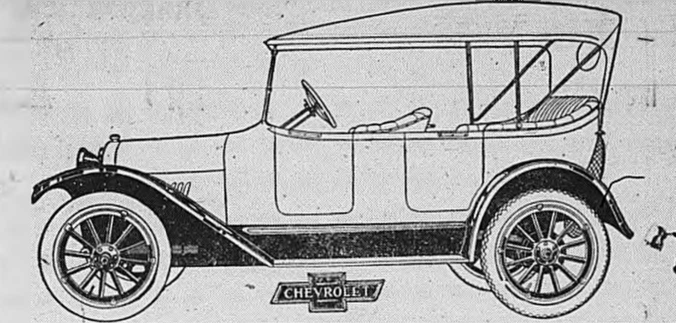
"The sacrifices of the eminent civilian are honored. There is no knighthood for the boy who might grow a more prosperous man than any of the illustrious personages in Canada's peerage. No prefix "Sir" is placed before the name of the young Canadian who has the sight shot out of his eyes and goes through his darkened days on a pension of $15 per month. The Crown does not hail as "Lady" or "Baroness" the mother who has given up a son or the wife who looks into the faces of her orphaned children and sees the desolate years stretch into the history of a home to which the valiant husband will never return."

What it Costs Britain for Drink

The inexorable war which has been declared by the statistician, in the United Kingdom as in the many other countries, on the drink traffic, still continues. The latest and one of the most effective efforts comes from Mr. Arthur Mee, who, in an open letter to Mr. Lloyd George, after pointing out that, since the outbreak of the war, the people of the United Kingdom have spent £500,000,000 on drink, continues: "This trade has used up shipping equal to a fleet of sixty ships of 5000 tons working all the time; it has robbed us of man power equal to about 100 days of all our war work; it has consumed more food than the whole British Army—the weight of food and other stuffs carried about for it, in ships and trains, has been equal to the solid material carried by the Navy to all our fighting fronts."

Then, later on in the letter, Mr. Mee gives the positive side, as it were, of the picture. "You know," he says, "what prohibition did for Russia: it raised her savings from £8,000,000 in the last year of vodka to £177,000,000 in a year of prohibition. It has made her free." Those who know anything about the internal position in Russia, before the abolition of vodka and since, will be able to do more than indorse this contension of Mr. Mee. It is safe to say that without the Tsar's ukase abolishing vodka in the autumn of 1914, the revolution in the spring of 1917 would not have been possible

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Walker, 12th of Elderslie, on Wednesday a son.



1918 model Chevrolet shown by POWER & COULTER, Port Elgin

The Conscription Issue

Canadians generally are taking deep interest in the movements of the politicians at Ottawa. Many will regret that not more unanimity was prevalent among those who are supposed to direct the people at this hour. The Liberal chieftain has announced that he gives to every man the right to abide by his own conscience and for himself is firm in the belief that before conscription is enacted the people should vote on it. A number of his Liberal followers in the House are voting against him, and for conscription.

This places the Liberal party in Canada in a very peculiar situation. The powerful Liberal press is forcefully espousing the Borden government's Conscription Bill, and at this distance it looks as if the Liberal chieftain might be in a hopeless minority.

Sir Wilfrid has taken no advice from Liberals in Ontario and west, and from present indications he has not consulted Quebec. In that province there is a wave of opinion against even a referendum.

It begins to look as if both the political parties have played the game too long. The Liberal newspapers lining up with Borden on the conscription bill may be too quick to accept the sincerity of the Conservative leader. More than a month has passed since the announcement, and in all that time, amidst the news of men dying at the front, not one step has been made to perfect the detail of the conscription bill for immediate action.

Where is all this agitation to lead us? It may be that both the old line political parties will be broken down in the agitation over conscription. That there should be any agitation on this question is to be regretted, but if it will wreck both the old parties it will result in ultimate blessings. Both parties have been under the control of the combines so long that they have become helpless in matters dealing with the best interests of the people.

Is it not a pathetic situation? In a crisis we are without leaders. As Canadians we have pledged to take a share in this war. We look to those in office to carry out these pledges.

Can this not best be done by a coalition? A few weeks ago we were told that prominent Liberal leaders of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario and the western provinces were invited to make a coalition cabinet on a basis of half Liberals and half Conservatives. Why should this not be accepted by these men, even yet. Is one man, with a divergent view, to stampede all the rest? A better management of Canada's part is what is needed now. We can settle the account for the past blunderings later on.

Let the bigger men of the Liberal party offer their services in any capacity in the House to solve this serious problem. Let everything be put on a war basis in Canada. If we have conscription of human flesh, why not conscription of wealth, of food and fuel, and of transportation? Have we no Canadians big enough to go the whole way?

Advertise it in The Times.

Alarm Clocks

Why do most people go to Busby's for alarm clocks? Because we have the best stock, also when repairs are necessary you know our reputation.

We have in stock.

Big Ben Vigilant
Cyclone Turnout
Vantite Icallu
Giant Spasmodic
Suminous Sunrise

J. J. BUSBY,
The Quick Repair House

HAVE YOU BEEN SICK?

Then you realize the utter weakness that robs ambition, destroys appetite, and makes work a burden.

To restore that strength and stamina that is so essential, nothing has ever equaled or compared with Scott's Emulsion, because its strength-sustaining nourishment invigorates the blood to distribute energy throughout the body while its tonic value sharpens the appetite and restores health in a natural, permanent way.

If you are run down, tired, nervous, overworked or lack strength, get Scott's Emulsion to-day. At any drug store.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. [illegible] G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communication in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at [illegible] p.m. Visiting brethern cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Gus. Smith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE, No. 170, I.O.O.F. of Ontario, meets at 8 o'clock, p.m., every Monday in their hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N.G.; T. Rankin, Rec.-Sec.; D. Geddes, Perm-Sec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer of marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office in Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin.

SPECIAL

We have a few of Dr. Pierce's Family Medical Advisors. Good cloth binding which we offer at 50 cents each while they last.

R. C. Crawford

Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent

Real Estate — Auctioneering Life Insurance

WE have opened an office in Port Elgin, and will deal in real estate. Property bought and sold.

Auctioneering—The old time attention given to all farmers contemplating a sale.

Life Insurance—We are agent for the New York Life Co.

D. O. Cavin : Port Elgin

Special In Teas This Week

We are offering some very special values in tea. Now is the time for you to secure a supply at a very low price.

MonarchCeylon blend reg 50c at 5 lbs for $2.25

Choice Young-Hyson reg 35c lb, now selling at 5 lbs for $1.50

Ludella package tea 35c per pound

In fruit we offer choice valencia raisins at 2 lbs for 25c, also seeded and seedless raisins

Our Ready-to-Wear dept. is fully stocked and in such seasonable articles as children's rompers, wash suits and dresses. Ladies' house dresses, tea and over all aprons, made in good quality of print which is hard to get this season.

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon

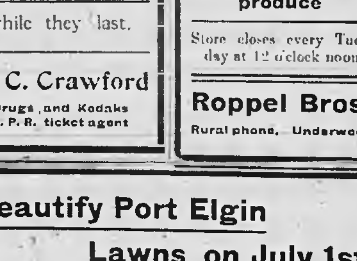
Roppel Bros.

Rural phone, Underwood

Beautify Port Elgin Lawns on July 1st

One of Smart's mowers will keep your lawn neat and trim, different sizes. English steel blades prices reasonable.

Rubber hose at 9, 10 and 15 cents per ft. Fountain sprayers 75c. Ask to see our guaranteed corrugated hose



Hammocks

We bought our hammocks before the advance
Prices range from $3 to $7
Just the thing for a quiet corner.

McLAREN'S HARDWARE

CANADA

1867 1917

Dominion Day Patriotic Jubilee Celebration At PORT ELGIN

FOR thirty years Port Elgin citizens' committee has celebrated Dominion Day, and this year being the Jubilee of Confederation, especial efforts are being made by the committee to fittingly observe the day. All over and above expenses will be given to the Red Cross ladies. The program includes Races and Bands for the afternoon, also parade of decorated automobiles. Relay race and great display of Fireworks for the evening, these are the outstanding features.

THE committee makes this announcement as an invitation to Port Elgin people to co-operate in this Jubilee Year to make the biggest celebration ever. Especially invite every man, women and child in the surrounding country to plan to spend Monday, July 2nd, at Lakeview Park, Port Elgin. Make this Jubilee Year the record year for attendance.

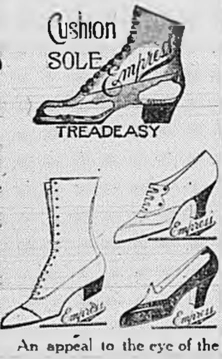
Everyone will be welcomed to the old town

CLIP THIS AND PIN ON WIFE'S DRESSER

Cincinnati man tells how to shrivel up corns or calluses so they lift off with fingers.

Ouch ! ! ! ! ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn or hardened callus stops soreness at once, and soon the corn or callus dries up and lifts right off without pain.

He says freezone dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels. If your druggist doesn't have freezone tell him to order a small bottle for you.



An appeal to the eye of the woman who is looking for perfection in her footwear will be found in "Empress" Shoes for Women, ann what means more to her, satisfaction and comfort.

Needs no breaking in.

James George & Son

A Good Ally

The man who saves nothing remains stationary, or goes behind. The man who saves progresses. Money makes money. Money out at interest works for a man and helps him along the road to success. It is his best ally next to his ability and integrity. 47

Open a savings account with

The Bank of NovaScotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 110,000,000

PORT ELGIN BRANCH,
A. L. Wyant, Manager

MAKING THE SOIL SURVEY

A couple of issues ago, The Times had a paragraph stating that representatives from the chemistry department of the O. A. C. at Guelph were making soil surveys in this district.

This is very important news insomuch as it records the class, the fertility, of this district. It is probably the intention of the department to issue in book from the information gained. It will be of great interest to know just what this section of the province offers for future agricultural development.

The Times took occasion to communicate with Prof. Harcourt, head of the department under which the surveys are being made, and the following information will be interesting to our readers:

Since all soils are not alike, are not adapted to the same kind or variety of crop, do not require the same kind of fertilizers or cultural treatment, this department has always been hampered in its work by lack of definite knowledge as to the character of the soil in different sections of the country. Without a knowledge of the soil covering these points, definite advice is often impossible, or, if given may not apply. In order to furnish definite information we have commenced what is known as a "Soil Survey". The primary object of which is to secure a knowledge of the character and property of soil in any given area. The soil survey consists of examining the soils in the field in order to determine the different kinds of types studying their origin, process of formation and various obvious properties and characteristics, in the writing of a report descriptive of the different types and showing on a map, by means of color or otherwise, the location of the different soils so far as it is practicable.

In brief it is taking an inventory of our soil resources; but if the survey ended here, little of direct value would be secured. After going over the country and ascertaining the various types of soils and as nearly as possible charting their boundaries, our plan of work includes the sampling of these various types of soils and a full chemical and physical study in conjunction with trial or demonstration plots. Our object is to use the charted survey as a foundation for the study of the soils so that we may ascertain what crops or what variety of crops or treatment of soils will give the best results on that particular type.

A knowledge of the origin of the soils and therefore of the geology in connection with the formation of the soils is essential to the classification and the natural drainage, size of particles, color, etc, all have to be considered. A study of the soils from their productive standpoint and a chemical analyses is of value, but actual experiments carried out on the soils is essential in order that we may get conclusive results. It is our intention to have experimental plots on every type of soil so that the ideas formed from the analyses may be carried out in our experimental work. So far we have nearly completed our preliminary survey of the western part of the Province. In the neighborhood of Port Elgin we find a number of types of soils. Along the shore north and south from the town there is a strip two or three miles wide of Dunkirk sand. Through the centre of this and along the road running north from Port Elgin is a little strip of what is known as Clyde sand loam. This is a loamy soil and belongs to a series that is not well drained and therefore dark in color, called the Clyde Series. The Dunkirk series as illustrated around it is naturally well drained. There is a little strip of Dunkirk loam and sandy loam near the town; but the main part of the area back from the Lake shore is what is known as Haldimand clay loam. This is not naturally as well drained a soil as the Dunkirk series but much better drained than the Clyde Series. Near the Saugeen River there is some rough land from which in some places there appears to have been some of the light materials washed and the most of it now is what we call Haldimand clay, that is it is heavier but of the same type so far as drainage is concerned. Further back there is some rather hilly ground, the land in which is very much like the Guelph Series. I have mentioned these various types in the neighborhood of Port Elgin simply to illustrate our investigations. Each of these types of soils have their peculiar characteristics and the treatment that is recommended for the Dunkirk series may not be applicable to the Clyde or Haldimand Series. Their origin is different, the materials in them are somewhat different and naturally they will require different treatment. It is our object to study out each of these series and the various types within the series so that we may know more definitely their character and thus be able to give better and more definite information regarding the needs of these soils. Furthermore a demonstration plot on these types will serve to illustrate these points.

W. M. S. Presbyterial

The third annual meeting of Bruce Presbyterial missionary society was held in Hanover, recently Mrs. MacNab, second vice president, was in the chair. Mrs. McLean, in the name of congregations of Hanover and Hampden, welcomed the delegates and reminded us that if we meet together in a spirit of humility, harmony, hopefulness and helpfulness, our meeting would be a blessing to us Mrs MacNab, in her address, spoke of our regret that we had lost our president, Mrs Hegg, by her removal to Clinton; of our sympathy for Miss Roberson, first vice-president, in here severe illness; and of our sorrow that we shall no more have with us one of our most active and interested members, the late Mrs Brown of Tiverton, mother of our missionary, Miss Margaret Brown of Honan, China. Mrs. MacNab expressed our thankfulness that the Society's deficit of last year—$34.00—had been wiped out. She said we should have a larger vision of the world's need and a widening vision of what we could do if we were co workers with Christ. Our honorary president then spoke a few words of thankfulness for the past and hope for the future, earnestly impressing upon us the truth that only in the consecration of all our abilities and powers could our work be truly successful. Reports read show that we had 19 auxiliaries and one associate society with a membership of 432. We sent $2163 to the provincial treasurer, an increase of $180 over last year. Sixteen new life members were added. One "in memoriam" and two junior certificates were reported. We have 71 home helpers who contributed $352 to our funds. There are nearly seven mission bands in our Presbyterial. These 130 children raised $172.23. We sent 15 bales of clothing and two bales of fruit—total value $126—to help Indian and home mission work in the north-west. We take 404 copies of the Missionary Messenger. We were rejoiced to make the acquaintance and to listen to the words of Mrs. Menzies and Miss Winnifred Warren, missionaries from Honan. Miss Warren spoke on "The Greatness of the Need of Prayer."

Mrs Menzies' stories made us feel that we better know and understand our Honan fellow christians, and "If we know, we feel; if we feel, we pray; if we pray, we give." The last sentence was brought to us by Mrs. McLaren of Port Elgin who gave us a report from the provincial meeting. Southampton is to be the next place of meeting for our Presbyterial. Mrs Wilson, our new president, gave us our closing words based on "Forgetting those things which are behind." At the evening session Mrs. Menzies gave another fine address. Dr. McDougall brought greetings from Presbytery, and there was special music by the choir. There were 101 delegates present, representing 14 auxiliaries. The delegates, the members of Presbytery and many friends were given dinner and supper by their hospitable hostesses, the ladies of Hanover and Hampden.

Geo. W. Smith has taken the position of public weighmaster.

A High Court decision rendered recently is of considerable interest to all County Councils. A bridge in Ashfield township, Huron County was declared by the County Judge to be of the proper dimensions to be assumed by the County, but the case was appealed and the High Court ruled that the County was not liable for the maintenance of the bridge in question. The Bruce County Council has been assuming a great many bridges in recent years, and piling up its debenture debt for the purpose of building and maintaining the same. Warden Izzard, County Clerk Malcolmson, Reeve Wilkinson of Ripley and Reeve Filsinger of Carrick paid a visit to the Ashfield bridge and as a result of what they saw quite a number of bridges are almost certain to be thrown back on the local municipalities.

TURNER'S

A dry May and a wet June makes the farmer whistle a tune.

Mrs. McMillan of Toronto is here visiting with her brothers, James and Tom Mitchell.

Mr. Jno Schrank was at Tara on Tuesday giving a demonstration to the bee keepers of that section.

Mr. Doug. McRae has had his mill running for the couple of week. Mr. George Hepburn of Paisley, is the head sawyer.

Jim Scott, Mac Davidson, George Atkinson, Al. Pollock and Will Schell motored to Chesley Lake for a days fishing on Tuesday.

On Wednesday it was thought for sure the Hun was on the road to Turner's with his big tank to destroy the town, but it turned out to be Mr. Wm. Howe with ditching machine coming to do some work for Mr. Arch Pollock.

Mr. W. Karcher has purchased a new Ford car.

Miss Isabella McLennan of Toronto is spending a few days with her cousin Miss Tena and Rodina McRae.

St. Andrew's Sunday school intend holding their annual picnic at the lake 6th. con., on Saturday June 30th, if weather permits.

The supply boat "Simcoe" was in harbor here Monday.

MARRIED

A very pretty wedding was celebrated at the home the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jeffrey, 390 King St. West, Kitchener, when their daughter Pearl Emma May Jeffrey was happily married to Daniel Krauth of Kitchener, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Gottlieb Krauth, Queen St. S. Kitchener. Promptly at 3.15 p. m. while the strains of a popular wedding march were pealing forth, the bridal couple with attendants appeared under a beautiful evergreen wedding arch. The bride was given away by her father. The bride's brother Herbert, acted as groomsman, and Mrs. Wm. Jeffrey acted as bridesmaid. The wedding march was acceptably played by Mr. Thomas Disley. Rev. C. F. Krauth of Breslau, brother of the groom performed the ceremony assisted by Rev. D. Brittain of Caledonia, Ont., brother-in-law of the groom.

After the tying of the nuptial knot, all present sat down to a sumptuous supper, no less than 73 happy guests partaking.—Berlin Telegraph.

MEDICAL

DR. F. H. WELLS, Office and residence on Green street, one door west of Bank of Hamilton.

W. J. CHAMBERS, M.D., L.R.C.P., L.M. Edinburgh. Office and residence "Lakeview Hall" opposite South End park Port Elgin.

DR. W. S. LAIRD, Oculist, Specialty in Nose and Throat diseases. Guarantees all his fitting of glasses. Office hours Wednesday afternoons. Next to Metropolitan Bank.

W. R. Barnett has been appointed postmaster at Paisley. A vacancy was caused in the death of Mrs. Saunders.

The big rain of Saturday has given this section all the wet it needs for some time. At present the prospects are good for fine crops.

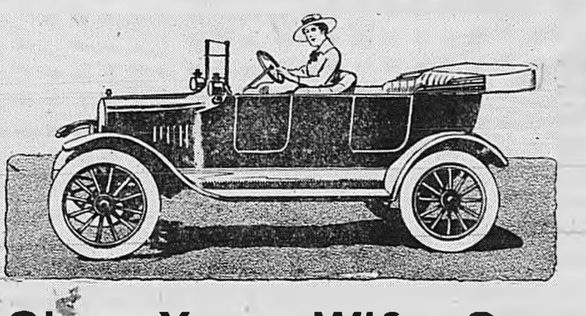
Advertise it in The Times.

GENTS' DEPARTMENT

Felt hats 25cts to $2.50
Caps 25 cts to $1.50
Mexican hats 25cts to 50 cents
Negligee shirts $1 to $1.40
Working shirts from 50c to 85c.
Cotton night shirts $1.
Neckwear 25c to $1.50
Cashmere hose from 35c to 50c
Silk hose 50 cents per pair
Working sox 16c to 50c per pair

Bring Us Your Produce

B. HILKER



Give Your Wife One

THOUSANDS of wives and daughters run their own Ford cars. They use them for shopping, calling, attending the theatre taking the children for a run in the country or to school.

The Ford is as easy to operate as a kitchen range, no knowledge of mechanical details being necessary. Inexpensive to operate. A woman can call around town all afernoon, or take a 25 mile spin in the country, at the minimum of cost for gasoline, oil, wear in tires, etc.

You couldn't give "her" a present she would appreciate more than this beautiful, modern car, with its stream-line effect, tapered hood and crown fenders.

Ford

Runabout - $475　Town Car - $780
Touring - - 495　Sedan - - - 890
Coupelet - - 695　F. O. B. FORD, ONT.

L. M. Sees, Agent, Port Elgin

Over 700 Ford Service Stations in Canada.

FARM AND GARDEN

FOR PROFITABLE VEGETABLES.

A soil may be rich in plant food and yet the plant be unable to make use of it. This is because the physical conditions of the soil are not suitable for the plant's development.

Plants must have food, but there must also be suitable condition for root development, and a uniform supply of moisture. A soil that is heavy and compact may be rendered suitable in texture by proper working at the right time, or it may, by improper working, be made practically useless.

Through the incorporation of humus or vegetable matter and proper cultivation, it is possible to make a soil that dries out quickly retentive of moisture. Stable manure frequently gives better results than commercial fertilizer for the reason that it improves the physical condition of the soil, and supplies plant food. Plant food only is supplied by commercial fertilizers. Where soils are in good physical condition, and contain a reasonable amount of humus, the best results are secured by commercial fertilizers.

Practice is modified by conditions. What might be suitable for a heavy, compact soil might not do in a light soil. A heavy type of soil might require deep cultivation, but on an open, leachy soil such cultivation would not be advisable. It is harder to change the physical condition of a soil than it is the chemical.

TOMATOES AND ONIONS.

A well-drained, sandy loam is best for the tomato. It also needs a high temperature and a warm, sunny location for best development. The tomato does best when supplied with well-rotted manure, at the rate of ten to fifteen tons to the acre. Then, when applied in spring, should be plowed under to a depth of four inches, and the ground worked by cultivating six inches deep. Commercial fertilizers, at the rate of 500 pounds to the acre, is a good substitute for stable manure.

The onion thrives best in a light loam soil that is rich in plant food. Light loams can be worked to better advantage than heavier loams, and do not dry out so badly during hot weather. It is important that there be plenty of available plant food if profitable crops are to be obtained. If possible, a soil that has been manured for several seasons previous should be selected. The land should be free from stones and weed seeds. Onions may be grown year after year in the same land, and it cannot be made too rich. One of the best fertilizers is barnyard manure, well rotted, applied in the fall and plowed in shallow, about four inches deep. A good application is fifteen tons per acre, annually. Where there is a good supply of vegetable matter in the soil, good crops may be grown with commercial fertilizers, applied at the rate of 500 to 1 000 pounds per acre, sown broadcast and harrowed in just before seeding.

CABBAGE, CAULIFLOWER AND CELERY.

Cabbage responds to any good garden soil, but a warm, well-drained, sandy loam, very rich in plant food, is best for early cabbage. For late cabbage a heavy soil and northern exposure is best. As the cabbage is a gross feeder, there is not much danger in having the ground too rich. Twenty tons or more per acre of manure can be used, and this may be supplemented with from 500 to 1,500 pounds of commercial fertilizer for an acre. Where quickly developed, marketable early cabbage is wanted, commercial fertilizer is especially advisable. Ground that was manured and plowed in the fall should be plowed again in the spring and thoroughly worked to a depth of six inches.

Cauliflower requires a cool, rich loam, and, if possible, a northern exposure. Dry weather often results in failure, and where watering is possible it may be advisable.

Celery is not so particular about the quality of its soil. Almost any soil from light sandy to clay, and even muck or peaty soil, may be used. The chief requirements are a soil retentive of moisture, but one well drained and rich in plant food. However, a rich, sandy loam will produce the firm, crisp heads that keep best in storage, and are superior in quality to the average celery grown on peaty or muck soils.

The objection to peaty or muck soils is that, unless carefully fertilized, a pithy celery is obtained. A heavy clay is not desirable on account of difficulty in working.

The best fertilizer for celery is barnyard manure and 20 to 30 tons per acre may be used. Manure that is well rotted is best. Commercial fertilizer, at the rate of 1,000 to 1,500 pounds per acre may be used where the land is fair in fertility and contains plenty of humus.

FACTS ABOUT OTHER VEGETABLES.

All vine crops need a warm situation.

Carrots and parsnips need a deep, thoroughly prepared soil of even texture to admit of long root development.

A heavy, compact soil develops a poorly-shaped and rough parsnip. The ground may be spring or fall manured, plowed deeply and thoroughly worked.

Any good soil will develop good beets, provided a uniform growth is maintained.

Turnips do best on a good loam retentive of moisture.

Salsify requires a deep, mellow, rich soil.

Garden peas do best in ground that was fall manured with 10 to 20 tons of well-rotted manure per acre, and plowed and well-worked in the spring to a depth of five inches.

Beans do best on a fairly rich soil, and, unlike the pea, require a warm situation and warm soil. While the pea will do well on a fairly heavy soil, the bean likes a loose, friable soil for best development.

A warm, friable, rich soil should be selected for sweet corn.

Egg plants and peppers require a rich soil.

The ground cannot be too rich for spinach. The richer the soil the less liable are the plants to go to seed quickly.

Any good garden soil will grow lettuce and radishes. The ground should be rich and fairly friable.

Parsley is not a particular plant as to soil requirements.

While sweet herbs are not particular as to soil requirements, a fairly rich, friable soil is best.

The best soil for asparagus is a rich, deep loam, well drained. It may be grown on any type of soil, from light to heavy loam. A stony, gravelly or heavy clay soil should be avoided. The ground should be as rich as it is possible to make it. Thirty to forty tons of stable manure per acre may be applied at the start, and the ground plowed deeply and well worked.

Rhubarb does best in a deep, rich, mellow soil. A clay soil or one with a hard pan subsoil should be avoided. The ground should be heavily manured, and worked deeply. It is impossible to overfeed this plant.

FARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

Plowing 15 inches deep, with a subsoil plow following ordinary plowing, has been found unprofitable on test plots at the Ohio Experiment Station. Sub-soiling has produced an average increase of less than half a bushel to the acre. Corn yields an acre, clover has shown no benefit, while oats have yielded most with ordinary plowing.

A nail can be driven into tough wood much easier if first rubbed with lard.

A stubborn nut is much easier removed from a bolt if both are heated very hot.

An iron bar, with a rather sharp, non-flexible point is a splendid tool with which to remove or pry out refractory staples.

Moistened wood fibre plaster is a splendid thing with which to stop rat holes in bins.

A piece of broken crock makes quite a good whetstone when a real one is not at hand.

Ammonia will remove paint from glass or iron quite as effectively as an expensive paint remover.

IN MEMORIAM.

To the American Soldiers Dead in France.

(Elizabeth Banks, in London Daily News.)

I heard a voice from Heaven saying [illegible]

[illegible]

In August, 1914, the [illegible] of Belgium and the [illegible] of invaded France reached the [illegible] of the United States [illegible] thousands of [illegible]

[illegible]

There were many Americans—not a few hundred and afterwards many thousand who, while [illegible] the cause of Belgium and France, [illegible] of humanity, of all [illegible] threatened, of liberty assailed.

So piercing and so clamorous was the call that it came not only to their ears but to their souls, and, looking up, they saw the VISION. Then a hand beckoned, and, because the hand was so compelling, they followed it.

* * * * *

They were not all of one class, those Americans who first saw and followed the Vision. Young University men looked up from their books and saw the light; mechanics lifted up their eyes and saw it too; preachers were convinced by it in their pulpit; blacksmiths knew it was a different light from that which blazed from their forges; farmers in the harvest fields felt that something more brilliant than the sun was shining about them; lawyers, doctors, writers and painters beheld the light and followed after the beckoning hand.

Some followed directly over to France and others across the border into Canada, and thence through England to the fighting line, and so they formed the first American Overseas Force at the Front, a unit in spirit, although they were not all together, but scattered about among the French and the Canadians.

From among this contingent many have fallen. Most especially wherever Canadians have given their lives, there, too, have the Americans dampened the earth of France with their blood.

To all these I offer tribute on this America's Day.

* * * * *

How quietly, how unostentatiously, how secretly have they paid the great price, these countrymen of mine. Here is a newspaper. Included in a long Roll of Honor, I read a little notice:

"—— Canadians, —— ——, first reported missing, now officially reported killed."

That is all. Only those who knew the man's history, as I knew it, will be aware of his nationality. Indeed, when he died, he had [illegible] no nationality, though he fought, and died as a soldier of the King. I remember the break in his voice as he told me of the oath of allegiance he had taken.

"... do make oath that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to His Majesty King George the Fifth, his heirs and successors."

"It's all right, of course," he said, with a wistful smile, "but it makes a fellow feel queer to go away and fight under another flag with the flag of his great-grandfather, but I had to answer the call, didn't I?"

"Yes," I said, "you had to answer the call."

[illegible] "officially reported killed."

Today, the flag of his native land and the flag under which he and his comrades fought are intertwined, even in the cathedral we lift up our voices in prayer and song:

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat,
He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgment seat.
O be swift my soul to answer Him, be jubilant my feet!
Our God is marching on.

[illegible] Now these sleep [illegible] France [illegible] the pathway lighted by the Vision.

FOR WOMEN MOTORISTS.

[illegible]

The good driver does not [illegible] gradually that passengers are unconscious of the fact. In rounding a corner she commences to straighten the car up before it is halfway around—

MAKING POULTRY PAY

POULTRY DISEASE INVESTIGATOR.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

It will be of interest to poultry keepers throughout Canada to know that there is now an expert who devotes all his time to investigating the diseases of poultry. Dr. A. B. Wickware, Assistant Pathologist to the Health of Animals Branch, has been assigned to that work by Dr. Torrance, Veterinary Director-General.

Dr. Wickware is by no means a novice in poultry diseases. For several years, under Dr. Higgins, Dominion Pathologist, he has devoted some of his time to the diseases affecting poultry and has given special attention to Black Head. Realizing the importance of investigations in poultry diseases, Mr. J. H. Grisdale, Director of Experimental Farms, and Dr. Torrance arranged for Dr. Wickware to take up this question exclusively. He is therefore now co-operating with the Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, where since last fall he has been conducting experiments along this much needed and very important line of work.

Continued attention is being given to Black Head in turkeys and many new investigations are being started. These relate to chick diseases as well as to the general disease of poultry, including parasites of all kinds.

The annual losses that occur from poultry diseases and parasites are tremendous. No person knows what the amount is, but it is well into the millions each year. Dr. Wickware's work will no doubt do something to reduce a large part of this, but the co-operation of all poultrymen who have any disease in their flock will be appreciated.

As usual, communications to the Experimental farm re diseases of poultry will be welcomed and with Dr. Wickware now giving all his time to the matter, even more information will be available. Specimens of sick birds should be sent where practicable and may be addressed [illegible] to Biological Laboratory, Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

GREEN FEED FOR POULTRY.

If there is a portion of the garden not suited to other garden crops, it may be possible to grow some green feed for the chickens on it. Oats and field peas, if sown thickly, [illegible] will need cuttings at least that will be much relished in the small runs.

If the chickens have a large enough a small sowing made inside and protected by woven wire with one inch meshes stretched about two inches above the ground may be made. This allows the chickens to nip off the green blades as they grow through the netting without injuring the roots.

Another way to furnish green food to hens not on range is by sprouting oats in trays or boxes. This method is used by many poultrymen, for large and small flocks. The oats are soaked for twelve hours in warm water and then spread out in a layer 1 2 to 1 1-2 inches deep on a floor, or in a tray or tier of flats, which have openings or holes or a 1-4-inch mesh wire bottom covering with burlap, so that the water drains freely. The oats may be stirred daily and sprinkled or allowed to sprout without stirring until ready for feeding. They are usually fed when the sprouts are from 1 to 1 1-2 inches long, although some poultrymen prefer to allow the sprouts to grow 2 or 3 inches long before feeding. Oats need a moist and warm atmosphere in which to sprout quickly, so that it is necessary to furnish heat or to keep them in a warm room during the winter while they may be sprouted out of doors during the rest of the year. It takes from 3 to 10 days to sprout oats, depending on the temperature. The oats are fed, roots, sprouts and all, at the rate of about one square inch as they grow in the tray to each fowl.

WETTING SPOILS [illegible] DOZEN EGGS EACH YEAR.

Careful investigation of large quantities of stored eggs show that from 15 to 22 per cent. of washed eggs become spoiled in storage, whereas only 6 to 8 per cent. of dirty eggs stored unwashed spoil. The explanation is simple. Water removes from the shell of the egg a gelatinous covering which helps to keep air and germs out of the inside of the egg. Once this covering is removed by washing or rain, [illegible] in the eggs, germs and [illegible] readily grow in the contents and spoil the eggs.

This enormous loss in storage eggs largely can be prevented if producers and egg handlers will refrain from washing eggs [illegible] the number of dirty eggs [illegible] plenty of clean nesting places for their hens.

[illegible]

[illegible] especially in the early spring [illegible] washed [illegible] for immediate consumption.

It is estimated that in the United States approximately [illegible] of eggs are spoiled by washing.

—The Canadian Countryman.

SUNDAY AT HOME

I THANK THEE.

I thank Thee that the [illegible]
And dipping [illegible] of evening grass—
That wet, dark [illegible] and flowers in my hands
Can give the [illegible] gladness as I pass.

I thank Thee that I love the things of earth—
Ripe fruits and laughter, [illegible]
The [illegible] of lighted [illegible] the [illegible] world,
O beating human hearts that [illegible] and weep.

I thank Thee too, that [illegible] not know,
Yet need not fear the [illegible] of the end.
But more than all, and [illegible]
Dear Lord, [illegible]
thank Thee for the friend.

—Juliet Wilbor Tompkins.

CHRIST THE PROPITIATION.

Toward the mercy seat shall the faces of the cherubims be. And thou shalt put the mercy seat above upon the ark; and in the ark thou shalt put the testimony that I shall give thee. I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee.

Surely His salvation is nigh them that fear Him; mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

If thou, Lord, shouldest mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand? But there is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared. Let Israel hope in the Lord: for with the Lord there is mercy, and with Him is plenteous redemption. And He shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities. All have sinned, and come short of the glory [illegible] through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood, to declare His righteousness for the remission of sins.

HEAVING THE LOG.

(By the Late Rev. H. T. Miller.)

Part of the equipment of a ship is the log line on a reel, and every few hours the log is hove and the speed is entered into the log-book. This is true of all ships except one, that is the Ark of Noah. Several [illegible] are wanting in this great ship. There are no masts, sails, or rudder, no anchors, no pumps, no log line. Why? She was not made to go, but to float. She was not made for progress, but for rescue. Nevertheless, she took in her cargo, carried it in safety, and landed it in good order. What more could you have asked? The ark was preeminently a ship of salvation; all outside perished, all on board were saved. When they landed they started a new world. Here is a magnificent type of Christ. All outside Him are lost, all within His mighty bulwarks are saved. Look at the original intent. The Ark was built to float over a drowned world. A bridge without abutments to land her passengers on a purified and well-washed shore. Jesus came to save His people from their sins, to [illegible]

[illegible]

THE KEY OF DEATH

Among the many relics of antiquity [illegible] in the arsenal at Venice there is one to which a peculiar and gruesome legend is attached. It is a [illegible] key which to all outward appearances might have been designed for use in a ponderous lock [illegible]. This is believed to be [illegible] designed for a deadly purpose [illegible] known in Venice as The Key of Death.

The chronicles of the city tell that in the earlier part of the seventeenth century a refined stranger arrived at Venice, a man of dark and sinister aspect. His name was Tebaldo. He seemed to have been a man of [illegible] tastes, of great intellectual power, but [illegible] in Venice [illegible]

One day he observed a beautiful girl [illegible] belonged to a family of high station. She was, indeed, the daughter of an ancient and noble house [illegible] Tebaldo [illegible] determined to [illegible] her hand. There proved to be, however, a more insurmountable obstacle in his way. The girl was already betrothed to another, a young nobleman of almost equal rank and fortune. The knowledge did not deter Tebaldo [illegible] himself before the girl's parents in the capacity of a suitor for her hand. As might have been expected, he met with a curt and unceremonious rebuff.

The [illegible] in the mind [illegible] Enraged beyond measure, he shut himself up in his house and there secretly studied a means of revenge. Profoundly skilled in the mechanical arts, he allowed himself no rest until he had invented a most formidable and death-dealing weapon. This was a large key, the handle of which was so constructed that it could be turned at will. When it was thus turned a secret spring was disclosed, which, on being pressed, launched from the key head a fine needle or lancet. The latter was of such delicate construction that it penetrated the body of the victim and buried itself deep in the flesh without leaving any external trace.

The marriage of the betrothed couple was fixed to take place in the principal church of Venice on a certain day. Before the ceremony Tebaldo, cunningly disguised, stationed himself at the church door, armed with his diabolical weapon. As the bridegroom was about to enter the building the concealed watcher, pressed the spring and sent the deadly lancet into the breast of his victim. The young nobleman had no suspicion of injury at the moment. In the midst of the ceremony, however, he was seized with a sharp spasm of pain, and sank fainting on the steps of the altar. His illness appeared so alarming that he was hurriedly conveyed to his home, where the leading Venice physicians were summoned to attend him. Despite their unremitting efforts he sank and died, nor were they able to discover the nature of the mysterious and fatal seizure.

With the removal of his rival Tebaldo once more appeared openly on the scene. Again he presented himself before the girl's parents and renewed his request for her hand. Their refusal to listen to him sealed their doom. In what manner he accomplished it is not known, but within a few days both had been done to death in mysterious fashion. The exalted rank of the victims created a profound sensation, and when, on examination of the bodies, a fine steel instrument was found in the flesh, terror became universal. The citizens feared for their lives. An assassin was at large among them, and no one knew upon whom the next blow might fall. The utmost vigilance was exercised on the part of the authorities, but as yet no suspicion fell upon Tebaldo.

The bereaved girl was prostrated by the triple tragedy. Robbed of those who were most dear to her, she retired to a convent, where she passed the first months of mourning in sorrowful seclusion. Tebaldo, however, did not abandon the pursuit. Still hoping to bend her to his will, he sought her out in her retreat and begged to speak to her through the grating.

Her beautiful face had been disclosed to him, but since the death of her betrothed and parents it had become [illegible]. Then, therefore, in the course of the interview, he pressed [illegible], he met with an [illegible] indignant refusal. Her words stung him to the quick. Beside himself with rage, he brought his deadly weapon once more into play and succeeded in wounding the girl through the grating, the [illegible] of [illegible] his action from being observed.

On her return to her room the girl felt a sharp pain in her breast. Examination of the spot showed that it was marked with a single drop of blood. Physicians were hastily summoned. [illegible] experiences, they [illegible] conjecture, but [illegible] the flesh and extracted the [illegible], thus saving the girl's life.

The attack occasioned a public outcry, and the State Inquisition used every means to discover the assassin. The past of Tebaldo [illegible] became known and aroused suspicion [illegible]. The emissaries of the law descended suddenly upon him. His house was searched, and there the terrible invention was discovered. Swift justice followed and Tebaldo was executed. The key is still preserved in the arsenal at Venice.

PORSON'S WEAKNESS.

The Drink He Got From Mrs. Hoppner's Private Bottle.

In "Samuel Rogers and His Circle" is [illegible] anecdote about Richard Porson, the [illegible] scholar and professor of Greek.

When Hoppner, the painter, was residing in a cottage a few miles from London, Porson one afternoon suddenly arrived there. Hoppner said that he could not offer him dinner, as Mrs. H. had gone to town and had carried with her the key of the closet which contained the wine. Porson declared, however, that he would be content with a mutton chop and beer from the next ale house and accordingly stayed to dine.

During the evening Porson said, "I am quite certain that Mrs. Hoppner keeps some nice bottle for her private drinking in her own bedroom, so pray try if you can lay your hands on it." His host assured him that Mrs. H. had no such secret stores, but Porson insisting that a search should be made, a bottle was at last discovered in the lady's apartment, to the surprise of Hoppner and the joy of Porson, who soon finished its contents, pronouncing it to be the best gin he had tasted for a long time.

Next day Hoppner, somewhat out of temper, informed his wife that Porson had drunk every drop of her concealed dram. "Drunk every drop of it!" cried she. "Heavens, it was spirits of wine for the lamp."

◆

Her Compliment.

Balzac had, for a neighbor at one time, a nobleman of high degree and often used to pay him a visit in the morning clad in the completest negligee. One day Balzac met at his neighbor's the latter's niece and felt bound to excuse himself on the nature of his attire. "Monsieur," replied the young lady, "when I read your books I did not trouble myself about the binding."

◆

Boudoir News.

[illegible]

◆

For the Salad Course.

[illegible]

◆

"Does your husband worry about the grocery bill?" "No, he says there's no sense in both himself and the grocer worrying over the same bill."—Boston Transcript.

MARKET REPORTS

TORONTO MARKETS.

FARMERS' MARKET.

Dairy Produce—
Butter, choice dairy	$0 42	$0 45
Eggs, new-laid, doz.	0 40	0 42
Cheese, lb.	0 25	0 28
Do., fancy, lb.	0 30	0 32
Dressed Poultry—
Turkeys, lb.	0 35	0 40
Fowl, lb.	0 25	0 35
Spring chickens	0 40	0 45
Fruits—
Rhubarb, 3 bunches	0 05	0 10
Strawberries, box	0 15	0 25
Vegetables—
Asparagus, bunch	0 05	0 10
Beans, new, small, measure	0 00	0 75
Beets, new, bunch	0 10	0 12½
Cucumbers, each	0 05	0 10
Carrots, new, bunch	0 05	0 10
Cabbages, each	0 10	0 20
Horseradish, lb.	0 05	0 10
Leeks, bunch	0 10	0 15
Lettuce, doz. bchs.	0 30	1 00
Do., head, doz.	0 75	0 90
Onions, bundle	0 05	0 10
Do., 11-qt. bkt.	1 00	0 00
Do., Bermuda, box	2 50	0 00
Potatoes, per bag	4 25	4 50
Do., new, peck	0 00	1 00
Do., small measure	0 00	0 65
Radishes, 3 bunches	0 00	0 10
Spinach, new, peck	0 15	0 20
Sage, bunch	0 05	0 10
Turnips, new, bunch	0 05	0 10
Tomatoes, lb.	0 00	0 35

MEATS—WHOLESALE.

Beef forequarters, cwt.	$15 00	$17 00
Do., hindquarters	18 00	20 00
Carcases, choice	17 00	19 00
Do., common	11 00	12 50
Veals, common, cwt.	9 50	11 50
Do., medium	18 00	20 00
Do., prime	19 00	21 00
Heavy hogs	16 50	18 50
Shop hogs	21 50	22 50
Abattoir hogs	21 50	22 50
Mutton, heavy	11 00	13 00
Do., light	17 00	19 00
Lambs, lb.	0 23	0 25
Do., Spring, each	9 00	11 00

TORONTO CATTLE MARKETS

The demand for cattle continues with a further recovery of [illegible] in prices.

Export cattle, choice	11 00	11 25
Butcher cattle, choice	10 50	11 25
do. do. medium	9 50	10 00
do. do. common	8 25	9 00
Butcher cows, choice	9 50	10 00
do. do. medium	8 50	9 00
do. do. canners	5 50	6 00
do. bulls	[illegible]	[illegible]
Feeding steers	9 00	10 00
Stockers, choice	8 00	9 00
do. light	7 50	8 00
Milkers, choice, each	90 00	110 00
Springers	90 00	140 00
Sheep, ewes	9 00	11 00
Bucks and culls	7 00	9 00
Lambs	12 00	13 00
Hogs, fed and watered	15 00	[illegible]
Calves	7 00	12 [illegible]

OTHER MARKETS.

WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE.

Wheat—	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Oct.	1 90	1 98	1 90	[illegible]
Oats—
July	0 78¾	0 79¾	0 76¾	0 78¾
Oct.	[illegible]	0 72⅝	0 [illegible]	[illegible]
Dec.	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]	[illegible]
Flax—
July	2 41	2 54	2 71	2 [illegible]
Oct.	2 67	2 67	2 6[illegible]	2 61

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

Minneapolis—Wheat—July, $2.1[illegible] September, $[illegible]; cash—No. 1 hard, $2[illegible]; No. 1 Northern, $2[illegible] 1-2 to $2[illegible]; No. 1 Northern, $2[illegible] 1-2 to $2[illegible]; No. 2 do., $2.11 1-2 to $2.[illegible] 1-2. Corn—No. 3 white, [illegible] 1-2 to [illegible] 1-2c. Flour—Fancy patents, $10.25; first clears, $12[illegible], other grades, unchanged. Bran—$[illegible] to $[illegible].

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

Duluth—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $2.[illegible]; No. 1 Northern, $2.[illegible]; No. 2 do., $2.[illegible]; July, $2.[illegible], Linseed—$[illegible]; July, $[illegible]; September, $[illegible]; October, $[illegible].

BUFFALO LIVE STOCK

East Buffalo, N. Y., Despatch—Cattle receipts [illegible]; slow.

Veals—Receipts [illegible], active and strong, $[illegible] to $15.[illegible].

Hogs—Receipts 1,6[illegible]; active and strong; heavy, $16.[illegible] to $16.[illegible]; mixed, $16.[illegible] to $16.[illegible]; yorkers, $16.[illegible] to $16.[illegible]; light yorkers, $[illegible] to $[illegible]; pigs $15.[illegible] to $15.[illegible]; roughs, $14.[illegible] to $14.[illegible]; stags, $12.[illegible] to $13.[illegible].

Sheep and lambs—Receipts [illegible], active, steady, unchanged.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Cattle, receipts [illegible]
Market steady.

Beeves	8 75	11 25
Stockers and feeders	7 [illegible]	10 [illegible]
Cows and heifers	5 [illegible]	11 [illegible]
Calves	11 [illegible]	12 [illegible]
Hogs, receipts [illegible]
Market strong
Light	14 [illegible]	16 [illegible]
Mixed	15 [illegible]	16 [illegible]
Heavy	15 [illegible]	16 [illegible]
Rough	15 [illegible]	15 [illegible]
Pigs	11 [illegible]	14 [illegible]
Bulk sales	15 [illegible]	16 [illegible]
Sheep, receipts [illegible]
Market strong.
Natives	9 [illegible]	11 [illegible]
Lambs, native	[illegible]	16 [illegible]
Sheep	14 [illegible]	16 [illegible]

◆

ROCK OF GIBRALTAR

The "Key of the Mediterranean" Has Had a Stormy History.

England has been in possession of the rocky promontory of Gibraltar since 1704. From that time to this it has been a crown colony under the administration of a governor. By reason of its important strategical position it is called "the key to the Mediterranean."

Gibraltar has had a stormy history. In 711 the rock was taken by the Arab Chief Tarik, who called it Jebel-al-Tarik (Hill of Tarik) and built a fortress on the promontory. Part of these ruins is still extant. In 1309 it was taken by the Castilians, only to be recaptured by the Moors in 1333. It was held by them until 1462. Following the taking and sacking of Gibraltar in 1540 by Barbarossa, extensive military works were built there by order of Charles V.

In 1704 the promontory was captured by a combined force under Sir George Rooke and the Prince of Hesse-Darmstadt, fighting for the Archduke Charles of Austria. The moment it fell into their hands the British Admiral threw off the alliance with the Austrians and took complete possession of the works.

British possession since that time has been unbroken, although it was under a Spanish siege for nearly three years and eight months, beginning in 1779. Twice the garrison was on the point of falling because of the starvation of its defenders.

◆

Watching Sponges Grow.

Outside the harbor of Sfax, Tunisia, in the shallow water of the clear Mediterranean, is situated a biological laboratory for the study of sponges. It is one of the most unique in the world and affords opportunity for observing the development of the sponge from a tiny larva, so small that it can only be studied under a microscope, until five years later it has developed into a perfect sponge.

THE PASSING OF THE SUPERMAN

(Sidney Low in the Fortnightly Review.)

The greatest of all wars has so far thrown up no supremely great personality. We have got rid of what Mr. Wells, with one of his irradiating flashes of insight and description, calls the effigy: the great, caracoling, threatening, overbearing figure that looms so large in the foreground of all the wars and conquests of the past. Always when you turn back to these things the interest centres dramatically round an individual. The man has so overshadowed the event that most often we have forgotten the latter and remember only the former. It is of Rameses or Sesostris, Cyrus, Alexander, Caesar, Attila, Charlemagne, Genghis Khan, Charles XII., Peter the Great we think, rather than of the kingdoms they devoured, the empires they founded or destroyed, the hosts they led to the slaughter. History flattens out before many minds a rather dull, level expanse, like the plain of Thebes, with the Colossi towering above it to catch the sunbeams. It is the big man who often gives his name to the epoch: the age of Augustus, the age of Mohammed, the Napoleonic period, the Bismarckian era, and so forth.

But this marvellous stretch of time through which we are passing will not, it seems, be known as the age of anybody. We have no effigy really worth a show case in the historic museum, though several of the nations engaged have made some well-intentioned efforts to create one. The Germans did their best with Hindenburg; but it is surmised that the strategy and battle schemes are really worked out by Ludendorf and other useful subordinates, and that Hindenburg himself may be only a clumsy wooden image "made in Germany" to order and scale. In France there was at first some disposition to cast Joffre for the part; but that modest, methodical, painstaking, and unimaginative commander is not of the stuff whereof effigies are made, and he showed an absolute disinclination to appear in this role. Among ourselves a considerable endeavor was made for a time to find what we wanted in Kitchener, the strong, silent man, the organizer of victory. But, alas: the Dardanelles report is out, and, whatever may be said of that inconvenient, and inconveniently timed, document, it must be acknowledged that it makes sad havoc with the Kitchener legend. Our superman fades before our eyes, and leaves us instead with the likeness of a most patriotic, self-confident, hard-working, high-minded gentleman, overburdened by a task of unparalleled difficulty.

* * *

And the effigy statesman is apparently as obsolete as the effigy warrior. We look in vain for the Cromwell, the Lincoln, the Cavour, the Chatham, even the Gladstone or the Asquith of the great war. Instead we have had to be content with Mr. Asquith, Viscount Grey, M. Briand, Herr von Bethmann Hollweg, Baron Sonnino, Sasonoff and I scarcely think that the admirers of these eminent public men would claim that any of them was cast in the heroic mould. Perhaps that is one reason why we hailed the advent of Mr. Lloyd George with so much effusion.

We have no hero, but a superabundance of heroes. We live, as Mr. Wells says, amid a torrent of heroism. But it is the heroism of the common unregarded human being, the man who was just food for powder or food for pikes in the olden wars. It may be that in the multitudes that dimly trail through the battles and the marches, and the mud and blood of the campaigns of the past there are soldiers as brave, as loyal, as generous as those who have been sent forth these three years past from the cottages and mean streets of Europe. It may be so, but they do not figure in the annals. The historic muse gathering her skirts about her as she trips daintily over their plebeian bodies, treats them only as an entry in her catalogue. So many thousands of their corpses she notes, [illegible], left to fester on the field; so many dragged off to prison or to slavery; so many, it may be, butchered in the market square or built up alive into the walls of the fortress. Non ragioniam di lor.

We pass on to objects of more interest. Clio sharpens her pencil to set down in suitable detail the acts and words of kings, sultans, commanding generals, valiant knights, and other persons of dignity. Their heroism is on the record, and we know all about it, but save in a few rare instances the others are a gray mass, swarming away steadily at their bowstrings, hacking and thrusting victoriously with sabre and bayonet, or perhaps driven into rout and confused slaughter, but in any case as individuals undistinguishable.

So most of the great stories of valor and sacrifice in war that used to thrill us like the sound of a trumpet, relate to the selected, the socially superior, warriors. The hero has usually been "an officer and a gentleman," with one of these qualifications, if not both. Do the Homeric poems deign to tell us about anybody but the chiefs, the princes, and the kings, like Agamemnon and Menelaus and Odysseus and Hector, and the ill humored but most noble hero Achilles? Are the mediaeval chroniclers and singers, Froissart, [illegible], Mallory, and the rest concerned with the multitude in leather jerkins? It is the knights and barons that interest them as they push encased in steel among the half armed half naked serfs of the feudal levy; and if some poor fellow there, often brave, as I have no doubt, [illegible], the tale is not worth recording. We have all been brought up to regard heroism in battle as a special attribute of patrician birth or of high rank, civil or military. That is one of the reasons why we have found war ornamental, spectacular, romantic.

But this war has changed our orientation. Heroism has become so common that it has long ceased to be picturesque and theatrical, though it tugs at our heartstrings none the less on that account. We have discovered that the quite average, ordinary man can do deeds which would have seemed notable enough to fill half a canto of sounding verse, or half a chapter of reverberant prose, in the days of the effigy hero. For him—it may be he will get a line in a bald telegram or a bit of ribbon and a metal cross. It is much more likely he will get nothing, and nobody but a comrade or two will know how he lived and died. He goes about all this work with an amazing modesty, calmness and self-effacement, as though to suffer appalling torture, to be mangled, ripped open, maimed, blinded, killed, were just an incident in the day's doings.

They do it all so quietly, with so complete an absence of pose! In all the armies I think that is so, but most in our own. I cannot imagine any but a British regiment rushing into the hell of the machine gun fire with the cry of "Early doors sixpence extra," or with the men kicking a football before them through the zone of spluttering bullets. The established hero gives one the impression of being conscious that the eyes of the world are upon him. "For God and the King," he cries, or "For the lilies of France," or something of that kind, as he charges gloriously, with white plume waving, and a magnificent flutter of laced cloak or flying hussar jacket. One suspects that even in dying he faces his audience feeling that he owes it to himself and to his order to make his exit with a sense of style.

In the earlier days of the war I came upon a paragraph in a newspaper correspondent's letter about the fighting near Festubert. A British soldier was lying wounded on the ground, fevered with thirst, close by a German even more desperately hurt. Stretcher bearers arrived and offered the Briton a tin of water. The man was reaching for it eagerly, when his glance fell on his tormented enemy. "After him," he said, and handed back the vessel for the German to drain. So now, when I seek to recall my old vision of Sidney at Zutphen, it is blotted out by another: a vision of a man in drabbled khaki, lying in the horrible crimsoned filth of No Man's Land; of another man in a torn gray tunic, drenched with blood, staring with goldfish eyes at the water; of the former shutting his own parched lips tight over his teeth and putting the precious draught by with a short, ill-said word of refusal. Surely a greater hero that nameless cockney, than the sworded and scented courtier! "After him!" It is better than the nobly mellifluous phrase that made Philip Sidney immortal.

But all the blazoned deeds of the past are outshone daily. There was Sir Richard Grenville, of the Revenge, and here is Capt. Loftus Jones, of H. M. Destroyer Shark. In the battle of Jutland ten German ships were pouring their battle fire into the Shark at short range. Steering gear, funnels, superstructure were blown away. Half the crew were dead, the commander himself was severely wounded. Another destroyer, the Acasta, pushed in front of the helpless ship to shield her and brave destruction herself. Loftus Jones, who was the commander of the division, refused any aid, and signalled the Acasta to keep out of the way. Then a splinter of shell came which took off the captain's leg about the knee; still he sat on the shattered deck and gave his orders and fought on. He noticed that the flag had been shot down, and ordered that another should be run up, and this was done, so that the Shark went under with colors flying. When they were all in the water the few survivors pulled their dying chief on board a raft. "Let's have a song, boys," he said, and they sang "Nearer, my God to Thee" till that indomitable soul passed away.

In war, as in industrial transactions, what is wanted is the harmonious co-operation of a number of managing persons, none of them necessarily gifted with genius, but all well trained, well informed, and clear thinking. The excessively forceful, self-assertive intelligence may be a hindrance rather than a help on a committee. You do not want the superman there: he would be likely to make trouble.

The personality may be dispensed with when the cause comes clearly home to everybody and is intelligently apprehended by all. Perhaps our committees and joint commissions and advisory councils will appeal to that kind of corporate consciousness in the future. There is more sense of it in this war than in almost any great war of the past. The armies know what they are fighting for; they have an ethical and political creed, indefinite but substantial, and require no "magnetic" leadership to stimulate their imagination.

But here we are dealing with armed hosts of men who read, and even, in some sort, are beginning to think. Idol worshipping is growing obsolescent. Carlyle's hero as prophet and priest and king is a little out of date. "I said the great man was always as lightning out of heaven; the rest of men waited for him like fuel, and then they, too, would flame." But "the rest of men" count for more in these days, and can flame with their own internal heat; they stand less in want of Prometheus, the bringer of fire from heaven or elsewhere.

Shall It Be Hair or No Hair
Cuticura Soap shampoos preceded by light touches of Cuticura Ointment to spots of dandruff and itching are most effective. They tend to arrest falling hair and promote a healthy scalp.

Sample each free by mail. Address "Cuticura, Dept. N, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

It Is Up to You And Cuticura

Feeling the Moon's Pulse.

That the moon is not the rigid solid body that has been believed, but that it is subject to periodic pulsations, is the discovery recently set forth by the astronomer P. Puiseux before the French Academy of Sciences. It would be impossible to describe here the elaborate method by which he ascertained this fact. Sufficient to say that his discovery is based upon a study of photographs of the moon taken at the Paris observatory from 1894 to 1909.

A PUZZLING CASE

EPILOGUE.

By Sir Gilbert Tressinger, Bart.

As one of the principal actors in the strange drama of the Black Carnation, I claim my right to be heard. Tancred has written the prologue; Major Granby has set forth the story, and I, therefore, must be permitted to finish with the epilogue. I am the more anxious to do this, as there is still a little matter to be revealed in connection with the affair, of which the general public are ignorant.

After my release from prison, I made a point of seeing Miss Maxwell, that noble woman, who, out of filial affection took her father's guilt upon her own shoulders. Her appearance was so much like that of my poor Marietta that I own I was much moved; for the twins resembled one another in every way, save that Miss Maxwell was, unhappily, blind.

So fascinated was I with this charming woman that I called on her again and again, for I pitied her greatly for her terrible affliction. It is Shakespeare, I think, who says that pity is akin to love, and certainly in this instance the remark proved true. At first, I merely pitied Miss Maxwell, but that feeling rapidly changed to love; for, besides having the beauty of her dead sister, she was quite as charming in every way. I loved [illegible] with my whole soul, and, now that she was dead, found that she still survived in the person of her blind sister. One thing led to another, and in the end I married this noble being, who had suffered so much, and whose afflictions were so many.

Many people, including Major Granby, tried to dissuade me from this course, as, from inquiries made, it was proved that her father, Simon Maxwell, was insane. Had his insanity been of an hereditary nature I perhaps might have hesitated, but I discovered that it was caused by an accident. During his early life he had fallen from a high ladder on to his feet, a distance of some twenty feet, and the shock, though breaking no bones, unsettled his brain. Afterward, he recovered, though ill for many months; but, for the rest of his life, he was more or less insane, which, in the end, caused him to commit that purposeless crime. On making this discovery I saw that there was no bar to my marriage with the daughter, for the insanity, being caused by an accident, was not hereditary. I, therefore, married her, blind as she was, and have no reason to regret the choice, which has given me such a charming wife.

Regarding Dallas, I heard of him the other day, as having been seen at Monte Carlo, in company with a lady, whom, I have no doubt, is Ilma Cellinski. Dallas acted in a cruel fashion toward me; but he is now being punished, for his Nemesis, in the person of that Polish fiend, is constantly at his heels. As the story of his actions toward me is more or less known, he dare not return to England, at the risk of being ostracised, and while he remains abroad, Ilma Cellinski will never leave him. She holds him fast in her toils, and, though I am sure, he loathes his bondage, yet he has not the power to break away; for until she dies, Ilma Cellinski will remain by his side. She loves him dearly; he hates her fiercely, but she is his visible punishment, and therefore I pity him.

As to my dear old friend, Major Granby, he is now abroad, recruiting, after the arduous task of writing his version of the case, but I expect when his book is published, he will hasten back to town, in order to hear what his friends have to say. I trust the book will be successful, though I am afraid the major will be dreadfully chaffed about his six theories, which he builds up and dismisses in such a lordly fashion. It is true all the names are changed, so, perhaps, no one will suspect Major Granby of being an author; but I am afraid our dear major cannot keep a secret, and that the fact that he is an author will leak out in the course of a day or two.

At all events, in spite of the major's peculiarities of style, and allusions to Pointer and his own belief, the story is truly set forth, as I know to my cost. Lady Tressinger is, unfortunately blind, and so cannot read the major's masterpiece for herself, so I will have to read it to her, which will be a good thing in one way, inasmuch as I can soften all reference to her unhappy father. He committed a great crime, it is true, but being insane, he was not mortally responsible for his actions. My only wonder is that he did not try and kill his other daughter also, in the hope of saving her soul; but, thank heaven, such a contingency was stayed by the discovery of the crime, his insanity, and his subsequent death.

And the famous black carnation no longer exists. In a short time people will deny that it ever did exist; but, however Maxwell managed to produce such an extraordinary flower, there is no doubt, that such will never be seen again, for he is dead, and into the next world has carried with him the secret of the black carnation.

(The End)

SATISFIED MOTHERS

No other medicine gives as great satisfaction to mothers as does Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets are equally good for the newborn babe or the growing child. They are absolutely free from injurious drugs and cannot possibly do harm—always good. Concerning them Mrs. Jos. Morneau, St. Pamphile, Que., writes: "I have used Baby's own Tablets and am well satisfied with them, and would use no other medicine for my little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THAT UPPER BERTH.

Getting Into It Sometimes is a Good Acrobatic Stunt.

The ascent to an upper berth is an art in itself, and, as one would expect of an art, it is long. I do not mean the ascent by stepladder. There are those who climb mountains by railroad, who let minions put on their bait, who require caddies to tee their golf balls, who hunt with beaters to drive the game toward them. There are also those who reach their uppers on carpeted steps.

Yet the heroic breed is not extinct. Luxury has not yet completely sapped our national virility. Some of us are made of sterner stuff. We climb unassisted and alone.

We are off. Quickly we assume position A, with both hands grasping the horizontal bar and with our right foot firmly planted on the chest of the old gentleman in the lower. We push off vigorously. If the old gentleman's chest be of a proper firmness and resiliency this push brings us to position B, with the left knee in the sharp knee hold on the edge of the upper berth and the right leg at large. The right leg is then brought convulsively upward and forward and laid carefully in the upper berth, and the left leg is at liberty to follow it. From this point on all is plain sailing.—Frederick L. Allen in Century.

INFANT WELFARE.

Insanitary Conditions Largely Responsible for High Death Rate.

If insanitation is without influence on the rate at which children die, how comes it that towns notoriously insanitary have an infant death rate four to five times that of clean, well-governed cities; that in the certain overcrowded slum areas the children die six times as rapidly as those in better class residential districts; that among 1,000 infants born to unskilled laborers only 700 survive the first year of life, while out of the same number of births [illegible] babies of professional men reach their first birthday?

If the causative organism of diarrhoea and enteritis is to be found in accompanying filth, particularly that of human origin, why does the death rate from these diseases suddenly increase during the third quarter of the year? The answer has been supplied by the investigations of Niven and other workers in the field of preventive medicine, who have shown that a prevalence of flies is closely followed by an increase in the number of deaths from summer diarrhoea, and that as the flies disappear, or become inactive, the epidemic passes away.—Dr. Joseph [illegible] in Journal of the Royal Sanitary Institute.

Baggery.

[illegible]

"Aren't you a reformer?" "Not a regular reformer," said Senator Sorghum. "A regular reformer doesn't have to run for office and depend on a salary. He can make all kinds of money merely by getting out before a crowd and telling people they'd better be good."—Washington Star.

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $4.00, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at [illegible] and $25.00, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING ST. W. HAMILTON, ONT.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

EPITAPHS FOR THE KAISER.

We make no apology for publishing the following poetical epitaphs for the Kaiser. They were composed at a party held near Glanford Station on Thursday evening, March 22nd. The Kaiser can have his pick in readiness when he shuffles off his carcass:

Here lies the German Emperor,
Beneath the British lines.
A load of coal before the hearse,
And the British guns behind.

Here lies the German Emperor,
The cold earth o'er his head.
He had an awful temper;
May the devil warm his bed.

Here lies the German Emperor.
Let's hope he rests in peace
For all of Europe's rejoicing,
Except, perhaps, just Greece.

Here lies the German Emperor;
He fought a brave fight but couldn't conquer;
Now where he's gone we do not know,
But we all hope it is "down below."

Here lies the German Emperor;
He is surely gone to hell;
He died with the distemper;
Satan sang "'Tis well."

Here lies the German Emperor,
Who thought all the world he could rule;
Fought a brave fight but couldn't conquer,
And found out he was a fool.

Here lies the German Emperor;
Oh, sing a joyful song;
The pearly gates won't let him in,
And hell won't stand him long.

Here lies the German Emperor;
He was crazy as a bug.
We hope he's lost his temper,
Now that his grave is dug.

PILES

You will find relief in Zam-Buk! It eases the burning, stinging pain, stops bleeding and brings ease. Perseverance with Zam-Buk means cure. Why not prove this? All Druggists and Stores—50c. box.

Zam-Buk

BEST LETTER BOXES.

Those of Hungary Are Superior to All Others.

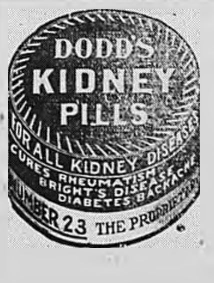
"One sees mail boxes in operation in Hungary, both in cities and small towns, that are the last word in efficiency, and they are certainly good to look at as to their design," says F. H. Schlesinger. "It was 11 years ago that I saw them, and they had then been in operation for many years, and I have yet to see anything better in any part of the world.

"The letter boxes are such that one does not have to lift any part of them in order to drop the letter. There is a wide slot on both sides protected by brass flaps swinging on hinges, so that the letter drops down without any possibility of becoming stuck near the top in the slit, as in our boxes. Furthermore, the letter carrier does not touch any letter when he takes the mail out. He has a bag with a locked steel oblong automatic top, the key to which is in the post office.

"This top of the bag is slid into a slot at the bottom of the mail box, which closes automatically and can only be opened by the insertion of this specially prepared bag. By virtue of this the entire bottom of the mail box rolls back and its contents drop straight down into the bag. Upon removal of the bag by sliding it outward the bottom of the box slides back into place and locks automatically, as well as the bag with its automatic top."—New York World.

A Lonely Continent.

Australia is the most isolated of all inhabited continents and is remote from the centre of all the world's activities. Northward the nearest distance to Japan is approximately [illegible] nautical miles; to India [illegible] miles. South America is [illegible] miles to the east, and Africa an equal distance west. From London to the capital of Australia ships by the Suez route cover approximately [illegible] miles, or [illegible] by the Panama canal [illegible] miles. From [illegible] the [illegible] via [illegible] Fiji or Tahiti covers a quarter of the circumference of the earth. Australia's only near civilized neighbor within a radius of 1,000 miles is Java.—National Geographic Magazine.



DIAMOND DIAMOND

Wisely obstinate is the farmer's wife who insists on quality—and who buys only the best sugar—because

ST. LAWRENCE RED DIAMOND EXTRA GRANULATED

—admittedly without any superior—will never cause preserves to ferment—as it does not contains the organic impurities which start fermentation.

SIMPLE PRECAUTIONS.

To Succeed with your preserves, buy good fruit—it must not be over-ripe.

Buy Good Sugar—St. Lawrence Red Diamond Granulated.

Sterilize your jars thoroughly.

These precautions prevent the usual causes of failure.

WE SUGGEST

that the 100 lb. bag of St. Lawrence Red Diamond Extra Granulated, is the best for the Farmers' Home.

It ensures full weight of the best sugar and avoids frequent trips to the store.

Your dealer can supply Red Diamond in Coarse Grain, or Medium, or Fine, as you may prefer.

Good Fruit deserves Good Sugar—get the

ST. LAWRENCE RED DIAMOND EXTRA GRANULATED

Sold in many styles and sizes of Refinery Sealed packages.

ST. LAWRENCE SUGAR REFINERIES LIMITED. - - MONTREAL.

4-4-17

DIAMOND DIAMOND

Buy Footwear

At Falconer's

BY doing so, you will save money, we are determined to make our shoe department as active in sales as our grocery department, and until Saturday June 30th. we will give unrivalled values in solid leather footwear. Every pair guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Don't miss this golden opportunity

Come in and let us show you through.

2 Specials to Offer This Week

18 prs. women's dongola, blucher cut, bals, nice soft kid, med. heel and toe, well trimmed worth $4.25 Special price $3.70

18 prs women's box calf, blucher cut bals, med heel and toe, well trimmed, a good serviceable shoe worth $4 Special price $3.40

Butter and Eggs Wanted

Falconer Bros.

Delayed Shipments

Just Arrived . . .

Now is the time to get goods that have been almost impossible to get. We have just got in delayed shipments, bought last fall at last last year's prices.

Cotton, Silk and Real Cashmere Hosiery

From 15c to 60c. To-day's values 25c to $1.00

Gloves in kid, silk and mercerized lisle, and chamoise lisle. Floor coverings, linoleums, and oilclothes. Get them quick, they are going fast. We cant replace them.

Bring your butter and eggs
And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.

Lawn Supplies

- Taylor-Forbes Lawn mower
- Rubber hose
- Hose nozzles
- Couplings & clamps
- Hose reels
- Garden shears
- Cultivators

Thomson's
Hardware Store

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS
To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Kawartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourists tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares, with liberal stop overs.

GET YOUR TICKET IN ADVANCE

J. S. Cameron, Agent, Port Elgin, Both telephones.

Mr. Hugh McLaren is auditing in Owen Sound this week.

Warden Izzard was in Chesley last week, presiding over county council.

CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE
Stratford, Ontario

Ontario's Best Business College
FALL TERM FROM SEPT. 4TH

Commercial, Shorthand and Telegraphy departments.

We have thorough courses, experienced instructors, and we place graduates in positions. The Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalog.

D. A. McLACHLAN, PRINCIPAL

A Handy Thing

The handiest thing in the world is a wrist watch, and especially so in the summer weather. You'll be interested in looking at them.

Let us show you one of our fine line of clocks

Rowlands
The Jeweller

W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

The 29th annual convention of Bruce county was held here this week with a very fair representation. Mrs. Ashcroft of Howden Vale, presided in her own efficient way, while the presence of the provincial Hon. President, Mrs. McKee of North Bay, added much to the interest of the occasion.

Reports of the work of the year were encouraging, but special attention had been given to patriotic work and a most creditable amount contributed.

Greetings of good cheer were brought from the church organizations and Women's Institute of the town, which together with the generous hospitality already accorded the delegates by their hostesses, gave to all that delightful "homey" feeling so necessary to a harmonious convention. Appreciative replies were made to these by the visiting ladies. The departments of general work were discussed very thoroughly, giving more prominence to the questions of the hour viz: the lately acquired Franchise, its responsibilities and possibilities: the menace of the wet canteen and other temptations to the overseas soldiers; the importance of temperance education among the young people, by intelligent instruction in Scientific Temperance etc. Mrs. McKee conducted a very instructive school of methods at one of the early sessions where other departments were taken up, among these being Railways and Fairs, Anti Narcotics, Press and Tidings, Soldiers and Militia, each of which has its own specific value and claim to special attention. Mrs. McKee with her quarter century experience in white ribbon work was a most reliable "Court of Appeal" in vexed questions, and in her definite, concise way cleared up many problems and gave helpful suggestions for more effective work.

The evening meeting was very enjoyable. Rev. Dr. Scanlan presided. He, as well as Revs. Backberrough and Mann spoke in appreciative manner of the W. C. T. U. organization, its aims and influence.

To the kindly welcome, Mrs. Ashcroft made reply in kind, touching briefly upon the necessity of caution in exercising the franchise, guarding against the possibility of drifting into party politics instead of making intelligent deliberate decisions guided by a trained conscience. She claimed that woman has only reached the threshold of her kingdom. She is the keeper of the nation, the guardian of the nation's wealth, and it is to be hoped the ballot in her hands will not only mean politics and more politics, but a means to the development of a nobler citizenship and higher standards of national life.

Delightful music was furnished by the Methodist church choir, Miss Smellie of Chesley, Mrs. Walker and Miss Ewald and a large chorus of boys and girls.

Mrs. McKee's address was comprehensive and interesting throughout. She claimed the need of continued effort in lines of social uplift. There should be no laxity of interest because some advance has been made. The work is not finished, but there are more weapons with which to fight the forces of evil.

Prohibitory laws should be so incorporated in the laws of the land and in the minds of youth that they cannot be repealed. The cigarette menace and the social evil were touched upon briefly.

Two most enjoyable features of convention were the dainty lunches so generously served in the church and the lovely auto ride, in the latter the gentlemen of town showing themselves not a whit less anxious to do honour to their guests than the ladies had been.

Resolutions of thanks to all who contributed in any way to the comfort and entertainment of the delegates was passed most heartily. Other resolutions were as follows:

Whereas it is fairly generally conceded that the environment surrounding our soldiers in England is of a nature to degrade and demoralize the best that is in them, wherefore resolved, that this convention of W. C. T. U. of Bruce Co., convey to the Federal Government its conviction that it is the duty of the government to protect by stringent regulations the purity of our young men and guard their health as well as morals by causing to be banished from the precincts of the camps, the influence of the "strange woman," the liquor saloons and to discourage the use of the baneful cigarette.

Resolved that we endorse the passing of a bill for the conscription of men for overseas service, believing it to be only fair and just that all classes should contribute to defend the rights and liberties of our nation.

Resolved that the thanks of the women of Ontario are due the Premier of Ontario Sir. W. Hearst and also the leader of the opposition Hon. N. W. Rowell for bringing in the bill of enfranchisement of women and carrying it without division.

The plans of work for the ensuing year deal particularly with the urgency of active co-operation of the children and young people by forming organizations of "Y's" and Loyal Temperance Legions.

Also eternal vigilance to offset the encroachments of the liquor interests by introduction of alcohol in the form of "near beer" etc. etc.

The election resulted as follows:

Pres. Mrs. B. C. Ashcroft, Howden Vale; First Vice Pres., Mrs. P. Moore, Teeswater; 2nd. Vice Pres., Mrs. W. Halliday, Chesley; Rec. Sec., Miss H. Smellie, Chesley; Cor. Sec., Mrs. Simpson, Wiarton; "Y" and L. T. L. Secretary, Mrs. Busby, Port Elgin.

GRESHAM

M. Nelson is busy remodeling his house.

James Pace has again started killing for the beef-ring circuit.

Miss Flora McDonald is visiting friends at Walkerton

Miss Edith Ross and her friend motored up from Guelph and spent the week end visiting at her home.

J. D. McGillivray spent Sunday visiting friends on the 8th.

McLean Young motored to Glamis over Sunday.

T. Currie has purchased a Ford car.

Miss Lizzie Barrie has returned to Toronto.

S. Brown, of Amberley, is visiting his brother Mr. Henry Brown, 10th, Bruce.

NORTH BRUCE

The St. Andrew's and Queen Hill Sunday schools will hold their picnic at Nelson's Grove on Saturday next.

On Wednesday of last week the W. M. A. met at Mrs. James Cinley's and did Red Cross work. On Wednesday July 4th, the regular meeting will be held at Mrs. D. Riebel's.

Mr. Joseph and Miss Mary McCulloch attended the wedding of their brother, Rev. Douglas McCulloch.

Mr. Wm. Airth has purchased fifty acres on 8th, Bruce from O. Nicholson.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan McKinnon and Mr. Alex McDonald from North Bruce with Mr. Albert Nicholson and Rev. W. S. Backberrough motored to Durham recently as delegates to the Owen Sound Baptist association.

A number from Port Elgin attended the evening service last Sunday at 10th. Bruce.

WILLOW CREEK

On Sunday week a young man invited several young people to ride in his buggy. After a short ride he endeavored to turn round. The road being narrow he backed into the ditch, which is about six feet deep. There was no damage to the outfit, but the occupants got wet feet.

L. Schwass had the misfortune to break his collar bone, while engaged in plowing, on Friday last.

After a lingering illness Mrs. John Schmidt passed away on Friday last at her home on the 6th, at the age of 68 years. She was a devout Christian worker, and always in her place in church and Sunday school. The funeral took place on Sunday to the Evangelical church. Rev. Mr. Gischler was assisted by Rev. Mr. Kappel. Interment took place in the Evangelical cemetery. The funeral was the largest held here for some time

DENTAL

W. P. POWER, D. D. S., Dentist, office over South End Store. Hours 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

LEGAL

W. BURGESS, LL.B., Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public, &c., &c. Office, Hutton's Block. Private and other funds to loan.

UNDERTAKING

J. W. PATTISON, Funeral director and embalmer. Residence on premises. Rural phone No. 22.

BLACKSMITHING

N. EIDT, Blacksmithing, horse-shoeing and general repairs. Tire-setting a specialty

* * *

Miss M. Witting is home from Hamilton for a holiday.

Earl George, of Toronto, was visiting at Mr. A. F. George's.

Messrs. John McCauley and S. J. Cameron, of Wiarton, were in town on Friday last.

Miss Eva Thede has returned home having visited her sister Mrs. M. Reinhart, Stratford.

Mrs. Kalbfleisch and Mrs. Vaupel were in Walkerton and Clifford this week.

"Wibby" Wankel has left a purse at The Times office containing some small change which he made out of a peep show. He says it must go to the Red Cross.

A sturgeon 5 feet 10 inches was caught at the dam at Southampton last week. The fish weighed over 100 lbs.

Too much rain in Central Ontario, is causing considerable worry to farmers.

Everything is in readiness for the big celebration here on Monday. There will be a fine string of horses here.

Mrs. Koenig, from Ayton, is visiting at Mr. George McIntee's.

At the recent gathering of publishers from all over Canada Bruce county newspaper men were again honored by having one of their number, Mr. J. J. Hunter of the Kincardine Reporter, made chairman of the weekly section, a position held for the past three years by the editor of The Port Elgin Times, while the latter was given a place on the Advisory board and made a director. There were about 500 publishers present One of the chief features of the sessions was the presence of Editor Rathom of The Providence Journal, the paper that did so much for the allies in removing Bernstorff, Dumba, VonPapen and Wernerhorn from the United States, and the paper that showed President Wilson the necessity of joining the allies.

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now, will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places, and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College

Owen Sound, Ontario

remains open all summer to help meet the demand for trained office help. Enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Dept. A., Owen Sound, Ont.

Summer Millinery

Straw hats, Crepe hats, Also Sport hats in pique corduroy and ratine.

Also the latest styles and shades

MISS M. BAKER
Arlington Block

DRESS UP FOR DOMINION DAY

YOU should not delay your suit furnishings, hat and shoe purchase another day, as some of our best lines are becoming rapidly depleted. Our values are the best to be had, and selling at about present manufacturers prices.

A suit that will please you no matter what your requirements are, is waiting for you here. Prices from $12.00 to $25.00

Hats and Caps

Of course you want one of those dandy trim-looking caps, that we're selling at $1 and $1.50 each But you also want a new straw hat of the latest block. You can pay as little as 75c or as much as $3 and get big money's worth in either case New soft felt hats too, at $1.50 to $4.50

Shoes

For men and boys, in all styles and leathers. Big values. Heavy work shoes at 2.50 to $5.00 a pair. Men's fine shoes at 3.50 to $7 per pair Boys shoes from $2 to $4.00 per pair

New shirts & Ties

Did you ever wish for a shirt that was really different than any you ever wore before? Here's your chance to gratify that desire, for we are showing some new shirt ideas that that will give you real pleasure.

Also new sport shirts at $1.00 to $2.00

New summer neckwear at 25c, 50c, 75c and $1.

Boy's Suits

Suits that will stand hard wear and look neat and dressy always, from $5 to $13

Children's wash suits at $1 to $2.50 per suit.

Also Fleet foot shoes for men and boys.

F. R. BARBER
MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

Wallpaper, Wallpaper

WALLPAPER at Pattison's is selling as Cheap as ever. Over 500 lines to choose from. We carry the largest and best stock in Bruce county. Call in and inspect our goods and be convinced. You can save money, by buying wall paper at Pattison's. No trouble to show goods.

All papers trimmed free of charge

Eggs taken in exchange for Wall paper . . .

Electric Vacuum Cleaner For Rent

: : J. W. Pattison : :
Furniture Dealer and Undertaker

Goes to Press

JULY 20TH

Please report changes required to our Local Office, to-day.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada

Have you paid for the paper you are reading.

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 27 PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 4, 1917 $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

COMING EVENTS

10c. per line
No notice less than 25c

PATRIOTIC GARDEN PARTY—At John Cook's Tuesday, July 31st. Watch for particulars.

GARDEN PARTY—By the Ladies Aid of Methodist church North Bruce, on the lawn of Mr. Albert Brooks, at the Elbow. Thursday July 5th. Lots of music and a fine supper will be served from 6 to 8. The Southampton orchestra will be present. Admission only 25 and 15c. Everybody come. Meet your friends at this big party.

RED CROSS—Regular meeting at 8 p.m to-night

ANNUAL MEETING of the Women's Institute for the district of West Bruce will be held in the Library at 2 p. m. on Saturday July 7th

THE W. C. T. U. will meet on Tuesday July 10th, at Mrs. J. H. Smith's.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN—A lawn social will be held at Mr. Henry Thede's Tuesday July 17th under the auspices of the Evangelical Ladies Aid. The Southampton orchestra will furnish music and a splendid program will be given. All kinds of lunch served, also a good fishing pond. All welcome. Admission 10 cents. Half proceeds go to Red Cross.

Allan Bell Meets With Serious Accident

While on front street, and standing against the electric light pole at the Bank of Hamilton on Monday, Mr. Allen Bell was hit with an auto and his right leg broken and bruised.

The auto was driven by Miss Hunter of Kincardine, who was endeavoring to evade another auto when the accident happened.

Mr. Bell was removed to the home of Mrs J. McKenzie, where he is resting nicely. The left leg is also severely bruised, and it will be considerable time before Mr. Bell is able to be around again.

Red Cross Women Have Good Day

The Red Cross women, who worked so hard on Dominion Day, from all reports, did big business at their booths on the grounds, and by providing lunches up town.

Of course, the business detail has not been settled up yet, but no doubt by next issue the officers will have a statement.

The people patronized them well, and the ladies were kept very busy from early morning until nearly midnight.

Teacher Wanted

Qualified teacher wanted for U. S. S. No. 1 S. A. & E. (Dunblane) Duties to commence Sept 4th. Apply, stating salary and experience, to John Scott, Secy treas Port Elgin R. R. 1. 27 2 tc

E. Hamilton will give a cut of from two to four cents on all boiling meat. Prices are likely to be higher, but all will be given benefit of this reduction. We favor the consumer. Try our butcher shop for meats. We will continue to keep all during the summer all good things in meat, at lower prices than usual. Try us. Prompt attention to all orders. Anyone having good butcher heifers for sale, notify us. E. Hamilton, butcher. We want only the best of cattle.

WANTED—Girl with good education, for composing room. Apply in own hand writing, to Editor, of Times office.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McCarrol and little son, of Meaford, are visiting Mrs. Wm. Forrester.

Mrs. John Thede, Henry Thede, D. H. Chappel and their families; Mrs. Godfrey, and the Misses Ewald attended the campmeeting near Mildmay on Sunday.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

FOR SALE—Three young yorkshire sows. Safe in pig. Apply James T. Wallace. 27 4 t

MOTORCYCLE FOR SALE Indian single cylinder motorcycle in perfect running condition. Snap only $20. Apply Power & Coulter garage. 27 1 tc

LOST—In park, a silver stick pin grey stone. Kindly leave at Times office. Reward.

FOUND—Purse containing small sum of money, at lakeview park. Apply Times office.

WANTED—We are paying the highest prices for beefring hides. B. Zetkind, Port Elgin.

FOR IMMEDIATE SALE—Good frame house with all the modern conveniences, good fruit bearing trees. A piano also for sale. Apply at The Times office.

FOR SALE—Good rubber-tired buggy. Apply G. McLaren.

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE
Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address
LOUIS BLOCH,
29-4tc Owen Sound, Ont.

Jubilee Celebration Brings a Great Crowd

Best programme of Races ever put on --- The weather was fine.

The Autos Brought Great Crowds Here Monday

Port Elgin carried out another big celebration on Monday in its usual good style. For 28 consecutive years the business men and citizens generally have rallied round the standard, and despite the many demands in other lines the men have attended the meetings well, and all plans were carried out without a hitch.

Then the weather man was thoughtful for us, and ordered up a glorious day, for which everybody was truly thankful.

The people, too, for miles around, put great faith in the celebration here, and this year, the program of races was the best ever. The time was fast, and for the large number entering the program was kept moving nicely.

The attendance was hardly as large as last year, owing to the fact that the railways are not giving reduced fares this year, neither are they providing excursion trains. Therefore we lost somewhat in attendance. But the autos were a big factor in transporting people, and they nearly made up for the deficiency of the trains.

The night program consisted of the relay race and a big display of fireworks. The Hand Co. always do things handsomely and they provided many beautiful sights in the fireworks line. Chairman J. J. George had charge of these.

President Rauney, who heads the big committee, is a very pleased man to day. Along with his work as president he undertook looking after the track, and arranging for the horsemen, and the fact that the races were carried out so successfully is largely due to his being on the job all the time. Chairman George proved a faithful man, and never fails to put his big shoulder to the wheel. He undertook the arranging and firing of the display of fireworks, and it was well done. Other officers who have stood loyally by the committee, and given a hand were the secy treasurer, Vice President Hilker, and the general committee consisting of Messrs. F. R. Barber, G. McLaren, J. D. Falconer, R. C. Crawford, J. S. Cameron, Dr. Power, H. H. Stevens, G. McMurray, H. Bindauer, C. E. Schwartz, A. E. Eaton, J. W. Pattison, Dr. Philps, H. Koebke, Tom Smith, F. W. Aylsworth, A. F. George.

THE RACES

To have a good race meet a good starter is needed and the committee had that man in Mr. Stanley Barnes, of Palmerston. He is the best official the local committee ever had, and contributed much to the success of the races.

The clerk of course was Dr. Mann, the judges were G. McLaren, R. J. Rauney, Dr. Philps, and J. J. McKay, flagman, J. Zant.

It was the general opinion that the racing was much better than in previous years. The horsemen declare the track to be the best in Ontario, and the accommodation good. Mr. W. P. McKay, of Detroit, a gentleman much interested in horses, said to the secretary: "Your races were extra good The 2.10 race was one of the best I have ever seen. Port Elgin men are to be congratulated on their fine track, also."

In the first race Free Bond took three heats, and second in another winning first money. The time being 2.29½. Star Patchen, jr., was second money, and Ellen Hall third. Ellen McKinley, Dora McKinley, and Eel Dillard were starters in this 2.50 race.

In the 2.30 number there was some close finishing. Pacing Patch took first money in three straight heats, Rosia Winters, second, and Brino K. third. The time given was 2.21½.

In the 2.10 Greatest Hearts showed supremacy in three straight heats with Berlin Bell a close second, Chester Mitchell third. Paddy McKinley was also in this race. Time 2.15.

THE AUTO PARADE

The committee hoped to create some interest among auto owners by offering liberal prizes for the best decorated cars but there were only two willing to dress up their autos, Miss Dulcie Stevens and Mrs. A. E. Eaton. Both cars were very pretty, and if others had taken hold with the same spirit the procession would have been a very beautiful sight. The committee looking after this were Messrs Hilker, Smith and Aylesworth, and they awarded Miss Stevens first place and Mrs. Eaton second.

The Kincardine Pipe band provided good Scotch music for the day. During the evening program they especially did good work, and were much enjoyed.

THE RELAY RACE

Paisley won easily this year and retain the [illegible] which they held last year. This is the fourth year for the big race. Chesley won the first two years and Paisley the latter two.

For Paisley, Cargill made a big lead in his relay, and practically made it safe for his team. The race created intense interest, and each school had its supporters on hand. Principal Nelson's boys put up a strong race and pushed the winners closely.

Port Elgin tried hard, but did not show the good condition of the other lads.

Messrs. B. Hilker, A. F. George and Aylesworth had charge of the race and presented to the runners the medals and pins. Following were the teams:

Paisley—A. Stanley, D. Cottrill, L. Cargill, D. MacGregor.

Kincardine—C. Brown, A. Clements, H. Campbell, D. McInnis.

Port Elgin—E. Ridout, F. Morton, T. Fleming, J. Fleming

NOTES

Many faithful officers helped to make the program a success. Mr. Wilkie and Mr. Henry have taken tickets at the big gate for 27 years. Also Mr. Lowry has looked after the property for 25 years. In fact there was a very faithful corps of ticket men, gate men and constables, who did their work well.

There was the best of order on the grounds, no accidents and no losses of any kind reported to the officials.

A number of minor accidents happened on the streets on Monday. Cars were numerous, and some of the drivers were everywhere but in their proper place on the streets. As a result several buggies and cars were broken.

ONE OF THE 160TH. BATT.

PTE. JOHN LANGE.

Pte. Lange is one of the stalwarts of the 160th. Mrs. Lange and her family of three little ones reside in Port Elgin.

Running Shoe . .
. . Reduction Sale
Is now going on. Special reduction on our entire stock. Drop in and get fitted out for the holidays.
Falconer Brothers

Strawberries!
Finest homegrown strawberries now on sale.
Order your crate now
Falconer Bros.

PHONOGRAPHS!
How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.
Louis Bloch's Music Store
Owen Sound

Mrs. Andrew Sutherland Stricken Suddenly

Death came suddenly to Mrs. Andrew on Saturday June 30th. Just before noon she was found by friends sitting in her rocking chair quite dead.

Since the death of her husband, in March last, Mrs. Sutherland had with her as company, her granddaughter, Miss Margaret McEwing. The latter had gone to her home for a day or two, and Mrs. Sutherland was alone. She enjoyed good health, her sudden death being caused by heart failure.

The late Mrs. Sutherland was born in [illegible], Scotland. At twelve years of age she came with the rest of her father's family to this country and lived for a short time in York county before settling on the townline of Bruce and Saugeen. She passed through the trials and experiences common to the lot of the early settlers of the early days. In [illegible] she was married to the late Hector McArthur who lived but a short while, and at her whole life was fraught with many trials. About the year [illegible] she was married to the late Andrew Sutherland who predeceased her only about [illegible] months. Perhaps her most distinguishing characteristic was her liberality toward those who were in need of her help and sympathy. There were many of her old neighbors who could amply testify to her large hearted and disinterested concern about the well being and comfort of the community in which her lot was cast. She was a staunch and devoted member of the Presbyterian church altho of late years prevented from attending public worship.

About 14 years ago she, with her late husband, retired from the active duties of the farm and moved into town to enjoy a well earned rest. Her children who survive are John H. McArthur in Alberta, Andrew, on the homestead 2nd. of Saugeen and Mrs. Hammond, in the town of Perth.

The funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Mann officiating. Interment took place at Port Elgin.

Teacher Wanted

Teacher wanted for S. S. No. 2, Arran and Saugeen, duties to commence after holidays. Apply stating salary and experience. Must be Protestant. Address [illegible] Harper, Secy, Port Elgin R. R. 2.

Mr. and Mrs Jackson, of Maple, were at J. A. Chapman's over the holiday.

The services announced for the U. B. church last issue have been cancelled Prof Bange having visited here last week.

On account of Dominion Day Report a number of personal and local items have been crowded over to next issue.

Mrs. Hattie Clark and daughters of Cargill, spent over the 1st July with Mrs. T. Steele, Port Elgin.

TOWN TOPICS

Geo. Kuhl has purchased a Ford.

Dr. Power was in Oshawa last week.

Send the names of your guests to The Times.

Mr. and Mrs J. J. MacKay of Wiarton, were in town over the first.

Miss Kate Macfarlane, of Toronto, is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. McFadden returned last week from a visit to Markdale.

Master Duncan Falconer is well again after his severe illness.

Mr. and Mrs. John Zant, of Hamilton visited at M. Zant's over the holiday.

Dr. Philps is erecting a summer cottage near Mr. R. M. Lowry's.

The Orangemen of Tara are holding a picnic on the 12th of July.

Mr. John Rock and family, of Mitchell spent the week-end in town.

Mr. Wm. Bannister and family of Toronto, were home for the celebration.

Mrs. H. Labengayer of Detroit is visiting Mrs. Geo. Chapman.

Presbyterian Sunday School will observe flower day Sunday morning.

Mr. Pat McKenzie from Chinook, Alberta, visited Mr. Wm. Lamont last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hepner have returned from a ten day trip through the Thousand Islands to Montreal.

Mr. Heller has been improving his implement warehouse with a cement platform.

Mr. S. Ranton, of The Stratford Beacon, is visiting with Mr. W. J. Farrell, in Bruce Tp.

Mr. Fullerton and family of Paisley, have moved to their new summer home at the lake.

Mr. W. Falconer has returned from Walkerton hospital, having recovered from a severe attack of pneumonia.

Mrs. Dorland, has returned to Guelph after a holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Crowe.

The McVicar property has been sold by the Bank of Hamilton, to the Stevens-Hepner Co.

Pte. Garnet Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs Wm. Mitchell, of Toronto, formerly of Port Elgin, was wounded last week.

Principal Cameron has received from the Department of Education a certificate qualifying him for the position of public school inspector.

Mr Gordon George, Detroit and Mr. Chester George London, were visitors at Rich. George.

Mr. and Mrs. Coll McDougall and son of 4th of Bruce, were visitors in town on Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. S. Burwash.

Mr. W. D. MacKay of Detroit, was here for over the first. His mother accompanied him, and will remain for the summer.

The lawns and boulevards never looked better than on July 1st. So many more people are taking pride in their lawns.

In the W. C. T. U. report last week it should have been mentioned that a union choir made the proceedings most enjoyable by the rendition of several selections.

In connection with the garden party at Mr. John Cook's, Mr. Wesley Smith and Mr. John Cook have each contributed a half bushel of clover seed which will be drawn for.

Mr. Neil McDougal, Mr. A. Rowand, Mrs. Wentworth and Mrs. Geo. Thomas were at Mr. J. H. Wismer's Wednesday last arranging for the annual meeting of the Board of Agriculture here on Saturday afternoon.

Miss Gilbert has handed her resignation in to the public school board. On Saturday the pupils of her department, who were promoted to the fourth form, presented her with a beautiful bouquet of cut flowers, and a [illegible] box of [illegible].

"The tremendous rain of Sunday evening washed out several culverts. Residents in the township report the water in the fields and in the [illegible] was as high as in the springtime. In Kincardine township, where the rain was almost a cloudburst it will cost thousands of dollars to rebuild and repair bridges and culverts washed out.

In all the churches on Sunday special reference was made by the pastors to the jubilee of confederation. The National Anthem was sung and some special patriotic decoration was used. In the Presbyterian church the pulpit was draped with a large flag. Miss Webb and Mr. Busch rendered delightful solos, while the choir sang "O Canada." Rev. Mr. Mann gave a fine address on "Canada's Possibilities."

Martha Stephens charged David Ritchie with assault, at the court held here Saturday. Both parties are from the reserve. Ducks belonging to Miss Stephens, got into the oat field of Mr. Ritchie. This resulted in a quarrel in which defendant pushed plaintiff over spraining her arm. Complaint was laid before J. J. George, J. P. who fined Ritchie $5 and costs and ordered to pay the doctor's bill as well. Later Miss Stephens, thought she would sue for damages. At Court here a week ago Saturday at which two lawyers Messrs. Klein and Start appeared it was argued by defence that it was not fair that a man be tried twice. Court was adjourned to get decision of Attorney Dixon, who decided that Ritchie had been duly tried and fined, and the damage suit was dismissed.

Board of Agriculture Meets Here Saturday

The Board of Agriculture for West Bruce meets in the town hall in Port Elgin on Saturday afternoon. The usual business of the election of officers and other matters are to come before the board.

The annual meeting of the Women's Institute takes place at the same time in the public library.

These meetings usually bring a large number of people to town.

Rapid Work

The ladies of the Red Cross had two fine booths on the grounds Dominion Day. The erection of these booths was looked after by a number of men on Thursday afternoon last. Those contributing to the work were Messrs F. R. Barber, W. Lamont, A. Vandrick, F. Rowen, J. Cruikshank, H. Fenton, J. McCallum, R. M. Lowry, Sid Bell, J. J. Busby. They put the booths together in good shape and in rapid time. The Stevens-Hepner Co. very kindly loaned the lumber.

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for 500 lines or over in a year 5c a line; regular weekly users of liners, 8c per line casual users of liners, 10c per line Black type, count two lines for one.

McMurray's for pure ice cream.

Oats for sale. North End Store.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

Fleet Foot shoes at F. R. Barber's.

The new straw hats are being shown at F. R. Barber's.

White tennis trousers, $1.75 a pair at North End.

Fresh oranges, and lemons always on hand. North End Store.

If you want a pint of good cream try McMurray's.

Another shipment of feed wheat. North End Store.

McMurray keeps good milk for sale.

Congoleum border, 36 inches wide, 60c per yard at North End.

Boys wool and cotton Jersies at South End.

Dyola Dyers in Black, Navy and all scarce colors, now in stock. South End.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

Fleet foot running shoes, all sizes, white, tan, navy. North End store.

Men's Balbriggan and Merino underwear at the South End.

Reliable work shirts and heavy shoes priced away below present market prices now being offered at F. R. Barber's.

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koebke's

Try Koebke for your next grocery or fruit order

William's shoes, solid leather goods at lower prices, at South End.

Koebke sells Neilson's soldier chocolate. Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front

Just arrived, a splendid assortment of Misses and children's wash dresses. Prices 50c to $1.75 each. North End Store.

Red Cross supplies. Special prices in grey Scotch fingering yarn. South End.

Worth while savings—Every shrewd individual will consider these savings worth while when he sees the extra values we are offering in men's and boy's [illegible], summer underwear, shirts and fine and heavy shoes. F. R. Barber.

Mr. and Mrs. Burwash left on Tuesday for Winnipeg and Sask. to spend the summer visiting their family.

TURNER'S

The Mill Creek, during the rains of the past few days, overflowed its banks and was running a swift stream over cattlefields and root patches. It is doubtful if it was ever higher this time of the year.

North Bruce and St. Andrew's Sunday Schools held their annual picnic at Nelson's Grove Saturday. The day turned out an ideal one and everyone enjoyed themselves. The sports of the afternoon were baseball and races in which many took part. A game of baseball was played with North Bruce U. B. team who were also having their picnic but they were out by 3 to 1.

Mrs. Donald McInnis is visiting her daughter Mrs. Wm. Jeffry.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McKinnon of Burgoyne, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Eby.

On Sunday July 8th a memorial service will be held in St. Andrew's church Saugeen for the late George Muir, who gave his life for his country some time ago.

A number of people are changing their buildings these days and doing a little fixing up. Mr. Lewis Eby has put a new roof on his barn and Mr. Jas. McCulloch has fixed his house.

On Sunday July 1st, Dr. McDougall preached a very interesting and appropriate sermon. The young ladies of the congregation had the church nicely decorated with maple leaves and flags.

Miss Daisy Pollock spent a few days with her friend Miss Miller, of Port Elgin.

BULL FOR SERVICE—Terms $3 for season cows. Payable January 1st. Wm. Robertson Dairyman, Port Elgin.

Treasures of Hair and Skin Preserved by Cuticura

If you use Cuticura Soap for every-day toilet purposes, with touches of Cuticura Ointment now and then as needed to soothe and heal the first pimples, redness, roughness or scalp irritation, you will have as clear a complexion and as good hair as it is possible to have.

Sample Each Free by Mail

Address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. N, Boston, U. S. A." Sold throughout the world.

CRUSHING A NATION.

Cambray League and Fall of Venetian Republic.

The League of Cambray was the political combination of continental Europe in 1508 against the Venetian republic, which tore from the "Queen of the Adriatic" her resplendent crown and forced to her lips the cup of deepest humiliation.

Back of the league and causing its formation were jealousy, ambition and the desire of crippling the proud people, whose history was the wonder and envy of the world. Too powerful to be overthrown by any single power, it was resolved that Venice should be crushed by the combined forces of all Europe.

During the terrible days of Attila about A. D. 452, Venice was founded out among the lagoons of the Adriatic, where, it was felt, safety would be found from the ravages of the Hun. The history of the thousand years from the foundation of the city to the year 1508 reads like magic. Rising from the waves, Venice became the wonder of the world. Her navy cut the waters of every known sea. Her merchants were the greatest on earth. Her bank was the financial centre of the world.

And for more than ten centuries did Venice remain the glory of the world, the centre of wealth, opulence and power, the home of culture and intelligence, the hearthstone about which sat the finest of the intellectual graces and hospitalities, and such she might have remained, but for the League of Cambrary, which with its overwhelming forces, gave her a blow (at Agnadello in 1509) from which it was impossible for her to recover. — Exchange.

Minard's Liniment for sale everywhere.

THE CROW.

An Appreciation of a Generally Unappreciated Native Bird.

Country people are now much more friendly to the crow than they were in my boyhood. He is not so black as he was painted. The farmers have learned that he is their friend, for all his occasional corn-pulling and chicken-stealing. His is the one voice you are pretty sure to hear wherever your walk leads you. He is at home and about his own business. It is not his grace as a flyer that pleases us; he is heavy and commonplace on the wing—no airness, no easy mastery as with the hawks' only when he walks is he graceful. The pedestrian crow! how much at home he looks upon the ground—an ebony clod-hopper, but in his bearing the lord of the soil. He always looks prosperous; he always looks contented; his voice is always reassuring. The farmer may be disgruntled and discouraged; his crows are not. The country is good enough for them; they can meet their engagements; they do not borrow trouble; they have not lived on the credit of the future; their acres are not mortgaged. The crow is a type of the cheerful, successful countryman. He is not a bird of leisure; he is always busy going somewhere, or policing the woods, or saluting his friends, or calling together the clans, or mobbing a hawk, or spying out new feeding grounds, or taking stock of the old, or just cawing to keep in touch with his fellows. He is very sociable; he has many engagements, now to the woods, now to the fields, now to this valley, now to the next—a round of pleasure or duty all the day long. Not given to solitude and contemplation like the proud hawks, not pugnacious, never or rarely quarelling with his fellows, cheerfully sharing his last morsel with them, playing sentinal while they feed, suspicious, inquisitive, cunning, but never hiding; as open as the day in his manners, proclaiming his whereabouts at all hours of the day, looking upon you as the intruder and himself as the rightful occupant. The stiller the day the more noise he makes. He is never a sneaker, never has the air of a prowler. He is always in the public eye or ear. His color gives him away, his voice gives him away; on the earth or in the sky he is heard or seen afar. No creature wants his flesh, no lady wants his plume, though a more perfect and brilliant ebony cannot be found in nature. He is a bit of the night with a sheen of the stars in it, yet the open day is his province; publicity his passion. A spy, a policeman, a thief, a good fellow, a loyal friend, an alarmist, a socialist, all in one. Winter makes him gregarious, as it does many men; at night he seeks the populous rockery in the woods, by day he wanders in bands seeking food. In spring he establishes a crow network all over the country and is rarely out of earshot of some of his fellows. How we should miss him from the day! Among our community of birds he is the conspicious, all-the-year-round feature. We do not love him, there is no poetry in his soul; but he challenges our attention; he is at home in the landscape, he is never disgrunted. Come rain, come shine, come heat, come snow, he is on his job and is always reassuring. —John Burroughs in "Art World."

HAIR GOODS

—FOR—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $3.50, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $25.00 and $35.00, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM

62 KING ST. W. HAMILTON, ONT.

(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

STRENUOUS WORK SOON TELLS ON YOU

BUSINESS MEN AND BREADWINNERS THE VICTIMS OF NERVOUS EXHAUSTION.

When worry is added to overwork men soon become the victims of nervous exhaustion—neurasthenia—the doctor calls it. Some have no reserve strength in their systems to bear the strain; others overtax what strength they have. If you find that you are nervous and not sure of yourself, that you sleep badly, and wake up tired and aching, your nerves are out of order. Other signs are inability to take proper interest in your work; your appetite is fickle; your back feels weak, and you are greatly depressed in spirits. One or more of these signs mean that you should take prompt steps to stop mischief by nourishing the nerves with the food they thrive on, namely the rich, red blood made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills have cured thousands of cases of nervous disorders, including nervous prostration, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance and partial paralysis. Here is an example. Mr. P. H. Callan, a well-known business man in Coleman, P. E. I., says: "I owe my present health, if not life itself, to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had always been an active man, and when I began to run down in health paid little attention to it, as I thought it only a temporary weakness. As time passed, however, I found myself growing worse, and consulted a doctor, who said that I was not only badly run down, but that my nervous system was badly shattered. I lost flesh, my appetite was poor. I slept badly and notwithstanding the doctor's treatment grew so weak that I had to leave my business and was confined to the house. Time went on and I was steadily growing weaker, and my friends were all greatly alarmed for my condition. In this condition I was strongly recommended to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as the doctor's medicine was not helping me I decided to do so. By the time I had used three boxes I could tell that they were helping me. When I had taken eight boxes of the pills I felt able to attend to my business again, and people were surprised to see me out. I continued the use of the pills until I had taken twelve boxes, by which time I was feeling as well as ever I did, and was being congratulated by all my friends on my full restoration to health. I feel now that if I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at the outset I would not only have saved much money spent on doctor's bills, but would have had renewed health sooner. I cannot speak too highly of this medicine, and would recommend it to every man who feels weak, nervous or run down."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Motor Driving at Night.

Every automobile owner should cooperate in solving the most difficult problem of night driving—glaring headlights. They are more than objectionable; they are a source of constant danger. To meet another at night with its dazzling, brilliant lights shining straight in your eyes is a very trying ordeal. It absolutely blinds you and forces you to either slow up until he passes you or risk either a collision or going into a ditch. That many laws have been passed in various parts of the country regulating the kind of lights that may be used indicates that thoughtful motorists are united in their efforts to eliminate every condition that tends to create discomfort and danger to the automobiling public.

Brilliant, glaring lights are not necessary. Several lamps are available that have practically solved this problem, each in its own way, and every car owner should do his own part in making the glaring light only a memory to the great motoring public.—C. P. Christopher in Southern Woman's Magazine.

Helping Old Rubber.

Rubber that has lost its elasticity may be rejuvenated by immersing it for five minutes in a bath of glycerin mixed with twenty-five times its volume of distilled water and heated to 70 degrees C. and then drying it with filter paper.

A nation's character is the sum of its splendid deeds.—Henry Clay.

A Toronto Hotel Flirting With Rural Ontario For Business

Rather a unique way of stating it, but it will attract your attention and that's the first duty of a flirt.

The matter of Hotel Accommodation is a serious problem just now. Since September last, many hotels have found it necessary to close.

The WALKER HOUSE (The House of Plenty) has actually been doing an enormous business since last September. Its wonderful service, and every detail connected therewith have been responsible for its tremendous patronage. The house is more like a home than a hotel, so skilfully and wisely is it managed.

When you come to the city stay at the WALKER HOUSE, where home-like comforts are the dominating characteristics.

Special attention paid to Ladies and Children travelling without escorts, at Toronto's Famous Hotel.

Reasonable Rates THE WALKER HOUSE GEO. WRIGHT & CO. Proprietors

MOLYBDENUM.

Rare Mineral Which Toughens Metal in Big Guns.

Few people realize the remarkable characteristics of Molybdenum. It may even be stated with little fear of controdiction, that only a small percentage of the population of this continent know that there is such a thing.

And yet this rare mineral is playing an important part in the affairs of the world just as present, particularly on the other side of the ocean. For molybdenum is what is used to harden the linings of Germany's big guns.

In its natural state it looks like a cross between graphite and bismuth, but its uses are very different.

In a general way molybdenum acts like tungston and vanadium in hardening steel, but is more active. The effective radio of molybdenum to tungsten or vanadium seems to be between 1 to 2 and 1 to 3 respectively.

For imparting to steel great strength and resistance to strain these three metals are indispensable. They each command approximately the same price, namely, $3.50 per pound, but molybdenum has a great advantage over the other two because less than one half as much is needed to produce the same results.

For large guns, rifle barrels, car axles, etc., it is used by all the leading nations of the world to-day, which really did not realize its vast importance until Germany's great guns, containing 3 per cent. to 4 per cent. of molybdenum alloys started to smash all the "impregnable" fortresses of ordinary guns.

Molybdenum is used also in electrical contact making devices, X-ray tubes, voltage rectifiers, electric lamps, dentistry and in innumerable other ways.

The great future of molybdenum is the economy it can command in the use of steel.

Colorado and Arizona produce the bulk of the molybdenum now mined in America, but recently valuable deposits have been found in Canada. The latest field to be uncovered is in Renfrew, Ontario.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

OUR UNEXPLORED LAND.

Fortunes May Await Seekers in the Vast Vacant Stretches.

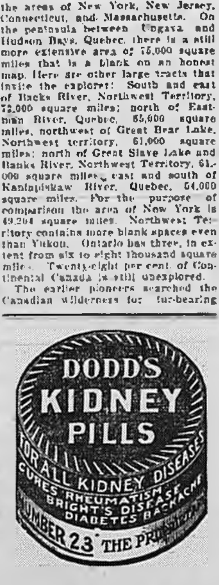
Unexplored Canada is the subject of an article, by Charles Camsell, of the Geological survey, at Ottawa, in "The Geographical Journal." He says:

"I find in Western Canada areas aggregating 642,000 square miles in extent which must still be considered as unexplored, and in Northern Quebec about 259,000 square miles more, making an aggregate of 901,000 square miles. This does not include areas under 4,000 square miles in extent."

East of Reindeer Lake and Kasan River, in Manitoba and Northwest Territory, there are 73,000 square miles of unexplored country, it is estimated. This is larger than Missouri or North Dakota, and larger than the sum of the areas of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. On the peninsula between Ungava and Hudson Bays, Quebec, there is a still more extensive area of 75,000 square miles that is a blank on an honest map. Here are other large tracts that invite the explorer: South and east of Backs River, Northwest Territory, 72,000 square miles; north of Eastman River, Quebec, 65,000 square miles, northwest of Great Bear Lake, Northwest territory, 61,000 square miles; north of Great Slave Lake and Banks River, Northwest Territory, 61,000 square miles, east and south of Kaniapiskaw River, Quebec, 54,000 square miles. For the purpose of comparison the area of New York is 49,204 square miles. Northwest Territory contains more blank spaces even than Yukon. Ontario has three, in extent from six to eight thousand square miles. Twenty-eight per cent. of Continental Canada is still unexplored.

The earlier pioneers searched the Canadian wilderness for fur-bearing animals; today men penetrate it to look for minerals and oil. "If we superpose these unexplored areas on the geological map of Canada," says Mr. Camsell, "we shall find that the greater part of them lie in what is colored as pre-Cambrian, or in geological formations similar to those in which, under certain conditions, the rich deposits of copper, nickel, iron, silver, and gold of Northern Ontario occur." But there must still be productive agricultural land in the Peace River and Athabaska River regions marked as unexplored. In the basin of the Mackenzie River "is believed to be one of the largest areas of possible oil bearing country yet unexplored on the face of the earth." It is to be noted that experts estimate that the oil supply of he United States will be exhausted in thirty years.

Indians have reported lakes in Yukon sixty and seventy miles long that no white man has ever seen; the Mackenzie mountains even the Indian knows nothing about; and it will be many years before the mystery of Northern Canada is lifted for the cartigrapher. Fortunes await the daring prospector; for the hunter there is an abundance of game and fish, and innumerable virgin peaks invite the mountain climber.



Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia

THE CLOVE.

Something About a Well-Known Article of Commerce.

The clove has been the text of jokes ever since men hit upon it as a means of disguising, or rather overpowering, the odor of other things which they put in their mouths. The joke is perhaps nearly as old as the clove, and as old as man and his fondness for strong drink.

Notwithstanding that the clove has been so useful as a humorous subject, it is really an important little thing in the commerce of the world, and has been for many centuries. The tree of which it is the bud is indigenous to the Moluccas, often called the Spice Islands, a small group of islands of the Indian archipelago. The treasures of these spice islands were the lure of many of the early navigators of the far eastern seas. It has been written: "Cloves were one of the principal oriental spices that early excited the cupidity of western commercial communities, having been the basis of a rich and lucrative trade from the early part of the Christian era."

After the Cape of Good Hope had been circumnavigated by Vasco de Gama and his hardy adventurers, the Portuguese took possession of the clove trade and held it in their control until the opening years of the 17th century, when the Dutch took forcible possession of the Spice Islands. Not content with the produce of the wild cloco trees, they set out clove plantations in the Molucca Islands, as well as in many of the neighboring islands, and these parts of the world continue to this day to be the chief source of the supply of cloves, though they are now cultivated in a number of other lands, but the cloves of the Indian archipelago remain the standard cloves of commerce.

The clove tree has been introduced into the western world and now is, and for more than a century has been, grown in Brazil, Guiana and the West Indian Islands. Clove trees now grow in groves in the Island of Mauritius, where plantations were set out under the auspices of the French in the 18th century, and in Zanzibar and Pemba. These last-named islands, of the east coast of Africa, have become important producers of cloves. Java and Sumatra, in the east, also make their contribution to the world's supply of cloves.

The word "clove" has come down from the French word "clou," which means a nail, because of the resemblance, partly real and partly fanciful, which the dried clove bears to a nail.

Though the clove had had for centuries and still has an honorable standing in the culinary art as a condiment, it has long held a place in the distillation of liquor and in medicine. Nearly everybody knows something about oil of cloves, and most persons at one time or another have used it as a remedy or palliative for toothache, it being a valuable local anaesthetic which has found use in professional dentistry as a means of lowering the sensitiveness of the dentine of a tooth undergoing repairs.

Oil of cloves is obtained from cloves by distillation, and the principal constituent of this volatile oil is called by chemists eugenol. Another of the main constituents of oil of cloves is hydrocarbon. Most persons by pressing hard upon a clove, or by biting it, have observed that it contains a very pungent volatile oil. In the Pharmacopeia cloves are rated as of value as a tonic and carminative, but their principal employment in pharmacy is in connection with some other remedy.

The clove is the flower bud of a tree called by botanists "Egenia caryophyllata." It is an evergreen and grows from 30 to 40 feet tall. It has crimson flowers that bloom in clusters at the ends of small branches. There are usually from ten to twenty flowers in a cluster. The leaves of the tree are large and oblong. The cloves, which are the undeveloped and unfolded buds, are at first white, then light green and at the time they are mature enough for harvesting are bright red.

In a dried clove one can easily identify the four sepals of the flower, while the ball in the centre of the clove is formed by the four petals, which had not unfolded at the time of gathering the buds. It is said that a clove tree begins to bear when it has reached the age of ten years, and if it remains healthy it will continue to be productive until it has passed the age of three-quarters of a century. The unripe buds are generally beaten from the tree by poles and are caught in sheets spread on the ground. After being gathered they are dried in the sun. Clove planters generally harvest two crops a year from the same tree. The first crop comes into bearing in June and the second crop in December. —Washington Star.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

COWARDS IN DAYLIGHT.

But the Great Eagle Owls Are Fierce Fighters by Night.

There are about 200 kinds of owls. Some are tiny owls, some are big eagle owls, twenty-eight inches in length, very fierce and strong, ready to attack a man who goes near, able to kill fawns and large game birds and to do battle with the golden eagle. The courage of one of these golden owls deserts it in the daytime, and then little birds, led by a crow, may find it and drive it into the open and tease and worry it without danger to themselves. But, when night comes and the bird can see, only a mighty eagle dare do battle with it.

The hawk owl is one of the owls which work by day. It is big and strong and savage. There are owls with great ear tufts of feathers and owls with none at all. Some are snowy white; others are mottled. Some live in holes in the ground with prairie hogs and such animals; some make burrows for themselves. But most owls live in hollow trees or in church belfries or other high towers. Among so many kinds of owls there are some, of course, that do harm, but most of them do more good for men than evil.—Exchange.

What to Do for Fainting.

This condition may be caused by many things. Anything which disturbs the circulation of blood in the brain will produce a feeling of faintness and unconsciousness. The heat in a crowded car or room will cause fainting.

Persons faint when exhausted, when suffering from indigestion, from the sight of blood (oftentimes), from loss of blood. Sudden tidings of an illness or death may shock one so as to cause loss of consciousness.

Whatever may be the cause of fainting, always place the person in a recumbent position—on the bed, sofa or floor. See that the head is lower than the feet. It is better to lift up the feet and legs so as to facilitate the flow of blood to the brain. Unfasten the shoes, wristbands, belt, collar — nothing must be allowed to bind the person, as this delays the return of blood to the brain.

Bathe the face with cold water, give plenty of fresh air to breathe and water to drink if the patient is conscious. Send for a physician if a person in a faint does not respond quickly to the fresh air and cold water treatment.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited:

Dear Sirs,—I had a bleeding Tumor on my face for a long time and tried a number of remedies, without any good results. I was advised to try MINARD'S LINIMENT, and after using several bottles it made a complete cure, and it healed all up and disappeared altogether.

DAVID HENDERSON.

Bellisle Station, Kings Co., N. B.,
Sept. 17, 1904.

WAY OF THE INCAS.

More Light On Building of Wonderful City of Machu Picchu.

Interesting facts concerning the builders of the wonderful city of Machu Picchu, the ancient Incas, are given in a communication to the U. S. National Geographic society by Professor Hiram Bingham, director of the Peruvian expedition of 1915, sent out by the society and Yale University. The ruins of this great centre of a vanished civilization were discovered by Professor Bingham and his party after they had been lost for generations. Some of the results of the expedition contained in the director's report to the National Geographic Society are given in a bulletin from the society's headquarters in Washington.

The buildings of Machu Picchu, writes Professor Bingham, had an elaborate system of highways throughout this little known and almost unexplored country which lies between the Urubamba valley and the Apurimac. The region was densely populated, and Machu Picchu was its capital.

Lack of timber, the prevalence of heavy rains during part of the year, and the ease with which stone might be procured early led to the development of stone as a building material. Strength and permanence were secured through the keying together of irregular blocks. The upper and lower surfaces of these stones were frequently convexed or concaved, the convexity of one stone approximating the concavity of the adjoining stone. In constructing these walls the pure arch was not evolved.

Their pottery is marked by simple and graceful lines, bearing a striking resemblance to that of ancient Greece and resembling in its simplicity and utility some of the modern vessels at present in use in French kitchens. Owing to the extreme moisture of the climate, the remains of cloth are very few; but we know that the Inca peoples actually did arrive at a high degree of skill in the manufacture of textiles through their ability to procure the wool of the alpaca. By the use of hand looms artistic and intricate patterns were produced, and cloth of the most delicate textures was not uncommon. Their metal articles were easily preserved and so we have been able to learn that the people of Machu Picchu were extremely skillful makers of bronze.

Their surgical tools were probably of bronze or obsidian. Surgery appears to have been practiced to a considerable degree, if one may judge by the large number of trepanned skulls that we have found in caves within a radius of twenty-five miles of Machu Picchu. In some cases the cause of the operation appears to have been disease; in others evidence leads us to the conclusion that the operation was intended to relieve pain caused by wounds received in battle. Since the favorite weapon of the Inca peoples was the sling, and clubs were common, it is not surprising that the skulls of many soldiers should have needed the relief that came from skillful trepanning. In the art of war they exhibit skill in defense rather than offense. Fortifications constructed with salients and re-entrant angles so as to admit of lateral fire were not uncommon.

They had no machinery and did not use iron or steel. They used levers and inclined planes. They also made huge fibre ropes, out of which they constructed long suspension bridges. They thought nothing of handling blocks of stone weighing five tons and upward. Indeed there are numerous stones that weigh over 15 tons which were fitted together with a skill that has amazed all beholders.

It appears that the Incas and their influence throughout the Andes extended no farther north than the known limits of the llamas and the alpacas; in fact, the development of their culture may be said to have depended in large measure on their success in domesticating these varieties of the South American camel so long ago that no wild members of either species remain. Their ability to raise and train hundreds of thousands of llamas which could carry from 60 to 100 pounds apiece enabled the Inca peoples to carry out engineering and agricultural works far more difficult than they could have accomplished had they been obliged to depend on human burden-bearers.

Most unfortunate was the failure of the Incas to develop an alphabet, or even some form of hieroglyphic similar to that which existed in Southern Mexico and Central America. It is remarkable indeed that a people who succeeded in equalling the ancient Egyptians in architecture, engineering, pottery and textiles should have fallen so far behind in the development of a written language. This is the most serious obstacle that stands in the way of our learning more of that enterprising race.

ISSUE NO. 27, 1917

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Wellandra Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

SEND A DOMINION EXPRESS Money Order. Five dollars costs three cents.

How to Be Happy Though Married

Domestic happiness does not come as a matter of course, but, like everything else worth having, must be worked for.

Don't imagine that because you have won each other you need no longer be affectionate.

Carry over into the wedded life the refinement of manner that characterized your wooing days.

Once in awhile let your husband have the last word. It will please him and be no loss to you.

Husband and wife are one, but it is a parody on unity if each wants to be that one.

A rose strewn on life's path while weary feet are painfully walking over it is more than wreaths for the dead.

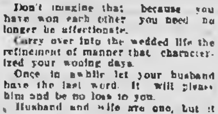
Make your home a cabinet room where all the affairs of the household and sometimes of business come under comparison and advisal.

Many a failure would have been avoided if men had consulted with their wives.—Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters.

Maine's Knights.

Maine is the only state in the Union which can boast of having three native born sons knighted by English kings. They are Sir William Phipps of Woolwich, once royal governor of Massachusetts, who was knighted in 1694; Sir William Pepperell of Kittery, who captured Louisburg for the British, and Sir Hiram Maxim.—Exchange.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE



SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

MUST SUPPORT RUSS ARMIES IN OFFENSIVE

All Russia Congress of Workers' and Soldiers' Delegates Decides.

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

Bill Submitted to Provisional Government for Big Reform.

Petrograd Cable—Resolutions deprecating the attempted demonstrations of Friday and Saturday in Petrograd on the part of the Maximalists have been adopted by the All Russia Congress of Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates. The resolutions declare that such demonstrations are fatal to the objects of the revolution, and that no such manifestations should be undertaken without the sanction of the Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates.

The resolutions reiterate the urgency of an appeal to the democracies of all nations to influence their Governments to adopt peace formulas, based on no annexations or indemnities, and to contribute in every way possible to the convocation of an international congress of Socialists, with a view to the restoration of an international solidity of workers and the elaboration of definite conditions of peace and of measures to permit of them being put into practice.

The attention of the democracies of all the belligerent powers is drawn by the resolution to the lack of energy shown in their protests against recent statements of their governments regarding their usurpatory war aims, which, it is asserted, place the Russian revolution in an extremely difficult position, and hampers an international union of workers.

With a view to the solution of the problems, the congress urges the necessity of sending immediately deputations to Allied countries and neutral countries and inviting to Russia from those countries delegates. The congress protests against the difficulties which imperialist governments have placed in the way of sending such delegates.

The resolution says that the congress considers it indispensable that the provisional Government forthwith take every measure to accelerate the revision of treaties with Allied Governments, with a view to categorical denunciation of any usurpation policy, and putting into practice the foreign policy outlined by the democracy. They call for the speedy overhauling and democratization of the personnel of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the diplomatic body.

Finally, the congress in the resolutions declares that the war will not be ended by the efforts of international democracy alone. It says the Russian revolutionary democracy must in every way contribute to the reinforcement of the fighting strength of the army, which must be both offensive and defensive, because the breaking of the Russian front would mean the defeat of the revolution, and prove a fatal blow to the entire cause of international democracy. The congress specially considers that the question of an offensive should be settled exclusively from the viewpoint of purely military and strategic considerations.

LIBERTY OF CONSCIENCE.

Petrograd Cable.—The Ministry of the Interior has submitted to the provisional Government a bill establishing freedom of conscience, in which it is proclaimed that possession of civil and political rights no longer depends on religion. For a change of religion official permission will not be needed.

Up to nine years of age a child's religion is determined by its parents; if there is disagreement, the child takes the mother's religion. Over nine years of age the religion cannot be changed without the consent of the child itself. Over seventeen years, religion cannot be changed without the parents' or guardians' consent.

Another important reform provides for courts of administration for the protection of a citizen against illegalities of officials of the central government, or of local self-governing bodies. Every commune will have at least one court of administration, in which the central government can appeal against illegal actions of self-governing bodies, self-governing bodies can appeal from illegalities of the central government, and private citizens can appeal against either.

The Minister of Public Instruction has submitted a bill proclaiming complete freedom of teaching. Heretofore, the Ministry determined who could and who could not teach in private families. Henceforth families may choose their own teachers. In view of the lack of teachers and professors, the Minister of War has agreed not to call to the colors any more teachers who are now in the schools and universities, and to discharge teachers now at the front who are not in the fighting units.

The provisional Government has issued a decree giving the right to advocates and attorneys to practice their professions.

UKRAINIAN AUTONOMY.

Petrograd Cable.—The declaration of the Ukraine National Assembly claiming autonomy for Ukraine without separation from the rest of Russia has been communicated to the Ukraine military congress.

The Workmen's and Soldiers' Deputies will send a delegation to Sweden, France and England to prepare for the convocation of an international conference on the basis of the programme adopted by the executive.

DANGERS AFTER WAR.

Japanese Minister Foresees Need of Great Care.

Tokio, Cable.—Viscount Ichiro Motono, Foreign Minister, in an address to the Diet yesterday expressed the conviction that the entrance of the United States in the war, with unshakeable determination to defeat Germany by employing all her force, would greatly contribute to the realization of the goal sought by all Entente Allies. He rejoiced that Japan and the United States are now closely collaborating against common enemies. Their cordial relations have an increasing tendency further to become cemented in mutually and sincerely uniting all efforts.

"We cannot foresee," said Viscount Motono, "when the end of the struggle which has ravaged the world for three years will come, and I do not believe all difficulties will be finished with this war. I can even affirm that the greatest difficulties will begin with the end of the war. Then we will need all our force and all our energy to establish a durable peace in the world, and defend our rights and interests."

WAR'S COST TO BRITAIN HUGE

For Last Few Weeks Was $37,000,000 Daily.

Advantage of U. S. Entry Being Felt.

London Cable.—The total national expenditure for the nine weeks from October 8 to December 8 last was on a daily average of £6,615,000, says a statement in detail, prepared by Andrew Bonar Law, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, for the House of Commons.

For the five weeks from April 1 to May 5, 1917, the statement shows the daily average of expenditure was £7,571,000, while for the five weeks from May 6 to June 9 it was £7,882,000.

For the ten weeks from April 1 to June 9, the expenditure is shown to have averaged £7,702,000.

For the respective periods set forth the actual war expenditure, daily, the Chancellor states, was £5,714,000, £7,157,000, £5,980,000 and £6,722,000.

The increase in expenditure for army service, says the statement is in part attributable to payments and advances which are ultimately recoverable. The expenditure for munitions was affected by temporary causes, such as more rapid delivery made on the termination of certain orders, but there will be some excess under the heads of munitions over the budget estimate.

Regarding loans to the allies, continues the statement, the Government was still liable during the opening weeks of the current year, to fulfill commitments undertaken before the entry of America into the war. The advantage of America's entrance, he explained, was now being felt.

ALLIES SPEED UP AIR PLANS

Machines to Blind the Enemy During War.

Then for Use in Peace—U. S. to Aid Russia.

London Cable says—Indications of the allied plan for a continuation of their air supremacy over the Germans are seen in Russia's efforts to reorganize her aerial forces and also in numerous reports of America's activity in planning to build aeroplanes.

It is evident that the next few months will see all the allied nations constructing air machines of all types on an unprecedented scale, looking not only to continuing their work in the air during the war, but with thought for the future, when aeroplanes undoubtedly will have great importance in commercial and Governmental transportation.

There is a general feeling that America's [illegible] and [illegible] are behind Russia's move in this direction. The Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates has called to conference all the aviators and aeroplane manufacturers in Petrograd. The object of the assemblage, as officially stated, will be to consider methods of improving the fighting capacity of the Russian aviators, reorganize the whole service on new principles and coordinate the development of the aerial fleet in view of the country's requirements after the war. The notice indicates the desire that all interests concerned be properly represented, including wireless operators, photographers and medical men interested in aviation.

This is just one small move in the general plan for the utilization of machines and trained men for work after the war. Every nation now realizes that a vast development of the industry is coming. Both England and France have appointed committees which are now actively engaged in working out plans for the utilization of the knowledge of aircraft gained in the war for commercial purposes when peace leaves them with thousands of machines and trained aviators.

Even the second baseman may be first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen.

RUSS TO FIGHT TILL WORLD SAFE

Ambassador at Washington Assures the Senate.

Against Any Separate Peace Being Made.

Washington Report.—In another stirring address to-day at the capital, Ambassador Bakhmetieff, of Russia's diplomatic mission, gave a solemn pledge that the Russian people and army, "convinced that a separate peace would mean the triumph of German autocracy," are prepared to fight on beside America until the world has been made safe for democracy.

The Ambassador spoke before the Senate and was given a reception almost as enthusiastic as that accorded him Saturday in the House. On no previous occasion since the war began has Senatorial reserve been cast so completely aside. At the conclusion of the address a resolution was adopted by an unanimous consent expressing the Senate's gratification over Russia's spirit.

"Russia rejects with indignation any idea of separate peace," said the envoy. "Striving for a lasting peace based on democratic principles, established by Democratic will, the Russian people and army are rallying their forces around the banners of freedom. Russia wants the world to be safe for democracy. To make it safe means to have democracy rule the world."

Many of the rumors of internal dissension in Russia, M. Bakhmetieff said, grew out of mistaking the great changes taking place in the whole fabric of the Government to transform it to democratic standards. He pleaded for patience and confidence that these changes, although they might take time, would be worked out successfully in the end.

To-night the Ambassador and other members of the Russian mission were given a reception by Secretary Lansing, with President Wilson among the guests.

NO REPRISALS FROM BRITAIN

For Brutal Air Raids by the Germans.

Will Not Descend to Level of Huns.

London Cable.—No intention of yielding to the widespread demands for reprisals on German towns for the German air raids on England was shown in a debate on the subject to-day in the House of Lords. The question having been raised by Lord Strachie, Baron Sydenham, former chairman of the Air Board, deprecated the policy of reprisals. He said he felt sure that in future years the British would be thankful they had not lowered themselves to the level of the Germans. Furthermore, it was not generally realized that bombing reprisals of a military nature were a systematic and daily occurrence behind the German lines. He invited the Government to tell the country something about these operations.

In behalf of the Government, the Earl of Derby, Minister of War, expressed belief that the whole country would associate itself with the suggestion that England should not try to imitate German brutality. He added, on the authority of the head of the aircraft service in France, that for every bomb the Germans dropped behind the British lines, the British dropped a hundred behind the German lines. This bombing, he said, had a solely military object, and the Government considered that nothing should be done to tie the hands of the military authorities in the employment of the aircraft at their disposal in the best way to bring the war to a successful conclusion.

U. S. RED CROSS OVER-SUBSCRIBED

Washington Report says—Oversubscription of the Red Cross One Hundred Million Dollar Mercy Fund seemed assured to-night when the eight-day nation-wide campaign concluded with final rallies in hundreds of cities.

The country's total outside New York City late to-night was $[illegible], and pledges still were pouring in at the rate of about a million an hour. New York City's total, although not announced, was believed to be near $[illegible]. Definite figures will not be available until to-morrow, when cities report the result of their last-minute efforts, but Red Cross officials to-night said they have no doubt that the totals will show that American generosity has responded in the same spirit as for the Liberty Loan, with millions more than asked.

FIGHTING ALONG RUSSIAN FRONTS

London Cable.—The fighting activity along the Russian front has again extended into the Carpathians around Kirlibaba, on the Bukowina frontier. In Galicia, between the Zlota Lipa and Narayuvka Rivers and along the upper Stripa, the fighting between the Austro-Germans and Russians is described by Berlin as "lively."

MAKING GOOD HUN RAVAGES

Allies' Great Work Where Foe Wasted France.

Starving Fed and Housed and Land Planted.

French Front, Cable.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—British, French and American civilians are working in closest co-operation with the French military and civil authorities in restoring the lands devasted by the Germans when they hurriedly quit the lines they had held for two years from Noyon to the Somme. The Associated Press correspondent, after visiting Noyon, went through the entire district, and observed what was being done.

Others have followed the example of the Federal capital, and have devoted their energies to the succor of particular localities.

There are 243 villages and hamlets spread over the French zone alone of the country which the Germans before their retreat tried to make into a desert. One hundred of these small communities are now just heaps of stones and bricks, without one habitable room or cellar among them while of the remainder one-third were partly demolished, and the rest only lightly.

In this region, 25,000 old men and women and young children under fifteen years were left without shelter or food by the Germans. Some 12,000 of these were evacuated immediately to the interior of France, where a proportion of them joined their relatives.

The military authorities have grappled in a masterly way with the vast problem which confronts them of providing for a large destitute community immediately behind the lines, where a shield of French flesh and steel was holding back the Germans from a possible return. They set to work to organize the country and its people. The first step was to provide food, and this was done through the military commissariat, as there was no means of civilian transport of supplies from other parts of France.

Then came the question of putting in cultivation again the 250,000 acres of agricultural land comprised in the French zone. It was late in the season, but a practical scheme was at once formulated and put into effect. Officers of high rank were placed in charge. The devastated country was divided into seven sections, and composed of twenty-five communes, and each in charge of an officer with skilled aides. Horses were lent by the army, broken plows and harrows were repaired by motor mechanics of the army, seeds of all kinds were procured and work on the land was begun. For this manual labor was necessary, and this was found among the many peasants and small farmers in the ranks.

Thirty American tractors were found lying idle in a depot not far from the stricken district, and these were transported to the places where they could be most useful and put to work. The labor was dangerous, owing to the presence of unexploded shells under the surface of fields, but only one incident has occurred from this cause.

In this way about 4,000 acres have been plowed and sown with grain and grass, and another 2,500 acres plowed and cleared of weeds, while with the help of British, American and French donors every family has been provided seeds to form a truck garden, with the result that sufficient produce is expected to make the community self supporting.

The Germans had also cultivated a considerable tract of land, and had sown it with rye, which they had tried to destroy before their hurried departure, but with only partial success, for at least 2,500 acres will produce crop this season.

In the meantime houses are being repaired where possible, and temporary shacks erected where no habitation exists. Schools have been opened, military doctors attend the sick, a postal service has begun, and so far as possible life is being made endurable for the thousands who suffered so much during the German occupation and virtually lost everything they possessed when the invaders departed.

RHEIMS STILL BEING SHELLED

Paris Cable.—The infantry activity in the region between Soissons and Rheims has given way entirely to artillery duels in the sector of Moulin de Laffaux, and a continuance by the Germans of the slow demolition of Rheims with gunfire.

"The day was calm, save in the region of Moulin de Laffaux, where the artillery fighting was quite active, and in the region of Rheims, which was violently bombarded," says the War Office to-night.

MACHINIST KILLED

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—[illegible] Lamarre, aged thirty-five, who resided at [illegible] street, this city, was [illegible] killed at 10.30 this morning [illegible] machine shop in the Algoma Central Railway's roundhouse. He was testing an empty gasoline tank to see if it was air tight, by filling it with air from an air pump, and apparently put too great a pressure on. The tank exploded, hitting him under the chin and tossing him in the air. Dr. McLurg was summoned and stated that death had been instantaneous. He leaves a wife and two children.

Classy Fabrics.

Foulard.
Silk muslin.
Patterned chiffon.
Organdie over satin.
Organdie and pongee combined.
Silk jersey and taffeta in one suit.
Beige and black at one and the same time.

ITALIAN FRONT.

Austrians Try Desperately to Recover Ground.

Rome Report.—Tuesday's War Office statement said:

"On the Asiago Plateau fighting was resumed yesterday. Since last night our troops have opposed the desperate efforts of the enemy, who, notwithstanding his heavy losses, is attempting to retake the positions recently lost in the Monte Ortigara sector. Attacks and counter-attacks positions. Divisions at the same time by the enemy on other portions of the front have been completely stopped.

"On the Carso last night our troops rectified somewhat the advance of our front line south of Versic.

"The aircraft were very active yesterday. One enemy machine was brought down by battery fire and fell within its own lines north of Asiago. During the night our aircraft bombed military works at Nabresina and Prosecco. All returned safely."

U. S. FARMER MAY DECIDE WORLD FIGHT

British Minister of Agriculture Says Food Question May Settle War.

THE OUTLOOK

Shortage May Come to Britain, but No Danger of Famine.

London, June 26.—"Discontent of the stomach is more to be feared than discontent of the brain—that is why we value the co-operation of American farmers." This statement was made by R. E. Prothero, Minister of Agriculture, to the Associated Press to-day. "The outcome of the war," said Mr. Prothero, "may ultimately hang on the question of food supplies, and the American farmer is allotted the essential part to play in the great struggle for freedom."

Discussing the moral and material affect on agriculture by the entrance of the United States into the war, Mr. Prothero continued:

"To vindicate the cause of humanity and national liberty, the great democracy of the western world, true to its traditions, has taken its stand on the side of the Allied peoples. In clearcut, memorable phrases, President Wilson stated the high ideals animating the United States in joining the Allied cause. In his address April 15, he puts to the forefront an appeal to the farmers. He bids them to carry on in their plowlands the same spirit that animates their brother Allies in trenches, on sea and in munition factories. From the grim spectacle of human carnage, and from the feverish race of piling up munitions, the farmer stands aloof. His task is to make hills, plains and valleys stand so thick with corn that they shall sing. Yet the man who drives a plow is helping, as is the man who shoulders a rifle.

"The need of food for man and beast is great, whether peace is won or war prolonged."

Replying to a question as to what the United Kingdom is doing in the way of food production, Mr. Prothero said that fully one-third of labor usually employed on land has been taken for war work. "Short-handed, harassed by a hundred new difficulties, the farmers are doggedly struggling to increase grain production by half," continued the Minister. "Upwards of 120,000 women in England and Wales, old and young, drawn from every section of the country, are toiling on land, toiling hard and continuously. We have quadrupled our garden [illegible]. After a hard day's work, men return to their homes to labor with their wives.

"There has been no complaint concerning [illegible] substituted for the wheaten loaf. The situation has been accepted, and everywhere there is determination to eat [illegible] bread, however [illegible] it may be. Brewing has been reduced to a minimum. This is a serious deprivation to men working at furnaces, in foundries and harvest fields, who for generations they have been accustomed to the use of beer, and believe in the aid it gives them. It comes to be a part of their daily diet, and they know of no other substitute to replace it.

"We are further contemplating a drastic reduction of our live stock, so more grain may be available for human food. These privations will have to be endured, but we do not fear such a shortage as would mean starvation."

Mr. Prothero then discussed the value of co-operation of the American farmers, and continued:

"There is risk that the shortage of food may strain endurance to the breaking point. There is as yet no indication that we even have distantly approached that point, but endurance might snap if, for instance, the milk supply failed through inability to feed the dairy herd, because then lives of little children would be threatened. Thus, there is no greater question [illegible] solved in food supply than the loss of ordinary comforts of life, or even reduction in the accustomed necessities. For this reason it is a welcome relief to us to know that the farmers of the United States are cooperating with the Allies, that they fully realize the essential part they play in the struggle for freedom, that they are bringing into their work the spirit of self-sacrifice and endurance, and that they are determined to put out the last ounce of their strength to support the war on the plowlands of the United States. Here and there God speed the plow."

It's hard to size people up. The greatest follies are sometimes committed by the smallest fools.

ALLIED SHIPS FOUGHT SUB'S.; ONE WAS SUNK

Further Details of British Steamer's Victory Off Ireland.

CHASED SUB. OFF

American Gunners Forced Pirate to Flee in Same Zone

An Atlantic Port Cable.—Members of the crew of a British steamer which arrived here to-day reported having sunk an attacking German submarine. The British vessel sent a shell into the U-boat's magazine, causing an explosion, which parted the undersea boat about amidships. Each end sank separately. The British steamer was uninjured.

The submarine was five miles distant and running away after having attacked the steamer nearly 400 miles off the coast of Ireland.

According to the story told by the gunner of the British steamer, the submarine was first seen when she sent a shell at the steamer from a distance of about 3,000 yards. It fell short, and the steamer immediately swung around so that her stern was toward the U-boat, getting the naval gun at work. Eleven shots were fired in rapid succession, and each struck very close to the German.

"I knew I had the range after the second shot, and so did the German," said the British gunner.

"The Germans were using their two guns fore and aft, while we had only one, but the shells were falling short and he started to run. I followed him with shell, and the twelfth, the one that sent him down, struck just abaft the periscope. He was then more than 9,000 yards away.

"We could all see the boat break in two and go down, disappearing within a few minutes. I sent four more shots into the water at the spot where she disappeared to let any of the Bosches, who might have escaped, know that we were still around and would take care of them if they appeared.

"At the same time our battle was going on, the wireless operator picked up the call of an American vessel that arrived at an Atlantic port last Friday and also caught a message that another American ship had been torpedoed and was sinking. The message said that the German was firing on the lifeboats. That vessel was about 30 miles to the south of us, and I do not know how they made out."

FIGHT PLUNGER OFF.

An English Port, Cable.—American naval gunners successfully fought off a big German submarine which attacked an American passenger liner off the coast of Ireland last night. A torpedo fired by the submarine missed its target by less than twenty feet.

The encounter occurred at midnight after the liner had been in the submarine zone many hours. A large number of passengers on board were reading in the cabins or lying in chairs on the deck ready for an emergency.

A staff correspondent of the Associated Press was talking with the lieutenant in charge of the guns' crews when the gunners crowded about the forward guns, and also the ship's officers on the bridge, sighted the wake of a torpedo as it went spinning toward the bow. The lieutenant jumped to his station as the lookout cried: "Torpedo and submarine off starboard bow."

The ship swung around so sharply that the decks were tilted to an angle of twenty degrees. Immediately there came the bark and flash of a gun.

Passengers binding life-belts about themselves, swarmed to the decks. The ship's officers hurried among them counselling calmness. Another gun, this time pointed farther astern, was fired, and the projectile in its flight struck a long boom swung over the side, to which a log-line was attached.

The liner at that moment was wallowing between two great waves. The conning tower of the submarine, outlined for a moment against the sky, was all that was visible to the gunners in the darkness.

They soon lost sight of the raider in the darkness, however, and were unable to tell whether any of the shots fired hit the mark.

Two minutes later gunners at the stern of the ship saw a conning tower above the surface of the water in the wake of the steamer. The vessel was rolling heavily and the gunners were unable to get their gun pointed before the submarine again disappeared beneath the surface.

BRITISH MINERALS.

Resources to Be Developed by the Government.

London Cable.—It is officially stated that the development of the mineral resources of the United Kingdom, which the Department of the Ministry of Munitions is undertaking under Sir Lionel Phillips, is likely to lead to far-reaching results.

Sir Lionel is bringing to his new work the knowledge and experience gained by life's work in developing the mineral resources of South Africa.

A number of engineers of outstanding ability and position are now assisting the efforts of the department. Already considerable work has been done in furthering the purposes of the war. Steps are being taken to control and expand the Wolfram mines, from which it is hoped to get a supply of tungsten powder, an essential ingredient in the manufacture of high-speed steel. The lead resources are also being completely surveyed, new sources of supply are being investigated, and old workings are being reopened. Action is also being taken in regard to the production of zinc.

Grocery . . Department

WE seldom speak of our grocery Department, simply because this department is always so much alive we forget to advertise it. However we would impress these facts on you when buying your Groceries.

We are large buyers, therefore our price is always right.

We have an immense turnover, therefore our stock is always fresh.

We quote special prices in quantity. Consult us and live cheaper.

Two Specials
Good Butter and Fresh Eggs

We pay cash for eggs

N. McGillivray
North End Store

BANK OF HAMILTON

Established 1872.
Capital Authorized, $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up, - $3,000,000
Surplus, - - - - - $3,500,000

Thrift

TO earn a little and to spend a little less was the advice of Robert Louise Stevenson. Thrift is a virture that is easily acquired and decidedly profitable. You will be astonished to find how quickly your savings will accumulate with the interest added.

One dollar will start a savings account fo you at the Bank of Hamilton.

R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
PORT ELGIN BRANCH
40-C

Can you afford to be without The Times?

Children's
Ready-to-Wear
Garments

In prints, galateas, and other cotton materials, at the cost of materials only, much below to-day's values.

Children's aprons at 15c	Rompers and play suits from 40 to 75c
Childrens dresses, good styles, 4c to 50c	Womens' overal aprons and house dresses 50c to $1.25
Middies at 50 cents

We pay Cash for Eggs.
Produce wanted.

See our big display in our north window

South End Store
N. McGillivray & Co.

The Port Elgin Times
MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

ADVERTISING RATES

Farms or Real Estate for Sale 50c each insertion; Miscellaneous articles, To Rent, Wanted, Lost, Found, etc., each insertion 25c. Local Readers, Notices, etc., 10c per line per insertion, 5c each subsequent insertion. Cards of thanks 50c. Legal advertising 10 and 5c a line. Black-faced type, count 2 lines for 1. Display rates, yearly contracts, 12c per inch, 6 mos. 15c per inch. In memoriam poetry 5c per line. Professional cards $6 per year in advance.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Wiarton is doing well. It has the Liberal nominee for the north riding in the Dominion House, and the Conservative nominee against Billy McDonald. The men from the north sent full delegations to the conventions, and they saw to it they were unanimous in their choice.

* * *

The committee on Sabbath observance at the Toronto Methodist conference complained that there was too much Sabbath breaking, and that motor riding on Sunday has increased to an alarming extent. It is true the auto is providing an easy means for transporting people, and some are missing church services on Sundays. But on the other hand, the auto is also the means whereby church attendance can be increased. Force will not help church attendance. Church officials must enlist the people to put their church first, and to do this there must be services of deep interest, and more devoutness on the part of professing christians.

* * *

The Hon. W. J. Hanna is Canada's food controller. He is credited with great organizing ability, and he will need it. Food and fuel should be, and he declares, will be, his first consideration. All speculation in foodstuffs must go. Mr. Hanna also declares he will reduce the number of middlemen to the lowest possible limit. The farmer will be glad to hear this, but he will await the results rather doubtfully. The producer-farmer has been kept digging hard because of the profits reaped by middlemen, and if the food controller can get the producer and consumer closer together he will be doing a service of national benefit.

* * *

After the recent raid of German aeroplanes on London, England, in which many women and children were killed, many people pledged themselves to revenge. One prominent American after witnessing the removal of the wounded and dead girls from a business house swore "even after the war is over I'll never speak to a German, eat in a restaurant where Germans are, buy German goods, or sail in a German ship. If ever again I take a German by the hand, God strike me dead." The world is generally credited with a short memory, but it will take some time for Germany to live down the terrible acts of frightfulness which she has perpetrated during this war. The Germans are wrong when they think they can frighten the English people.

Good Roads for Bruce

In another column will be found the report of the session of the Bruce county council. The notable feature of the session was the adoption of the good roads by a unanimous vote. We are proud of the part taken by our local representatives in favor of this scheme. Bruce county has everything to gain. This county is among the few counties that have pretty fair roads, and our cost of construction and maintenance will no' be great.

Warden Izzard can point with pardonable pride that in 1917, the year of his presidency, the great movement for better roads was adopted by his council.

The county good roads scheme provides for the cost of the roads being apportioned 60 per cent being paid by the County and 40 per cent by the Province, the latter bearing 20 per cent of the cost of maintainance. It is estimated that the construction of county good roads would cost less than $5.00 for each hundred acres in the province. In Dufferin the cost will be $4.11 for each hundred acres.

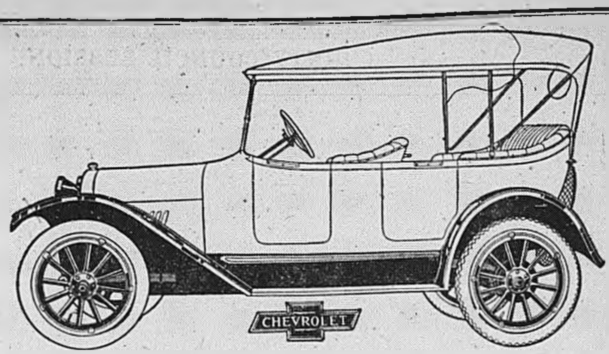
Bee-Keepers Organize

At a bee demonstration held in Mr. Geo. Neil's apeary at Tara, on the 19th June, the local bee keepers organized a branch of the Ontario Bee keepers' society, in the County of Bruce.

The officers of the local branch are: President, J. W. Reany, Port Elgin; Vice President, Peter Alpaugh, Dobbington; 2nd Vice President, John S. Schrank, Port Elgin; Sec. Treas, Geo. Neil, Tara; Directors, J. C. Duff, Tara; H. H. Bell, Wiarton; Alf. Jones, Paisley; John Robinson, Chesley.

The object of the society is to promote the bee business, improve the strain of bees, by introducing Italian Queens, and secure a class of bees that can be handled without so much danger of being stung.

The Hon. A. G. MacKay defeated his opponent in an election contest in Alberta last week and the latter is likely to lose his deposit.



1918 model Chevrolet shown by POWER & COULTER, Port Elgin

Bruce League Meeting

At the first annual meeting of the Bruce Preparedness League held in Chesley on Tuesday afternoon, a resolution favoring selective conscription was passed. A motion to urge the County Council to get a steam tractor to aid in the plowing operations in Bruce was lost by one vote. Several representative farmers from the different townships addressed the meeting with a view to working out a scheme of co-operation between the town and country for greater production. Although nothing definite was decided upon, the views expressed will probably be of assistance to those concerned in working out this problem. The election of officers resulted as follows: Hon. President, Judge Klein; President, W. D. Cargill, M. P. P.; Secretary, A. E. McNab; Treasurer, E. Roy Sayles; Executive Committee, C. M. Bowman, M. P. P., Sheriff Jermyn, ex-Wardens Brill and McCannell and Reeve Wm. Hunter of Kincardine.

Even the gypsies travel by automobile. Wednesday noon a bunch of Roumanian gypsies invaded the town, raiding the stores and begging. In Owen Sound one of the gang was arrested for stealing $41. The Sun says: "the gypsies arrived in town in five autos and proceeded to make a canvass of the stores and dwellings and their insistence in selling and in their requests to be permitted to tell fortunes, made them a general nuisance.

Burgoyne Patriotic Society Have Fine Garden Party

Rain held off on Thursday night in order to allow the Burgoyne Patriotic Society to have a big crowd and a very enjoyable party. It was held in the grounds of Mr. James Ferguson, and it proved a fine place. The ladies excelled past records in providing many goods things to eat, and at the rate things are going these days, everybody got a quarter's worth and more. Pie was an especially good part of the menu, and the measure of certain Arran young men is unlimited, when it comes to consuming pie.

The party also proved a very pleasant place to meet friends, old and young. It was especially nice to see so many of the older ones in attendance, and they enjoyed the event as much as the younger ones. After the meal, and a time for a visit with each other, ex-Warden McCannel presided over the program, those taking part being Revs. Mann and Soules, the church choir, Southampton quartet, songs by Mr. McArthur, recitation Miss Reany, and speeches by Messrs. C. M. Bowman, M. P., John McCauley, of Wiarton, Warden Izzard, Reeve Christie, and E. R. Sayles.

The party was also a success financially, nearly $100 being taken in at the gate and booth, all of which will be used by the ladies in their patriotic work. The women deserve large attendances. It entails a lot of hard labor to prepare these events to get the money, and then a lot more real work to make the things for the soldier boys.

Times' Subscription Rates

One year	$1.50
Eight months	$1.00
Six months	75
Four months	50
Three months	40

To United States $2.00 per year strictly in advance.

DENTAL

W. P. POWER, D. D. S., Dentist, office over South End Store. Hours 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Alarm Clocks

Why do most people go to Busby's for alarm clocks? Because we have the best stock, also when repairs are necessary you know our reputation.

We have in stock.

Big Ben	Vigilant
Cyclone	Turnout
Vantite	Icallu
Giant Spasmodic
Luminous Sunrise

J. J. BUSBY,
The Quick Repair House

GLAMMIS

(Intended for last week)

Miss Kate McLean, of Toronto, is spending her holidays at her home.

Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Harrison, of Calgary Alberta, have returned home.

Miss Margaret McLennan of Grace Hospital, Detroit, spent a couple of weeks' holiday with her parents Mr and Mrs. James McLennan.

Those who wrote on the entrance examinations in Paisley from the village were Misses Pearl Kirstown, Mary Deckan, and Master Clarence McLennan.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McIntosh, Jr., have returned to their home at Stratford after attending their father's funeral.

The Red Cross tea given by Mrs J. D. Robertson realized the sum of $13 60

Miss Jean McDermid, of London, spent a week's vacation with her mother.

The Baptist church here will hold their Anniversary services on Sunday July 8th.

Mrs W. J. McKeeman gave an afternoon tea on Friday in honor of Mrs. R. F. Harrison.

Mrs. George Leney, of Wiarton, is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. J. Graham, who is very low at time of visiting.

At the regular meeting of the Red Cross workers on Thursday the following shipment of goods was made: 48 pairs of socks, 66 towels, 6 hot water bottle covers, 42 personal property bags.

Lorne Carr has been transferred to the Royal Bank Ripley, from the branch at Cargill.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wrightson and family, and Mrs. Simpson spent Saturday in Owen Sound.

Mrs. John E. McNally, of Sarnia, is visiting her daughter Mrs. Charles Graham.

Mrs. Arnott of Paisley has been renewing acquaintances here.

Wm. Cunningham, of Alliston, is visiting at the home of his brother J. Cunningham.

Miss Annie Fraser is working at Wm. Pinkerton's, 12th, Greenock.

Mr. Hendry, who was removed to the home of his son Will, Boundary West, is seriously ill.

Presumed Dead

After many weary months of waiting Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lyness have been notified that their son Wilber, who was reported missing, is now presumed dead. The parents had hopes that their soldier son would yet be safe.

The word from the department of militia is that the missing man "is presumed dead."

Advertise it in The Times.

UNDERTAKING

J. W. PATTISON, Funeral director and embalmer. Residence on premises. Rural phone No. [illegible]

Real Estate — Auctioneering Life Insurance

WE have opened an office in Port Elgin, and will deal in real estate. Property bought and sold.

Auctioneering — The old-time attention given to all farmers contemplating a sale.

Life Insurance — We are agent for the New York Life Co.

D. O. Cavin : Port Elgin

Special In Teas This Week

We are offering some very special values in tea. Now is the time for you to secure a supply at a very low price.

MonarchCeylon blend reg 50c at 5 lbs for $2.25

Choice Young-Hyson reg 35c lb, now selling at 5 lbs for $1.50

Ludella package tea 35c per pound

In fruit we offer choice valencia raisins at 2 lbs for 25c, also seeded and seedless raisins.

Our Ready-to-Wear dept. is fully stocked and in such seasonable articles as children's rompers, wash suits and dresses. Ladies' house dresses, tea and over all aprons, made in good quality of print which is hard to get this season.

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon

Roppel Bros.
Rural phone, Underwood

DON'T NEGLECT YOUR POTATO CROP!

We have secured a big supply of pure

English Paris Greeen

In packages or bulk, also

Bug Death

A powder that you dust on

McLAREN'S HARDWARE

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. 429 G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communications in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at 8 p.m. Visiting brethren cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Gus. Smith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE No. 119, I.O.O.F., of Ontario, meets at 8 o'clock, p.m., every Monday in their hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N.G.; T. Rankin, Rec.-Sec.; D. Geddes, Perm Sec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer of marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office in Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin

MEDICAL

DR. F. H. WELLS, Office and residence on Green street, one door west of Bank of Hamilton.

W. J. CHAMBERS, M.D., L.R.C.P., L.M., Edinburgh. Office and residence "Lakeview Hall" opposite South End park Port Elgin.

DR. W. S. LAIRD, Occulist—Specialty in Nose and Throat diseases. Guarantees all his fitting of glasses. Office hours Wednesday afternoons. Next to Metropolitan Bank

LEGAL

W. BURGESS, LL.B., Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public, &c., &c. Office, Hutton's Block. Private and other funds to loan.

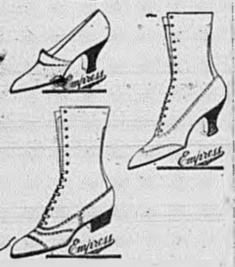
A Handy Thing

The handiest thing in the world is a wrist watch, and especially so in the summer weather. You'll be interested in looking at them.

Let us show you one of our fine line of clocks

Rowlands
The Jeweller

IF ITS NEW ITS THE Empress SHOE



The makers of these exclusive styles are considered with the most progressive high-grade shoe makers in America, and we are pleased to say these shoes are made in Canada.

We are "Empress" Shoe agents.

James George & Son

SPECIAL

We have a few of Dr. Pierce's Family Medical Adirsors, Good cloth binding which we offer at 50 cents each while they last.

R. C. Crawford
Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent

COUNTY COUNCIL SESSION

The June Session of the County Council of Bruce was held at Chesley, opening on the 18th. The Warden was in the chair and all the members present. Mayor Halliday, of Chesley, extended a hearty welcome to Council.

Mr. W. E. Moore, first Reeve of the new village of Lion's Head, presented his credentials and was admitted into the fold.

Council got to work early. A deputation from the County of Huron was present with reference to establishing a joint Children's Shelter for the two Counties, believing it would be just as efficient and much more economical than a separate shelter for each County. The Council will look into the matter.

Grants were few and far between. A grant of $2500 was made to the Walkerton Hospital and $1500 to the Kincardine Hospital, and a grant of $490 made to Amabel for work on the north gravel road, the Indian Dept agreeing to contribute also. Mr. Johnston, Arran, asked a grant for a new bridge, but it was declined. Grants of $50 each were made to Tiverton and Hepworth.

The committee in charge of the sale of Debentures issued to raise the grants to patriotic purposes reported they had sold the debentures at slightly under par. Considering the state of the money market this was considered a good sale.

The equalization of the County remains the same as last year except the change between Eastnor and Lion's Head.

Mr. Cass moved to have the bridge for the 2nd Con. of Elderslie known as McGregor bridge, assumed as a County bridge. A committee was formed to investigate and report.

The usual grant was made to continuation schools being based the same as last year.

The good roads by-law was the main item of business before the Council and a great deal of time was spent on it, in an endeavor to make the roads assumed serve the greatest number in the county.

After a great deal of consideration the following roads were adopted as the basis of the system:

1. The Durham road from the easterly limit of the Town of Kincardine through the villages of Bervie, Kinloss, Riversdale and Enniskillen to the westerly limits of the town of Walkerton, and from the easterly limits of the town of the town of Walkerton to the easterly limits of the county of Bruce.

2. The Saugeen or Goderich road, commencing at its juncture with the boundary of the Counties of Huron and Bruce, thence north to the boundary of the town of Kincardine; and commencing at the northerly limits of the town of Kincardine thence north to the southerly limits of the village of Tiverton; commencing at its juncture with the boundary road of the townships of Kincardine and Bruce about one mile east of Tiverton thence northerly to the southerly boundary of the village of Port Elgin, commencing at the northerly limits of the village of Port Elgin thence north to the Saugeen River, crossing same over Denny's bridge, thence easterly along the north gravel road to the county boundary.

3. The Elora road from the southerly limit of the town of Southampton to the southerly limit of the county.

4. The boundary of the counties of Huron and Bruce from the Goderich Road near Amberly to end of said road at Whitechurch

5. The road running from the northerly limits of the village of Lucknow through the villages of Holyrood and Kinlough to the Durham road, Kinloss

6. The eighth Con. of the township of Huron from the Saugeen or Goderich Road at Pine River to the Lucknow-Kinloss gravel road at Holyrood.

7. The fifteenth sideroad of the township of Huron from its Junction with the boundary road or the counties of Huron and Bruce to the twelfth concession of said township of Huron.

8. The Fifteenth Sideroad of the Township of Amabel commencing at the boundary of the Townships of Arran and Amabel thence to the Con. fourteen of Township of Amabel, thence North on across fifteenth concession of the Diagonal Survey to the Central Diagonal Road, thence south easterly a quarter of a mile, thence north easterly to the seventeenth concession of Amabel, thence easterly to the fifth sideroad of Amabel thence north on said sideroad to the twenty first concession of Amabel, thence easterly along said concession to boundary of the town of Wiarton, thence from the northerly limits of Wiarton through the Township of Amabel to the boundary line of Amabel and Albemarle Townships, thence easterly to Colpoys Bay, thence following the eastern stage route to the limits of the village of Lion's Head.

9. The tenth concession of the Township of Amabel from its junction with the fifteenth sideroad of Amabel to the limits of the village of Hepworth

10. The thirteenth sideroad of Elderslie, commencing at its junction with the North Gravel Road near Allenford thence south through Tara to the boundary between Arran and Elderslie, thence through Elderslie to the boundary between Elderslie and Brant, thence west on said boundary line three and three quarter miles to fifteenth sideroad of Township of Brant, thence South on said sideroad to the junction of said sideroad and Durham road.

11. The Fourth Concession of Elderslie from its junction with the thirtieth sideroad of Elderslie west of Concession "B" of said Township, thence along said Concession, and thence to the limits of the village of Paisley.

12. The Ninth Concession of the Township of Arran from the easterly limits of Tara Village to its junction with the boundy of Counties of Grey and Bruce.

13. The fifth sideroad of the Township Greenock from its junction with the Durham Road to the limits of the village of Paisley.

14. The boundary between the Township of Kinloss and Greenock and the boundary between the Townships of Kincardine and Greenock from the Durham Road to Glamis, thence along the boundary between the Townships of Bruce and Greenock to the limits of the village of Paisley.

15. The boundary of the Townships of Bruce and Kincardine from the easterly limit of the village of Tiverton to the twelfth concession of the Township of Greenock, thence along said twelfth concession of the Township of Greenock, thence along said twelfth concession to its junction with Elora Road, passing through Pinkerton and Eden Grove

16. The twenty-fifth sideroad of the Township of Kinloss from its junction with the boundary between the Counties of Huron and Bruce North to the fourth concession of said Township, thence east on said fourth concession one and one quarter miles to the thirtieth side road of Kinloss, thence north along said thirtieth sideroad to the sixth concession of the Township Culross, thence along said sixth concession to the limits of the village of Teeswater.

17. The Port Elgin and Tara Road from the limits of Port Elgin through Burgoyne, Arkwright and Invermay to the thirtieth sideroad of the Township of Arran

18. The fifteenth sideroad of the Township of Culross from the Durham Road to the limits of Teeswater, thence three and three quarter miles to the boundary of the Counties of Bruce and Huron.

19. The "Tenth" Sideroad of the Township of Carrick from the south limit of the town of Walkerton to the village of Mildmay, and the sixth concession of the Township of Carrick from its junction with the Elora Road to the boundary of the Townships of Carrick Culross, thence on the sixth concession of said Township of Culross to the limits of the village of Teeswater.

20. The eighth concession of Township of Bruce from Loyal west to the Goderich road.

It is of course expected and understood that further and other roads will be added to this system year by year. No work, except what is immediately necessary, will be done until after the war. The by law adopting was carried unanimously.

Requests for road grants were few and far between and few of those asked for were given.

The High School statements showed considerable increase of maintenance but not much increase in attendance.

The usual amount of routine work was passed. The Council and citizens of Chesley treated the Council to a trip to Eugenia Falls, where they were shown all the wonders of the Hydro plants. A trip all thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated. Thursday evening the Council was entertained at a sumptuous banquet, which was quite in keeping with the hospitality and kindness shown the members by Chesley all week.

Council adjourned to meet at Walkerton on 4th. December next

P. A. MALCOLMSON,
County Clerk.

Saskatchewan Liberal government was returned to power by a large majority last week.

Order In Which Men Are To Be Drafted

Class 1.
Ages 20 to 23, single or widowers without dependents.

Class 2.
Ages 24 to 28, single or widowers without dependents.

Class 3.
Ages 29 to 34, single or widowers without dependents.

Class 4
Ages 20 to 23, married or widowers with dependents.

Class 5.
Ages 24 to 28, married or widowers with dependents

Class 6.
Ages 29 to 34, married or widowers with dependents

Class 7.
Aged 35 to 41, single or widower with no dependents.

Class 8.
Ages 35 to 41, married or widowers with dependents.

Class 9
Ages 42 to 45, single or widowers with no dependents

Class 10.
Ages 42 to 45, married or widowers with dependents.

Uncle Abner

When I see a feller with a feather in his hat I realize that nature makes a mistake once in a while and gets the sexes mixed.

It don't make much difference how much money a feller has got, just so he has got plenty of it, and a man doesn't need to be 150 years old to find that out either.

Service

By reason of its widespread branches in every Canadian province and in Newfoundland, Jamaica, Cuba, Porto Rico, Boston, Chicago and New York, this bank is enabled to provide exceptional facilities for economical and speedy collections.

The Bank of Nova Scotia has a Savings Department in every branch in Canada, and depositors are assured most careful attention. A complete service is given at each branch of

The Bank of Nova Scotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 118,000,000

PORT ELGIN BRANCH.
A. L. Wynot, Manager

Be Clean—and Safe.

Think of the germ-laden things your skin and clothes must come into contact with every day. Then remember that there is a splendid antiseptic soap

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

Use Lifebuoy for the hands, the bath, the clothes, and the home. Its rich, abundant lather means safety. The mild, antiseptic odor vanishes quickly after use.

LEVER BROTHERS Limited TORONTO

At all good Grocers

Just Like Dad

One of our school teachers has received the following note from the mother of one of her pupils:

Dear Mis. You writ me about whippin Sammy. I give you permission to beet him up eny time he wont learn his lesson. He is just like his father and you have to beet him up with a club to lern him any thing. Pound noledge into him. Don't pay no attention, to what his father says. I will handle him."

Annual Agricultural Production by Counties

Bruce	$6,920,422
Dufferin	3,477,588
Grey	8,238,617
Huron	7,888,284
Halton	2,679,085
Lambton	6,404,588
Middlesex	7,867,233
Oxford	6,742,870
Peel	3,809,644
Perth	6,497,951
Simcoe	10,764,587
Waterloo	4,788,492
Wellington	7,283,718
Total production	$83,464,124

THE FRIENDS
BY J. W. FOLEY

I called him John; he called me Jim;
Nigh fifty years that I knowed him
An' he knowed me; an' he was square
An' honest all that time, an' fair.
I'd pass him mornin's goin' down
Th' road or drivin' into town,
An' we'd look up th' same old way,
An' wave a hand an' smile, an' say:
"'Day, John!"
"'Day, Jim!"

I guess you don't real often see
Such kind of friends as him an' me;
Not much on talkin' big; but, say,
Th' kind of friends that stick an' stay.
Come rich, come poor, come rain, come shine,
Whatever he might have was mine,
An' mine was his: an' we both knowed
It when we'd holler on th' road
"How, John!"
"How, Jim!"

An' when I got hailed out one year
He dropped in on me with that queer
Big smile, upon his way to town;
An' laid two hundred dollars down
An' says: "No int'rest, understand;
Or no note!" An' he took my hand
An' squeezed it; an' he drew away
'Cause there wa'n't nothin' more to say:
"S'long, John!"
"S'long, Jim!"

An' when John's boy came courtin' Sue
John smiled, an'—well, I smiled some, too.
As though things was a comin' out
As if we'd fixed 'em, just about,
An' when Sue blushed an' told me—why,
I set an' chuckled on th' sly;
An' so did John—put out his hand—
No words but these, y' understand;
"Shake, John!"
"Shake, Jim!"

An' when Sue's mother died [illegible] come
An' set with me; an' [illegible] was dumb
As far as speech [illegible] concerned—
But in them eyes of his there burned
A light of love an' sympathy
An' frien'ship you [illegible]
He took my hand in his that day
An' said—what else was there to say?—
"H'lo, John!"
"H'lo, Jim!"

Somehow th' world ain't quite th' same
To day! Th' trees is all aflame
With autumn, but there's somethin' gone—
Went out of life, I guess, with John
He nodded that ol' grizzled head
Upon th' piller of his bed,
An' lifted up that helpin' hand
An' whispered: "Sometime!—Understand?"
"By, John!"
"By, Jim!"

Kittens Not Wanted

A young lad in town had a kitten given to him one day. He made a nice bed for pussy in a basket behind the kitchen range. The other morning there were four nice little kittens in the basket and the lad's mother thinking to surprise her son took the basket of kittens up to his room.

The lad looked glumly at his beloved cat's family and remarked "Ah Why didn't she have a pup?"

Special Envelopes for Soldiers

The Times has printed for use of those corresponding with soldiers in England or at the front addressed envelopes making it very easy to send letters. These sell at 10 cents a parcel. Get a package and insure your letters reaching the boys.

BLACKSMITHING

N. ELLIT, Blacksmithing, horse-shoeing and general repairs. Tire-setting a specialty

Summer Millinery

Straw hats, Crepe hats, Also Sport hats in pique corduroy and ratine.

Also the latest styles and shades

MISS M. BAKER
Arlington Block

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now, will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places, and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College

Owen Sound, Ontario

remains open all summer to help meet the demand for trained office help. Enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

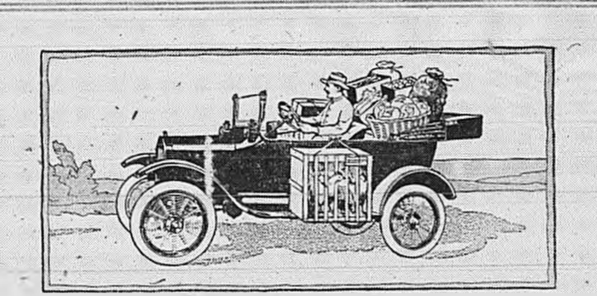
C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Dept. A., Owen Sound, Ont.

GENTS' DEPARTMENT

Felt hats 75cts to $2.60
Caps 25 cts to $1.50
Mexican hats 75cts to 50 cents
Negligee shirts $1 to $1.40
Working shirts from 50c to 85c.
Cotton night shirts $1.
Neckwear 25c to $1.50
Cashmere hose from 25c to 50c
Silk hose 50 cents per pair
Working sox 16c to 30c per pair

Bring Us Your Produce

B. HILKER



Quick Hauling to Market

JUST think of the time the Ford saves a busy farmer in hauling milk to the cheese factory, vegetables butter, eggs and poultry to maket, fruit to the railway station. One fruit grower, last season, made four trips a day to the railway station, a total of 144 miles, and carried as high as 72 crates of 11 quarts each on a trip. He couldn't have made more than one 36 mile trip a day with a team.

The Ford soon pays for itself in the time it saves the farmer. With help so scarce, every farmer needs to make use of every precious minute of his time. To him the Ford car is a real necessity. Indeed some farmers tell us that it is doubtful if they could carry on their farm work under present labor conditions if it wasn't for the time the Ford saves them.

No farmer need be without a Ford. In fact the average farmer could afford one if it were double the price. It is as easy to drive as a horse, three times as fast, and costs less per mile. Why not order one to-day?

Ford

Touring - - $495
Runabout - $475
F. O. B. FORD, ONTARIO

L. M. Sees, Agent, Port Elgin

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON II. July 8. 917.

Ahaz, the Faithless King.—2 Chronicles 28: 1-27.

COMMENTARY.—I. Wickedness of Ahaz (vs. 1-4). 1. Ahaz—The twelfth ruler of the kingdom of Judah. He succeeded his father, Jotham, on the throne. Being twenty years old when he began to reign, he was old enough to have observed the character of his father's administration, and to have profited by it, but evidently he paid no heed to it. He did not that which was right in the sight of the Lord—Ahaz was the most wicked king Judah had up to that time. He seems to have searched out ways in which he might sin against God. Like David—David is referred to as an example of faithfulness and integrity. Although he at one time fell into grievous sins he heartily and deeply repented and was restored to the divine favor. 2. The ways of the kings of Israel—The character and doings of Ahaz were like those of the kings of Israel, who followed the evil example of Jeroboam. "To his record the author of Kings devotes one chapter (16), and the author of Chronicles one (28), each containing some new matter, and also some matter common to both. Both of his historians give his history in the philosophical order; first, his great sins, and then their legitimate results: defeat, disaster, the destruction of his immense armies, the exhaustion of his treasury by foreign exactions; the bringing of Judah low and making her naked because of his sore transgressions against the Lord. (v. 19)."—Cowles. In his character he belongs in the list of the kings of Judah. Molten images for Baalim—He made representations of the different Baal gods and worshipped them. 3. Burnt incense in the valley of the son of Hinnom—This is the valley south of the walls of Jerusalem. Ahaz performed idolatrous worship there. Burnt his children in the fire—This passage indicates that Ahaz offered his children in sacrifice to Moloch and they were burned. Abominations of the heathen—Ahaz followed the cruel and vile practices of those whom God had dispossessed of Canaan to give the land to Israel. 4. Sacrificed—in the high places—The place for sacrifice was the temple in Jerusalem. Ahaz set up many places of sacrifice and the worship he offered was idolatrous.

II. Distressed by enemies (vs. 5-15). 5. wherefore—Having enumerated the great sins of Ahaz the historian proceeds to describe the punishment that came upon him. It was because of his evil course that his enemies were permitted to afflict him and his nation. King of Syria .... smote him—The Syrians had waged war with Judah while Jotham was king, but were unsuccessful. They were able to defeat the weak and wicked King of Ahaz. A great multitude of them captives—The number is not given, but it was large, judging by the numbers that were taken by Israel later. Damascus—The capital of Syria. It is situated one hundred and forty miles north east of Jerusalem. he was also delivered, etc.—Not only was he given over to the power of Syria, but another enemy, Israel, was permitted to wage a successful war against him. a great slaughter—The following verse gives the number of Judah's men that were slain in one day as a hundred and twenty thousand. This destruction was permitted because they had forsaken God (v. 6). 6-15. Besides those slain in battle there were taken as captives two hundred thousand persons, and the king's son and his high officers were put to death. When these captives were brought to Samaria, the capital of Israel, the prophet Oded declared that it was because of Judah's sins that they had been taken into captivity. He told the people of Israel to set the captives free and they were clothed, fed and taken back to Jericho.

III. Seeking help from Assyria (vs. 16-21). 16-19. Because the Edomites had come from the southeast and defeated Judah and taken away captives, and the Philistines had invaded the kingdom from the southwest and occupied a considerable territory, Ahaz sent to Assyria for help. It is to be borne in mind that all these calamities were permitted on account of the sins of Ahaz. 20. Tilgath pilneser—The form of this name in some instances is given as Tiglath-pileser (2 Kings 15:29; 16:7). Assyria—The name comes from Asshur, a grandson of Noah. Assyria was one of the great ancient monarchies. Its territory lay along the Tigris River. distressed him, but strengthened him not—Although the King of Assyria responded to the call of Ahaz and took Damascus, carrying away many captives, yet he caused him great loss and the alliance was no real advantage to him. 21. took away a portion—Ahaz plundered the house of God of its treasures to purchase the assistance of the King of Assyria.

IV. Becoming more idolatrous (vs. 22-27). 22. In the time of his distress—In the time when he was defeated by Israel, by Syria and by other nations and was treacherously dealt with by Assyria. Trespass yet more against the Lord—The calamities which the Lord permitted to come upon him to humble him and bring him to repentance had no salutary effect upon him, and he plunged more deeply into sin. This is that king Ahaz—[illegible] This is an expression of contempt. "History records nothing about him that is worthy of respect."—Lange. 23. Sacrificed unto the gods of Damascus, which smote him—King Ahaz had been defeated or smitten by the Syrians, and he concluded that their gods had helped them; therefore he decided to sacrifice to the gods of the Syrians that they might help him against his enemies. From 2 Kings 16:10 we learn that Ahaz had an altar made in the temple in Jerusalem after the pattern of one he saw in Damascus, and attempted to gain the favor of the gods of the Syrian by worshipping them in the place where the God of Israel alone should be worshipped. They were the ruin of him, and of all Israel—The cause of Judah's downfall is here attributed to the idolatry of Ahaz. 24. Gathered together the vessels of the house of God, etc.—The account of the sacrilege of Ahaz is more particularly given in 2 Kings 16:17. Shut up the doors of the house of the Lord—Ahaz virtually defied God and forsook his worship, and gave himself up to the practice of idolatry. Altars in every corner of Jerusalem—The king made idolatry prominent. He not only sinned himself, but used his influence to lead his people into gross sins. His early departure from God was succeeded by step after step into the greatest of sins. 25. Provoked to anger the Lord God of his fathers—He worshipped idols, he desecrated the temple, he shut up the doors of the house of the Lord, he built many heathen altars, he burnt incense in high places, and he made his sons pass through the fire after the abominations of the heathen. For this the Lord visited sore distress upon him. 26. The rest of his acts—The Lord sent the prophet Isaiah to Ahaz, but Ahaz refused the help he might have received. 27. Ahaz slept with his fathers—So far as the records show, Ahaz died a natural death.

Questions.—Who was Ahaz? How old was he when he began to reign? How long was he king? What was his character? Of what different sins was he guilty? What punishment was sent upon him? What effect did his distresses have upon him? What gods did he worship? What did he do to the temple? Where was he buried? Who was his successor on the throne?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—An idolatrous career.

I. Degraded the king of Judah.

II. Enslaved the people of God.

I. Degraded The king of Judah. In Ahaz we have a conspicuous example of persistent wickedness. He systematically framed mischief through sacrilege and idolatry. He could hardly have gone farther in defying the Lord God of his fathers in his outrageous, fanatical, unreasonable idolatry. He adopted a measure that was full of iniquity, beyond all his predecessors. He renounced the true religion of Jehovah. He adopted the false worship of Baal. He utilized all the idol sanctuaries of the land. He introduced the worship of Moloch. He sacrificed to the gods of Damascus. From the beginning he reversed the policy of his father and threw himself into the arms of the heathen party. Ahaz was one of the worst of the kings of Judah. He revived the worst abominations of the old Canaanitish religion. He took for his pattern the wicked kings of the northern kingdom, whose idolatries were bringing their own realm to ruin. He did not plunge into idolatry for lack of good advice. Isaiah, the greatest of the prophets, stood beside him and addressed to him remonstrances which might have made the most reckless pause. He presented promises which might have kindled hope and courage in the most despairing. Ahaz disregarded warnings written and proclaimed, warnings of conscience, and providences of mercy. Ahaz was literally devoid of true religion. Not one redeeming feature is found that can be placed to his credit. While Ahaz was a very great transgressor, he was also a very great sufferer. He received repeated chastisement from the hand of the Lord.

II. Enslaved the people of God. The lengths to which Ahaz went without public opposition showed how far the nation had departed from God. They were pleased with changes adapted to their corrupt tastes. Since the division of the kingdom, Judah had been unfaithful to Jehovah in various respects. More than two centuries had elapsed since Judah began "to do evil in the sight of the Lord." With the introduction of Baal-worship luxury and effeminacy had crept in. Injustice and oppression had become rife. During all that time Judah had maintained her independence and had fallen under no crushing affliction. There had even been seasons of prosperity. God's long-suffering mercy was extended to them. The prosperity which the country had enjoyed under Uzziah continued and increased under the righteous reign of his son Jotham. Before Ahaz died all was changed. Enemies invaded the country until the land became desolate. Ahaz entered more and more into alliance with heathen powers. With him religion was a matter of diplomacy. He was ready to worship anything that was called a god except Jehovah. He had not been in sympathy with the worship of God from his earliest days. The great brazen altar, upon which the nation had offered sacrifices for centuries, was removed and another of its own making was put in its place. He improvised new sacrificial arrangements. Ahaz directed first of all that his own offerings should be made upon the new altar. His sacrifices only added to the magnitude of his hypocrisy. Having erected a heathen altar in the sanctuary of the Lord God of Israel, other things naturally followed. For the wickedness of himself and people they were weakened in the power and humbled in spirit by foreign foes. God's people passed formally under the yoke of a Gentile conqueror. Ahaz committed robbery and sacrilege in order to secure the help of a man who deceived and defrauded him. Instead of helping Ahaz to become an independent sovereign, Tiglath-pileser made him a tributary to the Assyrian crown. Ahaz found that he had only exchanged one oppressor for another. Being weak [illegible] questionable ways and not supported by the power of God, Ahaz fell into the hands of the foreigner. Through his dark career of sin God had often sent warning, reproof and trouble, yet Ahaz pushed on in the face of many barriers to his own ruin and that of the nation. There was a point beyond which justice did not demand that penalty should go, and Judah was spared.—T. R. A.

Chic Combinings.

Linen and voile.
Organdie and [illegible].
Foulard and silk [illegible].
Gingham and batiste.
Crash linen and Georgette.
Georgette and crepe de chine.

FEEDS AND FERTILIZERS

The Latest in Science, The Best in Practice

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS OF SOIL NOT A SURE GUIDE TO FERTILIZER REQUIREMENTS.

Contrary to the common opinion that chemical analysis of a soil reveals facts leading to its immediate treatment with respect to the use of fertilizers, such a test is not a sufficient guide to land treatment. When a chemist tells how much nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium a soil contains, nothing definite is offered the landowner that will aid him in fertilizing the soil, because no chemical compound has the same capacity to extract plant food from the soil as that of living plant tissues.

The soil is like a storage battery, in which plant food is locked up in unavailable form, and then is gradually and slowly made soluble as plants need it. Waste of plant food is prevented in this way, for if all of it were available it would have been leached out of the soil ages ago.

Granite rocks by chemical test show a high content of potassium, but the element is so firmly held in complex combination that plants cannot utilize it. Beds of phosphatic rock contain immense stores of phosphorus, but before such rock is of immediate use in crop production it must be treated with sulphuric acid or added to decaying organic matter, the acids of which make this otherwise worthless material a valuable fertilizer. Muck and peat are rich in nitrogen, but here again the fertility element is gripped so firmly that it is beyond the reach of plants.

The production of staple crops is unprofitable on many farms, although analysis shows that the chemical elements are present in sufficient abundance to make these soils productive. The addition of organic matter, as manure, crop residues and green manuring crops, is necessary before such land can be most productive.

Total plant food in a soil is shown by chemical test, but the amount available is not so determined. Soils differ in their degree of availability of fertility elements, and plants vary in their needs and in their ability to use plant food in the soil. A field test is necessary to determine fertilizer needs of a soil and crop. The previous treatment of the land has more to do with its present condition than its chemical composition.

PRICES ARE GOOD—WHY NOT RAISE A FALL LITTER OF PIGS?

The present high prices for pigs should be an inducement to farmers to raise two litters of pigs this year. Many farmers, we know, claim that they cannot profitably raise two litters of pigs a year; that the fall litter is more trouble than it is worth, and that it is a heavy drain upon the sow. Be this as it may, the fact remains that if pigs are given reasonable care and attention at farrowing time and well cared for during the first few weeks of their existence, they can be raised successfully with little loss and with profit to their owners. The pigs should come early in the fall—September or October—so that they may be weaned and have attained a fair growth before the cold weather sets in. The earlier the pigs come in the fall they can run out on pasture for a time and they will be stronger to withstand the winter. The period of gestation for a sow is approximately 112 days, so that a sow bred somewhere about the first week in June would farrow about the end of September. While in normal years most hog raisers do not care to breed their sows before they are eight months old, this year with the prospects of high prices—and especially on account of food shortage—we think it good policy to breed young sows earlier than this, but the sows must be given good care. There are thousands of young gilts farrowed last fall which might well be bred in June. By breeding them early this summer, the feed given will be more completely utilized than if they are not bred until they had become more fully matured. Breeding young gilts should have no bad effects, providing they are fed properly. Experiments have shown that the young pregnant sow continues to grow under proper feeding and that the size of the litter is not appreciably reduced. Suckling the pigs retards the growth of the young sow but this permanent retardation of growth is small and of minor importance when the sow will produce a good litter of pigs. Large litters can usually be obtained by flushing the sows before breeding. This is done by feeding in such a way as to have sows putting on weight at the time they are bred. The suckling sow should have her pigs weaned before being bred. Her udder should be completely dried up by a systematic reduction of feed. She should then be flushed and in a short time is ready to be bred. After breeding the sow should be watched to be sure she has caught. If she has not twenty-one days later she will again show indications of heat and can again be bred.

A good pure bred boar should be used preferably of the same breed as the sow, but excellent results are obtained by using a Yorkshire boar on a Berkshire sow. The pregnant sow should be fed a grain ration consisting of bone-making and muscle making feeds. She should gain in weight but not be made fat. A good pasture with a small supplementary grain ration is ideal for pregnant sows.

FEEDING DAIRY CALVES.

The quality of and the profit from the future herd depend upon the breeding and quality of the calves and even more on the method of rearing. The best of calves both as to type and breeding may by poor rearing develop into small stunted and unprofitable cows while poorer calves by good rearing may develop into very useful animals. Hence the subject of calve rearing is one of great economic importance.

Remove the dairy calves from the cow at birth. Do not allow them to suck, unless weak or unable to drink, or unless the cow's udder is severely caked. Mother's milk for the first four days, at the rate of 8 to 10 pounds divided into three or four feeds, is essential. Feed whole milk for the first ten days, then start replacing part of the same milk with skim milk so that when the calf is one month of age, it may be receiving in two feeds daily, 12 pounds of skim milk plus a table-spoonful of finely ground scalded flaxseed jelly.

At three weeks of age feed a small quantity of whole oats in the manger. Fine clover hay and clean water might profitably be kept before them from this time on.

During the next fifteen weeks gradually increase the skim milk to 15 to 20 pounds daily. Add to the flaxseed jelly other constituents to make a cream substitute as follows: Fine ground flax 1 part, fine ground oats 2 parts, ground corn 2 parts. Feed in the milk divided into two feeds daily at the rate of one-eighth pound at the start and increase to 1 pound.

Replace the whole oats at four weeks of age with a grain mixture of equal parts bran, rolled oats and ground corn. Start the calves on one-eighth pound per day and increase gradually to 1½ pounds daily at twenty weeks of age when the skim milk may be gradually cut off and this grain ration increased proportionately.

Do not expose your calves to heat and flies, but during extreme heat keep them in a cool dark box until four months of age, after which they may have a night paddock. If fall-dropped calves keep in a clean, bright comfortable warm box stall. Feed a limited amount of roots or a mixture of roots and ensilage. Feed salt in limited quantities regularly and water as required.

VALUE OF MANURE FROM 24 STEERS.

(Experimental Farm Note.)

The manure from twenty-four steers averaging in weight close to 1,000 pounds each and running loose in two box stalls at the Experimental Station, Kentville, N. S., covering a period of 120 days, or four months, weighed 112 tons, 640 ponds. The average for each day was 1,872 pounds, or 78 pounds for each steer. Straw bedding amounting to 10 pounds per steer per day was used and all liquids as well as the solids were saved.

Chemists tell us that this fresh manure from fairly well-fed steers contains in each ton 7 3-4 pounds nitrogen, 3½ pounds phosphoric acid and 9 pounds of potash. When buying commercial fertilizer we pay 25 cents per pound for nitrogen and 7 to 8 cents for phosphoric acid. Potash cannot be bought at any price, but in order to get at a fair valuation for the manure we should allow at least 5 cents per pound, the price of potash before the war.

A ton of the above manure at these prices would, therefore, have a value of $2.63.

At the valuation of $2.63 per ton, 112 tons, 640 pounds would be worth $295.40, or $12.31 per steer, a little over $3.00 per steer per month. Considering that potash will each year become a greater factor in economical agricultural production, the value is even greater than that given above.

Nothing has been allowed in the above calculation for the value of the humus. It is estimated that humus value of manures is 50 to 100 per cent. of the value of the chemical ingredients, depending upon the soil on which the manure is used and the manner of application.

It is a well known fact that half the total value of the excrement from live stock is in the urine. If the liquid is allowed to drain away through holes in the stable floor, or otherwise, over one-half of the value of the manure [illegible] made to conserve all the excrement voided by animals.

The water retained after twenty-four hours by 100 pounds of material used for absorbing in the stable is estimated to be as follows:

Wheat straw, 220 pounds; Oat straw 285 pounds; well dried peat, 600 pounds; dry sawdust, 435 pounds; dried leaves 162 pounds.

—The Canadian Countryman.

SUNDAY AT HOME

LOVE AND HOME.

No place, house or cot can make a home;
Home must be made by love, and love alone.
Love can build sanctuaries in deserts bare,
Raise homes of peace and hope and loving care;
Sweet homes of freedom, where the worn may rest,
Safe as a babe upon its mother's breast.

Love is the mainspring; love, and love alone,
Supplies the sweets of life, the joyful song
Which joys in living each and every day.
Love is the light which lightens all the way,
Until at last, when earthly love is o'er—
And then, behold, 'tis love for evermore!

Phoebe A. Naylor.

LEANING ON JESUS' BOSOM.

As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you.—They brought young children to him, that he should touch them. And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

Jesus called his disciples unto him, and said I have compassion on the multitude, because they continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat; and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way.—A high Priest [illegible] touched with the feeling of our infirmities.—In his love and in his pity he redeemed them.

I will not leave you comfortless (marg. orphans): I will come to you.—Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee.

The Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

AN EXCURSION.

(By the late Rev. H. T. Miller.)

Come, sleep, and keep mine eyelids down; thy wings are soft, thy lips are softer still. Cry hush to this sublunary strife, and let me take the hand of the chosen one—chosen not by me, but accepted with that secret impulse of approval which asks for nothing more, and no one else. We will sail the sea of dreams, hoist our sail to the favoring gale, and fear no hidden rocks, no treacherous shoal, or silent hint which slips into the mind like a reptile moving on the sand.

With a pure caress I embark with my sister spirit. How lofty the air; how wide the horizon; how large the vision; how sublime the aim. Oh, the conscious bond that binds us to the One Absolute, sustaining Life! This life paints the flower, gives song to the bird; it nerves the spirit, sustains the climb of great ones, whose humility is measured only by their loftiness, majesty and meekness, bringing mountain peaks and fruitful valleys into sublime relationship:

Here we reach the fountain-head of life, and drink and are enlarged; here we are in touch with the energy of the angel's wing, the springs of thought, of life, of soul, of being, without measurement and without end.

Sweet spirit, pure and free, let us leave behind the authority of man and his ways and traditions. Let the morning light enlarge us; let the felt presence enrich, ennoble us, add to our youthful virtue; claims that do not cumber, garments that do not hinder, honors that do not depress, studies that do no confuse. Oh, the light that does not blind, oh, gleam that leads not astray; company that exalts, employments that enlarge; vistas that give mountain tops, clad in the purest snow, warm with life, and beautiful with love. Fairer than the fairest creation we enjoyed in the grey paths of time.

Oceans, archipelagos, coastlines, star on star, millions of worlds piled on millions, yet throbbing with common energy governed by the one central mind, design, air, and end, all comprehended within the circle of the all sustaining, illimitable, unnameable One!

Here is grandeur in repose, the sleep of infants, the rest of God! His service is life; His smile is liberty; His joy is boundless. We will inhale the air of the intuitional, eat more than angels' food, have delicacies delightful, exquisitely complete. We will grasp truths at first hand, and tremble with emotions that throb from the very heart of God.

* * * * * * * * * *

What touch is that? Is it the herald of the dawn,
Awake, thou that sleepest!
Watchman, what of the night?
The morning cometh!

A RUNAWAY HORSE.

Use Your Hat and Your Head and You Can Stop Him.

The observer of people and events wonders how many people have the slightest notion as to how to stop a runaway horse. An old farmer in an adjacent state was coming home the other morning when he heard a terrific commotion behind him, and when he turned, saw a horse racing toward him in a frenzy of fear. In the spring wagon was a little boy of six or seven, and behind the swaying vehicle was a gray haired man—evidently the child's grandfather—chasing the runaway.

In an instant the farmer was out in the middle of the road with his hat whisked off his head, both arms gyrating in wide circles. The hat did the work, for the farmer told folks afterward that his mother had told him that a horse would always stop at sight of a hat being whirled directly in front of it. The animal came to a stop within a few inches of the farmer, who stood his ground. It was the work of a few seconds to calm the quivering animal, and soon the grandfather came up. He threw his arms around the rescuer and fairly wept for joy.

Next time you see a runaway Dobbin coming your way don't forget to use your hat and your head.—Columbus Dispatch.

The Elusive Rhyme.

I sought a word I hoped to fit
With childhood's happy laughter,
I followed on an endless quest
Pursuing closely after.

I searched my books by day and night,
And lexicons I treasure,
But there I found no word that might
Attune the dainty measure.

'Til, wearied of my fruitless quest,
I stole away to wander
Where Nature sings and songbirds nest,
By lanes and woodlands yonder.

[illegible]
'Twas there my quarry found me—
The rhymes for Childhood's silvery laugh
Were singing all around me!

John D. Wells.

Spanish at Saloniki.

Saloniki contains a large number of Spanish speaking inhabitants, not very surprising perhaps in a mongrel city of the near east, but explained by the fact that large numbers of Spanish Jews exiled some centuries ago, took refuge there and carried their language. Another part of the world in which the Spanish Jew type is outstanding is the high plateau of Colombia. Its inhabitants are a vigorous people, noticeably of Semitic stamp, and successful commercially.

MARKET REPORTS

TORONTO MARKETS.

FARMERS' MARKET.

Dairy Produce—
Butter, choice dairy	$0 42	$0 45
Cheese, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., fancy, lb.	0 40	[illegible]
Dressed Poultry—
Turkeys, lb.	0 30	0 32
Fowl, lb.	0 25	0 28
Spring chickens	0 60	0 65
Fruits—
Rhubarb, 2 bunches	0 00	0 10
Vegetables—
Asparagus, Can., bunch	0 05	0 10
Strawberries, box	0 07	0 08
Beans, new, small measure	0 00	[illegible]
Beets, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cucumbers, each	0 05	0 10
Carrots, new, bunch	0 00	0 10
Celery, per bunch	0 05	0 10
Cabbages, each	0 10	0 20
Horseradish, lb.	0 00	0 15
Leeks, bunch	0 10	0 15
Lettuce, doz., bchs.	0 20	0 25
Do., head, doz.	0 25	1 00
Onions, bundle	0 05	[illegible]
Do., Egypt, bkt.	2 50	3 00
Do., Bermuda, box	4 00	4 50
Potatoes, per bag	0 00	1 00
Do., new, peck	0 00	0 75
Do., small measure	0 30	0 35
Radishes, 2 bunches	0 05	0 05
Spinach, new, peck	0 15	0 20
Sage, bunch	0 05	0 10
Savory, bunch	0 05	0 10
Turnips, new, bunch	0 05	0 10
Tomatoes, lb.	0 00	0 25

MEATS—WHOLESALE.

Beef, forequarters, cwt.	$15 00	$17 00
Do., hindquarters	18 00	20 00
Carcases, choice	17 00	18 00
Do., common	12 00	13 50
Veal, common, cwt.	9 50	11 50
Do., medium	12 50	14 50
Do., prime	19 00	21 00
Heavy hogs	16 50	18 50
Shop hogs	21 50	22 50
Mutton, heavy	10 00	12 00
Do., light	17 00	19 00
Abattoir hogs	21 50	22 50
Lambs, lb.	0 22	0 23
Do., Spring, lb.	0 25	0 27

OTHER MARKETS.

WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE.

Fluctuations yesterday on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange were as follows:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Wheat—
Oct.	1 90½	1 93¼	1 90	1 93
Oats—
July	x0 70¾	0 70¾	0 69¾	0 70¾
Oct.	0 59½	0 59½	0 58¾	0 59¾
Dec.	0 57	0 57½	0 56¾	0 56¾
Flax—
July	2 80	2 80	2 78¾	2 79¾
Oct.	2 75	2 75	2 71	2 74

x—To 70 3-4c sold.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET

Minneapolis.—Wheat: July, $2.31; September, $1.73. Cash, No. 1 hard, $2.51 to $2.56; No. 1 Northern, $2.46 to $2.51; No. 2 Northern, $2.36 to $2.46. Corn—No. 3 yellow, $1.67 1-2 to $1.68 1-2. Oats—No. 3 white, [illegible] 3-4c to [illegible] 3-4c. Flour unchanged. Bran, $32.50 to $33.00.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

Duluth.—No. 1 hard, $2.50; No. 1 northern, $2.49; No. 2 northern, $2.41; July, $2.50.

THE CHEESE MARKETS

Lindsay, Ont.—[illegible] cheese boarded at today's meeting, all sold at [illegible] cents.

Utica.—About 300 fewer boxes of cheese than a week ago were sold to-day at the Utica Dairy Board of Trade, with the same prices prevailing. Sales: Large, 250 boxes, and small, 1,250 boxes, all at 22 cents.

Butter—Thirty tubs sold at 38 cents.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Cattle, receipts 5,000.
Market steady.
Beeves	8 60	12 50
Stockers and feeders	6 70	10 00
Cows and heifers	5 75	11 85
Calves	11 00	15 75
Hogs, receipts 15,000.
Market dull.
Light	14 30	[illegible]
Mixed	14 60	[illegible]
Heavy	14 60	15 9[illegible]
Rough	14 60	14 85
Pigs	11 00	14 25
Bulk of sales	14 90	15 [illegible]
Sheep, receipts 7,000.
Market steady.
Wethers	8 90	11 75
Lambs, native	10 75	15 25
Springers	14 00	15 25

NEW VICTORY.

Kaiser:—Thank Heaven, Bethmann, we have won another great victory—over the Social-Democrats.—Hvepsen, Christiania.

STRANGE FORESTS.

Australia's Flora Contains Unique Relics of Jurassic Times.

One readily understands why the Australian loves his trees. The aroma of giant eucalyptus forms pictures never forgotten, and the scent of the wattle brings a homesick feeling like the smell of sage to the Westerner.

The flora is not only beautiful, it is unique, and has no counterpart in other lands. Of the 10,000 species of plants most of them are purely Australian, and are unknown even in New Zealand. The general impression one gets of Australian forests is their total unlikeness to anything seen elsewhere. The great forests of timber trees are not dense and shaded and all of one species, but are well lighted and filled with other forests of shorter trees, in places the woods consist of large widely spaced trees surrounded only by bunch grass, and even in areas where water is not to be found on the surface for hundreds of square miles true forests of low trees are present.

Forms which may be recognized as tulip, lily, honeysuckle and iris take on a surprising aspect. They are not garden flowers but trees, and the landscape is of Mesozoic time, a period antedating our own by millions of years. The trees are indeed those of a bygone age. In America and [illegible] of fossil leaves of strange plants are collected from the rock and studied with interest; in Australia many of these ancient trees are living. The impression that one is looking at a landscape which has forever disappeared from other parts of the world is so vivid that the [illegible] and [illegible] in the city streets strike a jarring note. The transition from Jurassic to modern times is painfully abrupt.—National Geographic Magazine.

Fat.

Save it.
It is good.
It means economy.
Use it for seasoning.
Clarify it before putting away.
To do this pour boiling water over it, boil through, then set it away to cool. When cold the fat may be removed in a solid piece.
By repeating this several times [illegible] which the fat will be achieved.
Should there be a burned taste it may be removed by heating with a thick slice of raw potato.

Through Many Trials

CHAPTER I.

"There is nothing stranger in this world of ours—there is nothing more mysterious in the mystery we call life—than the power that the unworthiest attributes of one nature give it over the best attributes of another nature, whose nobleness and honesty of soul carry it so far above and beyond the baser soul, that its very falseness has the fascination of mirage beauty—the more vivid as all around is more arid and worthless—or, like a rainbow light resting on a dunghill, in the radiance of Faith, Hope and Charity—the emanation of the noble, selfless nature, every foul thing beneath that light is gilded and tinted into loveliness and love-worthiness."

Imogene Trefusis — otherwise "Midge," or "Minnie," with the boys of her brothers, playmates, and comrades in misfortune—had just finished reading the above paragraph from a volume of essays, one of her aunt, Lady Althea's books, an edition de luxe—vellum-tinted, bevelled edges, pale brown leather and gilding—costly, elegant and fashionable, as everything belonging to Lady Althea is; and as Imogene lays down the book for a surreptitious yawn, her sister, Evelyn Trefusis, opens her beautiful violet eyes sleepily.

It is a very depressing, cold afternoon, and time hangs heavy on one's hands when one is a beauty in the dreadful position of a queen without a court; a beauty in a secluded, stately and, withal, very dreary country house. Beauty without a surrounding atmosphere of golden beams, of incense, and the odors of the flowers and fruits of luxury. Beauty, condemned through straits of poverty, the crushing, heart-rending straits of being compelled to have dresses dyed and "renovated," of having to wear mended gloves, and to mend them as well—to spend the very glory of the morning of her youth and loveliness in obscurity.

"What is that you have been reading, Imogene?" she asks, impatiently. "I don't understand a single word of it! Some moral aphorisms of your choosing, I suppose, Aunt Althea? I wish," Evelyn says, very crossly—for it is one of the privileges of a beauty to be cross as often as one pleases—"that if you will have Imogene in here to read aloud, you would let her read a good novel—something to interest one a little, and make the time pass."

Lady Althea glances across the room at her niece with a calm smile.

"My love, I have told you so often," she says, with explanatory patience, "that I am so anxious in every way to form Imogene's manners and progress with the culture of her thoughts and ideas—which are totally uncultured, I am sorry to say."

"So are mine, I fancy," Evelyn says, languidly.

"My dearest," Lady Althea says with a smile of superior knowledge, "culture and elegance come to you as a gift of nature. You could not be worse than bizarre at the very worst, and that, to you, would only add a charm in the eyes of society."

Evelyn laughs carelessly at this; flattery in any or every form is no new thing to her, although she is a beauty condemned at present to waste her loveliness in obscurity—and lays her head back again languidly on the cushion.

She has a grand heritage in the languid softness of those lustrous, sapphire-colored eyes, and the siren sweetness of the fresh red lips when they curve into smiles, although she is the undowered daughter of a Cornish baronet, as poor as he is proud, and no one knows this better than Evelyn Trefusis except her aunt, Lady Althea.

But at Lady Althea's speech Imogene has suddenly flushed with anger, and her gray eyes sparkle wrathfully.

Large and dark eyes they are, and as beautiful as Evelyn's, though they are the sole feature of actual beauty in her face.

"How horribly vain you do make Evelyn Aunt Althea!" she says, reproachfully.

"Not at all, my dear," Lady Althea says, coolly, speaking in quite another tone to Imogene to that in which she addressed her elder sister. "I simply state simple facts. Evelyn is so handsome and possesses such natural grace that her speech, ideas and manners are all of good style and tone or will pass for such with all the world. To you, correct culture is a necessity. Tall, large-featured, clear-voice, good conversational powers, keenness of expression can be cultured into imperial demeanor; commanding presence, ability to mingle with the best scientific people, the best political people; men's society especially would suit you, Imogene!"

"That is very certain, judging from Imogene's proclivities," laughs Evelyn. "She is quite as much of a boy as Lionel or Vivian now."

"I don't call it a fault that I like to be with Lionel and Vivian!" Imogene says, hotly, and some deeper feeling than anger making her gray eyes glow; "especially poor Lion!"

"That is an exceedingly vulgar abbreviation of your brother's name, my dear," Lady Althea says, a little sharply—"vulgar and unseemly; but even your sisterly affection must be restrained between limits, and not lead you to the lengths of becoming rough, and loud, and boisterous of manner from your constant association with boys, wasting all your time in their company, and consequently neglecting totally all culture of yourself as a gentlewoman."

"Why, Aunt Althea! I prepare my lessons regularly for Mrs. Mason and Monsieur Gabelle!" Imogene protests; but Lady Althea quietly silences her.

"Learning any number of lessons and becoming proficient in arts or languages, is not culture, my dear; and I was about to say, when you interrupted me, that now you can have no longer the excuse to give of Lionel's loneliness, or illness, or want of companionship, since your father has thought well to engage this special attendant to be devoted entirely to his service. Poor Lionel, with neglected education and shattered health, and the blot of a reputation of suffering from a horrible malady can hope for nothing in the future except through his sisters—for, I need hardly say," Lady Althea adds, gravely, "that on Evelyn, and you, Imogene, the fortunes of your house depend."

"And Vivian?" questions Imogene, in surprise; but Lady Althea's pencilled eyebrows draw close together, and her lips set—the muscles like steel around them.

"From Vivian I hope very little," she says, with icy indifference. "He is not a Trefusis in mind or appearance. He is an obstinate stupid, boy of low tastes and instincts—nothing to recommend him, in fact, but animal courage and boisterous spirits, and I wish it were he who was an epileptic maniac, and not Lionel!"

At the merciless speech the two girls looked up startled, but in different degrees.

Then Lady Althea adds, in her most calm and sweetly patient manner:

"That is to say, if it were the will of Heaven, Lionel would have been handsome tall, strong—a true Trefusis, gifted in mind and body."

"But he is handsome and tall and strong," objects Imogene, lifting up the head that had drooped so sadly; "and he—he is very clever in some things, and he is not a maniac, Aunt Althea, and no one should call him so!" she says, quite trembling with repressed agitation.

"Not a maniac, only subject to periodical fits of madness," Lady Althea says quietly, "for whom your father has thought 'well'"—everybody who knows Lady Althea knows this phrase to mean that her opinion on the question at issue was not asked or disregarded—"has thought well," she repeats, "to engage a keeper."

"He is not a keeper, Aunt Althea!" Imogene says, vehemently; "the gentleman is to be a sort of tutor to Lion—Lionel; he is to teach him fencing, and things like that."

"What gentleman?" demanded Evelyn, indignantly. "You are not going to speak of this man—what is his name, Aunt Althea?—as a gentleman, I hope, Imogene. You need not betray your ignorance of the genus to him by such absurdity, even though he is only a common soldier!"

Imogene is silenced for a moment, flushing beneath her sister's scorn for her worldly ignorance, but she is not convinced.

"Even if he is only a private soldier, Evelyn," she pleads, for Evelyn is looking unutterably disdainful, "he might be a brave, kind man; and he is educated, from what Dr. Rowland says, and would therefore, I think, be entitled to be treated as a gentleman."

"My dear Imogene, will you be silent, and not make yourself quite so ridiculous?" Lady Althea says with startling sharpness and suddenness. "A worthy person enough, I believe, since he has been in non-commissioned officers' rank for some time, though he is quite a young man for the service—sergeant—dear me! I forget, I have Dr. Rowland's letter at hand; but at all events his name does not matter."

"I should like to know his name before he comes," pleads Imogene. "Lionel has been asking me so often to-day—it has made him quite restless, and the—person comes this afternoon, we heard."

"Yes, I believe he comes this afternoon," Lady Althea says, "but I forget the man's name, if I ever noticed it, indeed. It does not matter, Imogene," she adds, sternly, and Imogene shrinks from Lady Althea at that tone, and is about leaving the room, when a servant knocks at the door.

"Sir Philip would be glad to see you, my lady, in the library; Mr. Dumar has not yet arrived."

CHAPTER II.

Half an hour previously the train has rushed into the little trim station, about two miles from Portdreath, as the crow flies.

About half a dozen people have got out at the station, and have hurried away on their several businesses, for it is too bleak and dull an afternoon to even pause for a gossip, and when they are all gone but one young man, he, standing there on the stone coping of the platform, gazes after the train as it puffs merrily away down the valley with something of a wistful earnestness in his keen, bright, red brown eyes, like the eyes of a falcon, and then he turned around to gaze up at the rising moorland, and far off at the gray stone pile of Portdreath, outlined against the lead colored sky.

He is gazing at it in a sort of reverie, when one of his fellow-passengers comes out of the booking-office and rejoins him. He starts out of his reverie at the sound of the last comer's voice, and smiles, such a pleasant, frank, mirthful smile that it quite brings sunshine into the bleak, gray atmosphere.

"That's my Garden of Eden up yonder on the hill," he says, jocosely, but speaking in a guarded undertone. "Looks nice and cool for an afternoon like this, doesn't it, Richard?"

"Beastly," the other passenger, addressed as Richard, mutters, with a shrug of disgust; "and it is a beastly idea of you to turn yourself into a dry-nurse for an idiot boy."

"Well, you see, Richard, the pay is fair," argues the young man with the falcon-bright eyes.

A splendid, soldierly fellow, of some eight or nine-and-twenty, he appears, with the strength of a lion in his powerful, well-knit frame, the keen courage of an eagle in his eyes, and a smile as sweet as a woman's ought to be.

"The pay is fair, you know, Richard, old fellow," he repeats, drawing nearer to his companion, in his apparent anxiety to persuade him to his view of the question, "and you know you—that is we—want all we can get of that, and a few ponies are not bad things in their way," he says, with a cheery laugh, "and the work I don't mind; I rather like it. He's not an idiot, this poor lad, Sir Philip Trefusis' eldest son and heir. Sad for him, isn't it? Subject to attacks of dementia, Rowlands told me—"

"Oh hang it all!" the other interrupts, savagely, "don't tell me anything about it. I hate to hear of it—on your account, of course," he adds, in an off-hand tone. "But as I said before, and I say so still, you might have got something better than such a horrible berth! Why, your position will be—"

"Never mind about position," the other interposes, with rather a forced smile. "I've no position to worry about, thank goodness! As long as I can earn my bread honestly, and have my health, I don't trouble about position, Richard, as you know."

"Yes, I know," Richard answers, in a more satisfied tone. "Well, for you, Dick. You have the easiest life and the best of it, after all. I don't believe," the second Richard says, addressing the first, with an air, real or assumed, of jocose envy, "that you owe a shilling on earth, you lucky dog!"

"Yes, I do," Dick laughs (the brief, bold, dare-devil name suits him as well as everything else)—"I owe my landlady one and tenpence for my washing, and forgot to pay her."

"And I owe more than one thousand and ten pounds," the other rejoins, "and am being badgered by creditors into my grave, and get bothered and tempted to the verge of madness in my struggles to keep up a position—to do credit to the viscount, the hard hearted old skinflint! There's the difference between us two," he goes on, in that jocosely envious tone, "and upon my honor, Dick, you are far the luckier and best off one of us two—upon my honor, you are!"

These two men, possessing the same baptismal name, friends and relatives as they seem—alike in no slight degree in face and figure, stamped with the cachet of the same profession—yet carry about with them the mark of the wide social difference that lies betwixt them.

Richard is shorter, slighter, darker and handsomer in feature than big, soldierly Dick. Richard is an aristocrat from his head to his feet—a military dandy, with fashion and elegance in every detail of his faultlessly cut clothes, his delicate handkerchief, his fresh gloves, as if he had but stepped off "the sweet, shady side of Pall Mall" five minutes before.

Dick is a big, strong sun-tanned soldier, who has seen service and hard work as well; the other is "an officer and a gentleman," according to the popular description. They might be master and man, except for the familiarity in their bearing toward each other.

"Well," Dick observes, suddenly, "I must be off, you know, as it is past four. I told Sir Philip Trefusis I should be there before five. I dare say he is a precise old veteran."

"And I shan't have a soul to speak to for nearly half an hour," the other says, in a tone of impatient displeasure. "I've got twenty-five minutes to pace up and down this infernal cabbage garden, or whatever it is."

"Well, you know I told you so when you came on with me from Launceston," the humbler friend says in a deprecatory tone. "I'm very sorry, my dear fellow, but what can I do? I'm due at Portdreath before five. It is two miles and more uphill, and I have to walk it."

"Hasn't the old Cornish curmudgeon sent any one to meet you?" Richard inquires, in a tone of deep disgust. "Proud old barbarians they are, living in those mildewed manors."

"Never mind—never mind," Dick says, laughing a little, but looking at the other's haughty face with a curious, proud, pleased look, as if his partisanship secretly gratified him. "A two-mile walk will do me good, Richard, and I dare say I can find somebody at the house to send for my traps. And there is another reason why we shouldn't stay talking here," he said, in a lower tone, impressively. "We are both strangers, and country folk, especially Cornish country folk, are very inquisitive, and they may remember us both too well."

"What if they do?" Richard says, sharply, but turning on his heel, and casting a swift glance around, and as he glances he scowls—a wonderfully ugly scowl for such handsome features—a cowardly scowl. "Let them say what they like."

"I don't believe you would care who saw us together, Richard, or that you'd mind one bit walking up to the gates yonder with me," Dick says, smiling, with a grateful, brotherly tenderness in his voice, "though you are a gentleman, and I am only a servant."

"Has your Cornish curmudgeon any of the feminine persuasion up in that cheerful looking abode?"

"Why, of course; didn't I tell you?" Dick says, in surprise. "His sister, Lady Althea de Burgh, widow of Sir Ulick de Burgh, an Irishman, and a scapegrace, they say. She got rid of him remarkably soon after he began to go to the dogs. She lives with him."

"Oh? An old woman!" Richard interrupts, with consummate contempt.

"I don't think she is very old, and they say she is—or was—very handsome," replies Dick. "And there are daughters—young girls—so I was told."

"Pretty?" inquires the critical gentleman.

"I don't know, and I never asked," Dick says, gravely.

"Is that part of your renunciation?" the other inquires, sceptically; "the fair and the false? Eh?"

"It is part of my renunciation that I am never to forget my station," Dick replies, still more gravely. "I have nothing to say to women in your class, recollect. I have nothing to say to women in any class in the way of serious love-making, fortunately," he laughs. "I am lucky all round, you see, Richard."

"Upon my honor, you are, I really believe," Richard says, shrugging his shoulders, "especially in the last respect. The early acquaintance between the sex and the service has gone on improving to the present day."

"Abjure the sex, then, like Saint Kevin," laughs Dick, "or like me."

"There again you are, Dick!" his namesake—so like, and so curiously unlike him—says curtly. "You can—I can't! I shall have to marry somebody soon whether I like it or not."

"How nice for somebody," Dick retorts, rather grimly.

(To be continued.)

While the soldiers practice trenching, the folks at home should try retrenching.—Milwaukee News.

The Real "War Bread" must contain the entire wheat grain—not the white flour center — but every particle of gluten and mineral salts—also the outer bran coat that is so useful in keeping the bowels healthy and active. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the real "war bread" because it is 100 per cent. whole wheat prepared in a digestible form. Contains no yeast, baking powder, seasoning, or chemicals of any kind. Food conservation begins with Shredded Wheat Biscuit for breakfast and ends with Shredded Wheat Biscuit for supper. Delicious with sliced bananas, berries, or other fruits.

Made in Canada.

Redpath
SUGAR

"Redpath" stands for sugar quality that is the result of modern equipment and methods, backed by 60 years experience and a determination to produce nothing unworthy of the name "REDPATH".

"Let Redpath Sweeten it."

8

2 and 5 lb. Cartons—
10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.

Made in one grade only—the highest!

FARM AND GARDEN

BEES.

Those who have their bees in box hives should at once investigate the modern movable-frame hive. With this hive it is possible to manipulate the bees so as greatly to increase the crop. It may be remembered that this hive will be no better than a box unless the bee keeper studies the business and gives the bees prompt and intelligent attention. In box hives it is impossible to give bees the right care. Those who already have their bees in movable frame hives should do their utmost to prevent excessive swarming. Except in cases where it is desired to increase the apiary, swarming should be entirely prevented so far as possible. In no case should more than one swarm be permitted to issue from a colony. If a swarm does issue, place it in a hive in the exact location of the parent colony and move the parent colony to a new place. They can later be united if desired. Remember that swarming during a honey flow decreases the crop. The bees must be given plenty of room in which to store their honey. If one super is allowed to become full before another is added, the crop will be cut in two.

It is best to buy bees locally to avoid danger in shipping. If they are not of the desired race queens may be obtained by mail from breeders. Italian bees are recommended for all purposes.

CARDINAL POINTS WITH BEES.

Bees need in spring plenty of stores, plenty of room for brood, rearing and plenty of protection.

Swarming during a honey flow is undesirable, because it reduces the crop.

During a honey flow bees should be given plenty of storage room. Neglect of this may lose half the crop.

Bees need protection from cold and wind in all parts of the country in which the winter temperature is often as low as freezing.

Comb honey (in sections) should be produced only from white honeys and when the honey flow is rapid. Chunk or bulk comb honey is unsuited for any market except the local one.

The successful bee keeper is he who studies his bees and is prompt with his manipulations. Beekeeping is not a [illegible] business for the shiftless bee keeper. The specialist bee keeper is the most [illegible] from the standpoint of the industry because the small holder usually has not sufficient interest to [illegible]. There is no reason, however, why a few colonies of bees will not be profitable provided the owner gives them intelligent care.

It is impossible to keep bees with profit in box-hives or "gums." The use of movable-frame hives cannot be urged too strongly.

It does not pay to cultivate any plant for bees. There is plenty of nectar available in almost every community. If at any time bees are short of stores, feed a syrup made of granulated sugar. Do not let the bees starve, as they often do in neglected apiaries in winter.

FARM NEWS AND VIEW.

The principal value of apples as food for stock is in the fact that they combine well with other foods, furnishing a balanced ration which is far superior to that usually given to stock. They aid digestion, satisfy the appetite and give tone to the system.

As a single diet apples are not good for fattening, not good muscle builders and not good egg or milk producers.

The best way to treat a lousy horse is to clip him. Then put half a pound of any tobacco in a quart of boiling water and cover it. Allow to simmer for five or six hours, then with a sponge wet with this tobacco tea, bathe the horse from head to tail; in two or three hours give a thorough currying, and repeat if necessary in two or three hours.

Summer squashes are to many an attractive addition to the home garden. Their culture is easy. Two or three hills will furnish enough for an average-sized family.

These squashes are not fastidious as to soils, though they, like most garden plants, prefer a warm, sandy loam. The most important requirements for success are abundance of manure and good cultivation. The hills may be spaced five or six feet apart. The plants will occupy the ground all summer if the fruits are harvested at usable stage.

In preparing a "hill" for the planting of summer squashes, a hole two and one half feet square and 12 inches deep should be dug; a bushel basket of manure should then be thoroughly mixed with the excavated soil, which is then replaced in the hole. It is better to use well-rotted manure, but if the mixing with soil is properly done there will be little danger of heating from fresh strawy manure. With chicken manure, use only one-half of this quantity. This preparation can very well be done as soon as the ground is in condition for working in spring.

Squashes are tender plants, and cannot endure the slightest frost, so seed should not be planted until the soil is well warmed. Ten or a dozen seeds are planted usually in each hill. These should finally be thinned to one or two plants. The soil must be stirred by shallow cultivation until the plants cover the soil.

There are in use several types of these squashes. They must all be used while very immature. If the thumb nail does not very readily puncture the skin of the fruit, it is past its best stage.

The transferring of pollen from tree to tree must be done by insects, and the honey bee is the most reliable in the performance of this work.

Garget is due to injury to bag or congestion of the milk from an obstruction in teats so that all milk cannot be removed. Remove any of these causes, then give [illegible] drops of each aconite and belladonna tincture, three or four times a day, and either bathe bag with warm camphorated oil or paint lightly with tincture of iodine. Do not give much grain and no cornmeal during treatment. Keep bowels in a relaxed condition.

Humus is the substance formed in the soil by decaying vegetable matter, such as leaves, stubble, roots, manure, etc., plowed under and so on.

Humus not only comprises elements of plant food itself, but it has the power of holding the necessary nitrates of fertile soil to prevent their escaping through washing or other means. It also has the effect of a sponge in absorbing and holding moisture in position and form available for the use of growing plants and aids in keeping the soil porous.

Humus is indispensable to plant growth. Poor crops are in many cases due to its lack.

A great aid to the hog raiser is a small crop of pumpkins. These can be grown at a small cost, and form a valuable addition to the rations of hogs. The value does not lie entirely in their nutritive composition, but is due largely to the beneficial effects on the digestive tract, as they tend to regulate the bowels. It is asserted that the seeds are valuable as a vermifuge.

Pumpkins may be grown in the cornfields, especially where there is a poor stand.

Sheep return more and better fertility to enrich the soil and distribute the same more evenly than any other class of stock.

In a horse symmetry of form is necessary for strength, correct proportion and perfect development.

Indian Relics.

A copper banner stone or ceremonial weapon of ancient Indian days, which was unearthed in Fond du Lac during the digging of a sewer, is shaped like an ancient battle axe and has two blades and a hole for a handle. It was found six feet in the earth and is believed to have been lost on the lake shore many ages ago, before the lake receded to its present level, or buried by a later generation of Indians. A cache of interesting Indian relics and weapons was dug up in the same city several years ago.—Exchange.

"Some men are born to trouble," says the Cynical Bachelor, "and others get married quite unconsciously."

ROYAL YEAST
MAKES PERFECT BREAD

THE FUNNY SIDE

At the church entertainment held recently, the chairman in announcing the encore, remarked: "Miss Blank will sing again—I cannot tell you why," and a titter was heard in the front seats.

"You scorn my suit, my beauty proud
"I'll bring you to the dust," he vowed.
"You might have better fared," quoth she,
"If you had brought the 'dust' to me."

The parson's little boy got in an undercut recently, when the visitor at the manse asked him if he liked to go to church. "I should think so. Why, it's grand to hear daddy talking for an hour and mamma never allowed to say a word."

"My proudest boast is that I was one of the men behind the guns," said a returned colonel recently. Someone in the crowd said: "How many miles behind?"

The Berlin rag-tag and bobtail have no further use for "Der Tag."

Observer—I noticed you got up and gave that lady your seat in the street car.

Observed—Since childhood I have respected a woman with a strap in her hand.

"You once kept a cook for a whole month, you say?"

"Yes."

"Remarkable. How did you manage?"

"We were cruising on a house boat, and she couldn't swim."

The Husband—Where have you been?

The Wife—Playing bridge.

The Husband—Did you win?

The Wife—No, I lost.

The Husband—You ought to be ashamed of yourself. You should have been at home looking after the children.

Wife—Why do they say "Dame Gossip"?

Husband—Dunno. Perhaps they are too polite to drop the "D."

Wife (at breakfast)—Oh, John, I'll bet I know who you gave your seat to coming home last night.

Hubby (who had been out having a quiet little game)—Nonsense, my dear. How could you ever guess? How do you know I gave up my seat to anyone?

Wife—Yes, you did, you dear, kind, old boy; you let a poor Irishwoman have it; for I distinctly heard you say in your sleep, "Oh, that's all right: I'll stand pat."

For six years a bitter feud existed between the Browns and Robinsons, next door neighbors. The trouble had originated through the depredations of Brown's cat and had grown so fixed an affair that neither party ever dreamed of "making up." One day, however, Brown sent his servant with a peace-making note for Mr. Robinson, which read: "Mr. Brown sends his compliments to Mr. Robinson and begs to state that his old cat died this morning." Robinson's reply was bitter: "Mr. Robinson is sorry to hear of Mr. Brown's trouble, but he had not heard that Mrs. Brown was ill."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS OF GREAT VALUE

Mrs. J. A. [illegible], Ste. Perpetue, Que., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets have been of great value to me and I would strongly recommend them to other mothers." Thousands of other mothers say the same thing. They have become convinced through actual use of the Tablets that nothing can equal them in regulating the bowels and stomach; driving out constipation and indigestion; breaking up colds and simple fevers; expelling worms and curing colic. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

How to Be Happy Though Married

Domestic happiness does not come as a matter of course, but, like everything else worth having, must be worked for.

Don't imagine that because you have won each other you need no longer be affectionate.

Carry over into the wedded life the refinement of manner that characterized your wooing days.

Once in awhile let your husband have the last word. It will please him and be no loss to you.

Husband and wife are one, but it is a parody on unity if each wants to be that one.

A rose given to [illegible] while weary feet are painfully walking over it is more than wreaths for the dead.

Make your home a cabinet room where all the affairs of the household and sometimes of business come under comparison and advisal.

Many a failure would have been avoided if men had consulted with their wives.—Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters.

Her Waist.

Yet sometimes the "tuck in" is preferred.

There is much [illegible] as to its position.

But mostly it stays where it really belongs.

It may be swathed, draped, leather-belted, sashed or simply suggested by line.

When a fellow is hungry a [illegible] dinner sounds fine.

Corsets
Hosiery
Underwear
Handkerchiefs

Are a specialty in the Ladies' department. A splendid range in Raw Silk at greatly reduced prices this month, see the window display on Saturday.

Butter and Eggs Wanted

Falconer Bros.

Delayed Shipments

Just Arrived . . .

Now is the time to get goods that have been almost impossible to get. We have just got in delayed shipments, bought last fall at last last year's prices.

Cotton, Silk and Real Cashmere Hosiery

From 15c to 60c. To-day's values 25c to $1.00

Gloves in kid, silk and mercerized lisle, and chamoise lisle. Floor coverings, linoluems, and oilclothes. Get them quick, they are going fast. We cant replace them.

Bring your butter and eggs
And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.

Lawn Supplies

Taylor-Forbes Lawn mower
Rubber hose
Hose nozzles
Couplings & clamps
Hose reels
Garden shears
Cultivators

Thomson's
Hardware Store

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS
To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Kawartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Roundtrip tourists tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares, with liberal stop overs.

GET YOUR TICKET IN ADVANCE

J. S. Cameron, Agent, Port Elgin, Both telephones.

WONDERFUL STUFF!
LIFT OUT YOUR CORNS

Apply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

This drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have freezone have him order it for you.

Western Fair
London, Canada
Sept. 7th to Sept. 15th, 1917

1867-"A half Century of Success"-1917

The Great Agricultural Exhibition of Western Ontario

$32,000.00 in Prizes and Attractions

A very interesting programme, including Military and other features.
TWICE DAILY

FIREWORKS EACH NIGHT
TWO SPEED EVENTS DAILY

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES

Prize Lists, Entry Forms and all information from the Secretary.

LIEUT. COL. W. M. GARTSHORE
President

A. M. HUNT.
Secretary

Promotion Examinations

Primer to first book—Honours—Ruth Philps, Eva Schrank, Helen Dennis, Florence Thede Frank Bray, Richard Langford, Wilbert Wankel, Jamie George, Thos. Smith

Pass—Margaret Schwartz, Ralph Brigden, Hindle Muir, Frank Fleming, Geo Henzi, Finlay McPherson, Myrtle Campbell, Claude Ebp, Donald McKenzie, Clifford Cottrill, Clara Bannister, Cameron Nodwell, Dorothy Stevens. Carl Wipp.

Jr. Primer to Sr. Primer—Honours—Clarence Finlayson, Helen McBride, Kathleen Bolender, John Wipp.

Pass—Beatrice Starling, Walter Booth, Will Johnston, Sandy McLean, Altie Schwass.

1st cls. primer to Jr. primer—Honors—Winnifred Bell, Mildred Burke, Christena Vogt, Arthur Barber, Tilly Overton, Etta Gray, Mildred Blindauer, Bert Wipp, Lily Haralson, Fred Collins.

Pass—Irene Gray, Gertrude McCaw, Don Booth, Edna McCulloch, James Sparks, Edith Woolmer, Mary Swalwell, Clarence Webb, Geo. Bell, Lorne Ferguson, Isabel Sparks.

B. Currie, teacher.

—

Sr. I to Jr. 2—Honours—M. Willson and G. Cottrill (equal), M. Bell, F. Barber, F. Wipp, M. Lamont, J. Hill, L. Gamble, G. Stephenson.

Pass—D. Scammell, F. Perry, C. Hessenauer, I. Krauth, E. Strathy, W. George, J. Johnston, L. Hill, I. Schwass, E. Welshohn.

Jr I to Sr. I—Honours—W. Schierholtz, N. Webb, L. Smith, H. Osborne, A. Rowlands, N. Wilson.

Pass—F. McKenzie, F. Buschlen, V. Perry, L. Saleman, C. Becker, N. McArthur, W. Wilson, I. Fulder, J. Henderson, O. Brill.

W. Struthers, teacher

—

From Jr. 2 to Sr. 2—Honours—W. McBride, G. Bray, M. Kettles, E. Collins, J. Bolender.

Pass—B. Nodwell, O. Starling, L. Blindauer, C. Tupling, L. Schrank, H. Wipp, P. Collins, P. Bannister, D. Philps and M. Belbeck equal, G. Dennis.

Recommended—M. Finlayson, P. Thede, B. Chappel.

From Sr. 2 to Jr. 3—Honours—N. Schaus, S. Langford, M. Wankel, C. Strachan, L. Welshohn, M. Smith, J. Miller, S. K. Thomas, N. McFadden.

Pass—E. Gischler, M. Park, E. Gray, L. Nodwell and M. MacPherson equal, W. Thomas, G. Goar, H. Wipp.

Kathleen Cassidy, teacher

—

From Sr. 3 to Jr. 4—Honours—Stewart Anderson, Harold Brigden, Kathleen Robinson, Greta Bock, Hazel Vennard, Jean Sayles, Marguerite Cottrill, Norman Miller.

Pass—Alma Miller, Mary Everitt, Doris Collins, Agnes Fleming, Will Bray, Janet Schrank and La Verne McFadden (equal), Alice Buschlen, Grace Harrison, Velma Hessenauer, James Goar, George McLean.

From Jr. 3 to Sr. 3—Honours—Annie Mitchell, Kathleen Stephenson, Jean Mitchell, Lee Begg, Ellen Thomas, Edward Saleman, Weldon Smith.

Pass—Roy Thede, Clarence McKenzie, Albert Scammel, Violet Wilson, Vera Bell, Ray Smith, George McLachlan, Mabel Overton, Earl Nodwell, Caroline Bannister.

Recommended—Robert Wilson, Florence Kettles, Stewart Begg.

Berta M. Gilbert, teacher

—

Jr. 4th, to Sr. 4th.—Honours—Milton Millar, Florence George, Paul Gischler, Margaret Barber.

Pass—Margaret McCollough, Dorothy Rahney, Basil Eby, Donald McArthur, Wilma Becker.

F. W. Aylesworth, Principal

NORTH BRUCE

During the electric storm early Sunday morning, barns belonging to John Steffert and T. A. Howe were struck with lightning but did not take fire. Mr Steffert had a sheep killed which had been lying near the barn.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Javins, with other friends motored down from near Owen Sound, on Saturday.

The U. B. and Presbyterian picnics brought out a large crowd at the Grove on Saturday. The weather was fine and all enjoyed the day at the lake. There were ball games and foot races during the afternoon. Four ministers Rev's. McDougal, Hallman, Hangs and Bell ran a race and Rev. Hallman proved to be the swiftest runner.

Miss Pearl Jones spent the week end with her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. Jones.

Miss Robertson went to her home in Wingham on Saturday to return at the close of the vacation to teach again at S. S. No. 12, with a raise in salary.

Mrs. Hamley is visiting with her brother, Mrs. Geo. Brown.

The W. M. A. meeting will be held at Mrs. A. Mass this Wednesday afternoon, and not at Mrs. D. Riebel's as stated last week. Mrs. (Rev.) Hallman, who was delegate to board meeting at Stevensville, will report at this meeting.

Mr. Geo McIntee is building a cement silo.

UNDERWOOD NEWS

Get your gasoline at The Hardware.

Save wood and coal, use an oil stove. We have some coal oil stoves which will save the woman work, and save money too. Thede & Brill.

Mrs. Wm. Coleman and family left last week for their new home in Walkerville. Mr. Coleman left some time ago.

Mr. Reoch, of Saugeen, has charge of the chopping mill during Mr. Geo. Roppel's absence.

Mr. W. G. Dobson, of Toronto, is holidaying at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Johnson and family are home on a visit to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Johnson.

Jean Hood met with an accident on Saturday. While playing in the barn she fell and dislocated her elbow.

Mary Johnson, who has been away visiting in the west for the past year has returned home.

Geo. Hood is spending his vacation at home here.

A very heavy rain and thunder storm visited the neighborhood on Sunday morning it started at about 1.30 a. m. and continued till 7 o'clock. It rained in torrents all the time and soon everything was flooded, the water was as high as 4 and 5 feet in places. The road between Thede & Brill's store and the town hall was all under water. The storm was the worst known here.

Paul McColl had two fine head of cattle killed by lightning.

Geo. H. McKay, 6th Con. has purchased a Ford car.

BURGOYNE AND DISTRICT

Rain, rain buckets of rain,
Dashing in torrents on roots and grain,
Flood, flood, mud, mud.
One day fair, distress in the air
And at it again.

Archie Bell preached here Sunday.

Mr. W. J. McIvor was visiting his mother at Owen Sound Saturday.

Mr. C. Morton walks out from town two or three times a week to superintend his farm management here. Mr. Morton enjoys good health at his four score years and living in town seems to agree with him.

Hay is going to be a wonderful crop in spite of all the fears of failure in the late spring.

Beef ring No. 2 commenced last week. The lateness in starting was on account of several shareholders dropping out and there was some delay in filling their places with others.

Capt. R. Stewart Muir Passes Away at Toronto

It was with profound regret our citizens learned of the death of Capt. R. Stewart Muir, at Toronto, on Thursday. He was a native of Port Elgin, and one of the many clever young men born and educated here who have become prominent in the Dominion.

Mr. Muir had been ailing for about a year, hardening of the arteries being the cause of illness, and finally his death. The remains were brought here Saturday and the funeral services were held in the Presbyterian church on Sunday at 3 p. m., the Rev. Mr. Mann officiating. There was a large gathering of the people from the town and townships to pay a last tribute to a former friend.

Mr. Muir engaged for a number of year in the drug business, and during later years he was a manufacturer's agent. He was an eloquent public speaker, and gave of his time and talents to public affairs.

The late Mr. Muir was a keen student of politics and public questions. He held the rank of Captain in Lieut. Col. John A. Cooper's 198th Battalion, and on the eve of its departure was forced to relinquish his rank, owing to his illness and go to his home. He was identified with a local militia unit before he enlisted for overseas service.

Mr. Muir was a Liberal, and opposed unsuccessfully the late Sir James Whitney in Dundas county in the former Premier's last campaign in 1914. He was an active member of the Toronto Young Men's Liberal club of twenty years ago.

As well as his interest in public questions, he devoted some time to the study of astronomy. He lectured frequently on this subject.

For the year 1916 he was Master of Alpha Lodge of the Masonic order. He attended St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

Mr. Muir was in his fifty-seventh year, and is survived by his wife, two daughters and a son, who will have the deep sympathy of many friends in this community.

Bigger Than Ever

A couple of weeks ago The Times told of the Bible Class in the Tiverton Presbyterian church having 138 attendance. The following week the class went to 177, while last week, the close of the contest the attendance was 175 with a total attendance in the whole school of 262.

This, we believe, is probably the largest Bible class in America. Consider a village like Tiverton when making comparisons. Those who are in charge of the school and class, in fact all the class are to be commended for their zeal in a most worthy cause. As a fitting close to the Bible Class, Rev. J. C. Robinson was presented with a beautiful Oxford Teacher's Bible, by Mr. R. McIntosh, in behalf of the Class. The gift was partly to show its esteem for his splendid and untiring work. Mr. Robinson accepted the gift with much feeling.

CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE
Stratford, Ontario

Ontario's Best Business College
FALL TERM FROM SEPT. 4TH

Commercial, Shorthand and Telegraphy departments.

We have thorough courses, experienced instructors, and we place graduates in positions. The demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalog.

D. A. McLACHLAN, PRINCIPAL

So Many People

Remark upon the convenience and satisfaction of trading here, that we are extremely anxious for everyone to learn about the big advantage of trading here.

Our constant aim is a better store service with bigger values at lower prices than you pay elsewhere.

It will pay you to learn about these advantages in service, quality and price.

You are always welcome here whether you come simply to look around or to buy something.

F. R. BARBER
MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

Wallpaper, Wallpaper

WALLPAPER at Pattison's is selling as Cheap as ever. Over 500 lines to choose from. We carry the largest and best stock in Bruce county. Call in and inspect our goods and be convinced. You can save money, by buying wall paper at Pattison's. No trouble to show goods.

All papers trimmed free of charge

Eggs taken in exchange for Wall paper . . .

Electric Vacuum Cleaner For Rent

: : J. W. Pattison : :
Furniture Dealer and Undertaker

Goes to Press

JULY 20TH

Please report changes required to our Local Office, to-day.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada

Mr. John Wallace has a magnificent field of wheat on his farm on the river road. The grain is very thick and about three feet high.

A number of Saugeen men held a bee two days last week to open concession 10 to the lake. They did a lot of work and after some more free labor will likely ask the council for a little assistance. The following men were working: G. Webb, A. Reinhart, Ed. Bricker, W. Smith, G. Smith, B. Collard, W. Greathead, W. Campbell, A. Beaton, Ed. Chappel, W. Lancaster, F. W. Elliott, W. H. Walker, Ed. Sparks, John Bricker.

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. Free from harmful drugs.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.

Subscribe for The Times and get all the local news.

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 28 PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 1917 $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

COMING EVENTS

10c. per line
No notice less than 25c

PATRIOTIC GARDEN PARTY—At John Cook's Tuesday, July 31st. Watch for particulars.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN—A lawn social will be held at Mr. Henry Tiedo's Tuesday July 17th under the auspices of the Evangelical Ladies Aid. The Southampton orchestra will furnish music and a splendid program will be given. All kinds of lunch served, also a good fishing pond. All welcome. Admission 10 cents. Half proceeds go to Red Cross.

THE REGULAR MONTHLY—Meeting of the Women's Institute, on Thursday, July 12th, at 3 o'clock, on Mrs. J. Forrester's lawn. A social meeting. Knitting, lunch, collection.

MISSIONARY MEETING—In Mennonite church Thursday evening July 12. Miss Evans, of Shongo, Africa, will speak at 7.35. All welcome.

Teacher Wanted

Qualified teacher wanted for U. S. S. No. 1 S. A. & E. (Dunblane) Duties to commence Sept. 4th. Apply, stating salary and experience, to John Scott, Secty-treas. Port Elgin R. R. 1. 27-2 tc.

Busby's for correct time

Rowlands, jeweler, has some pretty and useful presents. See them

I. Hamilton will give a cut of from two to four cents on all boiling meat. Prices are likely to be lower and when a drop comes the reduction will be made. We favor the consumer. Try our butcher shop for meats. We will continue to keep all during the summer all good things in meat, at lower prices than usual. Try us. Prompt attention to all orders. Anyone having good butcher heifers for sale, notify us. I. Hamilton, butcher. We want only the best of cattle.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

WANTED—Girl with good education, for composing room. Apply in own hand writing, to Editor, Times office.

TO RENT—Five roomed cottage, at the lake. Has fireplace, and large airy rooms. Apply R. M. Lowry.

FOR SALE—The Andrew Sutherland property at the South End. Fine brick house, 7 rooms and shed. Good basement, also stable. Possession given immediately. Apply to Geo. S. Webb and James McEwing, executors. 2-4t.

FOR SALE—Three young yorkshire sows. Safe in pig. Apply James T. Wallace. 27-tf

WANTED—We are paying the highest prices for beefring hides. B. Zelkind, Port Elgin.

FOR IMMEDIATE SALE—Good frame house with all the modern conveniences, good fruit bearing trees. A piano also for sale. Apply at The Times office.

FOR SALE—Good rubber-tired buggy. Apply G. McLaren.

PHONOGRAPHS!

How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.

Louis Bloch's Music Store
Owen Sound

DENTAL

W. P. POWER, D. D. S., Dentist, office over South End Store. Hours 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

MEDICAL

DR. F. H. WELLS, office and residence on Green street, one door west of Bank of Hamilton.

W. J. CHAMBERS, M. D., L. R. C. P., L. M., Edinburgh. Office and residence Lakeview Hall opposite South End park Port Elgin.

DR. W. S. LAIRD, Oculist, Specialty in Nose and Throat diseases. Guarantees all his fitting of glasses. Office hours Wednesday afternoons. Next to Metropolitan Bank

LEGAL

W. BURGESS, LL.B., Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public, &c., &c. Office, Hutton's Block. Private and other funds to loan.

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. 429 G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communications in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at 8 p.m. Visiting brethern cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Geo. Smith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE, No. 170, I.O.O.F., of Ontario, meets at 8 o'clock, p.m., every Monday in their hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N.G.; T. Rankin, Rec.-Sec.; D. Geddes, Permsec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer of marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office in Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin.

UNDERTAKING

J. W. PATTISON, Funeral director and embalmer. Residence on premises. Rural phone No. 22.

Dominion Day Committee Have Surplus of $250 For Red Cross

On Monday night the Dominion Day Committee had a brief meeting to hear the financial report of the day's work.

The secretary's report pointed out that the crowd here was not as large owing to the cutting off of the excursion train, and then, too, the torrents of rain on Sunday did great damage to the southern townships.

The receipts from all sources were $1690, against $1658 last year. On last year's business there was a deficit of a few dollars. This year there is a surplus of about $250 which goes to Red Cross.

The committee expressed their thanks for the splendid way in which the farmers and their families turned out, and also tendered their thanks to all who assisted in making the celebration a success.

Treasurer's Report of 2nd of Juiy Celebration

Receipts—Booth at park	$379 35
Girls' Friend club fish pond	13 12
Red Cross Tea Room	83 57
Hotel Tea Room	107 10
Cash donated instead of baking	25 85
Sale of all surplus	19 05
Sale of Red Cross buttons	1 80
Special donations to swell funds, Mr. J. J. Wilson	2 00
Mr. Schwartz	2 15
Total	632 99
Expenses	250 84
Net Proceeds	382 15

The ladies desire to thank Mr. Stevens for the lumber, Mr. McPherson for the hotel building, Mr. Vandrick for assistance, 1st of July committee for park privileges, and people in general for baking, etc.

BURGOYNE AND DISTRICT

Mr. and Mrs. Haug, of Port Elgin, are holidaying at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Alex. McLachlan.

Mr. Egan, from the police force, Toronto, is visiting his sister, Mrs. R. Cunningham.

Mrs. MacIntosh and her daughter, Mrs. Gribble, spent a few days visiting at Mrs. McAndrew's.

A meeting in the church vestry, to talk up egg circle is called by Mr. McKay, of Walkerton.

Rev. Mr. Strachan from Toronto, preached two excellent sermons here Sunday.

MARRIED

STURGEON—McKINNON—On Wednesday, June 27th, Miss Grace Parkhouse McKinnon, 6th. of Bruce to Mr. Andrew Milligan Sturgeon, Kincardine Tp.

DIED

AVIS—At lot 11, Con. 6, Bruce Tp. on Sunday, July 1st., John Avis. The interment took place at the Tiverton cemetery on Tuesday July 3rd. Aged 89 years, 10 months, 22 days.

Tenders Wanted

For painting, renovating the interior of the Baptist church Port Elgin. Plans and specifications may be seen at The Times office.

Tenders to be in by July 18, 1917.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Burgess of Sask. were callers at the Baptist parsonage this week.

NOTICE

Hay to cut on shares. Apply to H. McRae, 4th Con. Saugeen.

New High School Teacher

Mr. Charles Potter of Thedford, has been engaged as principal of Port Elgin high school, at a salary of $1400.

Mr. Potter comes to Port Elgin highly recommended and highly qualified. He is a teacher of experience, and a graduate of Toronto University, being a mathematical specialist, and also a specialist in science.

In Watford high school Mr. Potter has a splendid record, having increased the attendance from a small number to over 200. Mr. Potter has not been connected with a school for the past year, having devoted the time to his fruit farm interests.

Running Shoe . .
. . Reduction Sale

Is now going on. Special reduction on our entire stock. Drop in and get fitted out for the holidays

Falconer Brothers

Strawberries!

Finest homegrown strawberries now on sale.

Order your crate now

Falconer Bros.

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

Port Elgin citizens entertained many people over the first of July. Among those noted were:

Mr. Charles Gilbert from Toronto.
Mrs. Small of Kincardine.
Nell Currie, of Detroit.
Miss Hazel Webb, of Chatham.
Mr. and Mrs. D. Forrester, Paisley.
S. Bricker, Listowel.
A. E. Brill, of Stratford.
A. H. McLean of Toronto.
Mr. Barrett, of St. Marys.
A. W. Chapman, of Harriston.
Mr. and Mrs. R. Trelford, of Toronto, at Jack Chapman's.
Mayor and Mrs. Lippert, of Walkerton.
Harry McDuff, of St. Thomas.
Heather Robertson, of Oshawa.
Mr. Wil McKay and Mrs. George McKay of Detroit.
Mrs. Angus McKay, of Tiverton.
Mr. and Mrs. Wiest and Mrs. Witzel of Kitchener, at Mrs. Vanpel's.

Miss Martha Clazie is home for the holidays.

Alex. Mann of the 70th. Battery, at Petawawa, was home last week.

Dr. McLeod, was in town last week before departing for overseas.

Mr. Hill, of Toronto, was a visitor here last week.

George Sees, was home from Galt last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clare Russell, were visiting Mr. Goyer last week.

Florence and Horace McKay of Tiverton, were holidaying here.

Stevens Hepner Co. were closed last week for stock taking.

Mrs. G. M. Muir, and children, of Windsor, are visiting at T. Rankin's.

Miss Berta Gilbert went to Chicago last week for a vacation.

Miss Pearl Wismer has returned to Toronto after a visit home.

Miss Ona Campbell, of New York, is holidaying in town.

Miss Mona Martin has returned from Toronto.

Miss Bessie Fidlar of Cleveland, is the guest of Miss Shier.

Mr. Otto Klein and family are now at their summer home at the lake.

Mr. J. J. George was in Kincardine last week on business.

Mr. G. A. McArthur, of Dunblane, Sask., is spending his holidays with his parents here.

Mrs. B. Whetstone and children of Harriston, were visiting at Mr. James Whetstone's.

Miss Annie Campbell, of Calgary, is spending her holidays, with her mother, Mrs. John Campbell.

Mr. Sherwood Hamilton of Moorefield spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. R. Vennard.

A number from here attended the races at Kincardine on Friday. The day was fine, and all report the races good.

Miss Porter, of Toronto, and Mrs. Porter and Master Richard of Detroit are guests of Mrs. J. W. Pattison.

Mrs. Ray, and daughters, of Hamilton are spending a few days with Miss Goar, and other friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Monteith, Master Alex. and the Misses Monteith, were visitors with Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Crawford. The party motored from their home in Powassan, near North Bay. Mr. Monteith reports a delightful trip, and the roads as in good shape.

Mr. and Mrs. James Struthers entertained visitors on Dominion Day as follows: Dr. Struthers, Tiverton, J. B. Struthers and Milledge, 8 th Bruce; Miss Mary Drummond, Kincardine; Mrs. Wm. Sumpton and Mrs J. Sumpton 10 th of Bruce.

Miss Mary Lamont has resigned as teacher at S. S. No. 1 Saugeen having accepted a school at Forest at $700. Miss Lamont is a very efficient teacher. She is at present taking a short course in domestic science at Toronto.

Miss Mary McKechnie, of Dunblane, pupil of Mrs. Donald Lamont, has successfully passed the Intermediate Pianoforte examination for the London, England College of Music, at the recent examination held in Owen Sound.

The first communion service in the Essa St. Presbyterian Church under Mr. Wait's pastorate was held last Sunday morning and was largely attended. Nine names were added to the roll by profession of faith and thirteen by certificate.—Barrie Examiner.

Billy M., one of the race horses here last week had a little race by himself. While his driver was closing the gate at the park on Monday morning the horse dashed off going as far as the mountain and making it in fast time. He was followed by Dr. Tower in his car and overtaken.

Mrs. Donald Lamont, pupil of Mr. S. J. English Mus. Bac. Owen Sound and former pupil of Miss Ray, Port Elgin, has passed First Class Associate in Pianoforte playing, A. L. C. M. including Elementary Harmony, the examinations held in Owen Sound, on June the twentieth.

Kincardine town and township suffered much damage owing to the heavy rain a week ago Sunday. Street crossing, culverts and bridges, generally were washed out. Huron township and Ashfield and Colborne also suffered. It is estimated that $20,000 will not cover the damage in Kincardine town, and the surrounding townships will suffer heavily too.

Mrs. Johnston has returned to Toronto.

Mrs. J. S. Cameron is visiting in Toronto.

Miss Mabel Henry is visiting in Chesley.

Mr. and Mrs. C. McPherson and Dr. and Mrs. Lane are at Lion's Head.

Mrs. N. McLeod and Mrs. Law have returned to their homes in Moosejaw.

A. A. McDonald has returned to his home in Moosejaw.

Mr. W. Wesley and Mrs. Blight, of Oshawa, are guests at Wm. Martin's.

Mrs. Geo. Falconer and Master Duncan are visiting in Toronto.

Earl Hendry has received promotion in the trenches, and is now a corporal.

Mrs. W. H. Ruby of Toronto has been visiting Miss McKellar.

Miss Roy has returned from a visit to New York.

Miss Bessie Wankel is home from Owen Sound.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrington, of Toronto, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wismer.

Mr. John Iller, of Toronto, is spending a few days among friends here.

Mr. Frank Curtis was home from Toronto over the week-end.

Mr. Chas. Moore of Chicago, is visiting in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Reinhart, Stratford, is visiting friends here.

Mrs. Gillespie, and Miss Elsie, of Wingham, are guests of Mrs. Sol. Schrank.

Miss M. Shier of Toronto, is spending the summer with her mother, Mrs. J. Shier.

Nellidee Struthers, of Underwood, was successful in his recent exams. in elementary violin.

Misses McDowell, Cunningham and Swanee of Owen Sound, are guests at Wm. Wankel's.

Miss H. Porter and Messrs. John and Bert Porter of Wingham, were first of July visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Pattison.

Mr. Allan Bell continues to progress slowly after his serious accident here on July 2nd.

John MacDougall has a perfect garden. There are a lot of fine gardens in town this year, but give John's a look-over.

Mr. J. H. Wismer has his cottage at Sauble Falls nicely renovated, and is spending week-ends there.

Mrs. Reg. Whittemore and Mrs. Whittemore, Sr., are guests of Mrs. (Dr.) Scanlan.

Mr. John Nightingale of Hespeler, was a visitor with Mr. Jerry Snider last week.

Mr. A. F. George was in Guelph last week. Mrs. George, who is in the hospital there, is recovering nicely after a second operation.

Miss George who is recovering from an operation at the County Hospital is reported to be making good progress.—Walkerton Telescope.

Mr. Hugh MacDougall, of the 4th. of Bruce, sends to The Times the head of a stalk of timothy which measured nearly nine inches in length.

Mr. Camack and daughters, and Mr. and Mrs. Proctor of Kimberley, visited Mr. and Mrs. Fawcett over the week-end.

Mr. Sol Knechtel received word on Saturday that his son Gunner Orland Knechtel, had been killed in action on June 24th. He was 23 years of age, and had been in the army over a year.

The 160th Battalion boys had a celebration at their camp in England on July 1st. No doubt many of the lads from this section had thoughts of the Dominion Days they had spent in old Port Elgin town.

Dr. McDougall was prevented from preaching on Sunday on account of a severe cold. The memorial service in St. Andrew's will be held this Sunday. Rev. Douglas McCulloch took the services for Dr. McDougall.

The editor was made happy the other evening when he found left at his home some large fresh eggs, and also some delicious butter, made up in the cutest little designs. We are not supposed to know the giver, but we found out that it was a good Scotch friend, Mrs. Hugh McArthur, from Arran.

Capt. Alex McLeod visited at Mrs. F. H. Dennis' last week. In 1861 Capt. McLeod sailed the "Mariner" out of Southampton on her maiden trip. She was loaded at Port Elgin on May 25, 1861 and encountered rough weather and a big snow storm on the way out.

While Mrs. A. J. Osborne and Miss Bricker, were driving to the former's home just north of Port Elgin, Jas. Campbell, riding his motorcycle, coming toward them, had the misfortune to strike the buggy wheel, smashing the bike, and shaking him up. The horse broke away from the buggy, throwing Miss Bricker out, and bruising her considerably, while Mrs. Osborne escaped by jumping. Some damage was done to the buggy and harness.

Mrs. Dan. Currie has received a letter from her sister, Lieut. Jessie Ross, with the C. A. M. C., stating that while crossing the Atlantic the boat was torpedoed. There were no lives lost, but Lieut. Ross lost money and valuables. At present she is in England. Miss Ross, says everyone on the boat behaved splendidly and there was no panic as they took to the lifeboats. They were rescued by a British destroyer.

Lower School Promotion Examination

The following are the names (arranged in alphabetical order) of the High School students who passed the examination for promotion to form 2—Barber M.; Cottrill, C.; McBride, K.; McEwing M.; McGillivray, A.; McGillivray, O.; McIntee, A.; Nicholson, A.; Parfitt, G.; Reech, E.; Richardson, R.; Riebel, O.; Roshton, L.; Schierholtz, C.; Smith, W.; Stevens, M.; Weishahn, E.

SCHOOL REPORTS

The following is promotion examination report for school section No. 6, Saugeen.

Jr. 4 to Sr. 4—W. L. Christie honours, Levi Scholl, honours.

Sr. 3 to Jr. 4—Jack Miller honours, Gordon McKinnon honours. Arthur McKillop.

Sr. 2 to Jr. 3—Ethel Mitchel honours, Howard Pollock honours, Isabel Atkinson, honors, John Lamont honours, Marjorie McKinnon, John Scott, Willie Scott, Jean Mitchell.

Sr. 1 to 2—Cardwell McKinnon honours.

Sr. Primer to Jr. 1—Elmer Pollock.

M. A. Breen, teacher

Report of S. S. No. 7, Saugeen and Arran for the month of June.

Sr. 4—Stanley Reany, Richard Webster, Marie Gowanlock.

Jr. 4—Jessie Bailey, Hazel Kaufman, Sylvester Chappell, Florence Geddes, Bevie Gowanlock, Gladys Busch, Muriel Reany.

Jr. 3—Robbie Geddes, Oral Gowanlock, Murray Chappell, Heather Gowanlock.

Sr. 2—Earl Busch, Robbie Chappell.

Jr. 2—Clifford Reany, Harry Gowanlock, Alexander Heard, Maggie Moore, Harris Gibbons, Pansy Gibbons.

Primer—Florence Young, Ellie Reany, Caroline Schwass, Willie Chappell, Ewart Young.

Average attendance 26.

Felicia Wallace, teacher

The following is the report of S. S. No. 4 Saugeen for the month of June.

Sr. 4—Mary Muir 328, D. Wieck 328, N. Cassidy 202.

Sr. 3—C. Campbell 279; S. McDonald 247, E. Schwass, 209, P. Cassidy 181, M. McIntee 158.

Jr. 3—Lorene Gingrich 274, Nellie Muir 211, L. Gingrich 121, C. McClinton 175.

Sr. 2—A. Hill 117, R. Upsdall 91, M. Leggett 75, R. Howe 63, O. McIntee 53, M. Baker 50, G. McDonald 39, R. Wright 39, W. McDonald 31. J. Leggett 21.

Note: Several pupils were absent during the final examinations, hence their names do not appear on the above report.

Average attendance 27.

Mary L. Lamont, teacher.

The following is the result of the promotion examinations of S. S. No. 3, Arran.

From Jr. to Sr. 4th.—Total 930—Pass mark 60%—Gertie Trask 64, Nina Sternall 63, George Plaunt 63.

From Sr. 3 to Jr. 4—Total 930—Pass 60%—Nell McDonald 78 (hon.), Rose Chappell 73, Hugh Saug 72, Frank Burrows 67, Myrtle Trask 66, Earl Sternall 56.

From Jr. to Sr. 3—Total 720—Pass 60%—Isabelle Zurgler 78 (hon.), Ruth Chappel 51.

From Sec. to Jr. 3—Total 720—Pass 60%—Pearl Sternall 92 (hon.), Wilfred Trask 68, Margaret Plaunt 61, Barbara Faust 61.

K. L. Robb, teacher

Report of S. S. No. 1, Saugeen, Arran, Elderslie, promotion examinations.

Jr. 4 to Sr. 4—Honours—Pearl Quigley, Fraser Scott. Pass—Mabel Grant.

Sr. 3 to Sr. 4—Honours—Lily Bryre, George Thomas, Violet McDougall. Pass—Milburn Fleming, Flora McLean (ab. from exams)

Jr. 3 to Sr. 3—Honours—Margaret McKechnie. Pass—Beatrice Scott, Harvey Grant. Recommended—Allan Quigley, Tracy Thomas.

Sr. 2 to Jr. 3—Pass—Frances McDougall. Recommended for promotion in arithmetic—Dugald McLean.

Jr. 2 to Sr. 2—Honours—Edna Fraser. Jun. 2—Hugh McLean.

Promoted first of June—Jean Scott, Florence Fleming, Dave McKechnie.

Primer Senior—Marie Thomas, Maggie McLean.

Intermediate—Earl Quigley.

Junior—Murray Grant, Marion Thomas.

R. Noonan

Teacher Wanted

Teacher wanted for S. S. No. 2, Arran and Saugeen, duties to commence after holidays. Apply stating salary and experience. Must be Protestant. Address Geo. Harper, Secy. Port Elgin R. R. 2.

Visit Busby's store for souvenirs.

Saugeen council meets Saturday at 1.30

To morrow is the glorious 12th. Local Orangemen go to Tara picnic.

Mrs. Sayles and Jean are spending a brief holiday in Brantford.

Do dreams come true? We dreamed that Court Curtis, who has a fine bunch of potatoes next to us, had picked the bugs from our patch as well.

Mr. S. S. Cameron has returned from a holiday in Quebec. While on a fishing expedition up the Trinity river he secured twenty beautiful trout averaging about 16 lbs. each. Ten of these beauties were on view at Eaton's butcher shop on Tuesday, where they were parcelled and many friends received a gift. A similar box was sent to Southampton friends by Mr. Cameron.

District Women's Institute Meeting

The annual meeting of the West Bruce Women's Institute was held in the Library on Saturday. There was a good attendance, and reports on the work were read from Tara, Arkwright, Allenford, Tiverton, Port Elgin delegates. They all showed extensive work for Red Cross. The president of the district elected was Mrs. R. M. Lowry, vice-presidents, Mrs. Crawford, Tara; Mrs. Coleman, Allenford; secretary, Mrs. Whitworth, Tara. Mrs. D. McTavish was re-elected honorary president. After the meeting the ladies had tea at the Red Cross tea rooms. Miss M. Lamont and Miss J. Wells, accompanied by Mrs. D. Lamont, sang a duet which was much enjoyed.

Board of Agriculture

The Board of Agriculture for West Bruce, met in the town hall Saturday. The President Neil McDougall presided. There were present Secretary Wismer and Directors J. B. Muir, G. Christie, Reeve Craig, George Neil, J. B. Struthers, John Scott, J. W. Bailey, Tara; R. Newman, Allenford; W. Searrow, Arran; A. McDougall, Elsinore; Alex. Lamont, Wm. Howe.

The President reported that the year had been about as other years, and that there was very little interest or enthusiasm. The financial report showed a deficit on the year's business, and also a decrease in membership. The suggestion of the secretary to wait upon township councils asking for grants was accepted, and the motion to continue to give bonuses to subscribers to farm papers was sustained by one vote.

Those who will ask the councils for support are John Scott, for Saugeen, Mr. McDougall for Amabel, J. B. Struthers for Bruce. Arran gave last year. The new officers are: President J. B. Muir Secretary; J. H. Wismer, executive: George Neil, J. B. Struthers, John Scott and the officers.

The usual meetings will be held during the winter.

Reports are that hay will be a great crop.

Weeds are plentiful on the sides of the roads in the townships. A little labor now will save a lot later on.

Record Make of Butter

Underwood creamery has been breaking records the past few weeks. For the month of June Mr. Shannon has produced 23,000 lbs of butter, and for the first half 40 cents per lb. was secured, while for the latter half 37c was secured.

This is the largest make the factory has turned out. Mr Shannon reports the cream coming in from the various farms as of very high quality.

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for 50 lines or over in a year 5c a line; regular weekly issue of items, 8c per line; special issue of items, 10c per line. Black type, count two lines for one.

McMurray's for pure ice cream.

Oats for sale. North End Store.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

Fleet Foot shoes at F. R. Barber's.

The new straw hatware being shown at F. R. Barber's.

White tennis trousers, $1.75 a pair at North End.

Fresh oranges, and lemons always on hand. North End Store.

If you want a pint of good cream try McMurray's.

Another shipment of feed wheat. North End Store.

McMurray keeps good milk for sale.

Congoleum border, 36 inches wide, 65c per yard at North End.

Boys wool and cotton Jersies at South End.

Dyola Dyers in Black, Navy and all scarce colors, now in stock. South End.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

Fleet foot running shoes, all sizes, white, tan, navy. North End store.

Men's Balbriggan and Merino underwear at the South End.

Reliable work shirts and heavy shoes priced away below present market prices now being offered at F. R. Barber's.

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koehler's.

Try Koehler for your next grocery or fruit order.

William's shoes, solid leather goods at lower prices, at South End.

Koehler sells Neilson's and Moirs chocolate. Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front.

Just arrived, a splendid assortment of Misses and children's wash dresses. Prices 50c to $1.75 each. North End Store.

Red Cross supplies. Special prices in grey Scotch fingering yarn. South End.

Worth while savings—Every shrewd individual will consider these savings worth while when he sees the extra values we are offering in men's and boy's suits, raincoats, summer underwear, shirts and fine and heavy shoes. F. R. Barber.

BULL FOR SERVICE—Terms $3 for season cows. Payable January 1st. Wm. Robertson dairyman, Port Elgin.

GET RID OF Pimples Quickly, Easily and Cheaply by Using Cuticura

The Soap to cleanse and purify, the Ointment to soothe and heal. Nothing better for all skin and scalp troubles, as well as for every-day toilet purposes.

Sample Each Free by Mail

With 32-p. Skin Book. For samples address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. N, Boston, U. S. A." Sold throughout the world.

On the Road in France

(By U. [illegible])

The battalion sat down at the roadside, waiting to be guided off to its allotted barns and [illegible], and as it sat there the good people came out, at once, with jugs of water and milk and even beer, though [illegible] that British discipline forbade [illegible] touch. The soldiers in their [illegible] offered cigarettes, and began to talk in that pigeon French which has become famous and current everywhere between Havre and Festubert. Already, as we still waited by the roadside, before we were in our billets, the village and the battalion were on good terms.

The peasant of that part is known to be a thrifty race. It is, then, the more noticeable that every family of that village treated the British soldiers as if they had been their own sons and brothers. But the generosity was not all on one side. In their spare time the soldiers were very ready to do any work that they could about the cottages and farms, the work that the sons and brothers now with the army of France once did. So it was no uncommon thing to see them [illegible] peeling potatoes or sawing wood, or helping (with great enthusiasm) to put refractory pigs into carts. In a little they were as much part of the daily life of that village as if they had lived there for years and would not suddenly march out of it one day just as they had marched in.

While the men were so employed, the officers were making friends with the curé. At first he was shy of English officers, believing them to be uncultured barbarians, with a taste for horseplay, but he ended by inviting them to his house, where every subject from religion to political economy was discussed over a bottle of Quinquina Dubonnet. There were duties, too, that fell unexpectedly upon the officers, as a result of the battalion's friendship with the village, duties more difficult even than getting mischievous pigs into carts. One embarrassed officer found himself at the task of translating a proposal of marriage from a wounded English soldier to a publican's daughter, and of getting down a favorable reply.

It so chanced that one afternoon while we were still there a body of French infantry passed singing. They were going southwards, the way that we had come, and they halted and broke off into the village. Our men flocked out to greet them, and made friends in no time, offering tobacco, the final gift of friendship with the [illegible], examining one another's equipment, in fact [illegible] one another over in frankness and good fellowship. There were jokes and laughter, and then men began to exchange experiences of war. The Frenchmen had seen more active service, they had been in an attack, they expected soon to be in another. We might all be in it together, and annihilate the Boche. With that there was much gesticulation, representing bayonet thrusts. Then a sergeant took a French rifle and did some bayonet work; he was our pride [illegible], he had that touch of imagination which had enabled him to go at the [illegible] with the look in the eye and the passion in all his muscles that [illegible] the presence of a real enemy. As you watched his face you could have sworn that you had only to turn to see the Germans on guard in the [illegible]. There was applause from the French; then a Frenchman [illegible] the frightened German before him with great [illegible] but [illegible], and there was applause from the British. Bayonets were compared with much [illegible], and each admired the other's very generously, though neither could have exchanged it for his own, and more cigarettes were offered and lighted, for the French officers were giving their men rather longer than the usual halt.

When at last they moved off they were followed by many shouts of good luck, and were watched on their road until they grew dim through the dust and then disappeared. The battalion fell at once to talking of the attack, and when it would be, and whether we should ever come across those good fellows again. Who knows, it might be in German dugouts!

Sure enough, a day or two later came the order. The battalion was to push up to the front, where everyone was full of rumors. We said good bye to the village, to the pigs and the good curé's wine, leaving many questions still unsolved with him, and to be debated should we ever come again (which we never have, and many of us will not come now), and so we took the road once more. We were soon among the preparations for the great attack; as we moved up the road a sudden whirlwind of smoke and fire would rush out beside us from what seemed to be a ditch, or an arbor, and a shell would whirr off in its gigantic arc-shaped flight, till we heard it crash far away on some enemy stronghold. You jumped at that first unexpected whirlwind burst from the quietness of the roadside. It was the sensation, a hundred times intensified, of a grouse getting up from the heather at your feet. But there were many such, and we grew accustomed. It was our batteries, and some French heavies mixed with them, registering systematically on every hostile tactical point. We saw aeroplanes sometimes in the distance. The way was being prepared for us infantry with care and method. We wondered as we marched when our turn would come.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

CAN BE AVERTED BY FEEDING THE STARVED NERVES WITH RICH, RED BLOOD.

Nourish your nerves—that is the only way you can overcome life's worst misery, nervous exhaustion, the prostrating headaches, the weakness and trembling of the legs, the unsteady hand and the imperfect digestion that mark the victim of nerve weakness, must end in nervous breakdown if neglected.

Nourish your nerves by the natural process of filling your veins with rich, blood. This explains why these pills have proved successful in so many cases of nervous disease that did not yield to ordinary treatment. For example, Mr. Wilfrid Donald, West Flamboro, Ont., says: "Before I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was in a serious condition. I was not only badly run down, but my nerves seemed to be completely shattered. I slept badly at night, and when I got up in the morning was as tired as when I went to bed. I seemed to be on the verge of a nervous breakdown. At this stage I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In the course of a few weeks I felt much relief, and continuing the use of the pills they completely restored my health. I can now sleep soundly, eat well, and am enjoying complete freedom from my old trouble."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Telling the Bees.

(An Old Gloucestershire Superstition.)

They dug no grave for our soldier lad, who fought and who died out there;
Bugle and drum for him were dumb, and the padre said no prayer;
The passing bell gave never a peal to warn that a soul was fled,
And we laid him not in the quiet spot where cluster his kin that are dead

But I hear a foot on the pathway, above the low hum of the hive,
That at edge of dark, with the song of the lark, tells that the world is alive;
The master starts on his errand, his tread is heavy and slow,
Yet he cannot chose but tell the news—the bees have a right to know.

Bound by the ties of a happier day, they are one with us now in our woe;
On the very morn that my boy was born they were told the tidings the first;
With what pride they will hear of the end he made, and the ordeal that he trod, he trod—
Of the scream of shell, and the venom of hell, and the flame of the sword of God

Wise little heralds, tell of my boy; in your golden tabard coats
Tell the bank where he slept, and the stream he leapt, where the spangled lily floats.
The tree he climbed shall lift her head, and the torrent he swam shall thrill,
And the tempest that bore his shouts before shall cry his message still.

—G. E. R.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

THE CLOTHES MOTH

And Advice On the Way to Prevent Its Ravages.

The tiny yellowish moth which is occasionally seen flitting about at this season is an indication that clothes moths are beginning their destructive work. Egg laying by these little moths is now under way and within a month the eating of woollens and furs by the little caterpillars as they come from the eggs may be anticipated.

The little moths that are seen flying about do not eat anything, the destruction is caused by the tiny larvae working under scanty webs made from particles of the garment on which they feed, and the [illegible] can be detected before the garments have been much eaten. The larvae and webs are this stage can be removed by a stiff brushing.

As early as possible in the spring all woollens, furs, etc., the use of which can be dispensed with, should be put away in safe storage for the summer. Before being packed away these should be thoroughly brushed and beaten, and if possible exposed to the strong sunlight for several hours out of doors. The brushing is very important in order to remove the eggs or young larvae which may have escaped notice. Articles so cleaned and sunned should then be put away in moth-proof containers. Materials which cannot be thus put away should be given the same thorough cleaning and reinspection during the summer every two weeks.

Woollen clothing, furs, etc., may be packed away safely for the summer by enclosing them in several wrappings of paper, or in well made bags of cotton or linen cloth, or in paper sacks which can be tied or otherwise securely fastened to prevent ingress of the moths. In these packages place such repellents as tobacco dust, camphor, naphthalene balls, etc. The odor of these substances are disagreeable to the parent moths and act as a repellent, but they will not kill eggs or larvae which may be enclosed in the packages, hence the necessity of the thoroughgoing cleaning and airing prior to packing away.

Rugs or carpets put away for the summer should be first thoroughly cleaned on both sides and beaten, and then wrapped up in tight rolls protected by wrapping with tar paper.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia

A Guatemalan Marimba.

The people of Guatemala are very fond of music. Their most popular programmes are those in which classical selections predominate. Band, orchestral and marimba music constitute an indispensable feature of all public festivals and entertainments.

The most highly prized music in Guatemala is that of the marimba, a sweet-toned musical instrument said to have been invented by the "Tecomate," a tribe of Indians of the State of Chiapas, Mexico. The original form of the instrument, crude in structure, was brought to Guatemala, where it has been greatly improved. It resembles the xylophone in structure and manner of playing. The keys, strips of wood graduated in length to the musical scale, are made of two kinds of wood called "hormigo," not unlike cedar, and "aguacate." The keys are held together by means of a cord drawn through them. There are 45 tones and 33 half tones. The bass tones are given by the long, thick slats, the high tones by the short, thin slats. The keys are struck with two small rubber hammers called "banquetas."

The Marimba is about 8 feet long, and varies from 1 to 2 feet in width. The sounding board beneath the keys is constructed of two kinds of wood, "taxiscob" and "guachipilin," and the keys are made of mahogany. The cost of a marimba is from $60 to $125 in gold.

The finest marimbas are manufactured in Quezaltenango, and the most skilled operators also come from the city, which is the second in size in Guatemala. Eight operators are required to play a marimba, and the addition of a bass viol, a recent innovation, gives strength and volume to the music.—Exchange.

Hostess—Oh, professor, haven't you brought your wife? Professor—There! I knew I had forgotten something.—Boston Transcript.

GENERAL TRADE NOTES.

Sugar refining has been started at Mukden, Manchuria.

Only British gas mantles may now be imported into New Zealand.

Foreign casks may be temporarily imported into Portugal duty free.

Iron safes and cash-boxes are in good demand in French Indo-China.

Paper for newspapers may be imported into the Argentine free of duty.

Japan exported merchandise to Russia last year to a value of [illegible].

Russia is now producing pig-iron at the rate of over [illegible] tons annually.

Measures are being taken for the better development of cotton cultivation in Brazil.

Guatemala has now its own boot and shoe industry owing to the high prices of imported goods.

Paraguay imported merchandise to [illegible] in 1916, of which Great Britain supplied 29 per cent.

A button manufacturing industry is to be started in Mysore, and machinery has been ordered.

Gold and gold-plated jewelry and silver and silver-plated wares find a good market in Uruguay.

Oil deposits recently found in Bolivia are stated to be wholly satisfactory, and exploitation has commenced.

Hong Kong is a large market for fireworks, about [illegible] worth being imported from the United States alone yearly.

Paraguay imports textiles in normal times to the value of £400,000 annually, 40 per cent. being cotton manufactures.

Brazil's imports amounted to nearly [illegible] in 1916, against [illegible] in the previous year and [illegible] in 1914.

Extensive highway construction in Peru about to be taken should result in a much larger demand for motor vehicles.

There are 12,000,000 knitting-machine needles lying at Rotterdam which were shipped from Germany for America, but have been held up by England.

British leather goods are stated to be too heavy and of too good quality for the Egyptian market; hence the former success of German articles of this kind.

A register of commerce has just been instituted by legislation in France. British firms or their branches established in that country will be obliged to conform to the regulations.

Electric lamps will shortly be manufactured in the Argentine.

A lace manufacturing industry is being established in Argentina.

China obtains most of its electrical material from Japan and United States.

Australia's available supplies of iron ore are estimated at [illegible] tons.

Machinery is imported into Peru in normal times to [illegible] yearly.

The United States supplies [illegible] per cent of the world's total production of petroleum.

Three-fourths of the pianos imported into Brazil before the war were of German make.

The consecutive numbering of packages shipped to Brazil is no longer required by the Brazilian Customs.

"Knocked-down" rattan furniture, manufactured in Hong Kong, is finding a good market in the United States.

South India is beginning to realize the advantage of electricity, Bangalore having set a fine example in this direction.

Machinery is the most important class of goods imported into New Zealand, the British share of which is lamentably deficient.

Hosiery has a very large sale in Chile. American firms are now endeavoring to capture the trade, which was formerly in German hands.

The high cost of elephant power for traction in Burma is opening the way for portable machine traction, especially in connection with the transport of teak logs.

Modern agricultural machinery is likely to find a much better market in Portugal after the war than previously. Labor costs three times what it did three years ago.

The working of the goldfields at Kilo and Moto, Belgian Congo, has yielded results beyond all expectations.

If Africa had the same proportion of railway mileage as the United States it would have 1,000,000 miles of track, instead of its present [illegible].

A great increase in the purchasing power of the natives of British East Africa and Uganda is noticeable, and brass, copper and iron wire, looking glasses, leather belts, lamps and lanterns, beads, etc., in addition to cotton goods, now sell briskly.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

Congressional "Pairs."

The custom of legislative "pairing" is the practice of members of legislative bodies by which two members of opposing parties agree to refrain from voting on a prescribed subject or to be absent during a certain time. It was first used in the United States house of representatives in 1839.

Lincoln's Famous Phrases.

Truth is generally the best vindication against slander.—Remark made when requested to dismiss Montgomery Blair, Postmaster-General.

Let us have faith that right makes might; and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Address, Cooper Union, New York City.

Why should there not be a patient confidence in the ultimate justice of the people? Is there any better or equal hope in the world?—First inaugural address.

It is not best to swap horses while crossing the river.—Reply to National Union League.

The Almighty has his own purposes.—Second inaugural address.

Men are not flattered by being shown that there has been a difference of purpose between the Almighty and them.—Letter to Thurlow Weed.

With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.—Second inaugural address.

You can fool some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all of the people all of the time.—Remark attribut-

Invented the Check System.

John Palmer, who died some years ago in rather straitened circumstances in a little town in Michigan, was the inventor of the check system. Palmer was a fiddler and assumed responsibility for the hats, coats and wraps of those who came to his dancing parties. In keeping things straight he gave numbered checks for the articles committed to his care. Some railroad men who attended one of the dances noticed how perfectly the idea worked, appropriated it and in a short time it was adopted all over the country. As is often the case, the inventor got nothing out of it.

St. Isidore, P. Q., Aug. 18, 1904.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—I have frequently used MINARD'S LINIMENT and also prescribe it for my patients always with the most gratifying results, and I consider it the best all-round Liniment extant.

Yours truly,

DR. JOS. AUG. SIROIS.

EMPEROR CHARLES

A Plain (Very) Description of Austria's Ruler.

Emperor Charles, the present misruler of Austria, has lived such an uneventful and useless life that it is really a waste of space to publish anything about him.

Being one of the Hapsburgs, his lower lip curls like a jelly roll and a baseball team, nine on a side, hangs between his nose and the opening called his mouth. He wears rings under his eyes as well as on his fingers and his head is as empty as a tramp's pocketbook.

He suffers mental fatigue whenever he concentrates his thoughts for more than two seconds at a time, as his brain is so light that it would waft on the gentle spring zephyrs were it ever released from its stone walled prison. He is a jealous admirer of the Crown Prince of Germany and tries to rival that irresponsible individual in the consumption of champagne, but having a constitution as weak as his brain he gets intoxicated whenever he smells a bartender's apron.

The telegraphic connection between his brain and his tongue being badly in need of repair, he has never spoken an intelligible sentence in his life. He always starts things wrong and ends them foolishly and saves money on soap, as he always looks pale enough without washing.

Be it said to his credit, however, he never occasioned any one harm, as he is so incapable he couldn't even do that.

This human manikin is operated by the Kaiser of Berlin. Unexpectedly placed on the Austrian throne, he found it more like an electric chair, and as a ruler he is about eleven inches shy.

Ever since he ascended the throne he has been making eyes at the dove of peace. Every little while he freezes the Kaiser's spine by announcing peace terms and then withdraws them when Wilhelm threatens to slap his wrist. Russia has turned him down so often on a separate peace proposal that the vocal chords are sore.

His empire is composed of about fifty thousand and sixty-seven different peoples, who love one another as much as the worm loves a hungry chicken. It is more loosely woven together than a thirty-three cent sweater. The people tolerate this court jester on the throne because they know his reign won't be for long, as Austria will soon be so divided into small States that it will look like salt and pepper spilled on a paper napkin.

He is so dull that he thinks a bread riot is a demonstration in his favor, and when he hears noise he crawls out on the balcony of the royal palace and bows to the populace. After the war he undoubtedly will be employed as the Kaiser's official tear dryer.

Jay I. Hoppman.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Welland Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

WANTED—A GENERAL SERVANT for only two in family. Apply, 15 St. Mathews Ave., Hamilton, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

PAY YOUR OUT-OF-TOWN ACcounts by Dominion Express Money Orders. Five dollars costs three cents.

HAIR GOODS —FOR— LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $6.00, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $25.00 and $35.00, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM

62 KING ST. W. HAMILTON, ONT.

(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

The Monroe Doctrine.

President Monroe in his seventh annual message (Dec. 2, 1823) laid down the principle of what has since been known as the "Monroe doctrine," thus:

"We owe it to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those (great European) powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere, but with the governments who have declared their independence and maintained it and whose independence we have on great consideration and on just principles acknowledged we would not view with any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as a manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

Minard's Liniment for sale everywhere.

Household Hints.

Equal parts of sewing machine oil and vinegar make an excellent dressing for linoleum.

To take out sewing machine oil spots dampen them with ammonia, then wash with white soap and water, using first cold and then warm water.

The sweater hung carelessly soon loses its shape, if slipped through a large embroidery hoop hung in the closet it will not be stretched.

You will find the round hard shell of a salt water clam a more efficient pot scraper than either knife or clothespin.

Soaking curtains which have never been washed a few hours in a strong solution of salt and water will take out the lime in the dressing and make them easier to wash.

When giving sticky medicine to children, heat the spoon by dipping it in hot water for a moment, then pour in the medicine and it will slip easily from the spoon.

Spanking Doesn't Cure!

Don't think children can be cured of bed-wetting by spanking them. The trouble is constitutional, the child cannot help it. FREE I will send to any mother my successful home treatment, with full instructions. If your children trouble you in this way, send no money, but write me to-day. My treatment is highly recommended to adults troubled with urine difficulties by day or night. Address

Mrs. M. Summers,

BOX [illegible] WINDSOR, Ontario

Are These Studies Useless?

You, reader, who have been through the public school mill, ask yourself some questions. What good to you—of what ultimate utility—are such things as apothecary's weight, alligation, aliquot parts, cube root, drawing the long method of the greatest common divisor, least common multiple, troy weight, unreal fractions, the appositive, the objective complement, the objective used as a substantive, conjunctive adverbs, the nominative absolute, geometric theorems, the gerund, etc.? What do you know about them to-day? You think of the hours and days and weeks that you pored over them when you were in the public schools. If they have brought you no ultimate utility, then they will bring your children no ultimate utility, and if they lack ultimate utility there can be no question that the time spent in their temporary, fleeting acquisition was "wasted childhood."—Grand Rapids Herald.

British Isles.

Great Britain is an island in which are located the countries of England, Scotland and Wales. Ireland is an island by itself. These two large islands, together with the numerous small islands adjacent, constitute the British Isles.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

You can always rely on the superior quality of Old Dutch

It cleans thoroughly, safely, hygienically—it's economical to use because a little goes a long way—and it cannot harm the surfaces cleaned or hurt your hands.

Redpath SUGAR

is made in one grade only—the highest. So there is no danger of getting "seconds" when you buy Redpath in the original Cartons or Bags.

"Let Redpath Sweeten it."

2 and 5 lb. Cartons—10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.

Canada Sugar Refining Co., Limited, Montreal.

HARDINGE ON HIS DEFENCE IN THE LORDS

Ex-Viceroy of India Replies to Criticisms On Mesopotamia Failure.

NOT HIS DECISION

Gen. Nixon and War Office Blamed for the Surrender.

London Cable.—There was an unusual scene in the House of Lords this afternoon when Baron Hardinge, the former Viceroy of India, appeared to defend and explain his share in the management of the first Mesopotamia expedition, which culminated in the surrender of Major-Gen. Townshend at Kut-el-Amara, with the largest British force which had laid down arms before an enemy in more than a century.

The revelations contained in the recent report of the commission on the Mesopotamia expedition and the charges contained therein created a greater sensation in Great Britain than any similar episode since the Crimean war, and a portion of the press has been calling for the impeachment or the dismissal from public office of all concerned, including Baron Hardinge, who is now permanent Under-Secretary of the Foreign Office.

Lord Hardinge began with an expression of regret that the commission did not include an eminent lawyer accustomed to weigh evidence, and that all the evidence taken could not be published. After a detailed review of the management of the expedition, he said:

THEORETICALLY RESPONSIBLE.

"The Viceroy is theoretically responsible for everything that happens in India and outside of India, where Indian interests are affected. But he has to trust to his lieutenants and advisers for information and guidance. I have no desire to shirk any responsibility that is my due, but it is not easy to know what further strenuous and peremptory action I could have taken without exposing myself to the charge of excessive civilian interference in military affairs.

"Private rumor said that things were going badly. The official reports said they were going well. It was my first duty to ascertain the truth. It may be difficult for people in England to realize the inherent difficulties in personal supervision by the Viceroy of medical arrangements on a river 3,000 miles away, in the midst of his other heavy labors of governing a country bigger than Europe and with more than 300,000,000 inhabitants."

He expressed regret that the commission's report might create a feeling in India that India's efforts and sacrifices had not been adequately appreciated at home. The report scarcely referred to the greatest military effort ever made in India's history in despatching expeditions to France, Egypt and East Africa so that the military equipment and stores were almost exhausted before the Mesopotamia campaign was considered.

SENT SEVEN DIVISIONS OVERSEAS

He pointed out that the commission under Field Marshal Baron Nicholson, which investigated the Indian army in 1912, recommended the maintenance of 7 1-3 infantry divisions, five cavalry brigades with reserves, and that within six months after the beginning of the war India had mobilized ten infantry divisions, and had sent seven overseas and six cavalry brigades.

India had also supplied immense stores of ammunition to the Home Government. As a result, India's own needs became pressing when the Mesopotamia campaign began, but pressing demand on the War Office met with refusal or delays. In the meantime, he said, the Indian Government at the most critical period of the war successfully carried out the greatest military operations since the frontier campaign in 1897 in effectively dealing with seven serious attacks by tribesmen on the northwest frontier.

Dealing with the circumstances of General Sir John Nixon's advance from Kut toward Bagdad with an insufficient force, Lord Hardinge said that although the Government of India was fully alive to the political and military advantages of the capture of Bagdad, it was absolutely opposed to an advance without reinforcements by another division, and he read confidential correspondence with the India Office to that effect. General Nixon reported directly to the Home Government that he could defeat the Turks and occupy Bagdad but that if the Turks were reinforced he would need another division.

DECISION WITH HOME GOVERNMENT.

It must be remembered, said Lord Hardinge, that General Nixon was at the head of a victorious army. The decision rested with the Home Government; the Indian Government could only make recommendations. Knowing that the Gallipoli expedition was not going well, and the Cabinet's views on the political and military advantage of the occupation of Bagdad and believing that General Nixon was in the best position to judge the number of troops he required, the Government of India, he declared, would have exposed itself to having ignored the demands of the Empire at a critical moment if it had overridden the commanding officer's decision.

"In consequence of the united opposition from home to the Indian Government," he said, "the advance upon Bagdad received the sanction of His Majesty's Government."

Turning to the medical arrangements, Lord Hardinge said:

"It cannot be denied that the wounded coming down the river suffered terrible hardships and privation. I share entirely the horror and the indignation the revelation of these sufferings has created."

Owing to the conflict between the rumors and the official report, Lord Hardinge instituted an investigation which resulted in a report which was incorporated in the commission's report. The only observation he could make was that sending of personnel to other theatres of the war had exhausted an organization which had never been intended for operations outside India.

SHORTAGE OF BOATS.

Regarding the shortage of river transport, Lord Hardinge asserted that the army had strained every nerve to collect steamers from India, Burma, China, Egypt, and even the Thames, but owing to storms and the light draught of the boats required, a large proportion foundered on the way. Much of the newspaper criticism had been based upon the extent to which the former viceroy had conducted business with the Home Government by private telegrams, ignoring the Indian Council. He explained that he had inherited this system from three successive Secretaries of State for India and had found it convenient and expeditious. The members of the council had made no complaint concerning it.

Lord Hardinge concluded that so far as personal imputations were concerned, he believed his record of service was the best reply.

"I may have failed in my endeavor, my Lords," said he, "but such a verdict should only be given in the light of India's military effort taken as a whole and of the internal situation in that vast empire, and it should be rendered not only by my fellow countrymen here, but my fellow subjects in India to whose continued confidence and good opinion I attach the highest value."

After Lord Hardinge's explanation the House passed to the next business on a statement by Earl Curzon that the Government was not yet fully advised as to the steps, disciplinary or otherwise, which might be necessary. He hoped that the discussion would be finished next week.

GUN DUELS ON WESTERN FRONT

British, French, Belgians, All Report Them.

Hostile Aerial Activity is Increasing.

London Cable.—The report from British Headquarters in France, issued at [illegible], says:

"We successfully raided west of Havrincourt and north of Nieuport, capturing a few prisoners. Last night, south of the [illegible] River, the enemy attacked our advanced posts, but was driven off."

The evening report read:

"In the Ypres region there has been considerable artillery activity on both sides. The enemy raided our trenches [illegible] southeast of [illegible] [illegible] of our men are missing.

"Hostile aerial activity has shown a marked increase in the past few days. Successful artillery work and bombing raids were carried out yesterday by our aeroplanes. One German aeroplane was brought down by gunfire within our lines. Three more were brought down in the air fighting. Two others were driven down out of control. One of our machines is missing."

FRENCH REPORT.

Paris Cable.—The official communication issued by the War Office Tuesday night reads:

"Quite marked artillery activity was displayed north of St. Quentin and on the left bank of the Meuse, near Hill 304, as well as in Champagne, in the sectors of [illegible] Cornillet and Mont Tetou. East of [illegible] there were patrol encounters. We made some prisoners, including an officer. The day was calm on the rest of the front."

BELGIAN REPORT.

Paris Cable.—Tuesday's War Office report reads:

"The artillery fighting was very spirited in the region of Western, Lizerne and Steenstraete. An enemy attempt to cross the canal in the neighborhood of [illegible] was broken by our fire. The artillery was moderately active on the rest of the front. An enemy aeroplane was brought down by our artillery between [illegible] and [illegible]."

HARWICH RAID COST HUN DEAR

Two Planes Brought Down Ablaze, One Damaged.

Eleven Persons Killed, Thirty-Six Injured.

London Cable.—Two of a squadron of fourteen machines that took part in an air raid on Harwich were brought down ablaze by British naval aircraft, and a third machine was damaged, it is officially announced.

All the British airmen who engaged the Germans emerged safely from their fights. The official statement announcing this result reads:

"The vice-admiral at Dover reports that naval aircraft from Dunkirk intercepted the hostile squadron returning from England after the attack on Harwich this morning. An engagement ensued at a considerable distance from the Belgian coast. Two hostile machines were brought down in flames and a third was seen to have been damaged.

"Several other machines were attacked with indecisive results.

"All our machines returned safely."

"A number of bombs were dropped and the latest reports state that eleven persons were killed and thirty-six injured."

Click—Your wife said she bought her hat for a song. Clack—Yes, but I had to furnish the notes.—Puck.

POTATO RIOTS IN AMSTERDAM

Starving People Dared Soldiers to Shoot.

Trains Looted, and Market Stalls Stormed.

Amsterdam Cable.—Serious potato riots took place here last night when mobs attacked two markets and were dispersed by police. Early in the evening the police closed all the streets and bridges leading to the chief vegetable market in Marnix street, but despite precautions, enormous crowds collected, including many women carrying children.

The mob became unmanageable, and at 10 o'clock reinforcements of mounted police, who were hurried to the scene, began to fire over the heads of the people. A fierce battle developed in the dark streets until midnight, when troops appeared and closed the entrances to the market. Worse scenes occurred at the Potato market in Handdel Kade. A rumor went about that 29 wagonloads of potatoes for England were stored in a barge alongside the market. The mob stormed the market and carried off the potatoes in sacks and baskets, the small body of police being helpless to interfere. Later police reinforcements drove off the mob, and it turned its attention to railway cars, which also were pillaged. It was necessary to call troops to disperse the mob.

The cessation of the riots was only temporary and soon a very large mob gathered, threw potatoes and stones at the police and troops. Several officers were maltreated by the angered people, who dared the soldiers to shoot. After vainly firing in the air, the commander of the troops ordered the crowds back.

"Shoot," came the reply from the front ranks, some men baring their breasts. Finally an officer gave the command to fire ball cartridges and the crowd then dispersed, carrying away some wounded. It is reported one person was killed and many wounded, including two policemen.

The newspapers today express fear that the riots will be renewed tonight and believe that such demonstrations are unavoidable considering the Government's economic policy and the hunger of the people. In order to appease the people twenty-three wagonloads of potatoes were brought to Amsterdam to-day from the principal potato-growing district of Holland. The burgomaster has issued a proclamation forbidding further demonstrations.

The dock workers here have proclaimed a strike and troops sent here from Haarlem are guarding the harbor.

CHINESE RULER SEEMS DOOMED

Many Forces Declare for the Republicans.

Japan Will Not Interfere at Present.

London Cable.—A despatch from Tien-Tsin, China, to the Morning Post, says that Tsao Kun, military governor of Chi Li, whose attitude hitherto has been dubious, repeatedly sent an ultimatum to General Chang Hsun, who restored the Emperor, demanding that he withdraw from Peking within twenty-four hours. Tsao Kun is now mobilizing his forces. His action, it is considered, will endanger the chances of the monarchy.

Tuan Chi Jui, former Premier, has accepted that post, and is mobilizing 20,000 men in the Province of Shan Tung to march against the monarchists.

Nine alleged traitors, including Prince Pu Lun, chairman of the Council of State, have been executed by Chang Hsun.

A despatch from Shanghai says the military commissioner of Shanghai and the military governor of the province of Che Kiang refused to recognize the Empire.

EX-PREMIER'S MANIFESTO.

Tien-Tsin Cable.—Tuan Chi Jui, former Premier, has issued an eloquent denunciation of the Manchu restoration, accusing General Chang Hsun, who played a leading part in the restoration, of overweening ambition, and of committing crimes of inconceivable magnitude. Tuan Chi Jui charges that the general was betraying the Manchus themselves, who were favorably situated until he, Tuan Chi Jui, interfered. Tuan Chi Jui said he had intended to remain in retirement, but saw that the Manchus were being used as catspaws for brigandage. Now he calls on all provinces to put out every ounce of strength to save China from Chang Hsun.

JAPAN TO STAY OUT.

Tokio Cable.—Viscount Motono, Foreign Minister, interpellated in the Diet yesterday, said the restoration movement in China is causing anxiety in Japan, but as it concerns Chinese domestic politics he believed peace in China would best be served by Japan remaining a spectator and refraining from interference, at least for the present.

WILL NOT GIVE UP CHILD.

London, Ont., Report.—Rather than reveal the whereabouts of her dead sister's child, Miss Thompson, of 578 Victoria street, is now in the county jail and there she must remain indefinitely unless she changes her mind, which does not appear to be very likely.

Miss Thompson declared to-day that she would never give up her niece, Miss Jean Link, to her father, even if she must spend the rest of her days in jail.

VIENNA ADMITS A RETIREMENT

In Report On Struggle With Rejuvenated Russ.

Retreat Step by Step, With Heavy Losses.

Vienna Cable.—The withdrawal of Austrian forces under pressure of superior numbers on a limited portion of the front in Galicia is announced in to-day's Austrian War Office statement. Russian attacks near Koniuchy were repulsed and the Russians were compelled to cease their attacks at Brzezany, the statement declares. The text reads:

"South of Zboroff, the enemy, with the use of superior forces, succeeded in pushing back a limited portion of our front towards the prepared supporting positions. In engagements involving heavy sacrifices the Austro-Hungarian troops have been retiring only step by step against the pressure of superior forces, and thus have enabled the reserves to intervene here for the restoration of the situation. Further attacks were not undertaken.

"Near Koniuchy several strong attacks were sanguinarily repulsed. In the region near Brzezany the Russians were obliged to pause in the battle because of their failures and heavy losses."

A later report read: "At Brzezany fierce attacks delivered by strong enemy forces were repulsed with heavy losses. The Russians did not attack in the sector southwest of Zboroff. Otherwise there was only slight fighting activity in all theatres."

London Cable.—The Russians continued their onslaught against the Austro-German lines Tuesday, and added additional prisoners to the bag of 18,000 taken on the preceding two days. Twenty-nine guns were also captured.

SEES BRITAIN AND AMERICA ONE FOREVER

Balfour Sees Permanent Union of the Race for Good Works.

GEN. ROBERTSON

Tells London Banquet U. S. Brings New Hope to Allies.

London Cable.—The speeches of both Sir William R. Robertson, Chief of the Imperial Staff, and Foreign Secretary Balfour, at the banquet of the American Society last night, were distinguished by great earnestness. After the toast to King George was drunk, General Robertson proposed a toast to President Wilson. Ambassador Page then proposed a toast to Secretary Balfour, to which the latter responded.

In his speech General Robertson said:

"The achievement of the American people in entering wholeheartedly and unreservedly into the world struggle is due largely to the efforts of one man—their President. He has been called upon to display unexampled tact, patience and courage. As a result of his success, America to-day stands higher in the eyes of the world than ever before.

"The United States is being put to a sterner test than at any time in her history—a test not of her fighting qualities, for she has always displayed the greatest intelligence, resourcefulness and bravery in that respect, but a test of her ability for big-scale modern warfare and to do it quickly.

"This is not a mere war of armies; this is a war of nations. Every section of the nation has a part to play. It is essential that England and America and all parts work in full cooperation and without friction. I doubt whether the British nation has yet done its whole duty in this respect. Two essential things are: First, the nation must be given clear orders what to do, and sufficient information to enable it to carry out the orders. Second, the orders must be obeyed, whether congenial or not. Third, there must be mutual confidence between [illegible] classes and the industrial population, as in the army and the navy.

"There comes a time in warring nations when the strain is heavy, when a little extra effort will suffice to turn the scale. In this war final victory will incline to the side that can best endure.

"America, which brings the fresh note, fresh reserves of strength and power. Germany says that America will not count. It is our business together to show her that America will count for a great deal—and I shall be greatly surprised if America fails.

"One hundred and forty-one years ago she declared independence. That declaration lost us a colony, but to-day we know it won us a friend in need. President Wilson has before him a greater task than that of Washington, namely, by following the principles whereon American independence was established to lay the foundations for a newer and better world."

Secretary Balfour said

"The whole world has for one hundred and forty-one years which elapsed since the declaration of Independence watched with admiration, and witnessed the greatest expansion in population, wealth, power and material and spiritual resources in the history of any nation. We of the British nation regard this expansion with pride, born of the fact that the thirteen colonies were British, and that it was the British wars with Spain, Holland and France which gave the thirteen colonies the opportunity to develop into a great country without European interference.

"We cannot look back on the separation of England and the United States as one of our political successes. No doubt something could be said for those on our side who fought for unity—that is, the cause to which Americans themselves sacrificed rivers of blood. The mistake we made was in supposing unity possible without common freedom. All I can say in excuse of my forefathers is that, utterly defective as our colonial policy was, it was far ahead of that of any other country. Profoundly as we misconceived relations which could bind the colonies and the mother country, we miscalculated less than any other imperial mother.

"We have just been celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of Canadian union. There is a great difference between fifty years and a hundred and fifty. It took us a long time to learn that if you want to make an empire of the Anglo-Saxon race you must found it on terms of absolute equality.

"It is impossible to dwell upon how many ills would have been spared if in 1776 those who preceded us could have seen the true path of political wisdom, and the people of a hundred millions and infinite resources never separated from us. If it could only have been a friendly separation! It would have been an infinite gain if there could have been no sting and no soreness of defeat or victory between us, but if I rightly read the signs of the times, a truer [illegible] is now recognized. "I do not grudge the glories of Washington and the soldiers which ended in the triumphant establishment of the American republic. My only regret is that [illegible] should carry any trace of bitterness. Surely there is none on our side. In true perspective the past should not interfere with the continuity of history, and the conditions binding us together, which century by century must bind us closer.

"Hitherto battles in America have been between peoples of the same speech and same feelings. Henceforth we shall find a new sphere of action binding us together in a world task. We are united in a great struggle against power which seeks to destroy the roots wherefrom we derive all our strength. Are we not bound thus forever, and shall not our descendants say that the greatest result of the world war was the bringing together in a common purpose and understanding the sundered branches of the English-speaking race?"

PLEDGE TO SERBIA.

Venizelos Calls It Greece's First Duty.

Athens Cable.—The press gives great prominence to telegrams exchanged between the Serbian Premier, M. Pachitch, and M. Venizelos, the new head of the Greek Cabinet. Replying to the passage in M. Pachitch's congratulatory message, "We all see in the right conception of a community of Greco-Serb interests a supreme guarantee of peace and prosperity in the Balkans," M. Venizelos says:

"The Hellenic people, henceforth free, considers as its first care the faithful execution of its alliance with Serbia. It desires to prove to the civilized world that it does not wish to be included among nations which violate sacred engagements and consider treaties as scraps of paper."

BRUTAL WORK BY GERMAN U-BOATS

Fire On Lifeboats of Their Sunken Victims.

Then Refuse Medical Aid to the Wounded.

Copenhagen Cable.—The survivors of two Danish vessels sunk by German submarines gave evidence to-day before the Maritime Court. The barque Consul Nielsen, proceeding for Stornoway, Scotland, with a British prize crew aboard, was sunk on May 2d. Firing continued from the submarine while the crew were lowering the boats. The mate was seriously injured and several others were slightly injured. The commander of the submarine, which was the U-[illegible], according to the testimony, declined to give medical assistance or dressings.

The schooner Freden had an even worse experience. This vessel was also being taken to Stornoway by a French prize crew. She was sunk on May 16, without warning, 50 miles from the Butt of Lewis. The lifeboat was damaged and several of the crew were drowned while trying to repair it. One Frenchman was killed and another was severely wounded. The firing lasted fifteen minutes at the rate of [illegible] [illegible]. The whole crew got into one yawl, where it was impossible to store provisions, and only a scanty supply of water. The master and cook died the second day. The survivors were picked up the third day and taken to Leith, but their condition was so serious that all of them had to be taken to the hospitals for treatment.

JAP. FLEET FOR ATLANTIC.

Tokio, July [illegible]—If necessary Japan may send a fleet to the Atlantic, said Tomosaburo Kato, Minister of Navy, in the Diet to-day. The Minister was replying to criticism of the opposition that the despatch of Japanese warships to the Mediterranean was not required by the terms of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, and was merely for the benefit of the Entente and not for Japan. M. Kato declared the Government was justified in cooperating with the allies to bring the defeat of Germany.

TROUBLE SURE IN CHINA OVER THE MONARCHY

Press, Army and Navy Apparently Oppose Chang-Hsun's Coup.

GIVEN THREE WEEKS

Armed Conflict Between the North and South is Imminent.

Tientsin Cable.—Prominent Chinese here believe that the restoration will not last three weeks. Tuan Chi Jui, the ex-Premier, who is still the strongest northern military leader, opposing the restoration, has been promised support by Vice-President Gen. Feng Kwo-Chang and the military governor of Shantung. Although the Chinese are locally displaying the imperial emblem, there is no enthusiasm. All the local papers denounce the restoration.

SHANGHAI OPPOSES RESTORATION.

Shanghai Cable.—Tang Shao Yi, ex-Premier, in a statement to the native press, said that Gen. Chang Hsun's coup in restoring the monarchy alarmed the whole nation. "I'll leave it to the world," said he, "to decide whether it is right. The republic never had a chance. Real republicans from the beginning had been checked by the reactionaries and now, when the whole world is talking of liberty, and liberating itself from autocracy, China is reverting to the past. It is a challenge to new China."

Newspapers printed in the vernacular are practically unanimous in denouncing the restoration of the Manchu dynasty. They predict it will be short lived, saying the whole country will rise against Emperor [illegible] Tung and Gen. Chang-Hsun.

The China Press, a leading [illegible], says the question of the moment is the amount of military strength which the Kuo Min Tang (democratic party) is able to muster. The Shanghai Times thinks an armed conflict between the north and south is imminent, and says that the scale of the civil war will depend largely on the attitude adopted by Vice-President Feng Kwo-Chang.

The North China Daily News does not believe that southern China will accept the monarchy, and says the immediate result of the coup d'etat will be to rally all Republicans to one standard.

The Standard says the difference between the navy and the army around Shanghai vanished on [illegible] morning, and that both branches [illegible] hold republicanism.

It is generally believed here that the navy will support the republic, while the local military and civil authorities are also proclaiming the republic and opposing the monarchy, but this may be for the purpose of preserving the peace in Shanghai. It is believed the restoration's plans were deeply laid, and that the military governors are really supporting the restoration.

CHANG HSUN'S PLANS.

London Cable.—The Times correspondent at Peking, referring to General Chang Hsun's appointment, says that he has been increasing his army lately, and it is now reported to number 40,000 men. It is added that it is General Chang Hsun's intention to remove from Suchow to a position where he can dominate the capital, and control the affairs of the country.

Feng Kwo-Chang, the former Vice-President of the republic, has been appointed Imperial Commissioner [illegible] South China.

Another edict announces that a council of elder statesmen will be established, with Hsu Shih Chang, former Secretary of State of China, as president, and Kang Yu Wei, great head of the Chinese Empire Reform Association, as vice-president. The Times assumes this decision is to afford an [illegible] action [illegible] [illegible] of constitutional reform in the second half of the nineteenth century. Kang Yu Wei is a well-known southern reformer, who lived several years in America.

THE PRESIDENT ESCAPES.

London Cable.—The escape of President Li Yuan-Hung, of China, from the palace at Peking on Monday night is reported in an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Tientsin. The President is said to have gone to the legation of one of the Entente nations.

According to recent press despatches, President Li Yuan-Hung had [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of General Chang Hsun's [illegible] [illegible] to restore the Manchu dynasty.

AMSTERDAM STRIKE

Dock Workers Out, Demand Better Food.

Amsterdam Cable.—All [illegible] dock workers struck yesterday. Builders, workmen and shipyard operatives struck in sympathy. A big protest meeting of strikers was forbidden in the afternoon. The burgomaster forbidden street demonstrations [illegible] open air meetings.

A deputation of the dock workers visited the burgomaster yesterday and demanded a better supply of foodstuffs and the withdrawal of the military guards from the markets, where serious potato riots occurred last night. With regard to the latter, the burgomaster replied that order must be maintained at any cost. According to the Het Volk, a detachment of soldiers was ordered to charge a crowd but refused to do so, and was marched off by the officer in command, amid cheers.

THAT

Holiday Trip!

Hot Weather is here, and with it comes the thought of a holiday trip, and with the holiday trip comes the thought of a suitable

Suit Case or Club Bag

We are ready to supply you. A splendid variety here. Just what you want at the price you wish to pay.

Call and see our stock. You will find it easy choosing from our large assortment.

We pay cash for eggs

N. McGillivray
North End Store

BANK OF HAMILTON
Established 1872

Capital Authorized. $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up. - $3,000,000
Surplus. - - - - - $3,500,000

Things Worth While

Are usually acquired by the man with a bank account. The good things of life seldon come to those who have nothing.

The Bank of Hamilton affords a convenient and safe method of acquiring capital.

Start a saving account to-day.

R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
PORT ELGIN BRANCH

41-C

Can you afford to be without The Times?

Children's Ready-to-Wear Garments

In prints, galateas, and other cotton materials, at the cost of materials only, much below to-day's values.

Children's aprons at 15c	Rompers and play suits from 40 to 75c
Childrens dresses, good styles, 4c to 50c	Womens' overal aprons and house dresses 50c to $1.25
Middies at 50 cents

We pay Cash for Eggs. Produce wanted.

See our big display in our north window

South End Store
N. McGillivray & Co.

The Port Elgin Times
MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

EDITORIAL COMMENT

According to newspaper report proposals for coalition have fallen through. It seems that Premier Borden sent out "feelers" to certain Liberals, but that they declined to enter a coalition cabinet. Why not go ahead with the present program. If men in parliament can't be found willing to carry on the war, there are plenty of men outside of parliament. The people are very sick of this political trimming and sidestepping.

• • •

Speaking at a garden party where about 500 people were in attendance from the country, Dr. McDougall urged the people of the rural sections to bring out farmer candidates for parliaments. He urged that the Liberals and the Conservatives, at their next conventions, see that only good agricultural men be put forward for the positions of government. The suggestion is good, but in this riding the Liberals had just turned down good agricultural candidates for other choice, and so also the Conservatives, who, at Wiarton, the other day, decided on a professional man for a candidate. Trouble is, the people are satisfied to let a few men manipulate conventions, and then we wonder why we have no leaders of integrity and conviction.

• • •

Editor Davies, of The Thamesville Herald, prints a stinging editorial against the practice of the Conservative news agency, which is located at 47 Slater street, Ottawa, in flooding rural newspapers with copy which The Herald claims is of the gutter-snipe variety. No doubt the matter contained in these bulletins is intended to reflect upon the Liberal party, and The Herald's contention is right that this matter should not be allowed the mails free while the people of Canada have to pay increased postage rates. But, for the dissemination of this kind of stuff in the rural press the blame is entirely upon the local editors. The waste basket is the place for this sort of dope, both Grit and Tory and it's a mighty poor class of weekly newspaper that will give public circulation to opinions hatched out at either Toronto or Ottawa; by either Grit or Tory heelers. In this hour of trial Canada needs men who will think for themselves, and who will not only have opinions, but convictions, and willing to stand by them. The country weekly editors should rise to the occasion.

• • •

Dominion Day is past and gone. The next event of interest will be the fall fair. This district is entitled to a good fair, and this is a good year to plan to make it so.

• • •

The vote on conscription in the House of Commons occasioned little surprise. The people generally await the carrying out of the measure. Even in Quebec, we venture the prediction, that if Mr. Borden would have the courage to put the selective draft system in force at once there would be little opposition, and the people would obey the call. In fact, they would be so busy bidding good-bye, the political side would be forgotten altogether. The thing needed to-day is action. If the movement is sincere it will have all detail arranged, and the selective drafts can be put in force in an hour. The only way to convince the people that compulsion is meant, is to put it in force.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Arch. McDonald and family wish to thank many friends and relatives for kindness extended in their recent bereavement.

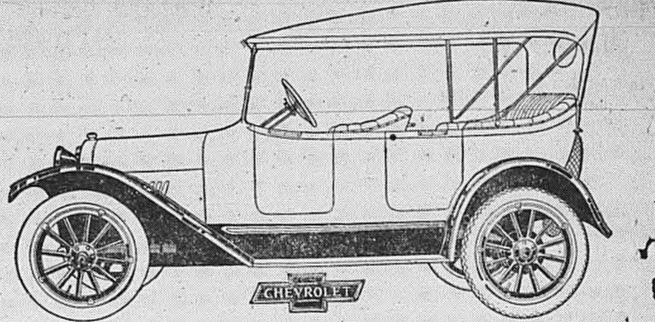
$10 Saved Every Month

for ten years will amount to $1,399.13 if deposited in this bank at 3% per annum interest compounded twice a year. Open a Savings Account with us and watch your money grow. 43

The Bank of Nova Scotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 110,000,000

A. L. Wynot, Manager
PORT ELGIN BRANCH.



1918 model Chevrolet shown by POWER & COULTER, Port Elgin

ARKWRIGHT

The Philathea Sunday School Class gave a miscellaneous shower on Monday of last week to Miss Annie Beatty, who was married on Wednesday.

The Arkwright Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs Atkinson on Wednesday, June 20th. After the usual business had been transacted they presented Mrs Wes MacDonald, (nee Rena Lowes) a former member, with a fruit dish and nut bowl.

Division Court

Judge Greig held division court here on Thursday. The docket was a light one, and is submitted by Clerk Chapman as follows:

J. D. McIntosh vs. Frank Langdon, action for money advanced to pay livery rigs. Judgment for plaintiff of $5 and costs.

Mrs Frank Moore vs. C. Guthrie, plaintiff alleged the loaning of money to defendant. Judgment for plaintiff of $3.50 and costs.

Heller vs. Greathead, action for goods obtained by defendant's son in connection with a broken buggy. Judgment for plaintiff for $10 and costs.

Order was also made in connection with two judgment summonses.

UNDERWOOD

Mr. and Mrs. A. Brill, Port Elgin, spent the past week with their daughter, Mrs. Simon Roppel.

Mrs. J. MacKinnon and daughter, Paisley, were guests last week, of Mrs. H. Russell.

The Presbyterian Sunday school held a very enjoyable picnic, on Friday at Baie de dore.

Mrs. Neustadt and daughter of Guelph, are holidaying at Mr. Jno. Wittig's.

Mrs Kay returned to her home in St. Thomas last week. Her sister Miss Teus Schmidt accompanied her for a short visit.

Mr. Gillies MacKay, Orono, is visiting at his home here.

Mrs Jno. West spent the past week at her parents home in Blyth.

Miss Edwards, Toronto, is visiting her friend Miss Sadie MacKay.

Hogs are up to $15.25 this week.

ELSINORE

Rev. Dr. Campbell's father, of Toronto, conducted preparatory services Thursday evening.

Rev. Mr. Edmunds was to preach to the Orangemen of Elsinore on Sunday last, but was absent on account of the death of his mother. Rev. Dr. Campbell conducted the service.

Mrs Hinds and Miss Ruth, of Port Elgin, are visiting at Mrs Wm. Nelson's.

Pte. Russell White visited relatives here last week.

Miss Huldah White, of Walkerton, visited her cousin, Miss Hattie Nelson, last week.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church met at the home of Mrs. Jas. Bell, last Friday.

Mrs. John Murray, of Toronto, is visiting Mrs. Andrew McIntosh.

NORTH BRUCE

The W. M. A. met at the home of Mrs. Maas, 22 ladies' being present. Collection, $1.66. Afternoon spent in Red Cross knitting. A special meeting will be held at Mrs. J. Weick's July 1—, and regular meeting at Mrs. Hallman's.

Miss Florence Young, teacher at S. S. No. 13, is spending the holidays at her home near Goderich.

The Ladies' Aid will meet this Wednesday p. m., at the home of Mrs. T. A. Howe.

Rev. and Mrs Douglas McCulloch motored from Appin on Saturday for a holiday with friends here.

J. W. Ribey is home from Owen Sound holidaying with his parents.

TURNER'S

Henry Dier of Park Head, is visiting his mother, Mrs. Henry Dier, who is under the doctors care at present.

Messrs. Karcher, C. Schwab, J. Lyness and Eldon Thede motored to Toronto on Saturday.

A. McGillivray, of Toronto, is visiting his sister, Mrs. Wm Muir, Con. 2.

Miss McLennan and Miss Flynn, of Tiverton, spent Tuesday with the Misses McRae.

Duncan McKinnon and Miss Mary A. McKinnon, of Paisley, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Peter McKinnon.

Miss M. McTaggart of Burgoyne, was visiting her sister Mrs. A. Miller.

Mr. N. C. McKay, Dist. Rep. and a gentleman from Ottawa, were here last week trying to form an egg circle.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gibbons spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Gibbons.

Miss Kate Murcar and Miss Maud Wankel of Port Elgin spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Bell.

Wm. Karcher shipped cattle and sheep to Toronto on Saturday.

J. S. Schrank received word from headquarters last week to go to Port Huron to examine an apiary where foul brood was suspected.

Wm. Atkinson brought his clover thresher home on Thursday.

Fine Party

A beautiful moonlight night brought a record crowd to the lawn of Mr. George A. Brooks, North Bruce, when the Ladies' Aid of the Wesley Methodist church, held their annual garden party. The place was tastefully decorated with flags, and for lighting bricks soaked in oil were tried out, but did not work too well. The autos came in large numbers, and swelled the crowd in good style. Two long tables were kept going from 6.30 to 9. The supper was excellent, and greatly enjoyed by all. The Southampton orchestra provided the music. Rev. Mr. Hawke, the pastor, presided over a good program in which the church choir, a male quartet, and a mixed quartet gave fine selections, solos were nicely rendered by Miss McKenzie and Miss Nicholson, while addresses were given by Dr. McDougall, M. D. Hallman and E. R. Sayles. Two fine quilts were offered for sale by auction. Mr. Bowers took the bids, and they brought $4 each. The total proceeds amounted to $165.

Nearly every auto in town was at the Port Elgin celebration on Dominion Day —Walkerton Telescope.

Real Estate — Auctioneering Life Insurance

WE have opened an office in Port Elgin, and will deal in real estate. Property bought and sold.

Auctioneering—The old-time attention given to all farmers contemplating a sale.

Life Insurance—We are agent for the New York Life Co.

D. C. Cavin : Port Elgin

IF ITS NEW ITS
THE Empress SHOE

The makers of these exclusive styles are considered with the most progressive high-grade shoe makers in America, and we are pleased to say these shoes are made in Canada.

We are "Empress" Shoe agents.

James George & Son

Soldier's Socks . .

Reliable yarn for soldiers' socks at a time when it cannot be bought from the mill, we consider ourselves fortunate in having a goodly supply of 3 and 4 ply Scotch fingering yarn which is made in England and is most satisfactory for socks. In gray and black at $2 per lb.

Finest quality flannel for shirts at from 25c. to 65c. per yd.

Leading styles in neckwear "Come out of the Kitchen" in gingham and organdy, also newest effects in Georgette and silk poplin from 25c. to $2.00

A special in house dresses. Any house dress in stock at $1.19.

SPECIAL IN SHOES

Ladies button calf regular $4.50 for $2.98.

Ladies' buttoned Dongola $3.50 for $2.19.

Ladies' Oxford patent $3.50 for $2.29.

Ladies' oxfords in gun metal $3.50 for $2.19.

Ladies' pumps, reg. $3 for $1.98.

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon.

Roppel Bros.
Rural phone, Underwood

BINDER TWINE

Buy it now and save money

THIS trade-mark on the tag is your assurance that you have received the genuine Plymouth Twine—the kind that's always good.

HAY FORKS . .

Specially selected handles Oilers, oils, machine oil, scythe stones, section rivets.

Carbarundum stone. Special price 70 cents.

No farmer should be without one.

McLAREN'S HARDWARE

HOW HUN PLOTS WERE EXPOSED

Thrilling Feats of Providence Journal's Reporters and Wireless

RATHOM'S MODEST STORY

Driving Out of Dumba and Bryan, Boy-Ed and Von Papen—Reporter as Von Bernstorff's Trusted Secretary

Amazing examples of the part played by The Providence Journal in foiling German plots and in bringing the United States into the war were given the Canadian Press Association last week by Mr. John R. Rathom, the Editor of that publication, in several addresses. Following are a few of the more remarkable feats of the staff to whom their chief gave all the credit:

A reporter on The Providence Journal acted for seventeen months as one of the private secretaries of Ambassador von Bernsdorf, the accredited diplomatic representative of the German Empire to the United States, and the evidence of the Ambassador's activities thus exposed by the Journal resulted in his departure from American shores in disgrace. Another staff reporter followed Dr. Heinrich Albert, exchanged suit cases with him and secured the evidence which defeated the plot to involve Ireland in rebellion and ended in the execution of Sir Roger Casement. A sixteen-dollar-a-week stenographer in the office of The Journal outwitted Captain F. von Papen, German naval attache at Washington. How she did so would make the plot of a moving picture scenario.

Wireless Gave them Start

The boys and girls of the paper fearlessly took their lives in their hands for years. "Without them," said John R. Rathom, "we could have done nothing." Yet he himself is a man of remarkable personality, shrewd, courageous and very good-humored. Born in Australia, he was brought up in the United States and is a thorough-going American, a patriot with breadth and sympathy enough to accord full praise to Canada for her sacrifices in the war. His one aim throughout was to bring his fellow-citizens to see that Germany was their natural foe. "God bless Canada," was his simple conclusion.

Mr. Rathom explained that for years before war was thought of The Providence Journal had had a "bug" for wireless telegraphy, and had two stations of its own on the Atlantic coast. When war broke out they conceived the idea of tapping Sayville and Nantucket, and in that way, long before any exposures were made in The Journal, they had accumulated evidence of German complicity in mischief-making in the United States which would amount to a hundred times more than was already published. Then had come the following-up in which the reporters had been invaluable, and the romance of spy-hunting had surpassed all fiction.

Of the Ottawa Parliament Buildings fire, Mr. Rathom said they had no positive information, but three weeks before it took place they had information of a plan to destroy the Parliament Buildings about that time, with two munition plants in Canada. Both Parliament Buildings and the munition plants were damaged by fire or bomb within forty-eight hours of the time of which The Providence had information. "That is all I know of the Ottawa fire," said Mr. Rathom, "but I am content to believe that it could not be charged to carelessness nor lack of ordinary precaution at Ottawa, because we know how difficult it is to circumvent these men."

Horn's "Green Blubber" Brain

Mr. Rathom caused a burst of laughter by describing the brains of every German diplomat as "green blubber." He always made a mistake which nobody with real brains would be guilty of. The speaker gave several instances where the most elaborate plots had fallen through because of this characteristic German stupidity. One of these was the case of Lieut. Werner Horn, the young German officer who had been deputed to blow up the Vanceboro' bridge. This man had gone to the trouble of growing a beard, and, disguising himself as a rough, uncouth workman—old clothes, dirty boots, worn-out carpet bag, etc. He, however, gave himself away by riding in the parlor car of the best train running through New England. He was "spotted" at once. Afterwards when asked why he did not travel in a different sort of a train he replied that he was an officer and a gentleman, and that was the way he was accustomed to travel.

Three days after the Du Pont explosion in Delaware, which killed 31 men, Boy-Ed, the German Military Attache at Washington, and Capt. F. Von Papen sat in an hotel and toasted the men who had been successful in bringing about this Du Pont explosion. A Journal reporter at a dictagraph in the next room was able to report the occurrence in full.

Rathom Convinced Wilson

The whole story of how one sole newspaper was enabled so to expose German secret plottings in the United States that it resulted, first, in recall of one official after the other up to Count von Bernstorff, and then proved a great weight in convincing President Wilson of machinations against the State, could never have been told if the enormous initial difficulty of the wireless codes had not been overcome. After five months of war and after nearly 100,000 messages had been stored in the vaults, the Journal was fortunate enough to discover the code to read some of these messages. Armed with facts thus revealed by its four operators, the Journal's reporters were sent out to take jobs in the German Consulates and other places named in the messages.

"The material we got in five months would keep us going for 25 years," said Mr. Rathom. "We have not touched 60 per cent. of it. We have not printed 10 per cent. of it. We would have gone on doing so, but the result we wanted came about."

"We were working under a cloud for the first nine months of our exposures," said Mr. Rathom. "Nobody would believe us. The authorities took no action. Finally I went to the President and showed him the messages that had been going to Berlin via Sayville about 'Little Emily.' 'Little Emily' was part of a secret code. These messages sometimes told of her death, sometimes of details of her funeral, but the strange part of it was that Emily died as many as nine times in one week. The President was convinced, and the Government then put a large staff at work to decipher the codes, and handle the information that had been received by the Journal from the wireless messages going to Germany."

Making Fool of Bernstorff

Most daring of all the adventures of the Journal staff during the subsequent "exposure" period was the part played by the reporter who got a position as a private secretary to Count von Bernstorff. For seventeen months he maintained his disguise and played his double part, keeping the Journal informed of all that the German Ambassador was doing. The Journal kept this information to itself until it was quite ready. Then Bernstorff was completely discredited. When he was recalled, his private secretary went with him as far as the boat.

"Hurry up," said Von Bernstorff, who did not in the least suspect he had been fooled; "you will lose your boat."

"I think I'll be safer on this side," smiled the reporter. And this is how Von Bernstorff learned the truth.

JOHN R. RATHOM, Editor of The Providence Journal.

Overheard Bryan and Dumba

The pacifist sentiments of William Jennings Bryan, American Secretary of State at the opening of the war, were rudely dealt with by the Journal. It happened that a Journal man overheard the conversation between Bryan and Dumba, the Austrian Ambassador, in which Bryan agreed to influence President Wilson to suggest that United States citizens refrain from sailing on ships carrying munitions, in return for Germany's putting an end to submarine warfare.

"Don't pay any attention to the President, he means nothing," Bryan was heard to say, referring to President Wilson's notes. The Journal printed the terms of this agreement and the remarks of Bryan in full, with the result that Bryan, unable to deny the story, was eliminated from the Cabinet.

In the case of the attempt to involve the United States in a war with Mexico, it was a Journal man that engaged the room where Huerta and the German agents discussed the terms. "Of course being our man he engaged suitable rooms, and we were enabled to hear every word and send the information to the Department of State."

The "Pierced Hearts" Trick

The story of the stenographer, a young girl who was employed by Dr. Heinrich Albert, the Austrian Consul general in New York, was perhaps the most romantic of all. This girl had no previous experience of plotting and counter-plotting, or city experience whatever, having come to the Journal from the country some 20 miles outside of Providence. She simply used her native New England wit. A certain package of papers was to be sent to Germany through England on a Swedish ship, according to information that the Journal had secured. These papers told who were the agents of the Teutonic Governments in the United States, what their services had been to date, how much they had been paid, and how much was still to be paid. The case was to be shipped with other cases of similar outside appearance containing harmless freight.

The girl's task was to identify the particular box so that it could be picked out when it got to England. She saw the box in Albert's office and kept her eye on it. So did von Papen, the German naval attache at Washington, who was hanging around Albert's office for the purpose. The girl, during her watch sat down on the precious box and began to eat her lunch. The unsuspecting von Papen struck up a flirtation and invited himself to share the sandwiches. Before long he was talking sentimental twaddle, and the girl encouraged him by taking a red lead pencil out of her hair, and coyly drawing two big red hearts on the top of the packing case. Von Papen himself drew the arrow through them.

The box duly arrived at Falmouth on the Oscar II., to be examined. Neutral American cargoes were allowed to go through if they did not contain contraband. The authorities had been warned about the box with the two hearts and the arrow, and had no difficulty in picking it out of hundreds of others.

"And yet there are no brilliant people but the Germans," smiled Rathom.

The Changed Suit Case

An assignment to a Providence Journal reporter involved the shadowing of Dr. Heinrich Albert himself on one occasion. He was seen to go into a leather goods store and buy a suit case. He left it for his initials to be attached. The reporter then bought a similar suit case, and left it to see whether he liked the initials on the one that had just been ordered. Next day he called, saw Albert's initials, took away the suit case and had initials put on by another dealer. Later riding in an elevated train a scuffle occurred at the front end of the car, and Dr. Albert stood up to see the fun, while his suit case was exchanged by the reporter in the seat behind. The scuffle in the front of the car was caused by Mr. Rathom's men, too. Heinrich went on with the wrong suit case and discovered his loss two days later. Then he reported to the police that his suit case had been exchanged. However, it was too late. What was found in that suit case, published in the Providence Journal, sent Baron Konstatin T. Dumba, the Austrian Ambassador, home to Austria within a week.

Dr. Gartshare, Austrian Consul-General at San Francisco, was ordered to blow up the torpedo plants at Seattle. He refused. "When I heard that I thought it was so unusual that I locked him up," said Mr. Rathom. Gartshare proved to be disgusted with his job and with his Government and its methods, and gave information to the Journal resulting in the securing of an immense amount of material. He was denounced by the Austrian Embassy and placed at the head of the American Secret Service operations for four months.

The New York Ships

The discovery that the German ships in New York harbor had been [illegible] was made by the Journal. [illegible] authorities would not believe it, as their own man had reported that they were all right. It was not until Mr. Rathom had shown the officials samples of the carborundum sand that had been poured into the engines that they would believe. Then the officials admitted that their inspector had only been above decks. That the ships were not blown up as planned was due to the watchfulness of 60 or 70 Italian workmen, working around the wharves in various disguises, employed by the Journal.

"We always found that if we looked enough into any German scheme we should find a hole big enough in it for a school boy to crawl through," commented Mr. Rathom. Then he traced the disclosures throughout 1916 and down to the present year which had brought success to the Journal's aims.

Partial List of Triumphs

It was in April, 1915, that The Providence Journal exposed the German Embassy plot to discredit the Washington Administration, and these disclosures focused the eyes of the world on that paper. In the early months of 1915 powder plants in Illinois and New Jersey were blown up with loss of life, and merchant ships were ruthlessly destroyed, but it was not until July that the real carnival began. It was then, too, The Providence Journal exposed the Sayville wireless frauds, the result being that the United States Government seized the station.

The celebrated conversations between ex-Secretary of State Bryan and Ambassador Dumba were next published, causing a profound sensation throughout the world, and readers will remember that a bomb was next placed in the east wing of the Capitol at Washington and an attempt was made on the life of J. P. Morgan, both by the same person, Frank Holt, a German sympathiser, who afterwards committed suicide.

Lusitania Plot and After

The story of the Embassy's part in the Lusitania sailing was first told by Mr. Rathom's paper. The attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, who twice refused enormous fortunes if he would betray labor and help Germany to foment strife in industrial plants, was disclosed in The Journal. Boy-Ed's and von Papen's activities were published, and the publicity forced the Government to act, and they were declared objectionable persons.

It was The Journal which first told of the fact in September, 1915, that England had bagged 80 per cent. of the German submarines, a fact afterwards admitted by the British Government. The plot to blow up the Welland Canal, the intrigues of the Germans in using the Red Cross as a cloak for spy work, the bomb plots, the activities in Mexico and the help of Huerta were all exposed first by The Providence Journal. The year 1916 was in the main a repetition of the atrocities of the year previous. But Boy-Ed and von Papen and von Igel and Dernberg and von der Goltz and Dumba were sent back to Germany and Austria, while dozens of others, of lesser degree, are languishing in United State prisons.

The story of 1917 has been full of great honor for The Providence Journal and Mr. Rathom. Munition plots multiplied, but a pitiless publicity made the going extremely hazardous. The end was in sight in February, when Germany announced her new submarine policy. As he sailed Bernstorff termed The Providence Journal "villainous liar and creature of England." Germany's activities in Mexico were exposed, the trouble-making of Mr. Bryan was shown to be a part of a plan to keep the United States in a state of inaction, the story of the Mexico-Japan deal proposed by the German Foreign Secretary, Zimmermann, were all first published in The Journal, as was the story of the plot to destroy the ships interned in New York harbor.

Earned Thanks of Country

The Boston Transcript [illegible] editorially: "The Providence Journal is entitled to the thanks of the country for the remarkable success of the inquiries into the German spy system and the German propaganda in this country which it has conducted. The Journal's discoveries have been the basis for about three-quarters—possibly a larger proportion than that—of the Government's proceedings against the German plotters. It was upon the Journal's information that most of the judicial proceedings were taken. The Journal has a good many more sharp arrows in its quiver. It has taught the metropolitan press a lesson in enterprise. The Journal is now known in foreign offices and Wilhelmstrasse as well as on Westminster street; and it has performed a work that will be remembered in the history of the war."

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati authority tells how to dry up a corn or callus so it lifts off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone cost very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. It is fine stuff and acts like a charm every time.

BLACKSMITHING

N. HILT. Blacksmithing, horse-shoeing and general repairs. Tire-setting a specialty

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE

Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address

LOUIS BLOCH,
22-4tc Owen Sound, Ont.

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now, will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places, and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College

Owen Sound, Ontario

remains open all summer to help meet the demand for trained office help. Enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Dept. A., Owen Sound, Ont.

CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE

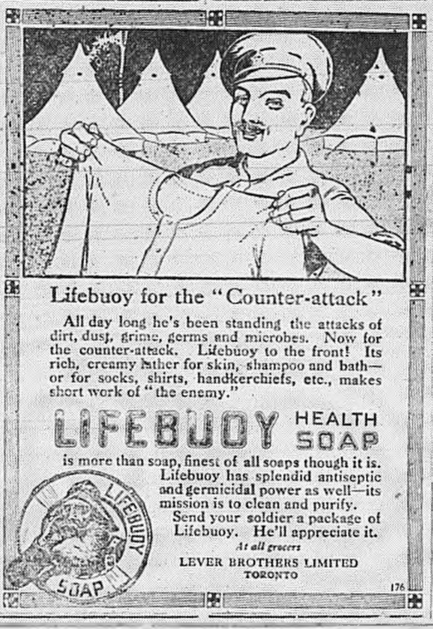
Stratford, Ontario

Ontario's Best Business College
FALL TERM FROM SEPT. 4TH

Commercial, Shorthand and Telegraphy departments.

We have thorough courses, experienced instructors, and we place graduates in positions. The Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalog.

D. A. McLACHLAN, PRINCIPAL



Lifebuoy for the "Counter-attack"

All day long he's been standing the attacks of dirt, dust, grime, germs and microbes. Now for the counter-attack. Lifebuoy to the front! Its rich, creamy lather for skin, shampoo and bath—or for socks, shirts, handkerchiefs, etc., makes short work of "the enemy."

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

is more than soap, finest of all soaps though it is. Lifebuoy has splendid antiseptic and germicidal power as well—its mission is to clean and purify.

Send your soldier a package of Lifebuoy. He'll appreciate it.

At all grocers

LEVER BROTHERS LIMITED
TORONTO

176

SPECIAL

We have a few of Dr. Pierce's Family Medical Adirsors. Good cloth binding which we offer at

50 cents each

while they last.

R. C. Crawford

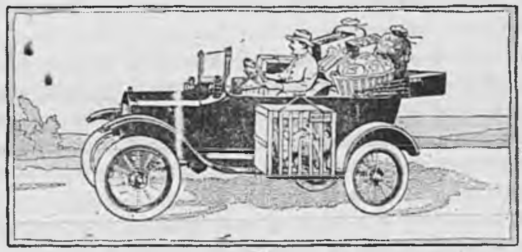
Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent

GENTS' DEPARTMENT

Felt hats 75cts to $2.50
Caps 25 cts to $1.50
Mexican hats 25cts to 50 cents
Negligee shirts $1 to $1.50
Working shirts from 50c to 85c.
Cotton night shirts $1.
Neckwear 25c to $1.50
Cashmere hose from 25c to 50c
Silk hose 50 cents per pair
Working sox 15c to 35c per pair

Bring Us Your Produce

B. H ILKER



Quick Hauling to Market

JUST think of the time the Ford saves a busy farmer in hauling milk to the cheese factory, vegetables butter, eggs and poultry to maket, fruit to the railway station. One fruit grower, last season, made four trips a day to the railway station, a total of 144 miles, and carried as high as 72 crates of 11 quarts each on a trip. He couldn't have made more than one 36 mile trip a day with a team.

The Ford soon pays for itself in the time it saves the farmer. With help so scarce, every farmer needs to make use of every precious minute of his time. To him the Ford car is a real necessity. Indeed some farmers tell us that it is doubtful if they could carry on their farm work under present labor conditions if it wasn't for the time the Ford saves them.

No farmer need be without a Ford. In fact the average farmer could afford one if it were double the price. It is as easy to drive as a horse, three times as fast, and costs less per mile. Why not order one to-day?

Ford

Touring - - $495
Runabout - $475
F. O. B. FORD, ONTARIO

L. M. Sees, Agent, Port Elgin

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson III.—July 15, 1917.

Hezekiah, the Faithful King. II. Chronicles 30: 1-27.

Commentary.—I. Proclaiming the Passover (vs. 1-12). 1. Hezekiah—Hezekiah became king of Judah at the age of twenty-five years, succeeding his father Ahaz, who had reigned sixteen years. It is recorded of Hezekiah that "he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that David his father had done" (2 Chron. 29:2). Contrast this record with that concerning his father (2 Chron. 28:1). During the first year of his reign he opened the house of the Lord, which Ahaz had closed (2 Chron. 28:24), and made repairs upon it. He proceeded to have it cleansed by the removal of the large amount of filth that had accumulated during the years that it had been neglected. The restoration of worship of the Lord was attended with great devotion and rejoicing. The priests purified themselves, and a great sacrifice was offered to Jehovah. sent to all Israel and Judah—Although Hezekiah was king of Judah, he was interested in the spiritual welfare of the kingdom of Israel, and sent an urgent invitation to them to come to the temple in Jerusalem to worship the Lord as one nation. wrote letters also to Ephraim and Manasseh—Ephraim and Manasseh were prominent tribes of the northern kingdom, and are here mentioned by name. to keep the passover—The passover was one of the principal feasts of the Israelites. It was held to commemorate the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage, having been established by the direct command of the Lord (Exod. 12, 13).

2. to keep the passover in the second month—The Lord commanded that the Passover should be held from the fourteenth to the twenty-first of Nisan, the first month of the religious year, which corresponds to the latter part of March and the first part of April, but provision was made for its observance at another time under certain conditions (Num. 9:10, 11). 3. could not keep it at that time—It was provided that the feast could be postponed for a month in case the people were ceremonially unclean or were absent on a journey. On this occasion the priests were not purified in the first month, and the people were not present in Jerusalem. 4. the thing pleased, etc.—The plan for the observance of the Passover was satisfactory to all concerned. 5. they established a decree—The king and the leaders of the people decided to carry out the purpose to call upon two nations to inaugurate a religious reformation. from Beer-sheba even to Dan—This is an expression for the whole of the territory embraced in the kingdoms of Judah and Israel, as Beer-sheba was the southernmost city and Dan was in the extreme north. had not done it of a long time....as it was written—"Had not kept it in great numbers in such sort as it is written."—R.V.

6 Posts—Messengers. Ye children of Israel—Hezekiah addressed all the tribes by this title, for by race and religion they were one nation and not two. Turn again unto the Lord God of Abraham, etc— The people had departed from Jehovah and their duty was clear to return to him. He will return—God is faithful to receive those who come to Him. Remnant —Many Israelites had already been carried away into captivity. 7. Be not ye like your fathers—The king includes a warning. Their fathers had sinned grievously and distresses came upon the nation. Gave them up to desolation—"Gave them up to be an astonishment."—R. V., margin. The rebellious people were given over by the Lord to the power of their oppressors. 8. Stiffnecked—Unruly oxen do not obey their masters. Yield yourselves unto the Lord—Instead of being "stiffnecked," or rebellious as your fathers were, be submissive to Jehovah. This yielding would involve worship at the sanctuary and service rendered to God, with the result that the displeasure of the Lord would be removed. 9. The Lord your God is gracious and merciful.—The letter which Hezekiah sent out to the tribes of Israel contained a strong setting forth of God's forbearance. It included exhortation, warning, threatening and promise. Even though the people had gone far in unbelief and rebellion, the Lord would receive them graciously if they would return to Him. 10. Laughed them to scorn—The people in general had so far forsaken the Lord that they gave heed to the king's message only to make light of it and reject it. It shows a determined rejection of God when one scorns the offers of salvation and mocks his ambassadors. 11. Divers of Asher and Manasseh and of Zebulun—Certain individuals from these tribes were influenced by the king's earnest invitation to go to Jerusalem for worship. 12. To give them one heart—The people of Judah were united in their response to Hezekiah's exhortation.

II. Keeping the Passover (vs. 13-21). 13. Feast of unleavened bread—A name by which the Passover was often called, because no leaven, or yeast, was permitted to be used or even kept about the houses during the feast. It could be properly celebrated only in Jerusalem. All the males were required to attend this feast yearly (Deut. 16. 16). 14-21. The people took away the altars of idolatrous worship and cast them into the Kidron valley east of the city. This was an appropriate preparation for the great feast. Ahaz had filled Jerusalem with idol shrines, and they must be removed before there could be consistent worship offered to Jehovah. The people celebrated the Passover with earnestness, for they observed the feast and Hezekiah prayed for them. Their hearts were prepared to seek the Lord and the king's prayer was answered. The feast was observed during the seven days prescribed in the law, and because of the blessing that came to them in this service, they continued the feast seven days more. The king and the princes gave the people thousands of animals for sacrifice.

III. Rejoicing in the Lord (vs. 22-27). This Passover feast marked a distinct revival of religion. As always on occasions of that kind, there was rejoicing. The priests, the Levites, the people of Judah, the people of Israel, and the strangers, or foreigners living in Israel, joined in this rejoicing. There was gladness in the hearts of all who humbled themselves before the Lord and joined in keeping his law and in worshipping him. There was such joy in Jerusalem as had not been on any occasion since the days of Solomon.

Questions.—What kings reigned in Judah after Uzziah and before Hezekiah? What was the religious condition of Judah when Hezekiah became king? What general call did he make? How was his call received? What was the feast of the Passover? How many tribes were represented in the assembly that observed the Passover? Why was the feast held in the second month instead of the first? How long did the feast continue? What was the feeling of the people during the Passover feast?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Reunion in worship.

I. In memory of national life.

II. In covenant against idolatry.

I. In memory of national life. This chapter contains the account of Hezekiah's arrangements for the observance of the Passover. It was the determined and brave attempt of a good king to win again to the worship of Jerusalem the separated people of "all Israel," as one nation, according to the law of Moses, that all the congregation should eat the Passover. This had not been done since the division of the kingdom. The Passover was such a festival as could be rightly celebrated only by a united people. It was the vivid memorial of an unprecedented birth of a nation, a memorial of the great deliverance which God wrought for his people from sore bondage under circumstances of an extraordinary nature, the outcome and foundation of a covenant, the foreshadowing of the one eternal Sacrifice. The celebration of the Passover at such a time suggested to every feeling and instinct of honest national love, that king, priests and people should live worthy of their origin, that they might raise the fortunes and restore the glory of the nation that had so greatly declined. Hezekiah looked with sorrow upon the separation of the twelve tribes from the God of their fathers. It was in his heart to take such measures as would restore them to the faith they had abandoned and to the favor they had lost. He took a very bold and decided course. The letters which Hezekiah sent throughout the cities of Israel contained earnest exhortations to repentance. He urged upon the inhabitants of that distressed land that for the strongest reasons they should return from their idolatrous ways and worship the true and living God in his appointed place in the temple at Jerusalem. He charged them to dismiss their fears of being repulsed or cast off. He assured them that their repentance would meet with a gracious response from the forgiving God of their fathers. Seemingly Israel ridiculed the idea of having to protect themselves from extermination by finding a sovereign in Hezekiah and a God in Jehovah. National pride blinded their eyes.

II. In covenant against idolatry. Hezekiah's serious and generous attempt to heal old wounds and restore broken friendships, and to bring back to God those estranged from him was rewarded. Never in any previous reign had there been such a clearance of the instruments of idolatry as occurred under Hezekiah. With thoroughgoing energy and efficiency which allowed no escape, they took away the altars which Ahaz had erected to heathen gods throughout the land. A very interesting and instructive incident occurred in the celebration of the Passover. Allowance was made for those who had been living in the idolatrous kingdom of Israel, far from the temple of Jerusalem and without instruction in the divine law. They had come up to Jerusalem that they might return unto Jehovah their God. It was in their hearts to cast off evil practices and to begin a new life of uprightness before God. The purpose of their souls was toward God and his service. Hezekiah's prayer for the pardon of their irregularity was granted. God saw in them the spirit of obedience. The occasion was certainly fitted to excite gladness, the return of the nation to its allegiance to Jehovah. It marked a blessed season of grace for all Israel when they forgot all their differences, when they renounced all idolatry, when they endeavored to prepare their hearts for acceptable worship, when they made open and explicit confessions to God. The congregation was united, resolute and joyous. Nothing like it had been witnessed since the days of Solomon, when the dedication of the temple had been celebrated by a double period of rejoicing. Hezekiah's liberality enabled the people to prolong the feast for another seven days. In turning from the worship of idols to serve the living God, the people experienced an inward satisfaction which made them rejoice.

T. R. A.

Ariake Bay's Mystic Fire.

Shiranuhi, the mystic fire of Ariake Bay, Kyushu, has been famous for the past 2,000 years, the sight being considered one of the great wonders of the Japan seas.

In a recent issue of the Taiyo Magazine M. Kaneko, a teacher in the Shimoba, a middle school, relates his impressions of the fire. According to Mr. Kaneko, when he witnessed the spectacle the first light appeared like a star about five miles distant. Suddenly the volume of light increased until it soon covered an area of many miles. The light moved the waves and resembled electric lights being lighted and then suddenly extinguished. Mr. Kaneko says that intermittent wavelike movements are the chief characteristics of the mystic fire. He fails to find a cause for the origin of the fire.

The pain of having to ascend the stairs of other men.—Dante.

A Visit to the Lakeview Holsteins

Mr. T. A. Dawson, Manager, Tells How to Feed for High Records—Abundance of Succulent Feed Essential—The Main Thing, However, is to Keep the Cow on Her Feed.

The experiences of a man who has made a success in any line of business are always interesting, but this is particularly true of stock-breeding—especially the breeding of pure-bred stock. "Many are called, but few chosen," and the men who make an outstanding success of raising record breaking dairy cattle are few and far between.

Our great need at the present time is for more and better cows, and it is safe to say that if the milk and butter fat production of every dairy herd in Canada was equal to that of the herd at the Lakeview Stock Farm, our milk, butter, and cheese production would be more than doubled annually.

Lakeview Stock Farm is on the cement highway between Toronto and Hamilton, at Bronte. The owner, Major E. F. Osler, who at present is in France, fighting his country's battles, is to be congratulated on having such an ideal location for his farm, while the manager, Mr. T. A. Dawson, is no less to be congratulated for having developed so many famous champions.

Junior Herd Sire, King Canary Segis. He is a grandson on his dam's side of King of the Pontiacs.

MILKS THREE TIMES A DAY.

The barns are models of cleanliness. Cement floors are used and the stalls and stanchions are of steel. A litter carrier is considered a "sine qua non," and the manure is run out and stored in a covered manure pit. The liquid manure runs into a cistern from which it is pumped periodically. The farm comprises about 300 acres, of which about 100 acres are in orchard. A new dust sprayer is being tried out on the trees this year. It is claimed that this sprayer will do just as good work as the ordinary liquid sprayer, but in about one-quarter the time. So far it has given very good results.

Although Lakeview Farm is "fancy" it is not run on fancy lines. The herd is composed entirely of pure-bred Holsteins, but they have to pay for their keep, and more besides, or they do not long have the opportunity to shine as "star" boarders. All the milk is shipped to Toronto.

Mr. Dawson makes no secret about the way he feeds cows while on test. He is a firm believer in long-distance records. He says that blood will tell in the long run, and that a cow cannot be expected to give a large amount of milk year after year if her ancestry is not right. "We milk three times a day," said Mr. Dawson, "because we find it pays us to do so. I believe that any man who keeps more than twenty cows should milk three times a day. We find that we can get about one-third more milk than if we only milked twice a day. For a time we tried only milking twice a day, but the herdsman came to me and asked that milking three times a day be resumed, as the cows were not giving as much milk as they should. We also feed grain three times a day. I am a firm believer in giving heavy producers grain while they are on pasture, but the difficulty I find is that they will not eat it very readily. When the pastures are at their best it is hard to get a cow to eat more than two or three pounds of grain per day. The meal mixture we use for the summer time while the cows are on pasture is two parts of bran to one of cotton seed meal. We find that the cotton seed meal regulates the bowels and tends to prevent undue scouring when the cows are first turned out." Asked if he had not tried the use of the summer pasture mixture recommended by Mr. Leitch of the Ontario Agricultural College (one bushel each of wheat, oats and barley and 6 to 7 pounds of red clover per acre) Mr. Dawson replied, "I have no doubt that for the average man who only keeps a few cows it is excellent, but we do not find it necessary. We have always an abundance of silage, and if the pastures begin to dry up we simply feed more silage. This year we have about 40 acres of corn."

At the present time there are about 25 milking cows and 40 head of young stock on the Lakeview Farm. The herd is regularly tested for tuberculosis, and at the last test it was given a clean bill of health.

Mr Dawson considers that a yearly test is much preferable, as an indication of a cow's potentialities, than a short test, though he agrees that a short test is better than no test at all. "In order for a cow to make an abnormally high record it is necessary to condition her for 5 or 6 months before the test starts. The object should be to get the cow well covered with soft fat that will come off easily as soon as the test commences. We do not try to make abnormal records in our herd, though when a cow is under test we feed a different ration to that given when she was producing milk for commercial purposes. The rule in our herd is that the cows are milked for nine months and then allowed to go dry for about three months before freshening. Milking a cow right up to the time she freshens is not giving her a fair chance, and if persisted in will result finally in weak, delicate calves."

The ration fed to dry cows is made up as follows:

Bran	300 lbs.
Barley	300 lbs.
Molasses Meal	300 lbs.
Oil Cake	100 lbs.
Gluten Meal	100 lbs.
Salt	20 lbs.
Charcoal	20 lbs.

This is fed according to the condition of the cow. When a cow is undergoing a seven-day test the meal mixture is as follows:

Oat Chop	125 lbs.
Bran	200 lbs.
Gluten Meal	125 lbs.
Distillery Grains	200 lbs.
Cotton Seed Meal	100 lbs.
Oil Cake	80 lbs.
Charcoal	10 lbs.
Salt	15 lbs.

The charcoal in the ration is to keep the stomach sweet and the salt is to induce the animal to drink. To make sure that enough salt is given it is offered alone every now and then.

ROOTS FOR MILK PRODUCTION.

"There is nothing like roots for producing milk," said Mr. Dawson. "I have fed as much as 200 pounds of roots per day to a cow. The cow was exceptionally large and giving an exceptionally large amount of milk, but it is common for us to feed 125 lbs. a day. While a cow is on test we milk and feed four times a day. We feed often as much as 30 pounds of meal per day."

The senior herd sire is Dutchland Colantha Sir Mona, whose sire is the famous Colantha Johanna Lad, who has 106 daughters in the A.R.O. Dutchland C. Sir Mona is the sire of the Canadian champion 2-year-old butter cow Lakeview Dutchland Artis, whose picture we give in this issue. This cow gave 567.7 pounds of milk containing 34.66 pounds of butter fat, with an average test of 4.88 per cent. butter fat in seven days.

The junior herd sire, whose picture we give in this issue, is King Canary Segis, sired by the famous bull King Segis Pontiac Howell. His dame was Pet C. Countess 2nd.

Lakeview Rattler, as a milk producer, can hardly be beaten. Last year she made a Canadian record by producing 724 pounds of milk, containing 33.34 pounds of butter fat, in seven days. Her best day's milking was 107.2 pounds.

It was on the Lakeview farm that the first government tractor was used this spring. Mr. Dawson speaks optimistically of its work and the future of the tractor in eastern Canada. "The tractor was let out by the government, the only charges to the farmer being the man's wages, his keep, and the cost of oil and gasoline. The man got 35 cents an hour and board. I compared the work done by the tractor with that done by man and team and found that the tractor was by far the more profitable. Thus the cost of discing twice and harrowing once with man and team was 80 cents per acre, but the same work was done by the tractor at a cost of 22 1-4 cents per acre. We had 29½ acres plowed in 27 hours at a cost of $32.62, or an average of $1.10 per acre. The same work done by eight horses and two men would have cost $1.65 per acre, or to put it another way, the tractor effected a saving of $1.64 a day."

Lakeview Dutchland Artis, Canadian Champion Senior three-year-old in the seven day division.

—The Canadian Countryman.

SUNDAY AT HOME

BECAUSE I BUILT MY NEST SO HIGH.

Because I built my nest so high,
Must I despair
If a fierce wind, with bitter cry,
Passes the lower branches by,
And mine makes bare?

Because I hung it, in my pride,
So near the skies,
Higher than other nests abide,
Must I lament, if far and wide
It scattered lies?

I shall but build, and build my best,
Till, safely won,
I hang aloft my new-made nest
High as of old and see it rest
As near the sun.

—Mrs. Radford.

HIS LOVINGKINDNESS.

The Lord is gracious, and full of compassion; slow to anger, and of great mercy. Your Father which is in heaven . . . maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust.

Be ye . . . followers of God, as dear children; and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweetsmelling savor.—Be ye kind one to another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently.

Love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest: for he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil. Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

THE CHILD MIND.

(By the late Rev. H. T. Miller.)

Christ's lessons are marvellous in their simplicity. He early came in contact with the ambitious and the loud. His rebukes were no half way homilies. "He took a little child. He said, suffer little children to come to me; if you receive not the kingdom of God as a little child, ye shall in no wise enter therein."

A child is a mystery, a fiat of God, an expression of His sovereign will. A child is a double thing; it is part animal; the higher part is spiritual. The body comes by the parent. Does the spirit come by the parent also? This is one of the profoundest mysteries that waits solution in another sphere. For aught we know, the spirit is without a beginning and without end! They may be gathered in heaps by the million, near the coast of time, and when breathing time comes each is dropped into a body, constituting man. Look ye, proud, ambitious man, at the little child on the knee of Christ; he is an epitome, an abbreviation, a bunch of possibilities. A child is receptive, responsive, faithful, alert, nimble, quick; it is thirsty, [illegible] and vigilant. It reminds the mother of the forgotten endearments as it feeds at the breast; as it grows it becomes conscious of sanctuary. It runs to the mother for protection. John Bunyan counted six different calls of the mother hen: one was alarm, when the hawk was hovering. Long years ago we spent a delightful shilling at the Zoo, in Regent's Park, London, Eng. A group of kangaroos arrested our attention. We excited a mild alarm, and instantly the young took refuge in the pouch of the mother, and nothing was seen but a leg and tail of the refugee. One startling challenge of the Master to the men of this day is want of reverence for sanctuary! You may do without priest, altar or genuflection, but you cannot be men of the kingdom if you put into cold storage the precious jewel of sanctuary!

In this sanctuary you find the child heart; let us study this child heart for a little.

It wants things now; it lives this for the present; it scorns delay; it is now or never. God is the author of the child-mind, and He stands ready with both hands full of blessing, and says, eat and drink abundantly, O beloved.

It takes no note of time. Grandfather's watch is only a curiosity. Time has no horizon—it is boundless, endless. Here is the dream of immortality; heaven lies about us in our infancy. The child mind laughs at impossibilities, and is a standing rebuke to the sordid and the sad.

The child-mind has its raptures, its visions and its tears. Did you ever think of the first dark cloud that comes over the vivid creature fresh from the hands of God? It is when it makes the painful discovery that some one has told a deliberate lie! Oh, the exquisite agony, piercing like a sword point; lies as plentiful as pebbles on the beach. Oh, hellish brood [illegible] of lies. Who will not [illegible] peace with this child-mind, and be true and valiant, full equipped, ready to stand before the Christ with the child upon His knee, and have the smile of His approval and His welcome into rest!

A CONTENTED CITY.

Interesting Features of Adelaide, in Australia.

Adelaide's unusual plan—a business section surrounded by a zone of 2,000 acres of park lands, beyond which are the residential sections—seems designed to put business cares, recreation and quiet home life in separate compartments. The organization of city life to allow for leisure—a feeling more prevalent in Adelaide than in Melbourne, or even in Sydney, and almost unknown in American cities—is responsible for the universal impression among visitors that Adelaide ranks high in general culture.

Both climate and the high quality of the South Australian pioneers are also factors which have helped to make Adelaide such a desirable place of residence. Those who are attracted by the climate, people and manner of life of the foothill cities of southern California, who care for out-of-door life and flowers and fruit, and wish to spend week-ends in nearby mountains or at the seashore, would feel at home in Adelaide.

Most writers on Australia profess to see differences in types and manners in the three leading cities of the commonwealth, and the natives feel sure that differences exist. Melbourne is "[illegible]," Sydney is "easy-going," Adelaide is "solid" and "contented." On the basis of short acquaintance these characterizations seem as unreal as "dead" Philadelphia or "provincial" Boston would to an Australian traveller. In the American sense, no Australian city is hustling; all are doing much business in an orderly, efficient manner. As places for residence, they have few competitors among the cities of the United States.—National Geographic Magazine.

MARKET REPORTS

TORONTO MARKETS.

FARMERS' MARKET.

Dairy Produce—
Butter, choice dairy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Eggs, new-laid, doz.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cheese, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., fancy, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dressed Poultry—
Turkeys, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fowl, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spring chickens	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fruits—
Rhubarb, 3 bunches	[illegible]	[illegible]
Strawberries, box	[illegible]	[illegible]
Vegetables—
Asparagus, Can., bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Beans, new, small measure	[illegible]	[illegible]
Beets, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cucumbers, each	[illegible]	[illegible]
Carrots, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Celery, per bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Horseradish, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Leeks, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lettuce, leaf, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., head, doz.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Onions, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., small bkt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., Bermuda, box	[illegible]	[illegible]
Potatoes, per bag	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., new, peck	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., small measure	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spinach, new, peck	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sage, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Savory, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Turnips, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Tomatoes, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]

MEATS—WHOLESALE.

To the trade wholesalers are quoting the following quotations:

Beef, forequarters, cwt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., hindquarters	[illegible]	[illegible]
Carcases, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., common	[illegible]	[illegible]
Veal, common, cwt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., medium	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., prime	[illegible]	[illegible]
Heavy hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Shop hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Shop hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mutton, heavy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., light	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., Spring, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]

TORONTO CATTLE MARKETS.

Export cattle, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butcher cattle, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butcher cattle, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. medium	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. common	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butcher cows, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. medium	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. canners	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. bulls	[illegible]	[illegible]
Feeding steers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Stockers, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Milkers, choice, each	[illegible]	[illegible]
Springers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sheep, ewes	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bucks and culls	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hogs, fed and watered	[illegible]	[illegible]
Calves	[illegible]	[illegible]

OTHER MARKETS.

WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE.

Wheat—	Open	High	Low	Close
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oats—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dec.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Flax—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Montreal, July [illegible]—Receipts at the Canadian Pacific live stock yards this morning were [illegible] cattle, [illegible] sheep and lambs, [illegible] calves and 700 hogs. [illegible] were from [illegible] [illegible] at higher figures. [illegible]

Power of Radium.

Prof. William Crookes, the noted English physicist, has calculated that if the total energy in the small quantity of radium which could be placed on the tip of the index finger was obtainable by an instantaneous disintegration of its atoms, it would be sufficient to raise the whole English navy as high as Mount Etna (altitude 10,750 feet.)—Exchange.

Through Many Trials

"I shall! Things are about as bad as that with me," the other says, bitterly, "and the worst of it is, I shall have to please the old man as well as myself. I could soon simplify it otherwise and marry anybody who had money enough, but the viscount goes in for the correct alliance—gentle birth, beauty, and all the rest of it; so I am obliged to narrow the limits of the bidders."

"Nonsense, Richard! You talk as if you would sell yourself for money! Nonsense!" Dick says, warmly, reproachfully. "You talk as if you would forswear yourself for a woman's gold, as if I didn't know you better!"

CHAPTER III.

"Don't say 'A woman's gold,' for goodness' sake!" Richard says, irritably. "It is old-fashioned melodrama! I must have a wife with money, as you know very well, and I must marry to please my uncle; and, of course, if the lady please my eye, and not plague my heart, so much the better. So, if there are any exceptionally charming young heiresses to be met with within or about this delightful locality, you can represent me, Dick, act as a proxy until I arrive on the scene myself."

"You are jesting," Dick says, shortly. "How could I be proxy for you—here, at least?"

"Of course you can't," the other says, coldly and scornfully. "You have ruined yourself in a matrimonial direction for life by putting yourself in the position you are going to assume here! You can't help me, either, any more than help yourself! Whom are you going to marry, pray, when the time comes? The lady's maid, I suppose, if your affections do not settle on the cook!"

"If ever I do marry, which is not likely," Dick says, quietly, "I shall most likely marry a woman like my mother; I shall try to do so; I could never do better; a woman who has worked for her daily bread, and was a gentlewoman and a good woman in every fibre of her nature!"

"And now," he adds, "I really must say good-bye, Richard."

"Good-bye, then, Dick," the other says, with that soupçon of patronizing encouragement in his voice.

"You will write to me, now and then, just a few words, Richard," urges Dick, wistfully; "and—and—if the old man ever speaks of me, tell me, won't you?"

"Of course, I will," the young gentleman replies, heartily, but looking away from the truthful, doglike wistfulness of Dick's brown eyes.

"And if he ever seems inclined to think less bitterly of me, Richard, you'll say a kind word for me, I know," [illegible] Dick urges.

"Of course I will," the other answers, again looking away.

"You will never tell him a word about this, of course, Richard," Dick continues. "I keep our name. I cannot sail under false colors, any more than I could fight under a false flag, but no one will connect Dumaresq with Heneage—no one ever shall for me. I am quite beyond the pale."

"Well, it was your own doing, you know," the other says, shortly; and then, suddenly descrying a puff of steam in the distance, he says, joyfully: "Here's the train! By Jove, I am glad! Well, you want to be off—good-by, Dick."

"Good-by, old fellow," Dick says, earnestly, huskily indeed as the parting moment has actually come, not at all noticing or discerning the fact that his friend has detained him to his inconvenience, and now is anxious to get rid of him instantly.

"Good-bye, Richard," he repeats, grasping the young gentleman's fawn-colored glove, and in a low, cautious [illegible] he adds, earnestly: "I'll send you the twenty-five the day I get it. I don't want it, you know. Aunt Jane's ten pounds a quarter, and the poor old soul sends it to the exact date—is more than I want."

"Lucky fellow!" the young gentleman who is promised the mysterious "twenty-five" says, with a very perceptible sneer; "but I don't want your money, man. When I am quite beggared and have been kicked out at Heneage Court, and gone through another career, you can allow me ten shillings a week to live on, if you have more money than you know what to do with!"

"What rot!" Dick says, brusquely, [illegible] the rapidly-drawn picture of misfortune quite unnerves him. "When you will be master of Heneage Court, you ought to say. You can ask me down to—to—the old place where we were boys together—when you had no visitors, and——"

"It is you who are talking rot!" retorts Richard, flushing, and a sneer quite distorting his face. "As if you didn't know that Heneage Court goes with the title—every inch of ground about the old rookery of a place is strictly entailed! You have the gilt of the gingerbread, Master Dick."

"Without the gingerbread," Dick says, shortly, a troubled look shading his face. "Yes, that's a pity. Nothing but my death can replace the gilt on the gingerbread, Richard. I have often thought of that."

"Thought of what?" the other asks, impatiently. "Well, here's the train, say good-bye, old fellow," and he glances around in a precautionary manner as their hands clasp once more.

There is no one on the platform to notice the adieu, but at the same moment the stationmaster himself bustles out. Instantly Dick looses hold of his friend's hand, draws back with squared shoulders, and places his hand horizontally to the brim of his hat.

"I wish you good-day, sir, and a pleasant journey," he says aloud, in his clear, strong voice, so that the stationmaster hears, and the porters hear, and glance back from his tall, soldierly figure, striding away at a swinging gait, to the handsome, elegantly dressed young gentleman who is loitering on the platform, after returning his man's salutation with an affable nod.

"He's a hofficer chap," one porter tells the other, with respectful interest, not at all lessened when the train reaches up and he steps into a first-class smoking-carriage, and liberally tips the porter, who puts in his portmanteau in the van and brings him a paper.

"An' that hother young fellow was his servant, I s'pose—his orderly, as they calls 'im," the other porter remarks.

And as Dick, toiling uphill in the face of a cold, damp seawind rushing over Portdreath Moor, pauses to look back at the lessening ribbon of steam, lying low in the valley lands, until an intervening grove shuts it altogether from his view, with a gaze whose wistfulness is dimmed by tears, the young gentleman in the first-class carriage beguiling the time with a choice cigar, bethinks himself of an unread letter in the breast-pocket of his travelling coat.

"The old story, I suppose," he says, with a contemptuous lifting of his eyebrows, as he takes the pretty, shiny, seagreen note—tenderness, reproaches, and dire tenderness, and more threats. Hang her! I wish I had never seen her. It's about time I cut myself loose altogether, unless I am going to be swamped altogether; and if that Dick hadn't been such a consummate ass he [illegible] he might have helped me. Of course now he might as well be at the bottom of the sea for all the good he is to me, and I wish he was! I know the old duffer has a sneaking liking for him now, after all the jet-black painting I have done for him; and I shall never be quite easy while either of them is alive."

And with this pious and kindly summary of his feelings, our young gentleman tears his pretty little green note roughly open—so roughly that he tears the envelope half across, with its address written in dashing feminine caligraphy:

Captain Richard Heneage Dumaresq.

* * * * *

And while Captain Richard Dumaresq reads his letter, the second Richard Dumaresq is standing deferentially before Sir Philip Trefusis, a severe-looking, elderly gentleman, with a thin, upright figure, a pale, thin, haughty face, gray hair and glittering blue eyes, and he is closely questioning Dick Dumaresq as to his qualifications for the duties on which he was about entering.

"Been on foreign service?" he asks, sharply scanning the young man's face and figure.

"Yes, Sir Philip, five years."

"So Rowlands told me," Sir Philip says, curtly. "You appear a young man. How old are you?"

"Twenty-nine in July, sir."

"Ah, so Rowlands told me," again replies Sir Philip, having apparently asked the question as a test, and Dick Dumaresq's brown face flushes redly.

"From what part of England do you come?"

"My father was a Hereford man—my mother was a Londoner," is the somewhat evasive and roundabout reply; but Sir Philip makes no comment on it, but pulls the bell at his right hand—an old-fashioned, silken bell-pull, with faded embroidery and heavy fringe, which is in keeping with all that Dumaresq has yet seen in or about the house—old-fashioned, ancient, handsome and faded, in keeping with Sir Philip Trefusis himself.

"You know all about your duties, I suppose? so Rowlands told me," he says, hurriedly; "you have been accustomed to such cases—"

"Oh, yes, Sir Philip," Dumaresq says, cheerfully; noticing how the gray-haired father's face has twitched at the allusion to his son. "Those cases of temporary dementia are so common with army men of the age of Mr. Trefusis—eighteen years old, is he not, sir?—so Dr. Rowlands told me," Dick says, with unconscious irritation.

"Yes, just eighteen," the father says, in a low tone, "a year younger than my eldest daughter," and as the footman appears in answer to the bell, Sir Philip says:

"Tell Lady Althea I should be glad if she could come here for a few minutes—Mr. Dumaresq has arrived. After I have presented you to Lady Althea, my sister, you must see your patient, Mr. Dumaresq," he continues, "and Lady Althea will hear requests or complaints which you may have to make about domestic arrangements. I with frigid condescension, or Dick Dumaresq thinks it is frigid, until there comes the soft rustle of a clinging black dress, with plaitings of rich lace about the bodice and the elbow sleeves, the gleam of massive silver bracelets, on weblike black lace mittens, the glitter of a pair of eyeglasses on a delicate aquiline nose, supported by white, transparent fingers. A cold, sweet stereotyped smile on a carefully preserved, cold face and Dick is distressfully conscious of being in the presence of Lady Althea de Burgh.

Her ladyship questions him much as Sir Philip had questioned him, but more closely; her ladyship applies tests and traps to catch him in his speech, as Sir Philip had done, only with intent, as he clearly perceives; her ladyship is gently skeptical about all things she hears, from his foreign service to his English parentage and his English name.

Lady Althea intends to be skeptical altogether about him Dick Dumaresq perceives, as he respectfully but briefly replies to his fair inquisitor.

"Dumaresq is a French-Canadian name," she observes, in a tone that implies he has no business to assume it if he intends to pass himself off as an Englishman. "I don't think I have ever heard of it in England, at least among the middle classes. It is the name of the Heneage family, of course, but that has nothing to do with it."

Dick Dumaresq drops his hat as she speaks, and as it rolls almost to Lady Althea's flounces he has to stoop for and follow it, which accounts satisfactorily to her for the hot flush that covers his face, and she is rather gratified that he is awkward and embarrassed in her presence.

"I shall send for Lionel, Althea," Sir Philip interrupts, impatiently. You had better see your patient now," he adds to Dumaresq.

"If you please, Sir Philip and Lady Althea," Dick says, respectfully, but very firmly, "I would prefer not to see him here. I can introduce myself in an easier, less exciting way; I would prefer to do it, Sir Philip; it will be best, believe me," he adds, earnestly; and Sir Philip, without glancing at my lady, answers readily:

"Very well, very well; if you think it best."

And presently, to his intense thankfulness, the interview is over, and Dick Dumaresq is dismissed, under the guidance of a servant, to meet his charge.

He draws a long breath, and rubs his hand across his brow, as he steps outside the library door, with the sensation of stepping out of a diving bell or any place where every sense is conscious of a painful restraint, and there is a lack of fresh air generally.

And at the top of the first flight of stairs there is a window open—a window looking seaward; the salt, damp breeze, with its marine odor, comes rushing in, and Dumaresq is about to pause to inhale a good, long breath, with that sense of the lack of freedom and fresh air oppressing him still when he observes the figure of another person, who has an equal longing for free air and sea-breeze with himself.

A young girl, who is leaning on the window sill, her pale face and large earnest eyes turned toward the sea—a vast, leaden-hued expanse of roughened water stretching far below and beyond out to the silver streak on the misty horizon, and the chill, damp breeze through the wide-open window is blowing her soft hazel-colored hair into little baby curls and ripples all about her brow and temples. Dumaresq is almost beside her before she perceives him, and a vivid, modest blush tinges all her pale face, and her earnest eyes grow velvety in liquid darkness.

"Are you Mr. Dumaresq?" she asks, shyly, gazing at him in evident, innocent admiration.

The big, strong, soldierly man, with the kind expression and gentlemanly bearing, is a great relief to her secret fears.

"My name is Dumaresq, madam," and he bows to the slender girl in the shepherd's plaid frock as he had not bowed to Lady Althea.

"Oh, I am so glad!" she says, hurriedly, in an eager, unconventional way, which no one could mistake for familiarity. "I am Imogene Trefusis, and you are to be my brother's tutor, are you not?" and then, without waiting for his reply, she looks up in his face with a most beseeching wistfulness. "You will be kind to him, and patient with him, Mr. Dumaresq?" she asks, and her lips are trembling; "he is trying and bad-tempered sometimes, you know—very!" and the beseeching eyes are full of tears; "but, oh, do try to be very patient with him."

"Indeed, I can promise you faithfully that I will, Miss Trefusis," Dick says, as earnestly as herself, and wondering vaguely how this innocent, warm-hearted young creature comes to be daughter and niece of those two in the library.

"Miss Trefusis is my sister," she says, simply, "but thank you very much for your promise."

The sweet, shy blush rises over her pure, fair face again, as she smiles a little, and turns away, going down stairs, and as she goes, the footman, a prim, thin, gray-haired man, rather like Sir Philip, his master, in appearance, shuts down the window, muttering crossly to the effect that "the salt air was enough to destroy everything."

And Dick Dumaresq feels as if he were thrust back into a prison atmosphere again, as he goes upstairs, following his guide.

CHAPTER IV.

The dark, stately mansion of Portdreath, with its wide staircases and and silent corridors, and its hushed, chill, atmosphere in the leaden-hued light of the waning day, seems in verity a prison, as Dick Dumaresq follows his conductor up the spacious stairway, over the faded carpets, past dingy draperies of time-darkened and time-faded pictures in tarnished frames; past ghostly statues, standing white and silent in the dusky corridors until they reach a baize door, through which can be distinctly heard sounds of confusion and loud voices.

The footman knocks sharply, and, opening the door, says curtly:

"Walk in, please," and almost before Dumaresq can step over the threshold, he lets the heavy baize door slam behind him, nearly knocking him down.

But as he stands, rather embarrassed and bewildered for a moment, feeling hot with wrath against the uncivil footman, and peering confusedly through the wild disorder of the dimly-lighted room, a sensation of relief and surprise quite gladdens him, and restores his self-possession the next instant, as out of the chaos and the twilight shadows comes the tall, slender form, the pale, pure face, the clear, wistful eyes of Imogene Trefusis.

The wistful eyes are very wistful and bright with earnestness; the pale face is very pale and sorrowful; the tender, loving lips are full of grieved expression. What little light there is from the near western window falls on her face and figure as she comes hastily forward, with her hands slightly raised, and the soft, yellowish light on the loose silken curls and ripples of her bright brown hair looks like a glory.

And in Dumaresq's sudden fancy she looks to him like an angel of pity and tenderness—the angel of the house here, where the deepest love of the house abides.

The overthrown table and broken cups and saucers are in the centre of the room, the chairs are all flung or pushed in a group beyond, and a large sofa is drawn up or dragged up, as it appears to have been dragged two or three mats or rugs along with it in its fierce progress, right in front of the fire, which is protected by a high brass guard. And on the sofa, stretched out face downward, is the figure of a young man, with the sofa-cushions pulled over his head.

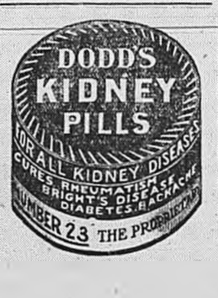
"My brother is not very well [illegible] evening," Imogene says, quickly, but softly; and the sorrowful glance of [illegible] sent which meets Dumaresq's eyes, as he looks at the overthrown furniture conveys to him the explanation.

"And so I thought," she says, timidly and gently, as though she feared to be reproved or found fault with by some one—"I thought I would come up and sit with him for a little while. But"—with another very sorrowful glance at the sofa, and speaking in a louder tone—"perhaps I had better go."

She waits a few moments, and then goes over to the sofa, and lifts the pillow up a little.

(To Be Continued).

EATS DIRT
GILLETT'S
LYE
CLEANS DISINFECTS



Chats With the Doctor

(By a Physician)

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS.

Probably no chronic ailment is more frequent than the chronic form of bronchial catarrh, or bronchitis. During the autumn and winter months in particular quite a considerable proportion of our people, especially those past middle age, suffer from varying degrees of bronchitis. Many of these chronic or repetetive illnesses are the result of previous attacks of acute bronchitis, though very often they are due to unhealthy occupations or unhealthy environment at home. Chronic bronchitis thus is much more common among people who live in crowded industrial districts than it is among those whose home conditions are more spacious and generally wholesome. There is also undoubtedly an hereditary tendency to this condition of the bronchial tubes, though even among families with this tendency an immediately irritating cause is also necessary.

The commonest form of chronic bronchitis is accompanied with a moderate amount of secretion, which is expelled by coughing, with more or less difficulty. But there is also a form in which there is very little secretion, the cough being of a violent and irritating character. The extremely unpleasant form of bronchitis known as bronchiectasis can hardly be considered as a distinct form, rather as an advanced form of the first of the two forms named above. Bronchiectasis is a very distressing condition, consisting as it does in the formation of a kind of sacs or cavities, owing to the dilatation of the bronchial tubes in places. The result being that the secretion accumulates, and lies about in these cavities until it decomposes, causing an almost unendurable foetor both in the expectoration and in the breath.

In the slight forms of bronchitis which are almost habitual with some people every winter, little medical treatment is needed. The general health should be kept at as high a point as possible, and warm clothing; warm, well-ventilated rooms; a dry climate; suitable food and exercise, are better than drugs for this purpose. Constipation should be avoided. In the graver cases inhalations and sprays of various antiseptics, together with the mixtures, are usually prescribed. Sudden changes of temperature should be avoided by bronchitic patients, and very cold, cutting winds, mist and fog are all detrimental.

TEA-DRINKING.

The injurious effects of tea, so often pointed out to dyspeptic inquirers in this column, are due not so much to the habit of tea-drinking itself as to the way in which the tea is prepared. The method of tea-making, so that it may be produced as a pleasant, mildly stimulating and practically harmless beverage, is extremely simple, but for some reason hardly one person in twenty will take the trouble to carry it out.

After tea has stood for more than three or four minutes the tannin which the leaves contain is released, and it is this tannin which does all the mischief. Its astringent properties disturb the digestive system. In fact they actually tan the coats of the stomach, and many attacks of dyspepsia, which seem unaccountable, may be traced to this simple cause.

Tea may, however, be drunk without any ill effects whatever, provided that it has been properly made. The two things to avoid are making the tea too strong and allowing it to stand too long on the leaves. Use one small teaspoonful of tea on each half pint of water, and allow it to stand for three minutes. Then pour off, or decant it into another tea-pot, previously heated. Tea made in this way may be kept hot under a cosy for a long time without being spoiled or becoming injurious to the digestion. If this method is followed hot water cannot, of course, be added at will, as is usually done when tea is left on the leaves, but the fluid contained by this addition of hot water has every drawback of badly made tea with none of its good points. The aroma of the tea is already lost; its flavor has mostly gone too, and the only ingredient left to give taste and color to the tea is the tannic acid—bitter, scentless, and harmful. Tea properly made with two pots requires less dry tea than when made in the usual way, so that a large pot should be used to begin with, holding as much tea as will be required for all.

WIND AND THE SKIN.

Certain winds have a definitely bad effect on the skins of most people, and the east wind in particular has a sort of drying quality which makes the skin rough and uncomfortable in the extreme. It seems to dry all the natural oil out of the skin, and leaves it dry and lifeless, so that it frequently cracks and chaps, and develops local sore patches. The best treatment for such roughened and cracked skin is the nightly application of some pure grease, or the rubbing into the skin of a little of an equal mixture of glycerine and water. This should be done at fairly frequent intervals throughout the day, and always after washing. The hands should be protected when out of doors by thick gloves, and if the skin of the face is sensitive a veil should be worn when in a wind. Cold cream rubbed into the skin of the hands at night will do wonders in keeping them soft and the skin supple.

MEASLES.

Perhaps the commonest and the most dangerous of the diseases which follow or complicate measles is pneumonia. Both in children and adults it accounts for the majority of deaths, and its course is often very rapid. It must not be imagined that any lack of care in nursing is responsible for the pneumonia. It is often attributed to chill, due to neglect or some precaution during the illness or in early convalescence, but this is rarely the case. The complication is really due to the poison absorbed by the system during the original illness.

Eye troubles are not uncommon after measles, and may be serious if neglected. Ophthalmia and blepharitis—or inflammation of the eyelids—are the most usual forms for this to take. Either of them will need attention as soon as it shows itself if ill effects are to be avoided.

CARE OF THE NAILS.

A little attention paid to the nails and finger tips will not only greatly improve their appearance, but will often save a great deal of discomfort and actual pain. Most people have suffered from "hang-nails"—those painful inflamed fragments of skin at the side of the nail itself—and most of us need not have so suffered if our finger tips had been properly cared for.

The nails and finger tops participate so largely in all our work that they run many risks. The commonest ailment which they suffer is dryness and cracking, a condition in which the nails become dry and brittle, either splitting downwards or breaking into layers at the edges, while the skin round them and over the joints of the fingers cracks and grows sore and inflamed. This condition often accompanies work which entails the plunging of the hands many times a day into hot water, particularly when soda is used with it. People employed in such work must take steps to restore to their skin and nails the natural oil which has been taken from them by the constant soaking, and they should make a habit of applying to the parts involved a little glycerin—when it is obtainable some lanoline or vaseline, frequently throughout the day, and should wear at night a pair of old white gloves with the insides of the fingers well greased with one of the above named dressings.

The nails should always be kept neatly trimmed with a pair of sharp scissors, and all ragged ends of skin round them should be cut away. The cuticle below the nail, which in many people has a tendency to grow up over it, should be pressed back with a finger-nail of the other hand each time of washing. It will be found quite easy to manipulate while wet.

The nails should never be cleaned with anything sharp, such as a knife or scissor blade. This roughens the inner surface of the nail, so that it catches all dust and dirt and soon gets worse than before. The best way of cleaning them is with hot water, soap, and a still nail-brush; the next best is with a smooth-pointed stick of some hard wood.

"The Poor Man's Potato" has become the rich man's luxury. Whether at three dollars a bushel, or twenty-five cents a bushel, potatoes are not a complete food. Two or three Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk furnish more real, body-building nutriment than a meal of potatoes or meat, are much more easily digested and cost much less. Shredded Wheat is 100 per cent. whole wheat, nothing added and nothing taken away—gives mental vim and physical vigor for the hot days. Delicious for breakfast, or any meal, with sliced bananas, berries or other fruits, and milk.
Made in Canada.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentry, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Bradstreet's Trade Review

Toronto. There has been a pronounced improvement in retail trade during the last two weeks, and that there is now a general rush of buying for summer needs. Dry goods lines, especially wash goods, women's and men's ready made clothing, bathing suits, etc., have begun to move out in earnest. There is moderate activity in boots and shoes. While there has been a seasonable quiet in most wholesale lines, current business in representative dry goods houses is reported to be in excess of the volume of trade for the same time last year. Orders for fall requirements are stated to be quite satisfactory, and the confidence of traders in a good autumn trade is evident. In the boot and shoe trade, wholesalers and manufacturers state that while the market is materially easier, there is a greater disposition to sell leather at the market prices. Repeat orders for some lines of summer shoes are already coming in and wholesalers are unable to meet the demand for the popular styles. Country trade is generally good, and payments are declared in most cases to be better than usual.

Montreal.—Higher temperatures has been instrumental in infusing new life into retail trade. Agriculturists are looking forward with expectancy towards a good harvest. While retail trade has been stimulated by warmer weather, there has been a seasonable quiet in wholesale lines. Most of the large houses report gains over last year, and fall orders in dry goods, men's wear, etc., are very satisfactory. Shoe wholesalers find that there is an easier feeling in the trade. The usual movement of summer shoes has been good. The leather market generally is quiet, with a fairly steady tone being maintained. While city hardware lines have been rather quiet the country trade has been well maintained. Grocery trade is moderately active. Collections are being fairly well met in the majority of instances.

Ottawa. Crops in this district are making fairly satisfactory progress. Trade in country districts has been holding up well, with retailers reporting moderately active business in summer dry goods, especially wash goods. Grocery and hardware lines are also reporting a fair business. City trade has quieted somewhat, and although wholesalers are not as active, the prospects of an extensive trade for fall requirements are good.

Hamilton.—There has been a marked stimulus applied to retail business, with seasonable dry goods, light footwear and other summer commodities showing most pronounced improvement. Both city and country trade is influenced by the better weather. In the Niagara fruit district prospects are good for a yield that will at least measure up to average. Shipments of Canadian berries are now coming on the market, but the quantity is not extensive yet. The yield of vegetables promises to reach record proportions. Farmers in this district have already begun cutting clover. Spring crops generally are coming along very well. Wholesale trade is fair for this season of the year, and travelers report very satisfactory orders for autumn delivery.

London.—Western Ontario trade conditions are excellent, due to the splendid growing weather. Mercantile trade is healthy, with seasonable dry goods, hardware, paints, etc., as the most active features. Collections are reported to be fair to good.

Winnipeg.—There has been practically no change in trade conditions during the last two or three weeks. The general view point is one of optimism and this is borne out by the liberal autumn orders which retailers have placed with wholesale houses. The trend of prices is still upward in most staple lines. A fair business is reported in dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes and hardware lines, and payments are quite up to par.

Calgary.—Trade is being well maintained in leading centres throughout the Prairie Provinces. While a spirit of caution with regard to future commitments has been noted, current business is good, and the outlook is interpreted as quite favorable. Commercial obligations are being quite well met.

Vancouver.—General conditions at the coast are favorable. Agricultural conditions are promising. Mercantile business is confident, and collections are quite good.

Quebec.—Seasonable weather during the past week has enlivened trade, latter is reported satisfactory for the season. Wholesalers report favorably, fall orders coming to hand freely; building materials, paints, hardware and lumber are in demand. At country points crop reports are good.

Russia.

Russia did not break into European history until comparatively recent times. Rurik, a Varangian chief, seems to have been the first to establish a government, about 862. Rurik's descendants ruled amid many ups and downs till 1598, at which time the real history of the country may be said to begin. With the solitary exception of the United States of America, the progress of Russia under Peter the Great and Catherine II. is unequalled for rapidity in the history of the world.

Corsets
Hosiery
Underwear
Handkerchiefs

Are a specialty in the Ladies' department. A splendid range in Raw Silk at greatly reduced prices this month, see the window display on Saturday.

Butter and Eggs Wanted

Falconer Bros.

Delayed Shipments
Just Arrived . . .

Now is the time to get goods that have been almost impossible to get. We have just got in delayed shipments, bought last fall at last year's prices.

Cotton, Silk and Real Cashmere Hosiery
From 15c to 60c. To-day's values 25c to $1.00

Gloves in kid, silk and mercerized lisle, and chamoise lisle. Floor coverings, linoleums, and oilclothes. Get them quick, they are going fast. We cant replace them.

Bring your butter and eggs
And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.

Red Cross Report June 6 to July 1st. 1917

Red Cross Tea Room.

June 9, Helpers club 3rd room Public School	$21 00
" 16, Port Elgin Young Ladies'	27.00
" 23, Childrens club S. S. No. 1 Saugeen	23.00
Donations:
Mite Boxes	4.29
Mr. H. McLaren Sr.	10.00
Mrs. Pattison	3 00
Mrs Alex Mitchell	10 00
Mrs. Stevens 4 pr. socks and 1 00	1.00
Boys Recruits Presb. church	2.50
Wilbert Wankel	15
Int. on Deposit	4 07
	$111.16

The Red Cross sent away this week 24 pyjama suits, 12 hospital shirts, 8 flannel shirts, 47 pairs socks. Value 113 60.

Prof. Bangs and Rev. Plumley, who were in this district in connection with the U. B. every member canvass for $100,000 for Huntington College, secured nearly $600 in the local U. B. churches.

Pte. Felix Eggiman, a returned wounded soldier, is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. H. Bolender. On Friday evening the Soldiers' Friend Club tendered Pte. Eggiman a social evening at the summer cottage of Mr. and Mrs. McMurray.

German aeroplanes raided old London Saturday killed 37 persons, wounded 141. The people are demanding reprisals

Lawn Supplies

Taylor-Forbes Lawn mower
Rubber hose
Hose nozzles
Couplings & clamps
Hose reels
Garden shears
Cultivators

Thomson's
Hardware Store

Goes to Press
JULY 20TH

Please report changes required to our Local Office, to-day.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. At any drug store.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.

Port Elgin Fruit Growers

Have you been to see the Fruit Farm
On the hillside, near the Lake
To see the things that's growing on the warm and sunny slope, they take the cake.
They have rows of beans and taties sprouting,
And they'll have to hill them hot or cool
While they hear the children shouting
At the dear old public school.
The cabbage, tomatoes, and roots are all in
With Donald's college hints, the crop cannot fail.
They have some job, and work like sin
Waiting for Reg. with the water pail
Up and down the rows, their voices ringing
Filling crates with ripening berries
They can hear the robins singing
We are waiting for George's cherries
From early morn, if you're around to watch
They yank out the weeds in rain or shine
They move about from patch to patch
Like the bugs on a potato vine.
The tender corn, with its tassel of silk
And pumpkins for pies, isn't it funny
It would bring a sick man to his milk
To see the things for winter, and the Dummy.

School Girl.

Who Got the Appendix

The Walkerton Times says:—Carlton Robinson, a young farmer of Kincardine township, has entered an action in the High Court here, in which he is asking damages from Dr. Ferguson of the town of Kincardine, who performed an operation on him for appendicitis. Shortly after the operation, it is alleged, Robinson's mother was handed what was claimed to be her son's appendix, in a bottle. As the son, it seems, didn't feel, after a considerable length of time, that he had been greatly benefited by the operation, he went to Dr. Groves of Fergus, and the latter, it is alleged, also took an appendix from him. At the examination for discovery at the Court House here on Monday, the two appendices, both of which are claimed to have been taken from the one man, were on exhibition.

Miss Mabel Bowen is home after an operation for appendicitis. She is recovering rapidly.

Feeling the need of a restful nap one afternoon last week Mr. Alex Blue laid down to sleep and when he awoke his wife noticed there was something wrong with him as his speech was affected and he had lost the use of his left side limbs. A doctor was summoned and found that Mr. Blue had suffered a stroke of paralysis. He has since almost wholly recovered and is around again as usual. —Paisley Advocate

At five o'clock on Wednesday evening June 27th, a very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Nelson, 6th Bruce, when their eldest daughter, Mary Jane, became the wife of Mr. David Logan, of Rocanville, Sask. The bride was beautifully dressed in white silk trimmed with pearls and lace, and wore a bridal veil caught with orange blossoms. She carried a boquet of white roses and maidenhair fern. The young couple were unattended. Rev. Mr. MacNabb, of Underwood officiated. After the usual congratulations a wedding dinner was served. The reception in the evening was attended by a large number of neighbors and intimate friends of the bride. A most enjoyable evening was spent in dancing. Many and beautiful were the presents received, the groom's gift to the bride being a beautiful gold wrist watch, to organist a brooch and a brooch to the bride's sister. The young couple intend visiting friends in Toronto, Niagara Falls, London, Thamesville and other points before starting for their home in Rocanville, Sask. The bride's travelling suit was of navy blue with hat to match.

UNDERWOOD NEWS

Get your [illegible]

Save wood and coal, use an oil stove. We have some coal oil stoves which will save the women work, and save money too. Thede & Brill.

Mr. H. Roppel, son of Henry Roppel, Sr., occupied the pulpit for Rev. E. M. Oechsler, in the Evangelical church, 4th Con., on Sunday morning last, and spoke again in the afternoon in connection with their annual "Children's Day" program. Mr Roppel has been attending the Evangelical Theological Seminary, Naperville, Ill., in preparation for the ministry, after having spent the summer vacation in his parental home, he intends going back to the Seminary for another year, which will complete his theological course of study.

The many friends of Mrs. Minnie Schmidt, relict of the late J. C. Schmidt, will learn with deep regret of her passing away. Mrs. Schmidt has been a great sufferer for eight long years from cancer and other trouble. She bore her suffering with great patience and Christian cheerfulness, never complaining. It was in these trying long years she has taught a lesson to her family, friends and neighbors, which will long be remembered. Mrs Schmidt was born in Morristown in 1853 and moved to the 4th. Bruce with her parents 45 years ago. She was married to Mr. J. C. Schmidt about 38 years ago, who predeceased her some six years, and left her with a family of eight children, whom she raised to be honorable men and women, and who are much respected by the entire neighborhood and community in which they reside. Thirteen years ago she moved to the 6th Bruce where she resided up to the time of her death. At the age of twelve years she joined the Evangelical church, of which she was a worthy and true member up till the time she passed away, Friday morning June 22nd, 1917. She leaves to mourn her loss eight children who are as follows: Mrs C Hay, St. Thomas; James, 9th Bruce; George, Moncton N. B.; Wes, of the 160th in England; William, Wilbaux, Washington; Edward, Sandfordone, Sask.; Charles and Tena at home with whom she resided. She also leaves five sisters and three brothers: Mrs. H. Bird, Mrs. J. Haug, Tiverton; Mrs. Will Gress, Mrs. Neil Munro, 2nd of Bruce; Mrs A. Miller, Sheffield, Alta; John, on 8th Bruce; Will, 4th Bruce; George, of Sunkist, Sask. To these much sympathy is extended by the entire community. Her funeral took place on Sunday, June 24th, to the Evangelical cemetery, Con. 4, Bruce.

BRUCE TOWNSHIP COUNCIL

The council met on June 30th with all the members present. After the minutes had been adopted a number of communications were dealt with.

Bruce township's share of the county rate for 1917 is: General rate, $6229, Municipal equivalent, $146.15, prov. war tax $2016.

Applications to have big ditch on con. 4 cleaned out according to award, were received and committee on that division authorized to have this work done.

Complaints having come to council re children not attending school, John Nottal was appointed truant officer for the township on cons. 6 and 12, and W. J. Blair for schools on cons. 1 and 3.

A number of people waited on council for information and assistance under ditches and watercourses act.

Following accounts were paid and council adjourned to meet July 28th.

James Avis, team on grader, five days, $20; J. McLeod, repair bridges 1, 25, $10; B. Zehland, old wire, 1500 lbs, $15 60; J. Dobson, teaming, $4 50, Bert Knapp, shovelling snow and repair culvert, $1.50; Robertson & McNabb, legal advice, $2; S. S. No 9 Red Cross, grant, $50; Glamis Red Cross, $35; Reeve and Councillors allowances amounting to a total of $36; J. Coleman, caretaking, $1.25; J. G. MacKay, clerk, $25 50.

Y. M. C. A. Collections, Bruce Tp

Con. 12 and 13—$5 each—C. Nicholson, Geo. Ribey, Miss Robertson, Miss F. F. Young, Alex McGillivray, Donald Robertson, Alex McLeod, J. W. Howe, Ed. Waring J. A. Howe, Alex McGillivray, (ex-reeve) Mrs D. McGillivray, Miss N. McGillivray, Thos. Foster, Miss Moulton. $3 50—Eli Barnes. $3 each—D. Beaton, Wm. McKittrick, Milton McKittrick, D. A. McGillivray. $2 each—J. Nelson, Wm. Airth, Wm. McCulloch, Thos. McLennan, Geo. Collins, Herb Carr, Josh Howe Mrs Mattheson, Colin McGillivray, Mrs. Hay, John Greaves, John Ribey, J. Cumming Sam Archer Jas. Archer, Peter Waring, D. M. Cameron, Thos Nelson. $1 each—E. Heltzman, Wm. Dobson, Job Carr, Wm. Hodge, Chas. Mann, Jas. Hearn, Jas. Donaldson, Geo. Hammond, Dan. McDougall, Dan McLean, Neil McGillivray, Sandy McGillivray, J. H. McGillivray, Chas Kaake, Mrs. C. McArthur, Geo. Scott, Hector McGillivray, Gottfried Morris, Harvey Neilly, C. W. Kissack, Mac McDonald, John Dunlop, Archie McDougall, Alex McRae, Harry Petrie, Clem Reiber, Irwin McVittie, Bart Nicholson, Louisa Nicholson. 50c—Frank Cottrill 20c—Jos. Cottrill. Total $150.25.

Con 6 and 7—Geo. W. Roppel $3, Robt Mewhinney $2, Allan McKay $2, Wm. Schnittker $1, Chas. Schmidt $1, James Schmidt 50c

J. G. MacKay, Treas. Bruce Tp

Bruce Tp. Board of Health

Underwood, June 30, 1917

Bruce Tp Board of Health met in the Tp. hall on the evening of above date, members all present. Minutes of last meeting read, adopted and signed.

The inspectors appointed to visit and inspect the different schools in the township, also slaughter houses, &c, filed reports showing that all buildings had been inspected, the majority being in fair sanitary condition. In three cases the closets were found in very poor condition. The secretary was instructed to notify the trustee boards in these sections to have new closets built or the old ones put in good shape by Aug. 10th, or else the Board of Health would have to take action and have this done.

After dealing with some routine work the board adjourned to meet on the call of the chairman.

J. G. MacKay, Sec'y.

So Many People

Remark upon the convenience and satisfaction of trading here, that we are extremely anxious for everyone to learn about the big advantage of trading here.

Our constant aim is a better store service with bigger values at lower prices than you pay elsewhere.

It will pay you to learn about these advantages in service, quality and price.

You are always welcome here whether you come simply to look around or to buy something.

F. R. BARBER
MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

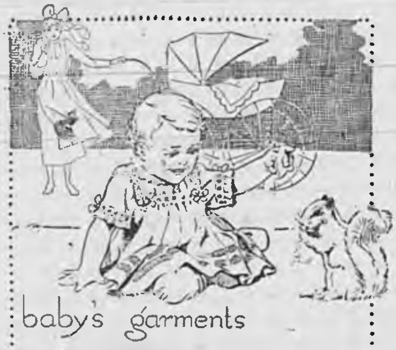
SOME PRETTY PAPERS

WALLPAPER at Pattison's is selling as Cheap as ever. Over 500 lines to choose from. We carry the largest and best stock in Bruce county. Call in and inspect our goods and be convinced. You can save money, by buying wall paper at Pattison's. No trouble to show goods.

All papers trimmed free of charge
Eggs taken in exchange for Wall paper . . .

Electric Vacuum Cleaner For Rent

: : J. W. Pattison : :
Furniture Dealer and Undertaker



baby's garments

will be soft, spotless and snowy white if you use LUX. You can make the foamiest, creamiest lather, in hot water, with a few of these dainty silken little flakes, that cleanses perfectly without rubbing. Hence unshrunken, unthickened little garments that are a delight to feel. Try LUX—your baby will be sure to appreciate the difference.

LUX

WONT SHRINK WOOLLENS

British made, by
Lever Brothers Limited,
Toronto

Sold by all good grocers —take no substitute.

44

Subscribe for The Times and get all the local news.

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 29 | PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 18, 1917 | $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

Near Drowning

One day last week Jim Fleming and Larry Holt were canoeing in the lake, when by some accident the canoe capsized. The two lads were noticed struggling in the water by Reg. Mann and Ian Campbell, who secured a boat at Mr. Stevens' cottage and arrived just in time to rescue the boys, who were exhausted. They were cared for for a few hours at Mr Stevens' cottage, and were none the worse of their experience next day, but the call was a close one.

Advertise it in The Times.

COMING EVENTS

10c. per line
No notice less than 25c

LAWN SOCIAL POSTPONED—Under auspices of Evangelical Ladies Aid, has been postponed to Thursday evening, at same place H. Thede's lawn. All come.

PATRIOTIC GARDEN PARTY—The one you all want to attend, will be held at the home of Mr. John Cook, Saugeen, on Tuesday, July 31st. A good program has been arranged of speech and song, besides, the Indian silver cornet band will be on the grounds. The admission is only 25 and 15c. Help the big cause of patriotism. See bills also.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

FOR SALE—Frame barn, 1×24. Apply Wm. Sparks, Port Elgin.

FOUND—A Raincoat. Owner may have same at Times office

LOST—Or taken in mistake from my buggy at the Evangelical church sheds on Saturday June 30, a lap rug. Please return to Eldon Thede.

FOR SALE—Sow and ten pigs. Will sell separate or together. H. C. Baker, Port Elgin.

WANTED—Girl with good education, for composing room. Apply in own hand writing, to Editor, Times office.

TO RENT—Five roomed cottage, at the lake. Has fireplace, and large airy rooms. Apply R. M. Lowry.

FOR SALE—The Andrew Sutherland property at the South End. Fine brick house, 7 rooms and shed. Good basement, also stable. Possession given immediately. Apply to Geo. S. Webb and James McEwing, executors. 28-tf.

WANTED—We are paying the highest prices for beefring hides. B. Zelkind, Port Elgin.

FOR IMMEDIATE SALE—Good frame house with all the modern conveniences, good fruit bearing trees. A piano also for sale. Apply at The Times office.

Advertise it in The Times.

PHONOGRAPHS!

How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.

Louis Bloch's Music Store
Owen Sound

DENTAL

W. P. POWER, D. D. S., Dentist, office near South End Store. Hours 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

MEDICAL

DR. F. H. WELLS, Office and residence on Green street, one door west of Bank of Hamilton.

W. J. CHAMBERS, M. D., L. R. C. P., L. M., Edinburgh. Office and residence "Lakeview Hall" opposite South East park Port Elgin.

DR. W. S. LAIRD, Occulist, Specialty on Nose and Throat diseases. Guarantees all his fitting of glasses. Office hours Wednesday afternoons. Next to Metropolitan Bank

LEGAL

W. BURGESS LL.B., Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public, &c., &c. Office, Hutton Block. Private and other funds to loan.

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. 429 G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communications in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at 8 p. m. Visiting brethern cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Geo. Smith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE, No. 170, I.O.O.F., of Ontario, meets at 8 o'clock p.m., every Monday in their hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N.G.; T. Rankin, Rec.-Sec.; D. Geddes, Perm Sec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer of marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office in Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin.

UNDERTAKING

J. W. PATTISON, Funeral director and embalmer. Residence on premises. Rural phone No. 22.

The Times, as good as a letter from home. Send it to your friends.

First Time in 74 Years

Dr. Robert McClure missed walking in a 12th of July parade for the first time in 74 years on Thursday. The weather was so wet that all the celebrations were knocked out, but that did not matter to Robert McClure, who donned his regalia and came down street anyway. He is now in his 89th. year and hale and hearty.

Dr McClure remembers that on July 12th, 1843, in Derrygoudy, Ireland, the catholics ordered the orangemen not to parade, but the young fellows about 200 in number had their parade, Mr. McClure having the drum strapped to his back while two other sturdy youths walked on either side beating the drum with all their might.

St. Andrew's Sunday School

A lively and well-conducted Sunday school is that in connection with St. Andrew's church, Saugeen. This school does not operate the year round but it does have an energetic corps of teachers and officers, who work hard during the spring, summer and fall months.

But it takes more than good managers to have a progressive and interesting Sunday school — it takes interested scholars, as well, and St Andrew's has a bright lot of boys and girls who think nothing of walking quite a distance, attending their school session, and what is still further to their credit, of attending the church service afterward. Mr. Archie Bell is the superintendent, and he is fortunate in having splendid co-workers. He teaches the young people's Bible class as well, and on the Sunday in question there were about twenty in the class. It was noted that the members were not backward in taking part in the discussion on the lesson, and also that they had their lesson studied before they came.

Another encouraging feature of this school, is that it has a choir of about 20 girls. Under the leadership of the organist, Miss Cairns, they lead in the song. Perhaps the boys might take a turn some Sunday, and want to sing in the choir, too. If they do, no doubt Miss Cairns will find room for them. But it's a good thing to get the boys and girls interested in the service of song. No better way to make the session brighter than with good rousing Sunday School hymns, and the scholars singing heartily.

The school observes Mother's Day, Rally Day, and also has a big picnic. There are seventy on the roll, with an average attendance of 60. The teaching staff is pretty evenly divided, four gentlemen and four ladies working with the classes. There was splendid order, and much interest in the lesson taught by all the class members. The officers and teachers are: Supt., A. Bell, secretary-treasurer, D. P. Cairns, teachers, J. B. Muir, Lewis Eby, Peter A. McKinnon, A. Bell, Mrs. J. B. Muir, Miss Annie Cairns, May McKinnon.

SOUTHAMPTON

A memorial service was held in the Baptist church last Sunday evening for Gunner Orland Knechtel, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Knechtel, who was killed in action in France on June 24th. Orland enlisted with the 43rd Battery, Guelph in January 1916 and had been in France since June of the same year.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Oppertshauser of Hanover, spent Sunday in town.

Mrs. Rutherford received word on Sunday that her son Pte. Harold Marshall had been wounded in France.

Gordon Bechtel and Wilfred Howk of the Royal Flying Corps, Camp Borden, spent the week-end at their homes here.

The Advance of the Tanks

The second official British War Picture showing the Canadian army in action at the Battle of Courcelette, France. There will be a six reel feature "The Squaw Man," with Dustin Farnham, one of the best actors of the present day. To wind up the program there will be a jungle comedy, "From Jungleville to Monkeyville." These pictures never shown before at this price. At the town hall Port Elgin, Saturday, July 21st, at 8 p. m. sharp. A three hours performance for 25 cents.

Running Shoe . . . . Reduction Sale

Is now going on. Special reductions on our entire stock. Drop in and get fitted out for the holidays

Falconer Brothers

Strawberries!

Finest homegrown strawberries now on sale.

Order your crate now

Falconer Bros.

Entrance Examinations

There were 34 pupils writing at Port Elgin centre, 26 of them passing. Port Elgin Public school had 16 up for writing, 11 of them being successful.

The three highest honor candidates in order of merit in West Bruce inspectorate were:

Louise Garbutt, Lucknow; Miss Sheriff, teacher.

Rhoda Knechtel, Southampton, J. C. Hawley, teacher.

Rosalind Reid, Lucknow, Miss Sheriff, teacher.

PORT ELGIN

Pass (alphabetically)—McKenzie Bell, Florence Bell, Marguerite Bell, Helen Christie, Norah Chambers, Lyla Chle, Margery Dunlop, Ellen George, Alex. Geddes, Reuben Gingrich, Celestia Holtzman, Ella Kaake, Maggie Kaake, J. D. Lyness, Pearl Mass, Hazel Moore, Wilmer Ribey, Mina Riebel, Margaret Rushton, May Schrank, Minnie Steffert, Harry Stephenson, Gordon Thede, Edna Thornburn, Henry Vogt.

TIVERTON

Orvan Eaton, Roy Giesz, Mary Kinmond, Florence McKay, Christena McKay, Maurice McKenzie, Howard Merritt, Wesley Nelson.

Honours—Jessie M. McLean.

SOUTHAMPTON

Honours in order of merit—Rhoda Knechtel, Frank Raymont.

Pass (alphabetically)—Jack Bell, Harold Charles Conway, Wilma Fraser, Marie Gorham, Robert James Gray, Elizabeth Hilmer, Oswald McKenzie, Lyle McLaren, Norman McKee, Jack Montgomery, Lillian Montgomery, Isabel Stout, Beatrice Trafelet, Florence Tranter, Stewart Van Wyck.

PAISLEY

Honours in order of merit—Alma Fraser, Hazel Bird, Albert Stanley, Harold Fraser, Malcolm McKinnon.

Pass—Norman Alexander, Leslie Bain, Laurella Cumming, Mary Doolan, Robert Fullerton, Fatewell Fletcher, George Grant, Grella Gregg, Nelson Howe, Marguerite Hopper, Jessie Houston, Burton Keyes, Pearl Kirktown, John McGillivray, Grant McArthur, Edna McGraw, Clarence McLennan, Bessie Nelson, Stanley Purdy, Velma Pfaff, Ethel Reid, Robert Scott, Alice Watson, Rena Wakeford.

CARD OF THANKS

Corporal J. Clarie desires through The Times to thank the Red Cross ladies of S. S. No. 3 for a fine pair of socks received by him on June 9.

Pte. Robert White, thanks S. S. No. 5 Saugeen, for two pair socks, maple sugar and candy sent to him in France.

Morris Chappel and family desire through The Times to express their thanks for many kindnesses and sympathy shown them in their sad bereavement.

H. Katz was in Toronto last week.

Hogs $15, butter 32, eggs 24.

Mrs. Lorne Shier and daughter are guests of Mrs. Darling.

Miss Brocker, of Toronto is visiting Mrs. Curtis.

Mrs. Mould, of Toronto, is visiting Mrs. Davey.

Mr. Sol Kieber of Kitchener, is visiting here.

Mrs. J. H. Thresher and Mrs. Tyson are guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Eaton.

Rev. Alfred McFarlane of Bayfield, visited H. D. McLaren this week.

Mr. John Geddes of Owen Sound, visited D. Geddes here Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rammell, of Hamilton is visiting Mrs. Witting.

Mr. and Mrs. Burgess, of Cabri, Sask., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. H. Moulton.

Miss Ireland, of Owen Sound, is visiting Mr. J. J. Watson.

Dr. Victoria Moore of Chicago, and the Misses Barnes of Indiana are guests at Mr. Hugh McLaren's.

Miss Elsie Lovell, daughter of Mr. Wm. Lovell, of Saugeen, has been engaged to teach in S. S. No. 2 Arran and Saugeen.

Miss Berta Moulton is attending summer school at Toronto, while Miss Carr is taking course at MacDonald Institute, Guelph.

Mrs. J. J. George underwent an operation in the Kitchener hospital on Friday. Latest reports from the hospital are that she is recovering nicely.

Mr. D. Park attended the funeral of his mother, who died on Friday at her home in Elderslie Township. Deceased was in her 78th year.

Mr. William Clark and family, Owen Sound; Mrs. John Finnie, Mr. Ballantyne and Mr. B. Finnie, of St. Marys, attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Chappel.

At the memorial service held at Queen Hill church on Sunday Mrs (Rev.) Douglas McCulloch gave a delightful rendition of the solo, "He Knows."

Mr. and Mrs. Roedding and Mr. and Mrs. V. Damm, of Ayton, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Chappel.

Mr. J. D. Struthers has nine acres of sweet clover, the field averaging five feet in height. Some stalks measured seven feet.

Do your ordering of meats early in the morning. The best service given then. Our shop may be closed a few afternoons to give me opportunity to go into the country buying. Then order early. Our stock is excellent. Try us, L. Hamilton Butcher.

91 Years Young

Ninety-one years young applies very well to one of our esteemed townsmen, Mr. Peter Wilkie, who celebrated his 91st birthday on Thursday last, when a number of his friends gathered to give him a little surprise.

Mr. Wilkie is a sturdy Scotsman, who farmed for some time in Bruce township but who lives in Port Elgin now. Mr. Wilkie is a great gardener, and may be seen working in his garden any day. He has wonderful strength for his advanced age, and reads easily without the aid of glasses.

Many friends in this community hope for many more years of good health for Mr. Wilkie, and extend congratulations.

TOWN TOPICS

Miss Annie Wismer left Tuesday for Toronto.

Mr. J. B. Cottrill has purchased an Overland.

Mr. Fred Brook, of Simcoe, was a guest of Mr. F. R. Barber last week.

Miss Pearl Clarie is spending the holidays at the parental home.

Mrs. A. F. George is home from Guelph hospital, and is convalescing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Hawes, of Tottenham, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fenton.

Miss Mildred Bell of Walkerton, was a guest of Miss Nellie Avis last week.

The school board has engaged Miss Ethel Barnett, of Paisley to teach in Miss Gilbert's stead, who resigned.

Mrs. Kalbfleisch and Mrs. Labengayer have returned to Detroit after a pleasant visit with friends here.

Mrs John McKinnon and Mrs Jas. McGillivray of Paisley visited at Robt. Chalmers' this week.

Mrs. Johnston Winch is home from Toronto, where she went for treatment. She is improving, but slowly.

Mr. C. E. Moore, of Chicago, en route to New York, has been spending a few days with his aunt, Mrs. Morton.

Mrs. R. Chalmers and son James of Midland, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. George McMurray.

Clarence Nelson, Victor Schrank and W. Fenton went to Sauble Falls, last week for a holiday.

The Misses Power and Miss Branders of Elora, also Miss Wilson of Fergus, are guests of Miss Izzard and Miss Mulveney.

Miss Beatrice Richardson, has returned to her home in Toronto, after holidaying with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Snyder, of Toronto, motored home after spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Barber. Margaret Barber accompanied them for a holiday.

At the court of revision recently held the income assessment of Principal Aylesworth and Mrs. Hessenauer, were confirmed, so also was the assessment of W. Baker, on property.

Messrs. W. Baines and Hawes, of Indiana, have been spending a few days at Mr. Hugh McLaren's. They made the long journey in their big twin-six Packard. On Thursday they, accompanied by Messrs. G. McLaren, F. Bowen and D. Cavin, went to Tobermory for a few days fishing.

Those who attended the annual meeting of the Women's Institute at Port Elgin Saturday were: Mrs. D. Wilson and Mrs. Jas. McKellar, Tiverton, Mrs. John Campbell, 10th, of Kincardine; Mrs Angus McLeod and Mrs. John McKinnon and daughter, Boundary East.—Tiverton Watchman.

A freight train off the track below Paisley, cut out the 9.20 train from here on Thursday, and also the 12.20, the latter turning around at the wreck and proceeding southward. When the track was repaired the freight came through about 5 o'clock with the noon mail. The damage done was to a couple of coal cars and the track.

The Globe had an item last week of a steaming tank at the Davisville Military hospital exploding. It also noted that Nurse Miss S. B. MacCallum was dangerously near the explosion. Word received from Nurse MacCallum by her parents here, show that the affair was only a small matter, and that no harm was done.

In the Highway Travel Act as amended at the recent session a new rule is made with regard to the right of way at cross roads. This rule applies to all vehicles whether horse drawn or motor driven. Where vehicles meet at cross roads or at cross streets the driver must give the vehicle coming towards his right the right of way.

Mr. J. J. Busby has rented the brick house formerly the McVicar property and will use it as a summer home. The building is being repaired and renovated by the proprietors, the Stevens Hepner Co. The Company has been busy dismantling the mill, and will erect a couple of brick cottages at this point along the lake.

Dr. Margaret McKellar a Presbyterian medical missionary in India and a former North Bruce resident, has been granted permission by the Mission Board to enter the service of the British War Office. Dr. McKellar is the first woman doctor in Canadian Presbyterian Church to be called for this work, although, of course, several of their nurses volunteered several months ago. Dr. McKellar is a graduate of Queen's University, and has been engaged in missionary work in India for twenty-seven years past.

Orange Picnic Big Success

Underwood Orange lodge had a very successful picnic on Saturday at McColl's grove, at the foot of the 16th. of Bruce. Of course the 12th was the day set for this affair, but the weather was wet, and the members and their friends were bound to have their day, and so Saturday was just glorious for the occasion. There were 200 or more present, and they came from the surrounding concessions in the morning, had dinner and supper together and enjoyed themselves immensely.

The picnic grounds were quite dry, and as the men had come early in the morning and erected a booth for the provisions, swings, seats, and cleared up a place for baseball and foot races, the program was well carried out.

Mr. R. Vennard with the drum and Mr. Snowdon with the flute, kept up Boyne airs, while Mr. Charles McDonald with the pipes kept things lively. Mr. Gregg had his gramaphone on the grounds also.

A booth on the grounds provided refreshments. This was in charge of Messrs. J. Stephenson, Ben Vennard and Art Christman, and they were busy supplying the ice cream, etc., for there were plenty of boys and girls who wanted many things, as well as the older ones.

Shortly after dinner a baseball game was played between chosen teams, and the way fellows like Wm. Howe, G. McIntee and Tom. Nelson swung at the spheroid and beat it to the bases, showed that they were not old by any means. Julius Koch was the umpire in this eventful game, and the pitchers had to put them over, otherwise the sharp eye of Julius gave the batter a base.

After the game the crowd assembled around the platform erected, and a short program of speeches was heard, after which races for all were enjoyed.

Mr. Charles Green, the county master, was present, and made a rousing speech, in which he set forth the aims of the order, and dwelt upon the great part the members of the lodge were playing in the war. Mr. John Nottal, in a neat address, urged every young man who could be spared, even to the country, to shoulder the gun, and pointed out that everyone could do something at home to help the Empire at this time. He also asked that every man and woman demand good government, whatever party was in power, and urged all to seriously consider before casting votes.

Mr. Hector McDonald, who said he was an Irish Orangeman for the day, told two very witty stories which created hearty applause, while Mr. Wm Howe and Mr. E. R. Sayles spoke briefly.

Mr. Peter Dobson made a very jovial chairman, and in his address said it was the most successful picnic the lodge had had.

The ladies did their part well in providing hearty meals for the whole gathering, and assisted greatly in making the picnic the success it was.

On Sunday the Orangemen attended church at Wesley Methodist at North Bruce, where Rev. Mr. Hawke preached an admirable sermon. The service was largely attended.

Autoists Watch Out

The Times has it from a reliable source that the town council will enforce the automobile regulations on our streets without further warning. Therefore, if you have been breaking the law, you may get a summons.

Keep to the right side of the street, park your car only on the right side, and turn properly at the corners. After all it is only common decency to do these things. This is a fair warning.

Patriotic money will be paid to Port Elgin families on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. at The Times Office.

An endeavor is being made to have a union picnic of all the town Sunday schools a week from Thursday.

Miss McMillan, of Paisley and Mr. and Mrs. Garbutt, Vancouver, are guests at Mr. John Coulter's.

Mrs. J. J. MacKay, Mrs. Baines, Mrs. Symons and Mr. and Mrs. Miller of Wiarton were guests of Mrs. Pattison Tuesday.

Gunner Alex Mann of the 70th Battery was last week given a promotion to lance-corporal. Alex, however, asked permission of his officer to decline the honor and remain in private rank. This was granted and the Gunner's wish was announced to the battery.

I. Hamilton will give a cut of from two to four cents on all boiling meat. Prices are likely to be lower and when a drop comes the reduction will be made. We favor the consumer. Try our butcher shop for meats. We will continue to keep all during the summer all good things in meat, at lower prices than usual. Try us. Prompt attention to all orders. Anyone having good butcher heifers for sale, notify us. I. Hamilton, butcher. We want only the best of cattle.

Races

Teeswater Races August 6th. Purses $600. See large posters.

Special Envelopes for Soldiers

The Times has printed for use of those corresponding with soldiers in England or at the front addressed envelopes making it very easy to send letters. These sell at 10 cents a parcel. Get a package and insure your letters reaching the boys.

The Late Mrs. MacRae

After an illness extending over several months Mrs William MacRae passed peacefully away at her home here Tuesday evening July 10th.

The late Mrs. MacRae, whose maiden name was Isabella MacRitue, was born on Con. 12 Bruce, where she resided until her marriage about thirty years ago, when she went to live on concession 2 Saugeen. There she lived until April, 1917, when the family moved to Port Elgin. She was a well known and highly respected lady and many will regret her taking away. In a quiet and unassuming way she filled her place in the community in which she lived, and was esteemed for her kindliness.

Besides a sorrowing husband she leaves to mourn her loss, two sisters, Mrs. A. Cameron, Ceylon Sask., and Mrs. T. Kelly, Saugeen, three daughters, Misses Catherine, Margaret, and Mary, and two sons Bob and Fraser. All will have the sympathy of many friends in their bereavement.

Death of Mrs. Chappel

The sincerest regret is felt by all classes at the sudden taking off Mrs. Morris Chappel on Wednesday, July 11th, after a very brief illness of pneumonia. For a few years Mrs Chappel had not been of robust health, but her death was very sudden, and a shock to her family and friends. Her maiden name was Isabella Finnie, and she was married to Mr. Chappell about 15 years ago. To them were born two sons, who will have the deepest sympathy in their great loss of mother; as will also the sorrowing husband, in the loss of a loving and dutiful wife. The late Mrs. Chappell was a member of Burgoyne Presbyterian church and a consistent christian woman. The funeral on Friday was one of the largest ever in this section. Services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Mann, interment being made in Port Elgin cemetery.

The results of the entrance exams, show close marking has been made, and that as a result quite a few of the boys and girls failed. The papers were fairly hard. In the report as printed, we are informed that a few of the teachers sending pupils for writing secured 100 per cent of passes. Miss Bertha Moulton sent four up, all passing, as did also Miss Robertson of No. 12 Bruce and Miss Wallace's school near Burgoyne.

BORN

McCANNEL—In Walkerton, July 6th, to Mr. and Mrs. Alex McCannel, a son.

Printing at Reasonable Prices

The Times has unexcelled equipment for producing fine printed matter of all kinds. Business Stationery and Office Forms, Advertising Booklets, Circulars, bills tickets, envelopes, etc. Prices are always reasonable.

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for 500 lines or over in a year 3c a line; regular weekly users of liners, 5c per line; casual users of liners, 10c per line. Black type, count two lines for one.

McMurray's for pure ice cream.

Oats for sale. North End Store.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

Fleet Foot shoes at F. R. Barber's.

Neckties, 50c lines for 35c at Barber's.

Big reductions in a sale now at Barber's.

White tennis trousers, $1.75 a pair at North End.

Fresh oranges, and lemons always on hand. North End Store.

Straw hats at below cost at Barber's reduction sale.

If you want a pint of good cream try McMurray's.

Another shipment of feed wheat. North End Store.

It's a great chance to get a raincoat at a slashed price at Barber's.

McMurray keeps good milk for sale.

Cottonade, 36 inches wide, 35c per yard at North End.

Boys wool and cotton Jersies at South End.

Men's work shirts, $1 lines for 79c at Barber's.

Dyola Dyes in Black, Navy and all scarce colors, now in stock. South End.

A good time to look round for a suit. Try Barber's.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

Fleet Foot tennis shoes, all sizes, white, tan, navy. North End store.

Men's Balbriggan and Merino underwear at the South End.

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koehler's.

Try Koehler for your next grocery or fruit order.

Williams shoes, solid leather goods at lower prices, at South End.

Koehler sells Neilson's soldier chocolate. Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front.

Just arrived, a splendid assortment of Misses and children's wash dresses. Prices 50c to $1.75 each. North End Store.

Red Cross supplies. Special prices in grey Scotch fingering yarn. South End.

Baby's Itching Burning Skin Quickly Soothed by Cuticura Ointment.

It's wonderful how quickly a hot bath with Cuticura Soap followed by a gentle anointing with Cuticura Ointment relieves itching, burning eczemas, rashes and chafings, permits sleep for infant and rest for mother, and points to speedy healment in most cases when it seems nothing would do any good. This is only one of the many things Cuticura does for the skin when used for every day toilet purposes.

Sample Each Free by Mail. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. N, Boston, U. S. A." Sold throughout the world.

Frauds of Olden Days.

An amusing sidelight on the manner in which fraudulent vendors of the people's necessities were punished in the good old days is to be found in Maitland's "History of London." During the reign of King Edward I. drastic laws were framed against "Engrossers, Forestallers, and all sorts of Frauds and Impositions in the sale of provisions, especially against Bakers, who had got into a way of making bread under the standard weight, and against Millers who dealed in bad measure."

For a first offense the baker had his light bread confiscated, a second offense was punished by imprisonment, while for a third he was pilloried. For the "thievish miller" a sterner punishment was meted out. He was put on a tumbril, i.e., carried in a dung cart through certain streets exposed to the derision of the people.

The Engrossers were the gentlemen who attempted to make a corner in commodities, and against these profiteers the king advised his subjects of London "to devise proper laws for regulating the prices of poultry and fish, which sort of provisions had been engrossed by a few rapacious Hucksters." Accordingly it was ordained by the magistrate of the city "that no huckster of fowl or poulterer go out of the city to make any buying from them, but buy in the city, after the buyers of the Lord the King, of the Barons, and the citizens have bought and had that which shall be needful for them, namely, after three o'clock and not before." And then came a list of the standard prices at which they must buy.—London Chronicle.

Minard's Liniment for sale everywhere.

ENERGY OF THE SUN.

Far Reaching Effects If It Could Be Utilized.

Scientists have believed for some time that the sun has an important part in determining weather conditions, but just what its influence is and how this influence is exerted are more or less mysterious. In order to learn if possible what connection exists between the sun and rains, winds, high and low pressure areas and other weather phenomena, U. S. government has established three stations where the sun's power and heat are carefully observed and recorded. One of these stations is at Washington, D. C., one at Madison, Wis., and the third at Lincoln, Neb.

Observations made at these stations prove that a violent volcanic eruption serves to reduce the heating power of the sun, that the clouds of volcanic dust which is thrown into the air and extends part or all the way around the globe, though it may be invisible, acts as a blanket to prevent some of the solar heat from reaching the earth. It has also been shown that for a given place there is considerable variation in the amount of heat from the sun in the course of a day. For example, more heat is received in one hour when the sun is near the meridian than is received in several hours at an earlier or later period in the day.

It has long been recognized that the sun is the source of enormous energy which if properly harnessed would be sufficient to furnish about all the heat, light and power needed by man. A pyrheliometer—an instrument for recording the sun's heat—in one of the government's solar observatories has shown that on a hot day heat energy equivalent to one horsepower was received on a single yard of the earth's surface. From this it is evident that enormous amounts of energy are constantly going to waste.

The problem of devising a solar engine has been given much thought and attention by inventors, and while they have succeeded in producing apparatus capable of developing some useful power nothing of the kind has ever been produced which will economically and efficiently transform solar energy so that it can be used satisfactorily.

A number of difficult problems are involved. Among these are: That of providing some relatively inexpensive means by which the sun's rays may be concentrated on a large scale; an economical, efficient means for storing up energy day by day for use at night and on days when the sun is hidden by the clouds; also for storing energy during seasons of the year when the sun's heat is greatest for use in seasons when it is at its lowest ebb, yet when the demand is likely to be greatest.

The growing scarcity of fuel, together with the increasing demand for power for industrial purposes, for heat, light, etc., now furnish a powerful incentive for developing other sources of energy. The winds which owe their existence primarily to the sun have been utilized to some extent for years. Waterfalls which are also products of the sun's heat have long been used, and they are now being harnessed more and more extensively. It may be that some inventive genius will shortly find a way whereby solar energy may be utilized effectively in its original form at relatively small cost. Needless to say, such a discovery would have very far-reaching effects on industrial and economic conditions the world over.—Pathfinder.

Beads.

They cannot err.

Or rather they do not.

They may be in many colors

Or they may be in only one.

White beads figure on a green muslin.

Blue beads adorn a simple affair in white.

These beads look like those used in Indian work.

There must be only just enough of this sort of trimming.

SAVE THE CHILDREN

Mothers who keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house may feel that the lives of their little ones are reasonably safe during the hot weather. Stomach troubles, cholera infantum and diarrhoea carry-off thousands of little ones every summer, in most cases because the mother does not have a safe medicine at hand to give promptly. Baby's Own Tablets cure these troubles, or if given occasionally to the well child will prevent their coming on. The Tablets are guaranteed by a government analyst to be absolutely harmless even to the newborn babe. They are especially good in summer because they regulate the bowels and keep the stomach sweet and pure. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TRADE BRIEFS.

Recent earthquake damage in San Salvador should increase the opportunities for the introduction of reinforced concrete construction in that district.

Steel wares should find a ready market in the Riga district, Russia, as the four factories engaged in the manufacture of steel products there were dismantled and moved to the interior at the beginning of the war. Correspondence should be in Russian.

Motorcycles and bicycles are becoming popular throughout Siam. There is an opportunity for the sale of supply parts and accessories.

Chrome resistance wire is needed by a firm at Genoa, Italy.

Argentina offers a good field for the sale of chewing gum.

Inquiries have been received from San Paulo, Brazil, about sectional office partitions and metal furniture.

A firm at Shanghai, China, is in the market for split wood pulleys.

Motor boats forty feet long and drawing three and a half feet of water, are wanted at Montevideo, Uruguay.

Catalogues and prices of steam disinfectors are requested by a dealer in Argentina.

A firm in Manila, Philippine Islands, is in the market for ginghams, chambrays, nainsooks, [illegible] and cambrics.

Men's athletic underwear is wanted in Cuba.

Due to the scarcity of broom corn, State Senator J. H. Domengeaux of Louisiana has experimented successfully with palmetto leaves as a satisfactory substitute. Experiments will also be made with palmetto roots in the making of pulp and paper. The supply of palmetto is inexhaustible.

A continuous burning lime kiln of a twenty ton daily capacity is needed by a firm at Tampico, Mexico.

Shoes, furniture and rice are in demand at Tunis, Africa.

Soap manufacturers are wanted at Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia

CANDIA OF CRETE.

Important Port That Was Founded by Saracen Pirates.

"The prosperity and importance of the Cretan port of Candia was so preponderant during the occupancy of the Mediterranean island by the Venetians that the whole province assumed the name of the city and even to-day most charts and maps label the land 'Crete or Candia,'" says a war geography bulletin of the United States National Geographic Society describing the former capital of Greece's largest insular possession.

"To-day Candia, near the centre of the northern shore of the island, is second in importance to the new capital, Canea, near the western extremity. The larger city enjoys the advantage of proximity to Suda Bay, the only deep water harbor of the island, but in historical and legendary associations Candia ranks with Rome, Athens, Babylon, Nineveh, Memphis, Tyre and Sidon, owing to the adjacent ruins of the great Minoan capital of Knossos (Cnossus), where evidences of an astonishing civilization, existing nearly 3,000 years before the Christian era, have been unearthed, as described in a recent National Geographic Society bulletin.

"The present city was founded by Saracen pirates who wrested the island from the Byzantine emperors early in the ninth century. They named the new town Khandax, from which Candia is derived. On many maps the town is called Megalokastron (Great Fortress).

"One of the striking features of Candia is the number of religious edifices of which it boasts. With less than 25,000 inhabitants it has numerous synagogues, Greek churches, a cathedral and fourteen mosques. The metropolitan of Crete resides here. One of the institutions of which the city is justly proud is the museum containing priceless antiquities taken from the ruins of Knossos, Phaestus and other vanished Cretan strongholds.

"The fortifications which surround Candia were begun by the Genoese in the twelfth century and greatly strengthened by the Venetians during four succeeding centuries, but walls of stone were unable to resist the prolonged siege which the Turks conducted in the seventeenth century, even though the defence of the city by the renowned Venetian admiral Francisco Morosini furnishes one of the most stirring pages in the history of Crete. This great captain, one of the most distinguished of his age, was a member of a noble family which furnished many doges to the powerful republic. For eighteen months he and his followers performed prodigies of valor in an effort to drive off a vastly superior investing force of Turks under the vizier Ahmed Kuprili, but after sustaining 30,000 casualties, killed and wounded, Morosini capitulated in order to save the surviving inhabitants. For this surrender he was court-martialled but was very properly exonerated of all blame and lived to redeem the prestige of Venice abroad by conquering Athens and all Peloponnesus. In recognition of which he was jubilantly acclaimed by the Italian populace and received the title of 'Peloponnesiaco.'

"Turkish rule over Crete was not an unmitigated misfortune. In fact, during the second quarter of the nineteenth century a wise and just Albanian pasha, Mustafa, one of the most brilliant statesmen of his time, gave the island its 'golden age.' He encouraged agriculture, improved the roads, introduced an Albanian police force and succeeded in stamping out one of the curses of the country—brigandage. During his regime the harbor of Candia, which had become choked with silt, was deepened so that it could accommodate vessels of light draft, such as frequented it during the heyday of Venetian supremacy.

"Candia exports quantities of olive-oil soap manufactured in the vicinity, and also has a moderately flourishing trade in dried raisins, wine, almonds and silk cocoons.

"One of the relics of Venetian occupation is an aqueduct, built in 1627, which has withstood the ravages of time so successfully that it still supplies the city with much of its water.

"One of the gruesome sights which formerly aroused the keen pity of tourists was a colony of lepers, perhaps seventy families, which clustered in diseased squalor about St. George's gate. They have been removed recently to Spinalonga, on the Bay of Mirabella."

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

STEEL DISCOVERY.

Two Norwegians Patent Method of Smelting Poor Iron Ore.

According to the London Times two young Norwegian engineers have made an important discovery within the realm of steel smelting, which will probably have far-reaching results. The discovery has been patented and consists of a new method of smelting poor iron ore by electric energy into first-class steel at a very low cost and with less fuel.

The smelting will be done by assistance of coal oxide gas and water gas, and the new important factor of the discovery is that the coal gas by passing through a flame oven is reduced to coal oxide, which can be utilized again.

The well-known metallic expert, Dr. Gmendal, welcomes the new process, and has put his different metallic patents at the disposal of the young engineers. Practical people are sanguine of the success of the new smelting process, which will specially suit a country like Norway with only poor iron ore deposits, but plenty of cheap water power at disposal.

The Norwegian mining trade journal, Bergverkflyt, referring to this new discovery, says: "We welcome this discovery with sincere pleasure, and hope it will make our naturally poor country rich and mighty."

KEEP YOUR SHOES NEAT

2 IN 1 WHITE SHOE DRESSING

White Cake 10c. White Liquid 10c.

for MEN'S WOMEN'S and CHILDREN'S SHOES

F.F. DALLEY CO. OF CANADA LTD. HAMILTON, CAN.

You can keep the fine natural color in Raspberry Preserves

IF YOU MAKE THEM WITH

Lantic Sugar

"Pure and Uncolored"

Long cooking fades raspberries. You can avoid this by using LANTIC SUGAR which dissolves instantly on account of its "FINE" granulation. LANTIC is the best sugar to use for all preserving on account of its purity and high sweetening power. LANTIC is a pure cane sugar equally good for the table, for general cooking and for preserving.

10, 20 and 100-lb. sacks; 2 and 5-lb. cartons.

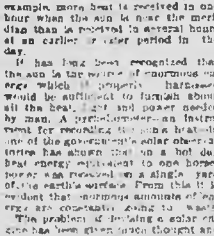
ORDER FROM YOUR GROCER BY NAME IN THESE FULL WEIGHT ORIGINAL PACKAGES

PRESERVING LABELS FREE—Send us a red ball trade-mark cut from a bag or carton and we will send you a book of 54 ready gummed printed labels.

Atlantic Sugar Refineries, Limited

Power Building, Montreal

147



DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES

CURES RHEUMATISM BRIGHT'S DISEASE BACKACHE DIABETES

NUMBER 23 THE PROPRIETORS

An Unconscious Linguist.

Men have travelled safely, if not always placidly, throughout Europe with no other language than English at their command, but few have been so lucky as a correspondent of a New York paper, whose English was actually taken for French by the French themselves.

While he spoke no language other than English, this gentleman had never had any trouble in traveling in Europe. In the only instance when he greatly longed to be able to speak another language he was helped out of a predicament in a most unexpected way. At a railway station in Paris he could not make the porters understand that he wanted his baggage. Finally he exclaimed:

One of the porters replied "Oui, ban-gazh, oui, oui, ban-gazh," and he soon produced the American's trunk. That was the first time he knew that the French have the word "baggage" and learned how they pronounce it.

Laundry Hints.

Soak ink stains in sour milk. If a dark stain remains, rinse in a weak solution of chloride of lime.

Saturate grass stains thoroughly with kerosene, then put in the wash-tub.

Wash iodine stains with alcohol, then rinse in soapy water.

Soak iron rust stains thoroughly with lemon juice, sprinkle with salt and leave for several hours in the sun.

Hot water and soap generally remove grease spots. Soften wheel grease or tar stains with lard and soak in turpentine. Scrape off all the loose surface dirt with a knife, sponge clean with turpentine and rub gently until dry.

Soak mildew in a weak solution of chloride of lime for several hours. Rinse in cold water.

Rub sewing machine oil stains with lard, let stand for several hours and wash with cold water and soap.

To remove scorch stains wet the scorch place with soap and bleach in the sun.

Wash chocolate and cocoa with soap in tepid water.

To remove fruit stains, stretch the fabric over the mouth of a basin and pour boiling water on the stain.

We believe MINARD'S LINIMENT is the best:

Mathias Foley, Oil City, Ont.

Joseph Snow, Norway, Me.

Charles Whooten, Mulgrave, N. S.

Rev. R. O. Armstrong, Mulgrave, N. S.

Pierre Landers, sen., Pokemouche, N. B.

MAJOR-GEN. SIBERT.

Man Commanding First U. S. Camp in France.

With the first news of the American regulars' arrival in France came the brief announcement that the commander at the camp of the military vanguard was Major General William L. Sibert.

When Major-General John J. Pershing was a "yearling" at West Point, one of the honor men of the first class of that year, 1884, was Sibert, of Alabama. Since those days Pershing and Sibert have remained close friends. So it was no surprise to those who know the two famous soldiers that Sibert, the builder of the Gatun dam, the engineer who solved the flood problem of East China, and the officer who put the Manila railways on the map, was in France with Pershing, and that to him had been allotted the task of camping the American army.

Until then no one outside of the inner circles of the war department knew that Major-General Sibert had crossed the Atlantic. That he is the man for the job not an officer in the army doubts.

He was born in the little city of Gadsden, Ala., October 12, 1860, which means that he still has more than seven years of active service ahead of him before he reaches the age limit set for our army officers by Congress.

In 1892, eight years after his graduation from West Point, the army records show that Sibert, then a first lieutenant of engineers, was one of the executive engineers in charge of the great Sault Ste. Marie Canal improvements, and when the Spanish war broke out, in 1898, Sibert, who had gained the rank of captain, was named by President McKinley as chief engineer of the Eighth Army Corps, a position he retained for only a few months, when he was transferred to the Philippines and made chief engineer of the Manila Dagupan railway, as well as the general manager of the system. Old Philippine veterans still tell the story of how Sibert modernized that little jerkwater line in the Far East.

Returning to the United States in 1900, Sibert, still a captain, was assigned to various river improvements and within a few years came to be recognized as the most efficient river and harbor engineer in the country. There is hardly a navigable river east of the Rockies with the development of which in one way or another he has not been identified.

It was not until 1907 that his countrymen began to hear of him. President Roosevelt had startled the country by his appointment of a then unknown major of engineers—George W. Goethals—as chief engineer of the Panama Canal and president of the Isthmian Canal Commission. Shortly afterward he named three engineers as Goethal's chief assistants, Sibert, Gaillard and Harry F. Hodges.

To Gaillard was given the great task of solving the problem of Culebra Cut, which cost him his life. To Sibert was assigned the job of building the Gatun locks and dam, the successful accomplishment of which is now numbered among the engineering marvels of the age.

A story is told of General Goethals which credits him with this remark in taking over the Panama Canal Commission. "I recognize here two enemies, one of them Culebra cut and the other the locks and dams of Gatun."

Goethals made the Gatun part of the canal a military department and placed Sibert in command. Quietly, modestly, without fuss or feathers, Sibert went to work. He was a great saver of men and money, and he soon found a way to make the dollar go where it took two dollars to go before.

President Wilson, on March 4, 1915, named Sibert brigadier general of the line as an expression of the nation's gratitude to him for the work he had done at Panama. General Sibert was then ordered to the Pacific coast as commander of the coast defences. He immediately started in to bring those defences up to date, and the present efficient condition of the Pacific fortifications is another of his achievements. He also planned the first officers' training camp at the Presidio of Monterey.

In 1914 the American Red Cross decided to finance a $20,000,000 project to reclaim East China from the flood peril. It was Sibert who was elected to go to China as the chief engineer. The work now going on is the result of his plans.

On June 9th last President Wilson sent the name of Sibert to the Senate as a major-general.—New York Times, July 2nd.

ISSUE NO. 29, 1917

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Wellandra Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

WANTED—A GENERAL SERVANT for only two in family. Apply, 15 St. Mathew's Ave., Hamilton, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

WHEN ORDERING GOODS BY MAIL send a Dominion Express Money Order.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

Victor Hugo.

Victor Hugo was born at Besancon, France, Feb. 26th, 1802, died May 22, 1885. He began his literary work at fourteen, and by 1827 his reputation was continental. In 1862, on account of his democratic sympathies, he was an exile in the island of Jersey, but after 1870 he returned to France. Forced into politics he soon became disgusted with its insincerities and resigned his seat in the assembly in which he been elected. In 1876 he was made a senator but never accomplished much on account of his uncompromising hostility to every form of official trickery.

All's fair in war. No army is too honest to steal a march on the enemy.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

Automobile Tops.

The practice of running an automobile with the top up when it is not needed is costly, acording to tests which I made, says a contributor to Poular Mechanics. When the back of the top cannot be rolled up the resistance is especially great. Six miles more were obtained from a gallon of gasoline with the top rolled and covered as compared with having the top up with the back closed. When going against the wind this extra pull is especially heavy, and difficulty in making a hard climb may often be relieved by lowering the top. Careful regulation of the top using it only when essential, will be found to be a worth while factor in reducing the gasoline bill.

Capes.

They are entrenched.

And frankly military.

Or just the opposite.

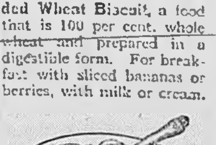
Ranging from wool to silk.

Including broadcloths, velours, taffetas, satins.

While some are of double-faced fabrics, others are fascinatingly lined.

Many a fellow is out for the dust who doesn't clean up.

Strength in Summer comes to the man or woman whose daily diet consists of cereals and fruits. Meat and potatoes are a heavy load on the digestive organs. The ideal Summer diet is Shredded Wheat Biscuit, a food that is 100 per cent. whole wheat and prepared in a digestible form. For breakfast with sliced bananas or berries, with milk or cream.



Made in Canada.

OPERATIONS OF CANADIANS AT VIMY RIDGE

Official Report of Historic Victory by General Headquarters.

AN IMPORTANT WIN

Four Dominion Divisions, One British Brigade, Did the Work.

Ottawa report: The following report on the operations of the Canadian Army Corps, containing a detailed description of the capture of Vimy Ridge, has been received by the Government from General Headquarters in France:

"The attack of the Canadian corps upon the Vimy Ridge was launched at 5.30 a.m. on the 9th of April, 1917, as part of the general British offensive delivered at that hour east of Arras. Possession of the ridge would deprive the enemy of observation into the valleys running southward from it, and would secure for the British a commanding view of the plains to the north and east.

"In view, however, of the recent German withdrawal south of Arras, the right of which rested upon this powerful position, the tactical importance of Vimy Ridge, already great prior to the enemy's withdrawal, had been considerably increased. The capture of the ridge would imperil the German hold upon the French industrial districts.

"The enemy's defences had been organized on a scale proportionate to the importance of the position. They consisted of an extensive and intricate series of heavily wired trench systems, with numerous fire trenches and communication trenches, deep and elaborate dugouts, caves and tunnels, concrete machine gun and trench mortar emplacements and cunningly constructed redoubts, upon all of which the enemy had expended great labor and skill during more than two years of occupation. Along the whole front lay a chain of great craters, the product of constant mining activity.

"Accordingly, prior to the Canadian corps' attack, the most careful preparations had been made, with respect to the training of personnel and the accumulation of guns, ammunition and material. The attack itself was only the culminating phase of a long and insistent offensive maintained throughout the winter, which included a large number of successful raids and destructive artillery bombardments.

"The front entrusted to the Canadian corps extended from the Arras-Lens road, about three-quarters of a mile north of the village of Roclincourt, to a point in our old support line, about 1,000 yards east of the southern portion of Souchez, a distance of about 7,000 yards. The attacking forces consisted of four Canadian divisions, with one British brigade attached to the right centre Canadian division.

"The objectives included the whole of the high ground of the ridge, and were distant on the right, where the division on the right flank of the Canadian corps had to cover a distance of some four thousand yards to reach Farbus Wood. The right centre division, with the British brigade attached, had almost as far to go. Their objectives included the village of Thelus and the hill to the north, and reached as far as the eastern outskirts of Farbus village. The objectives of the left centre division were less deep, extending for about a mile to the steep wooded slopes along the eastern side of the ridge. They included, however, the strongly defended hill on which lay the ruins of La Folie Farm. The division on the left flank had the least distance to go, but these objectives included Hill 145, the highest and most formidable bombardment gradually increased in intensity as the day of assault approached.

"At 5.30 a.m. our guns suddenly opened an intense bombardment and the infantry assault began.

"The long line of battalions advanced in good order immediately behind the rolling barrage maintained by our artillery. In spite of the difficult conditions on the ground, much of which had been reduced by the unfavorable weather of the preceding days to a succession of vast puddles of sticky mud, our first objectives were carried in scheduled time.

"On the right and centre this initial success was continued, and the attack developed in strict accordance with programme. The troops reformed on their first objectives, and at once moved forward and captured their second objectives also. In places the enemy was overpowered at once and surrendered freely; at other points, where he endeavored to hold out, his resistance was rapidly overcome by the dash and energy of the attacking troops.

"On the left our troops encountered specially stiff opposition, and as the morning wore on it became evident that a portion of the German line on the slopes of Hill 145 was still held by the enemy. This section of the German defences was very strong, with numerous underground caves and tunnels, and there is no doubt also that the enemy fought to retain this vital portion of the ridge with greater determination and higher courage than he displayed on most other parts of the front.

"Meanwhile farther south, events developed with rapidity and precision. Troops detailed for the attack of the third objectives passed through those who had already completed the capture of the second and the advance continued. The troops met with little serious opposition from the enemy's infantry. The hostile barrage also was weak, and our losses were not heavy, facts which testified to the effectiveness of our artillery preparations and support, and to the precision of our counter battery work, aided by our aircraft, as well as to the well-timed, skillful and rapid manoeuvre of our troops.

"By mid-day the right and right centre division had captured their third objectives, the left centre division, who had already reached their final objectives, were consolidating and pushing out patrols in accordance with their plans. At this time over 2,000 German prisoners had already been reported taken.

"The advance of the two right divisions and of the attached British brigade to the final objectives also took place in accordance with programme. Passing through the wide belts of German wire which fringed the plateau, through which our heavy artillery had broken lanes, the advancing battalions came to the steep eastern slopes of the Vimy Ridge, and were the first of the Allied troops since the German reoccupation in 1915 to look down upon the level plains of Douai. At their feet lay the villages of Farbus, Vimy and Petit Vimy, and beyond they could see Bailleul, Willerval and Oppy, Arleux and Mericourt. Here in the woods that fringed the eastern edge of the ridge we captured several batteries of German guns, hastily abandoned, with their ammunition."

HEROES DECORATED.

Many Canadians Honored for Bravery in Battle.

London, Cable—The official military gazette announces the following awards to Canadian soldiers for conspicuous service in the field:

Bar to military medal—Sergts. F. Wa[illegible], Machine Guns; J. [illegible] Anderson, Railway Troops; M. Blondell, Machine [illegible]; L. Morrison, E. Slattery, E. McGar, Mounted Rifles; G. Quirk, D. W. George[illegible], F. R. Sawtell, E. M. Ross, Corpls. F. C. Bennett, H. Green, H. [illegible], G. [illegible], H. H. Groves, F. Lawson, J. D. Macdonald, F. F. Worthington, [illegible] McGrath, Privates R. C. Harrison, J. T. Milne, H. McInness, W. Tickner, [illegible] Dean.

Several hundred Canadians have been awarded the military medal.

The Gazette tonight also contains [illegible] for which distinguished conduct medal was awarded early in June. Among these Company-Sergt.-Major Blanchard assumed command of a company during operations and by example, courage and disregard of danger had an inspiring effect. Private A. B. Davis rescued many wounded under very heavy fire, and for fine personal example and utter disregard of danger had a most inspiring [illegible]. Lance-Corp. J. Evans displayed great gallantry in bringing a gun into action at close range under heavy fire. Lance-Corp. J. Allen rendered valuable service with a mortar under heavy fire in an exposed position. Sergt.-Major E. Nicholls organized carrying parties under heavy fire and brought urgently needed supplies. Sergt. W. J. Squib handled machine guns with great ability and initiative at a critical time. Private J. Wilson displayed great gallantry in carrying wounded over exposed ground.

CHINA REVOLT THING OF PAST

Republican Troops in Possession of Pekin.

Chang Hsun Cannot Carry Out His Threats.

A Washington report: Entry of the Republican troops into Pekin was announced in a despatch to the Chinese Legation today, indicating that the monarchical coup d'etat had come to a complete failure.

The despatch was the first in two weeks to come through direct from the Pekin Foreign Office. The second and final abdication of the Manchu Emperor Hsuan Tung, it is said, is expected momentarily along with the arrival of General Chang Hsun, the military adventurer responsible for the coup, ordered taken into custody by the new President.

Gen. Chang has withdrawn to the Imperial City, a walled section of Pekin, where it is reported his troops are fast deserting him. Escape is cut off, the republicans controlling all four railroads out of the capital, and officials here believe that at last China is about to rid herself of a military leader who has been a thorn in the side of the republic ever since its founding.

Apparently Chang is not now in a position to carry out his threat to destroy the priceless temples of the city. His adherents are thought to have left him so weak that secret flight alone remains possible.

The Legation despatches are not clear as to whether President Li, reported to have fled to the Japanese Embassy in Pekin for safety, has returned to his office or whether Acting President Feng Kuo Chang is still serving. There is thought now to be no reason however, why Li should not take over the authority once again, and re-establish the Coalition Government set up just before Chang made his theatrical coup.

AGED SLAYER DISCHARGED.

A Winnipeg report: John Drohmer, an aged man convicted of manslaughter for the killing of George Obulowacki, was discharged by Mr. Justice Metcalf when he appeared for sentence this afternoon, after W. H. Trueman, Crown counsel, made an appeal for leniency. The parties lived at [illegible] River, and the killing was the result of Obulowacki's intimacy with [illegible]'s wife.

BARRED FROM WATERFRONT.

A New York report: A further move to keep the waterfront here free from enemy aliens was made today, when placards warning all Germans to keep off were distributed to all docks and piers in this city and Long Island points. It was said similar notices would be sent to points on the Hudson River and the Connecticut shore before the end of the week.

All's fair in love and war but just now love doesn't seem to cut so much of a figure.

WILL AID IN ENDING WAR

British Food Controller On President's Embargo.

Anxiously Awaits U. S. Food Bill Passage.

A London cable: Lord Rhondda, the Food Controller, in a statement to the Associated Press on the embargo proclamation of President Wilson, said:

"The comprehensive and effective character of the President's latest action is typical of the way in which the United States has thrown itself heart and soul into the war. It seems to me that the additional pressure which will thereby be brought to bear upon our common enemies should go far towards bringing this struggle to an earlier termination, especially in view of the fact that, in applying an embargo on provisions, the President will have the advantage of Mr. Hoover's unequalled knowledge of conditions in the neutral countries.

"The embargo should also, by diverting supplies from neutral destinations, help to solve the food problem of the European allies. But while our difficulties as regards supply are appreciably eased by this embargo, we cannot really effectively deal with the vital and pressing question of price until Congress passes the food bill. So long as there is no control over the principal market, so long obviously must the prices of the Allies' staple food remain variable, and, as a rule, dangerously high. I hope soon to announce measures for the control of our own homegrown crops. This should help to equalize distribution and reduce prices. But it will, of course, be infinitesimal, as compared with the world-wide effect of the present food discussion in Congress, the result of which we await with natural anxiety."

SPEEDING UP.

A Washington report: Administration leaders in the Senate, spurred on by a letter from Herbert C. Hoover, the Food Controller, to President Wilson, declaring that further delay in enacting food legislation threatens losses to both farmers and consumers today sought to hasten action by the Agricultural Committee in perfecting the Gore substitute for the food control bill under consideration in the Senate. The committee again today worked on the substitute bill, while the Senate continued debate on general features of the bill.

The Senate will vote on the bill July 21, under an agreement reached only after the Democratic leaders had consented to eliminate some of bill's most drastic features, including the stringent prohibition provisions. The substitute is generally similar to the original Administration bill, except that power to control other industries besides food and fuel, has been stricken out. It prohibits the manufacture of distilled liquors, without providing for Government purchase of stocks now held in bond, and gives the President power to decide, in his discretion, whether prohibition shall extend to beer and wine.

CANADIAN GUNS DO GOOD WORK

Smash Many Batteries of Huns in Few Hours.

Flier From Northern Ontario is a Wonder.

(By Stewart Lyon, Canadian Press Correspondent with the Canadian Forces.)

A Canadian Headquarters report: On this front, especially around Avion and Lievin, the operations against Lens are still, for the most part, an artillery affair. Our infantry patrols penetrate the area of ruined houses immediately ahead and occasionally blow up a house in which Germans are believed to be sheltering, but the greater part of the task at the present falls to the guns.

In counter-battery operations for the destruction of the enemy's heavy artillery very remarkable results have recently been obtained by groups of Canadian [illegible].

Within a period of twenty-four hours more than a dozen enemy battery positions were put out of action. Many direct hits on gun pits were noted and practically every shell fired fell well within fifty yards of an enemy gun, although these guns were, in the most cases, four to six miles distant and completely out of sight of the men engaged. The terrorizing effect upon the enemy's gun crews of a sudden tornado of shell is very destroyed the enemy usually changes its positions after an attack as a means of restoring the nerve of the gunners.

I hear remarkable stories of the exploits of a young aviator from the northern part of Ontario, whose record will soon equal that of the late Captain Ball, the most famous of recent air fighters. This young Canadian already has won the Military Cross and the D.S.O. It is stated that he goes after his victim as directly as a hawk strikes its prey.

There are many Canadian aviators in the fighting squadrons along this front, but the Canadians as yet have no distinctive aerial service here in France.

"Dose your wife listen to your advice?" "Listen? Of course she does. My wife is very polite."—Boston Transcript.

CLOSING IN ABOUT LENS

Steady, Cautious Picking Up Ground Bit by Bit.

Three Canadians Rout Party fo 40 Germans.

(By Stewart Lyon, Canadian Press Correspondent With the Canadian Forces.)

Canadian Headquarters in France, report: Determined pressure against the defences of the Germans in the vicinity of the City of Lens continues daily. Necessarily it is of a sort that must be exercised methodically. To send large bodies of assaulting troops into the maze of wrecked houses and mining works, which now constitute "No Man's Land," might result in the carrying of a few hundred yards of shapeless ruins, but the price that would be exacted by enemy machine-guns would be far greater than the new ground won by a coup-de-main of that kind could possibly be worth.

The least costly mode of advance is gradually encroaching upon "No Man's Land" by patrols, which occupy wrecked houses here and there during the night, and after a sufficient number have been secured, to form a fairly continuous advanced line. This style of preparatory fighting brings into action the scouting faculties of a large proportion of Westerners in the battalions holding the line at present. An incident which occurred the other night illustrates their methods.

A party of 10 men, with a lieutenant in command, went out to examine an isolated row of miners' houses in front of their own line. The enemy was so near that no light was possible save that of the moon, emerging at times from behind heavy clouds. Under these conditions the party went to work in pairs, groping their way through the unfamiliar ruins and seeking for signs of occupation.

The lieutenant and two of his men were in one of the houses when sounds outside warned them of the coming of a considerable body of Germans. Taking shelter where the shadows were deepest, these three Canadians lay hidden while more than 40 of the enemy passed through the house in which they lay. The Germans were apparently on the way to a rendezvous for a raiding party, for they went out in the direction of the Canadian front.

Collecting his little party, the lieutenant sent a man back to warn their comrades in the Canadian trench. Then he and the remainder of the scouting party followed the enemy, stalking them so successfully that they got within bombing distance undiscovered. The crash of bombs falling among them was the first intimation to the Germans that they had been seen. They ran pell-mell, and some of them were badly hurt, judging from the outcry. Fighting of that sort appeals strongly to the young fellows from Canada, whose life at home is often perilous and full of adventure.

Another exploration party in the [illegible] to the south of the River Souchez came in last night from "No Man's Land" and reported the destruction of a trench mortar which the enemy had installed in a house from which it could have been used during the hours of darkness with serious results to the men in our front line.

Similar raids and sorties are taking place all along the line in the Lens sector from Loos to Mericourt.

OUR FORESTERS BUSY IN FRANCE

Over 4,000 Men Now Operating There.

Six of the Companies in the War Area.

An Ottawa report: The following report of the work of the Canadian Forestry Corps has been received by the Government from General Headquarters in France.

There are at present 22 companies of the Canadian Forestry Corps operating in France. The first eight companies arrived between December last and the end of March, and five companies arrived in April with their full technical equipment and approximately [illegible] per cent of their transport. [illegible] more companies arrived in the third week of May. It is hoped to employ 36 companies in all by September.

The companies are equipped with Canadian-made saw-milling machinery and tools, and the greatest efficiency and keenness is displayed by all ranks. Operations extend over a large area. All species of lumber are manufactured, including sawn timber, sleepers, trench timber, pit props for roads and mining.

The establishment of the companies, including transport, is 190 all ranks. The average production varies according to the nature of the woods. In suitable woods between 1,000 and 1,500 tons of sawn lumber, together with sufficient round timber to bring the output up to 2,000 tons per month, may be expected. On round timber alone, however, a company produces from 4,000 to 6,000 tons per month.

Some of the operations of the Corps are being carried out under shell-fire, and one unit was recently heavily shelled, fortunately no casualties resulting.

Of the companies, six are employed in the army areas, although their work is greatly handicapped by having to operate in small woods, as a rule, devastated by shell-fire. The daily output is most satisfactory.

Seven companies, including the Canadian Construction Company (colored), are employed in Jura Wood. The Canadian mills in operation in this area have aroused great interest amongst the French military and civil authorities, who have not hesitated to express their admiration of the mechanical efficiency evidenced in the construction and design of the mills.

Ten companies are now working on the lines of communication. Some fine forests have recently been acquired for exploitation in this area.

An advance party has already arrived in the Bordeaux district and is making necessary arrangements for opening up operations.

All companies except one are fully equipped in every detail with Canadian sawmill machinery and tools.

FIGHTING NOW TO THE DEATH

Few Prisoners in Franco-German Battles.

German "Shock" Troops Fail to Hold.

French Front in France report: The French troops holding the sector of the Chemin-des-Dames to the south of [illegible], although drenched to the skin and covered from head to foot, were full of confidence and cheerfulness today when the correspondent went among them.

They had just repulsed an attack of the most formidable nature, in which the Germans sustained shocking losses without obtaining more than a temporary foothold in these constantly contested positions.

The sector in question comprises the Pantheon farm, astride the Chemin-des-Dames, and is menaced at all times because of the domination of it by the ancient Fort de Malmaison, which is in the hands of the Germans. Early this morning the Germans opened a most intense bombardment of the French lines and while the hurricane of shells was still falling, a German force comprising from ten to twelve infantry battalions made a sudden rush into the French positions.

MAJORITY WERE KILLED.

A brigade of the famous chasseurs-a-pied had occupied the sector and was holding the line firmly. The Frenchmen however, were forced to fall back before the overwhelming numbers which followed on the heels of the German shock units, brought specially from other points of the line to lead the attack.

The Germans apparently considered their success certain, as they brought with them quantities of barbed wire, trench mortars, boxes of grenades and flame throwers and everything necessary to the rapid organization of the captured position which, if held, would give them command of a large section of the Chemin des Dames.

They failed, however, to take the French spirit into their reckoning. Immediately after a slight recoil, the French chasseurs, aided by engineers and [illegible] employed in the works in the rear, organized counter-attacks and, despite the most desperate resistance, ejected or killed most of the German infantrymen, capturing large quantities of their material and re-establishing the line almost entirely.

FEW PRISONERS TAKEN.

Hand-to-hand fighting with grenades and bayonets was still proceeding when the correspondents left this evening, while the shell craters and communication trenches were encumbered with many German dead. Many of their number were engulfed in the [illegible] deep mud caused by the recent extremely heavy rains. The French losses were severe, but nothing to those sustained by the Germans.

Six Frenchmen, who were captured and taken to the second German line, attacked the sentry who was guarding them, escaped and returned to the French lines. In the course of the fighting a young German, who had raised his arms in token of surrender, threw two grenades, which he had hidden in the palms of his hands, among his would-be captors as they approached him. In general the fighting was so desperate throughout the action that few prisoners were taken by either side.

BOMBS IN CHICAGO.

Three, in Different Sections—One Dead, One Dying.

Chicago report—Three bombs [illegible] in widely separated sections of the south side early today caused the death of one man, and the fatal injury of another, damaged a number of buildings and [illegible] street. Two of the explosions are laid at the door of the "Black Hand," the other to labor trouble, according to the police. The bombs were exploded in buildings with stores on the first floor and apartments above, driving many of the residents into the street in their night clothing.

Silvio O'Connor and his brother James were passing the building at [illegible] West [illegible] street when the explosion occurred and the former was killed instantly and the latter fatally injured. No others were seriously hurt, though many suffered cuts by broken glass.

WINS MEDAL AT QUEEN'S.

Kingston, Ont., Report—Queen's University has received from their Excellencies the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, a handsome silver medal, to be awarded to the candidate taking the highest standing in the Faculty of Education, and at the meeting of the Council of Education the medal was awarded to Miss Kathleen Ross, B.A., of Galt, who took quite a distinguished course in the faculty last session. This medal has been awarded in lieu of the University medal, to which Miss Ross would have been entitled.

KAISER STILL SOLID BEHIND CHANCELLOR

Hollweg Has Emperor's Full Confidence, Despite All Attacks.

GETS MORE SUPPORT

But is Criticised Again in Committee—Sweeping Reforms Due.

A Copenhagen cable (Delayed): According to the Tageblatt, the Crown Council, held in Berlin Monday evening, showed that the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, possesses the Emperor's complete confidence. The Emperor, after the adjournment of the Council, conferred with the Chancellor until midnight.

Mr. von Bethmann-Hollweg's position, the paper adds, seems also to be more secure with the various parties. The Radicals are said to be standing by the Chancellor, while the centre socialists attach no importance to a mere change of persons and not of system. Political circles believe that the matter will end in a compromise.

A despatch from Berlin to the Cologne Gazette says the retirement of Ministers Helfferich and Zimmermann will be gazetted Tuesday.

The Germania, of Berlin, declares that Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, in committee, accepted the idea of Matthias Erzberger, the Centrist leader, regarding a Parliamentary declaration committing Germany to peace on the basis of the Chancellor's declaration of August 4, 1914, namely, no annexations. The Tägliche Rundschau, on the contrary, is sure that Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg will retire if the declaration is adopted.

According to the Tageblatt, the Crown Council is reported to have developed an almost irreconcilable difference of opinion between Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg and the majority of Prussian Ministers on questions of internal political reform.

AGAIN ATTACK CHANCELLOR.

A Copenhagen cable: The debate in the Reichstag main committee yesterday, according to reports received here, was opened by Dr. Gustav Stresemann, National Liberal, with a sharp attack on Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's policy, particularly that of Foreign Affairs, which he characterized as being based on no definite consistent programme. The Chancellor retorted by saying he was forced to look to all sides for support because the Reichstag offered him no stable majority. Give him this and he would be able to develop a consistent programme, he said.

The Vossische Zeitung adds that the Chancellor expressed readiness and willingness to carry through necessary internal reforms.

Herr David, Socialist, painted a picture of the difficult internal situation in Germany. He declared the existing dualism between the Government and the people must cease. Thereafter the Chancellor again briefly spoke, and the committee adjourned without reaching any decision.

Afternoon papers yesterday generally assumed that an agreement of all parties except Conservatives and extreme Socialists had been reached for a joint declaration in the Reichstag on peace terms and internal reforms. This, it is said, would contain a reiteration of the Chancellor's announcement of August, 1914, that Germany's purpose in the war was not conquest but defence and independence of territorial integrity, expressing a readiness to conclude peace on that basis, with a provision rejecting all designs aiming at an economic boycott and continuance of international [illegible] after the war.

The declaration, according to report, would also cover the formation of a coalition Ministry with representatives of all parties, and immediate reform of the Prussian franchise.

"The National Liberals, however, at a meeting in the evening, rejected the peace part of the resolution, and as the Centre had made their [illegible] conditional on National Liberal accord, the success of the movement is [illegible]. The Radicals on the other hand declined to consent to that part of the resolution dealing with internal reforms if this were on condition of National Liberal [illegible] von Bethmann-Hollweg's retirement.

The whole matter, therefore, is in doubt again. One positive fact elicited by Herr Erzberger's declaration, is that he and other members of the [illegible] of the Reichstag [illegible] Admiralty and Government, [illegible] the abandonment of the submarine campaign.

SWEEPING REFORMS COMING.

A Copenhagen cable: The [illegible] Vorwaerts, copies of which have just been received here, devotes black-face type to positive reports in the Reichstag that the Prussian Government decided to introduce a bill in the Diet for universal equal suffrage this [illegible] without waiting for peace.

The Vossische Zeitung announces that the Prussian Minister of the Interior, von Loebell, had an audience with the Emperor Monday. Reports given under reserve are that Herr von Loebell recommended to the Emperor the quickest possible execution of internal reforms, and suggested as a preliminary to a Parliamentary Ministry that all Imperial Secretaries of State and Prussian Ministers submit their resignations, in order to give the new Chancellor a free hand in calling members of the Reichstag to the Cabinet.

The Vossische Zeitung's reports seems justified, in view of Herr von Loebell's known standpoint.

THAT
Holiday Trip !

Hot Weather is here, and with it comes the thought of a holiday trip, and with the holiday trip comes the thought of a suitable

Suit Case or Club Bag

We are ready to supply you. A splendid variety here. Just what you want at the price you wish to pay.
Call and see our stock. You will find it easy choosing from our large assortment.

We pay cash for eggs

N. McGillivray
North End Store

BANK OF HAMILTON
Established 1872

Capital Authorized, $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up, - $3,000,000
Surplus, - - - - - $3,500,000

Encouragement

THE owner of a bank account not only enjoys his own respect, but that of his fellowmen. Because of his saving habits he is enabled to grasp the opportunities that are lost to the man without means.

R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
PORT ELGIN BRANCH
41-C

Can you afford to be without The Times ?

Children's
Ready-to-Wear
Garments

In prints, galateas, and other cotton materials, at the cost of materials only, much below to-day's values.

Children's aprons at 15c
Childrens dresses, good style, 40c to 50c
Middies at 50 cents
Rompers and play suits from 40 to 75c
Womens' overal aprons and house dresses 50c to $1.25

We pay Cash for Eggs.
Produce wanted.

See our big display in our north window

South End Store
N. McGillivray & Co.

The Port Elgin Times
MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

ADVERTISING RATES

Farms or Real Estate for Sale 50c each insertion; Miscellaneous articles, To Rent, Wanted, Lost, Found, etc., each insertion 25c. Local Readers, Notices, etc., 10c per line per insertion, 5c each subsequent insertion. Cards of thanks 50c. Legal advertising 10 and 5c a line. Black-faced type, count 2 lines for 1. Display rates, yearly contracts, 12c per inch, 6 mos. 15c per inch. In memoriam poetry 5c per line. Professional cards $6 per year in advance.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The autoist still uses our streets without regard for the safety of pedestrians.

* * *

The Dominion Minister of Labor, permises plenty of coal for Canada. Let's see, this same person told us awhile ago the common people were much better off than they ever were.

* * *

The government will tax incomes, but the savings will be untouched. This tax will reach mainly those who have incomes running to $5000 or more in a year.

* * *

The war faded into insignificance compared with Toronto's street car strike. If the Dominion Government were to work one-half as hard on winning the war as its Railway board did on settling the strike there would be no doubt about deeping up Canada's army.

* * *

Canada's fuel controller urges Canadians to lay in a supply of fuel as early as possible. Will some one please tell this man a good part of his job is to tell the people where this fuel is to be got.

* * *

People know now why bacon sold for 40 and 45 cents a pound. Sir Joseph Flavelle's company made $5,000,000 profit on bacon alone. Just imagine what real service could be done for the people if we were served in parliament by men instead of politicians !

* * *

Neil McDougall, past president of the West Bruce Board of Agriculture, in his report on the year's proceedings, deplored the fact that Provincial Department of Agriculture had done away with the Farmers' Institute and substituted the Board of Agriculture, but had neglected to define ways and means for the financing of the new board, or for the making of it serviceable to the community. Long distance planning, in which the other fellow is left to worry through, is mighty poor government policy.

* * *

"Sell all thou hast and give" was more than carried out the other day at San Francisco, when a young Greek gave the Red Cross his touring car, his gold watch, his bank deposit of $521 and $25 in cash. Having thus, disposed of all his wordly possessions, he enlisted in the army. "That's all I have," he said, "and I'm glad to give it." This ought to impress those who are making gifts from their plenty, and expecting lots of applause.

Be Particular

A very interesting article in the Grain Growers' Guide recently by H. W. Wood, president of the United Farmers of America, contains some good advice that all farmers should take particular interest in the selection of candidates for parliament.

Mr. Wood is a farmer, and occupies such a big place in national affairs that he is likely to be invited into the cabinet, therefore, his words are of particular interest just now. He says:

"A democracy is a government by the people. Its character depends on the standard of the citizenship of the people themselves. If there was anything wrong in the election, the fault lies in the people themselves, and not in the politicians. The people are benefited or injured by government. The politicians want office, and they try to do and say things that will cause you to vote them into office. If they appeal to your prejudices instead of your reason and high sentiment, it is because they think you will respond to that appeal. "Yes," you say, "but some of the men we heard talk were not capable of appealing to our reason, and we had no choice in the matter, for the other side was just as badly represented." Your fault again. Citizenship in a democracy is worth something. Have you been quietly thinking during the past four years whether or not the best man in your party in your district was serving you? If you have not, you have not been doing your duty as a citizen. You should begin thinking and working and thinking right now for the next election. If you conclude the member-elect is not the right man, begin at once to try and find the right man or woman. Talk the matter over with your neighbor or neighbors. Make it your business to attend to your business. Take as much interest in selecting a representative as you would in selecting a horse or a farm. Keep on trying to find the right candidate until you have found him, and then reveal him to others until you have all found him. This is only getting ready for action. When the next election approaches, you must not only know what you want to do, but you must be prepared to do it.

Go to your party caucus and help send delegates to your party convention, who will nominate the right candidate. If you fail here you will fail everywhere; if you make good here you will make good everywhere. Right here is where the machine stops and the hopper is filled. Just as the hopper is filled, so will the grit be. If the people want this grit to be true democracy, they must fill the hopper. The machine is all right if it is run right, and it will be easier to run it right, than it will be to build another one—another party. If every man and woman who wants good government will be ready at the next election to attend his or her party caucus, and go prepared to act in intelligent unison, will promise that there will be no be no cause to find fault with the result of the election. This means citizenship, which is the price of true democracy."

The 21st. of July will be Belgian Day in Canada. Canadians will be given an opportunity on this day to contribute through Montreal agency of the Belgian Relief organization to the funds that are designed to alleviate the unmerited sufferings of the first victims of German barbarism. Belgium is known to be almost destitute—destitute of all but courage. It falls to the lot of us who live in more favorable circumstances to do all we can to aid the civilian of the Belgian people, who though civilians have been made to suffer through the war as the civilians of the other belligerents have not.

Reminiscences of a First Celebration

A week ago The Times had a visit from Mr. S. Hanton of the staff of The Stratford Beacon. He was in Port Elgin for a day or two, and naturally, as a newspaper man, found his way to a newspaper office. In conversation we learned that Mr. Ranton knew considerable of Port Elgin, and as our big celebration was just ready to be pulled off we asked Mr. Ranton to write for us what he remembers of a first of July celebration in Port Elgin in 1874.

Mr. Ranton says Port Elgin has been noted for its first of July events since away back in 1867, and hopes that the rising generations of men will always endeavor to perpetuate the good clean record which was set for them by men of former days. Mr. Ranton writes as follows:

Port Elgin has celebrated Dominion Day in some form or other from the date of its inception in 1867. The writer was teaching school in the township of Wallace, about two miles from Palmerston in 1874, when a great temperance demonstration was held on Dominion Day. It was under the auspices of the Sons of Temperance in the County of Bruce of which there were several divisions in the county. The train started from Palmerston, and the writer decided to take it in. There were no others went from Palmerston as far as can be recollected, but there were a few entrained at Harriston, and from that on the numbers were added until standing room was at a premium. The accommodation was not much better than standing in any case, as the train with one or two exceptions, was composed entirely of box freight cars.

The seating was of planks laid on blocks of wood, and extending across the entire width of the car, but the Wellington, Grey and Bruce branch of the Great Northwestern Railway had only opened from Palmerston to Southampton a year or two previously, and there was not quite as much grumbling at this primitive method of transportation by rail as there would be to-day. The time of arrival at Port Elgin was shortly before noon, and the first thing to be attended to was dinner, which was served on tables in the grove by the lake.

There was, it seems to the writer, some speaking, but he did not take it in. There were amongst others in attendance, a large number of Indians from the Saugeen reserve, the women arrayed in bright colored garments, as is their wont, and the men probably similarly attired as nowadays.

There were numerous excursions run by tugs or small steamers to the break water in Southampton during the afternoon.

Mr. John George was prominently connected with the affair, he being a prominent man in the Sons of Temperance. If memory is correct he was the chairman of the committee. The writer was wending his way to the station to take the train of extemporized coaches, when to his dismay he saw it pull out. The excursion ticket was, however, accepted by the conductor on the regular passenger train next morning. Although the teacher had telegraphed that he would arrive by that train the scholars had taken another holiday ere he arrived.

Advertise it in The Times.

CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE
Stratford, Ontario

Ontario's Best Business College
FALL TERM FROM SEPT. 4TH
Commercial, Shorthand and Telegraphy departments.

We have thorough courses, experienced instructors, and we place graduates in positions. The Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalog.

D. A. McLACHLAN, PRINCIPAL

PERSONAL MENTION

Master Charlie Lymburner, of Owen Sound, is visiting at Mr. John Rushton's.

Mr. James Nuttall is home from Toronto.

Mrs. J. J. Fleming and children of Owen Sound, are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. J. D. MacIntosh.

Mr. and Mrs. Kaufman, Miss Oetzel, and Mr. Schiel, of Kitchener, visited Rev. and Mrs. Gischler this week.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Lankin and Masters Lorne and Ernest, motored from Toronto to spend a week with Mrs. H. Weick, Lake Range.

The Kincardine Review had the following warning in last week's issue: We have been instructed to warn the fruit vendors that any boxes not properly filled will be confiscated and prosecution will follow. The public pay one-third more for berries in this town than in the city and in a great many cases the boxes are only two-thirds filled."

Mr. E. J. Mintz, B. A., of Southampton, was ordained to the ministry in the Baptist church on July 10th. There were many ministers and laymen present at the ceremony, those from Port Elgin being Rev. Buckborrough, C. Nicholson and N. McDonald. Rev. Mr. Mintz is an exceptionally clever young man, who has a wealth of eloquence, and splendid descriptive powers. That he is doing active and progressive work as a student pastor is shown in the fact that on Sunday morning he baptized 12 young men and women into the church. Mr. Mintz is a graduate of Rochester Seminary, and a native of Virginia. On Sunday night his church was packed to the doors, when he preached a memorial service for Gunner Orland Knechtel, a member of Southampton Baptist church, who was killed in France last week.

Alarm Clocks

Why do most people go to Busby's for alarm clocks? Because we have the best stock, also when repairs are necessary you know our reputation.

We have in stock.

Big Ben
Cyclone
Vantite
Giant Spasmodic
Suminous Sunrise
Vigilant
Turnout
Icallu

J. J. BUSBY,
The Quick Repair House

Real Estate — Auctioneering Life Insurance

WE have opened an office in Port Elgin, and will deal in real estate. Property bought and sold.

Auctioneering — The old-time attention given to all farmers contemplating a sale.

Life Insurance—We are agent for the New York Life Co.

O. C. Gavin : Port Elgin

Soldier's Socks . .

Reliable yarn for soldiers' socks at a time when it cannot be bought from the mill, we consider ourselves fortunate in having a goodly supply of 3 and 4 ply Scotch fingering yarn which is made in England and is most satisfactory for socks. In gray and black at $2 per lb.

Finest quality flannel for shirts at from 25c. to 65c. per yd.

Leading styles in neckwear "Come out of the Kitchen" in gingham and organdy also newest effects in Georgette and silk poplin from 25c. to $2.00

A special in house dresses. Any house dress in stock at $1.19.

SPECIAL IN SHOES

Ladies button calf regular $4.50 for $2.98.

Ladies' buttoned Dongola $3.50 for $2.19.

Ladies' Oxford patend $3.50 for $2.29.

Ladies' oxfords in gun metal $3.50 for $2.19.

Ladies' pumps, reg. $3 for $1.98.

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon.

Roppel Bros.
Rural phone. Underwood

BLACKSMITHING
N. [illegible]T. Blacksmithing, horseshoeing and general repairs. Tire setting a specialty

Binder Twine
Buy it now and save money

Plymouth Binder Twine
SAVES TIME AND GRAIN

Twine is a small item, but good twine saves a lot of expense in harvest time. Every time your machine is stopped the delay costs you money. Time in harvest season is always valuable, and sometimes extremely precious on account of the condition of weather or grain. Be sure you use the best twine.—PLYMOUTH TWINE. Then you will be safe from the annoyances, delays, expenses, which ordinary twine causes. Plymouth Twine works perfectly in every machine. More of it is made and used every year than any other kind, because it is known to be the best and has been for years. Binds more sheaves with less expense, no knots, no breaks, and is guaranteed full length and extra strength. Get Plymouth Twine from the local dealer. Look for the wheat-sheaf tag.

Use Plymouth Bags. Have the same high quality as our twine.

HAY FORKS . .

Specially selected handles
Oilers, oils, machine oil, scythe stones, section rivets.

Carbarundum stone. Special price 70 cents.

No farmer should be without one.

McLAREN'S HARDWARE

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

Tells how to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn or callus the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn or callus, root and all, lifts off with the fingers.

Freezone dries the moment it is applied, and simply shrivels the corn or callus without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but will positively rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or hardened callus. If your druggist hasn't any freezone he can get it at any wholesale drug house for you.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life.

If your work is tiring; if your nerves are excitable: if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion overcomes just such conditions.

It possesses in concentrated form the very elements to invigorate the blood, strengthen the tissues, nourish the nerves and build strength.

Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. Try it.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.

The Farmer

with a balance in the Bank is in an easy position. He is prepared for any emergency and is able to take advantage of any opportunities offering. He can make his purchases at the most favorable terms. His seed, implements and other requirements all cost less if paid for in cash.

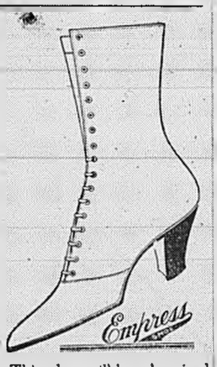
Open an account in our savings department and make a start towards independence.

50

The Bank of NovaScotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 110,000,000

PORT ELGIN BRANCH.
A. L. Wynat, Manager



This shoe will be advertised from Coast to Coast in Canada as "Empress" Shoes have been for years, and each season adds newer lines and greater beauty to this well-known shoe for women. Always above the others. We are agents.

James George & Son

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS

To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Kawartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourists tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares, with liberal stop overs.

GET YOUR TICKET IN ADVANCE

J. S. Cameron, Agent, Port Elgin, Both telephones.

Egypt Is Example of Solidarity of British Empire, Says Sultan

SULTAN HUSSEIN KAMEL, grandson of Mohammed Ali, granted an interview to a reporter a few days ago. "The longer you stop in Egypt the better you will come to love my country," he said. "Its spell will captivate you, and you will grow enthusiastic over its economic possibilities. There are four things that make Egypt the country most blessed of God in all the world—the generous Nile, the unfailing sun, the miraculously yielding land, and the industrious fellahin. The fellahin are essential, for these peasants combine with nature to give us our wealth. I was interested in them and gave my time and thought to bettering their lot when I was Prince Hussein, the country gentleman. I would prefer to be still Prince Hussein. And if I am now Sultan it is because I felt it my duty not to refuse the call that came so urgently to me to extend my paternal interest beyond the confines of my own estates to the fellahin of all Egypt. The interest of my country has always come before my own interest.

"I have experienced various fortunes," he continued. "I have had my period of exile. Whatever my lot, I have supported it with dignity, honor, and resignation. It is all the same to me. As Prince Hussein I was freer and happier. I had not all those cares and responsibilities and a burden of work that never ceases. But when Turkey entered the war, could I refuse? Could I, a prince of the house of Mohammed Ali, stand by and refuse to do my part in preventing the destruction of the work for the regeneration of the Egyptians that had been so gloriously begun by my immortal grandfather? Until Mohammed Ali came the Turkish domination was a curse to Egypt. It has been a blight to every land subjugated and held for long by the Osmanlis. Look at countries like Roumania, Greece, and Bulgaria, and contrast them with Turkey. The greatest object lesson in the world to the sentimentalist on the question of preserving the integrity of the Ottoman Empire is to go by train from Vienna to Constantinople. You pass through Hungary, Serbia, and Bulgaria, countries that have successively shaken off the Turkish yoke, and you see fine cities, rich fields, happy people.

THE SULTAN OF EGYPT.

"Cross the frontier into Turkey, the old frontier I mean, and at Mustapha Pasha you begin to see decadence in the filth, the uncultivated fields, the makeshift houses constructed of petroleum tins. Go from Alexandria to Smyrna and contrast those two ports. If the Germans believe that we Egyptians welcome the idea of a return to Turkish rule, that we are going to rise up and greet them as liberators when they come with their motley hordes to attack us, they have lost their reasoning faculty, their power of seeing things as they are." "The German newspapers say," the reporter remarked, "that the Egyptians are so eager to get rid of the English, especially since the protectorate was established, that the country is seething with sedition and that every Moslem will welcome the armies of the Khalif?"

"So much the better for us, if the Germans delude themselves and the Turks with any such wild notion. For it will bring them on and help to hasten their downfall. But, because you are writing for the great and intelligent American public I am willing to state openly that the Egyptians look on the English as friends and defenders. We know that we should have been lost last year had not the English come to our help. The English have been in the past what they certainly are now—a blessing to Egypt. I am certainly gratified with the measures that have been taken for the defence of my country and my people. More than that, I am confident in the efficacy of those measures. You may rest assured that Great Britain, for the sake of her colonial empire, will make a supreme effort to protect the Suez Canal and defend Egypt. She will not stop at any sacrifice of men or money. For this is vital. I have not the slightest apprehension. You need only look at the British troops in Egypt and to think of where they came from to realize how magnificently this war is proving the solidarity of the British Empire.

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE
Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address
LOUIS BLOCH,
22-4to Owen Sound, Ont.

NO MERCY SHOWN THEM.

Armenians Driven From Homes Like Sheep to the Slaughter.

In the January bulletin of the American Board of Commissioners' for Foreign Missions is told most graphically by a number of the party the story of a journey through Turkey, from a port on the Mediterranean to Constantinople. The journey began on a Monday morning a few weeks ago and the first stop was a little village where the party had to remain three hours.

"The town crier went through all the streets of the village, crying out that anyone who helped the Armenians in any way, gave them food, money or anything, would be beaten and cast into prison," relates the writer. "To help them we could do nothing; we were powerless to save their lives.

"Already the Turks had taken the American school and church, and after a procession through the streets had consecrated the church into a mosque and made the school a Turkish school. They had taken down the cross and put up the crescent. Some weeks before they had exiled the faithful Armenian pastor, who for a great many years had toiled there, as he said, 'to make a little oasis in the desert.'

"Hardly had we left the town when we began to meet one train after another, crowded, jammed with these poor people being carried away to some spot where no food could be obtained. At every station we stopped we came side by side with one of these trains. It was made up of cattle cars and the faces of little children were looking out from behind the tiny, barred windows of each car. The side doors were open and one could plainly see old men and old women, young mothers with tiny babies, men, women, and children all huddled together — human beings treated worse than cattle are treated.

"About 8 o'clock that evening we came to a station where stood one of these trains. The Armenians told us that they had been in the station for three days, with no food. They said the Turks forbade their buying food. At the end of each train was a car of Turkish soldiers, ready to drive the poor people on when they reached the desert, or to whatever place they were being taken.

"They told us that 20 babies had been thrown into a river as a train crossed, thrown by the mothers themselves, who could not bear to hear their little ones crying for food when there was no food to give them. One woman gave birth to twins in one of those crowded cars, and crossing a river she threw both her babies and then herself into the water. Those who could not pay to ride in these cattle cars were forced to walk. All along the road, as our train passed we saw them walking slowly and sadly along, driven from their homes like sheep to the slaughter.

Good Weather in France

Pte. W. Cairns, in writing his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Cairns, says that the weather is fine in France. "Good weather is one of the greatest assets to warfare. How is Sergt. Neil McGillivray getting along. He certainly got his share of wounds. Our battalion has been very lucky so far. I am the only one in our battalion representing Port Elgin in the trenches this trip. Ewart Geddes is back in the transport, and Stanley Morton is in Dundee. Many over here expect the war to end this fall. We sometimes use trained pigeons for carrying messages up the line. If shell fire is so heavy that no runners dare venture out the message is tied to the pigeons and then they are set free. So far the pigeons have never failed us, so you see they are of great value. Both pigeons carry the same message, for fear something might happen to one of them.

I am well, and happy, and send regards to all old friends."

BULL FOR SERVICE—Terms $1 for season cows. Payable January 1st. Wm. Robertson dairyman, Port Elgin.

A Handy Thing

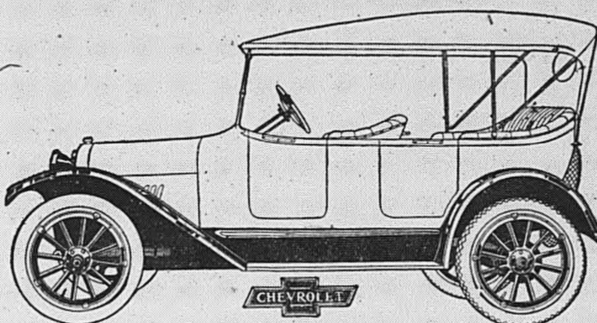
The handiest thing in the world is a wrist watch, and especially so in the summer weather. You'll be interested in looking at them.

Let us show you one of our fine line of clocks

Rowlands
The Jeweller

The Car De Luxe

Of the small car class



Series 490A CHEVROLET $750.00

A really beautiful small car, equipped with every desirable appointment for comfort and convenience.

Note these exclusive features

Yacht line body.
Finished in rich Chevrolet green.
Demountable rims
Sloping windshield
One-man mohair tailored top.
New design front and rear fender skirts
Non-Skid tires on the rear wheels.
Electric Lighting and starting system
Three speeds
Oil indicator
Robe Rail Foot Rail
Large, handy pockets in all doors
Hand pads on doors
Tire carrier designed with tail lamp and a license bracket attachment.

--SOLD BY--

POWER & COULTER, Port Elgin

EBENEZER

Mrs. Dunn of Owen Sound, visited at E. H. Grant's last week.

Mrs Stewart is visiting her sister, Mrs. McFadden.

Mr. and Mrs Maxwell of Chatsworth and Mr, and Mrs. McCullough, of the Island, are visiting at the homes of Frank and Robert Quigley.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Potts are visiting at the old home here.

Miss Gertrude McFadden has returned from the Summer School at Wiarton.

A number from here attended the summer meeting of the Farmers' Institute at Willscroft last Saturday. The meeting was interesting.

C. A. Thomas was at council meeting at Arkwright Monday

R. Grant has been on a visit to Lion's Head. He reports crops good up that way, and that there is a fine tract of country with good buildings.

Mr. and Mrs Burns of the 5th Elderslie, attended the picnic on Saturday.

Mrs J. W Robb and little daughter of Swan Lake, Man., are visiting her sister, Mrs. C. A. Thomas.

The union picnic of Mount Hope and Ebenezer Sunday Schools on Saturday was a grand success. Altho the weather was damp, the attendance was good. The booth was a great attraction. The ground was too wet for the sports and the baseball match was postponed. After lunch, which was served in the rink, the crowd assembled in the church where Ptes. George Martin and Will Martin were presented with a safety razor and fountain pen also a sum of money. This makes four boys out of the one family. Stanley has been in France for 18 months, while Edward is with the 160th. The address was read by E. H. Grant, and the presentation made by Leslie Wagner. After the program all went back to the rink where all sorts of games and races were indulged in. All enjoyed the day very much.

Our new minister preached on Sunday night. He made a very favorable impression.

A message has been received by Mrs. James O. Scott, of North Bruce, that her only sister, Mrs. John Eaton, of Gore Bay, Manitoulin Island, had passed away on July 13th. Deceased lady was born in Ireland, but had been a resident of Ontario for many years.

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now, will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places, and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College
Owen Sound, Ontario

remains open all summer to help meet the demand for trained office help. Enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Dept. A., Owen Sound, Ont.

SCHOOL REPORTS

The following is the of S. S. No. 2 Arran.

Jr. 4 to Sr. 4—Gordon Crawford.
Sr. 3 to Jr. 4— Agnes Hagess, Jean Esplen.
Jr. 3 to Sr 3.— Mona Campbell
Jr. 2 to Sr. 2—Nancy Maxwell.
Sr 1 to Jr 2— Norman Byers
L. E. Kennedy, Teacher.

The following is the report of S. S. No. 5 Saugeen for May and June

Class 4 — John Jeffrey, Howard Nelson, Leslie MacDougall, Archie MacDonald.
Sr. 3—xFlorence Bell, Resie Karcher, Mabel McVinnie.
Jr. 3—xDonelda Jeffrey, x Robert McCullough, xSadie McCullough, John McEwing.
Sr. 2—Mary Bell, Rickie Karcher
Sr. 1— Isabell Bell, David Jeffrey, xArchie McDermid, Elma Karcher
Jr. 1— xGoldwin McCullough Archie McCullough.
Primary — Harold Sutherland.

Note—Those marked x have merited approval for their increased diligence.
A. E. Cairns, Teacher

WILLOW CREEK

The terrific rains the past two weeks have done great damage. Some potatoes were re-planted on Saturday last.

Mr. Hugh Hunter had a cow killed by lightning on July 1st.

The Evangelical Sunday School held their annual Children's Day on Sunday. Although the weather was wet the attendance was good. Rev. H. Koppel was the speaker for the morning, and in the afternoon Rev. Mr. Gaehler. The program given by the children was a good one, and everybody enjoyed it.

SPECIAL

We have a few of Dr. Pierce's Family Medical Advisors. Good cloth binding which we offer at.

50 cents each

while they last.

R. C. Crawford
Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent

Reeve Johnston of Arran, was married on July 11th. to Miss Margaret McFortune of Elderslie Tp. A great many friends will extend congratulations.

Mr. Theo. Heitz, after many years of hard work on the farm, is to move to town, where he will take things easier.

Western Fair
London, Canada
Sept. 7th to Sept. 15th, 1917

1867—"A half Century of Success"—1917

The Great Agricultural Exhibition of Western Ontario

$32,000.00 in Prizes and Attractions

A very interesting programme, including Military and other features TWICE DAILY

FIREWORKS EACH NIGHT
TWO SPEED EVENTS DAILY

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES

Prize Lists, Entry Forms and all information from the Secretary.

Lieut.-Col. W. M. Gartshore, President
A. M. Hunt, Secretary

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson IV., July 22, 1917.

Sennacherib's Invasion of Judah.—2 Kings, 18. 13-19: 37.

Commentary.—I. Prayer for deliverence (18. 13-19: 19). Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, heard of the revolt of the nations which had been subject to him, and started on a campaign to subdue them. He marched with his army toward Egypt and on the way he subjugated forty-six cities of Judah and purposed to humble Jerusalem, the capital. Hezekiah undertook to secure relief from an assault by sending vast amounts of gold and silver to Sennacherib, believing that the Assyrian monarch would be satisfied if he should receive the tribute which Judah had withheld. Sennacherib accepted the tribute, but did not refrain from his purpose to attack Jerusalem, because he heard that the king of Ethiopia was on his way to wage war against him, and he wished to conquer the Jewish capital and hasten forward to meet the Ethopian army. Hezekiah made every effort possible to resist the Assyrian army, organizing his forces, strengthening his defences and inspiring courage into the hearts of his people. Having done all that lay in his power he had recourse to prayer. The officers of Sennacherib, having failed to intimidate Hezekiah and induce him to surrender, the Assyrian king sent a letter to him in a further attempt to frighten him into submission by telling of the successes of his army and speaking slightingly of the God of Israel. It was at this point that Hezekiah took Sennacherib's letter to the house of God and spread it before the Lord. In the prayer are adoration, confession of need, argument and petition. The king was jealous for the honor of the true God and could not bear to hear His name reproached. He acknowledged that the Assyrians had subdued other nations and had destroyed their gods, "the work of men's hands," and he prayed for deliverance that the kingdoms of the earth might know that the God of Israel was the true God.

II. The Lord's answer (vs. 20-34). 20. Isaiah—The great prophet to Judah. See the introduction to the first lesson of this quarter. Thus said the Lord—Through the prophet the Lord assured Hezekiah that His prayer was heard and would be answered. 21. concerning him—Sennacherib. The virgin the daughter of Zion—The unconquered capital of Judah. Jerusalem. laughed thee to scorn—As the Assyrian king had scorned and reproached Jerusalem, so that city scorned him. 22. Against whom—"The Holy One of Israel" was not to be classed with the gods of the heathn. 23, 24. The prophet repeated the boast that Sennacherib had made through his messengers to Hezekiah. The Assyrian king boasted of his great army and of his success in conquering the nation of Israel. He had invaded foreign lands where he had to dig wells to provide water for his armies. Rivers had not impeded his progress. 25-27. These verses and the one that follows constitute God's reply to Sennacherib, who had boasted of his strength and achievements. He had met with great success, but that success had come to him as the agency that God employed to execute His purpose to punish Israel for their sins. Sennacherib thought he had achieved great victories, while, in fact, Jehovah Himself had brought dismay and confusion to those whose territory He invaded. God declared that He knew the entire course of Sennacherib's life, even to his "rage against" Him. 28. Thy rage—Thy violence in carrying out thine own purposes. Tumult—Arrogant self-confidence. My hook in thy nose—This is the figure of the nose-ring for leading unruly animals. 29. This shall be a sign—An assurance of the certainty of what had been promised. God's word is here directed to Hezekiah. Such things as grow of themselves, etc.—Because of the invasion of the Assyrians, the ground had remained untilled that year, and the season was then too far advanced to sow for a harvest for the coming year, but the year following the usual cultivation of the soil would be resumed as the invaders would be entirely gone. 30. The remnant—According to Sennacherib's own record upon what is known as "Sennacherib's Cylinder," he had taken into captivity form Judah 200,150 persons, so that it was literally a remnant that remained. Take root downward, and bear fruit upward—A figure of stability, growth and fruitfulness. 31. The zeal of the Lord of hosts—God's intense interest in Judah's welfare. 32. Shall not come into this city—His loud boasting was utterly vain. He could not even make an attack upon Jerusalem. Nor cast a bank against it—No mounds would be constructed against the walls, from which the battering-rams and other instruments of war could be used. 33. By the same shall he return—His route would lie near the sea forty miles west of Jerusalem. 34. I will defend—As God had defended His people for centuries, as they turned to Him, so according to His faithful promise to David He would continue to defend them.

III.—The Assyrians' defeat (vs. 35-37). 35. the angel of the Lord .... smote—No information is given as to how the destruction of 185,000 men was accomplished. It may have been by a fierce storm or by a deadly plague. It was sudden, for "it came to pass that night." .... when they arose—That is, the survivors. The Revised version is better: "When men arose early in the morning, behold, these were all dead bodies."—It was clearly an indication of the exercise of divine power that so vast a number as this should be stricken down in one night. 36. departed .... and dwelt at Nineveh—The scripture records do not tell us how long Sennacherib lived after returning to Nineveh, but from inscriptions upon monuments it is found that he lived twenty years and carried on five campaigns, none of which were in Palestine. Nineveh was a magnificent city at this time, and one of the world's great centres. 37. worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god—Sennacherib was a worshipper of idols. This is the only mention in the scriptures of this god, and it is by no means certain what Nisroch was. It has been thought by some that the name might have reference to the eagle, inasmuch as a conspicuous figure on Assyrian monuments is the body of a man with the head of an eagle. his sons smote him with the sword—Adrammelech was named after the heathen god, as it was a custom in the east to name prices after the gods. These two sons conspired against their father and slew him that they might gain possession of his kingdom. Esarhaddon, who commanded a large army, thereupon assumed the title of king.

Questions.—Who was Sennacherib? Who was king of Judah? When did Sennacherib invade Judah? What was the nature of the letter which the king of Assyria sent to Hezekiah? What did Hezekiah do with the letter? What message did Isaiah bear to the king of Judah? What mistake had the king of Assyria made? What did the Lord promise to do for Hezekiah and his people? What sign was given that it would come to pass? What calamity befell the Assyrian army? What fate did Sennacherib meet? How is Hezekiah an example for us?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—A crisis in Judah.

I. Through mistaken peace methods.

II. Through unprincipled diplomacy.

I. Through mistaken peace methods. This history presents one of the most memorable crisis through which the kingdom of Judah ever passed. The Assyrians, the "rod of God's anger," hung over Jerusalem, showing how near destruction it was if God did not interfere. Despite the efforts of Hezekiah, the king, and Isaiah, the prophet, the people remained unchanged. The religious fervor, enkindled by the Passover, passed away and conditions became much as they were before. The Assyrians had taken all the fenced cities of Judah, a fearful blow to the prosperity and resources of the kingdom. Jerusalem has been spared only on payment of a ransom that greatly impoverished it. Despairing of help and faltering in his faith in God, Hezekiah made an unworthy submission. His conduct in this matter cannot be justified. He had himself transgressed through pride on the occasion of the visit of the messengers from Babylon. He had besides been seeking strength-en himself by a political alliance with Egypt, but no help reached him in the hour of extremity. Isaiah had warned him of that. Seeking alliance with other notions implied a lack of trust in God. As a nation, Judah was exposed to an overwhelming calamity. Hezekiah made full confession of his sad state. He felt that God's chastisement was upon him and that God alone could deliver. From Hezekiah's point of view it was a day of deep distress and mortification. With God it was a day of chastisement. For the Assyrians it was a day of blasphemy and impious vaunting against Jehovah. Hezekiah did well in requesting Isaiah's intercession. He was the one person whose faith was unshaken through all these perilous times.

II. Through unprincipled diplomacy. Hezekiah's gift to the king of Assyria had not saved him. Contrary to every principle of justice and kindness, to say nothing of honor, the king of Assyria dispatched his army again into Judea. Rabshakeh appeared as the diplomatist of the war king. By an impassioned harangue, fraught with insolence, falsehood and blasphemy, he urged Hezekiah and his people to surrender. He undertook to demolish, one by one, Hezekiah's confidences, and to show how vain it was for him to hope to carry on war. He mocked Hezekiah's faith as a mere fancy. He attempted to work upon Hezekiah's fears. He attempted to confound true religion with the superstitions of man, and the Lord Jehovah with the idols of the nations. Rabshakeh argued first from the standpoint of Sennacherib's strength, representing it to be greater than it was. He reasoned that, because Sennacherib had such immense armies and valiant soldiers and such numbers of them, he was invincible in war and could defy God and man. His mistake was soon demonstrated. The might of the invisible was to be declared against the power of the visible. Rabshakeh made false promises. He held before the people an attractive prospect. He sought to keep from view the prospect of conquest and captivity. The promises were alluring only by contrast with the fate that awaited them if they did not surrender. They were promises which never could have been fulfilled. Hezekiah was in deep distress of spirit at the haughty, defiant, confident tone of Rabshakeh. Though he had once wavered in his reliance upon God, he turned again in full confidence to Him. Hezekiah prayed to Jehovah as the God of his nation. He recognized His supremacy. He appealed to him as the Maker of heaven and of earth. He recognized the greatness of the deliverance which he sought. He was jealous of God's honor, sensible of his own weakness, trustful in God's power to save, reliant on the power of prayer. While Hezekiah was still at prayer, an answer was sent to him through the prophet Isaiah. He gave words of encouragement and assurance of deliverance. At the height of his pride and arrogance and self-trust the ungodly conqueror was stricken with failure and humiliated. He was shown that he was a mere man and that the fate of nations was not in his power. A mighty deliverance was vouchsafed to Hezekiah. T.R.A.

Sandy Knew How.

The kirk in a certain Scottish village was in urgent need of repair, and Sandy McNabb, a very popular member, had been invited to collect subscriptions for the purpose.

One day the minister met Sandy walking irresolutely along the road. He at once guessed the cause.

"Man, Sandy," he said earnestly, "I'm sorry to see ye in this state."

"Ah, weel, it's for the good o' the cause," replied the delinquent happily. "Ye see, meenister, it's through those subscriptions. I've been down the glen collectin' fun's an' at every hoose they made me hae a wee drappie."

"Every house? But—but—but surely, Sandy, there are some of the kirk members who are teetotalers?"

"Aye, there are; but I wrote tae them!"—Youngstown Telegram.

Don't hit a man when he has you down.

HOW A SUCCESSFUL DAIRY FARMER MAKES MONEY

Mr. D. C. Flatt Breeds Holsteins Second to None—He Grows Cheap Roughage and Buys Concentrates When They Are Cheapest—Produces Pure Milk With Milking Machine.

(From the Canadian Countryman.)

A speaker at the Eastern Dairymen's Convention, held at Napanee last January, said that the trouble with too many live stock men was that, although they were good cattle breeders, they were poor farmers. This may be true of some breeders, but it is certainly not true of them all. Rarely has the writer seen so fine a collection of Holstein cattle in one herd, and very seldom has he seen more striking evidences of good farming (and all that goes with it) than on Mr. D. C. Flatt's farm at Millgrove, six miles out of Hamilton.

Mr. Flatt is a feeder as well as a breeder. He has two large silos, and the day we were there (June 13) we found the cattle knee deep in clover pasture. The farm consists of 223 acres and a three year rotation of clover, corn and oats is followed. Mr. Flatt is a strong believer in clover, and sows it wherever possible. "I seed down every crop I can with red clover," said Mr. Flatt, "and at the present time 125 acres of the 223 acres of the farm is seeded down with clover. Clover does two things. It enriches the soil with nitrogen, and thus puts it into better condition to grow other crops, and it furnishes a first-class feed for the cattle. The cattle are up to their knees now in clover pasture, and feeding them this way pays. I am not feeding any grain at present to even the heaviest milking cows—not even to cows which give as much as 90 pounds of milk per day."

Rarely have we seen a herd of such uniformly high quality as that of Mr. Flatt. Not only are they extraordinary heavy milk producers, but they would hold their own anywhere as show cows.

Most feeders give at least some grain to the heaviest milking cows even when they are on the best of pasture, but as clover is richer in flesh forming constituents (protein) and energy-giving nutrients (starch or its equivalent) than the ordinary pasture grasses, Mr. Flatt's practice is based on sound scientific principles.

"There are about two months of every year that the cattle do not get grain," continued Mr. Flatt, "but when the pastures begin to dry up I feed not only grain but silage as well. We never let the cows go down in their milk flow through lack of feed. We sow a mixture of peas and oats to be used during the hot months of July and August as green feed, and also use corn for the same purpose."

Asked if he had had any trouble with clover sickness, Mr. Flatt replied: "No, we follow a definite rotation of crops and up till the present time have had no difficulty in getting a good catch of clover each time. We do not grow alfalfa, as our soil is too light for it, although on heavier types of soils I have no doubt of an excellent crop. We have not tried sweet clover, though we hear good reports of it. In my opinion sweet clover will never replace alfalfa. So far as I have observed, sweet clover's strong point is that it provides pasture earlier than alfalfa, and it is as a pasture crop that sweet clover excels. If it is used for hay it must be cut early as it rapidly becomes coarse and woody, and if allowed to reach this condition makes but inferior hay."

Although Mr. Flatt has been pasturing his cattle for years on clover, he never has any trouble with bloat. When he first turns the cattle out in the spring he takes care that the clover is not wet with rain or dew, and he only leaves them in the pasture for a short time.

This year only about four acres are in roots. Mr. Flatt likes roots for cows that are on test, but says that he is going out of roots as he finds that he can get more feed per acre by growing corn and at considerably less cost. He is a corn enthusiast, and thinks there is nothing like it for producing milk at a low cost. He feeds on the average about 40 pounds per head per day, but a cow on test gets about the same quantity of roots as well.

In our issue of April 28 we had an article on growing corn for silage, entitled "Grow Corn and Reduce the Feed Bill," in which we stated that at present prices for feeding stuffs silage was worth about $4 per ton for the food nutrients it contained, but that when its palatability and succulency were taken into consideration, that it was worth about $5.60 per ton when milk sold for $2 per hundred. "I read the article on corn that you had in The Countryman this spring," said Mr. Flatt, "and seeing that Eureka corn yielded better than any other variety, I bought 15 bushels of seed and planted 22 acres of it this spring. The first planting was done on May 17, and it has already received its first cultivation. So far I am more than pleased with it." The day we were at the farm (June 13) it was up about five inches and gave every promise of yielding a bumper crop.

"The varieties of corn that I had been in the habit of growing," continued Mr. Flatt, "were Wisconsin No. 7 and Leaming. From the table you gave in the paper the Eureka variety does not mature quite as early as some of the other varieties, but gives far and away the greatest yield of green corn. My idea in feeding silage is to give succulence to the ration, and if I can get the yield I do not mind even if the corn is not quite as rich in food nutrients as the earlier maturing but poorer yielding varieties. If I want concentrates I buy them, and do not expect silage to take their place."

Mr. Flatt buys a large quantity of feeding stuffs. Some of the feeds he buys are oil cake, cotton seed meal, bran and dried brewers' grains. We heartily recommend his system of buying to our readers. In fact, it is the only way to buy to advantage. Feeding stuffs are cheapest during the months of June and July, and these are the months when Mr. Flatt buys his winter feed. He is not in the dairying business—to use a slang expression—for the sake of his health and so he buys when he can buy the cheapest.

"Last summer," said Mr. Flatt, "I bought my winter's supply of bran in July for $18.18 a ton. During the winter bran was selling for as high as $48 per ton, so you can see what a saving I effected. I bought some oil cake at the same time for $32.50 per ton, and since then it has been selling at from $50 to $55 per ton. This year I have already bought some dried brewers' grains for $31 per ton. Some farmers do not buy feed during the summer, as they are afraid it will not keep. My experience has been that bran and the other feeding stuffs will keep indefinitely if stored in bags. Bran and other foods do not keep well, however, if stored loose, as they tend to become mouldy."

All the milk on the farm is all shipped to Hamilton and sold as "Baby Special" milk. This milk is produced in a strictly sanitary way, being cooled immediately it is drawn from the cow and kept at a low temperature until it is delivered to the consumer. The milk is tested by the Hamilton Health authorities, and the stables and milk utensils are regularly inspected. Last time they were inspected they scored 99 per cent. The herd is entirely free from tuberculosis, for which they are tested at frequent intervals. The cows are milked by machine.

"Many people claim that you cannot get pure milk when the milking is done with a machine," said Mr. Flatt, "but this has not been my experience. The proof of the pudding is in the eating of it, and the fact that we sell all our milk as "Baby Special" at 18 cents a quart should convince even the most skeptical that pure milk can be produced when a milking machine is used." We may say in passing that Mr. Flatt's evidence on the matter is in agreement with experiments carried on at the Ontario Agricultural College. Here, without adopting any unusual precautions, they were able to produce milk when the milking was done by machine, with a bacterial count of 5,000 to 10,000 per cubic centimetre. When we state that milk has as many bacteria as from 250,000 to 500,000 per cubic centimetre is recognized by the Toronto Health Authorities as fit for human consumption, it is evident that pure milk can be produced practically as easily when the milking is done by machine as when it is done by hand.

"The great thing in using a milking machine," continued Mr. Flatt, "is to keep it and all the parts scrupulously clean. The trouble with many people is that they do not give the machine proper attention. After milking is done the metal parts of the machine are thoroughly washed and scalded, and the rubber tubes and teat cups after washing are immersed in a disinfectant solution specially kept for the purpose. After using a milking machine for a number of years, I am convinced that if the machine is a good one to start with and does not give satisfaction, the trouble is not with the machine, but with the man who runs it. Our machine has three units, which milks the 28 cows that we are milking at the present time in about an hour and a quarter. One man runs the machine, while the other strips the cows."

Mr. Flatt has about 100 head of cattle and both from the point of view of usefulness and of beauty they would hold their own in any kind of competition. Jenny Boanerges Ormsby is a cow of great size and capacity. She is ten years old but looks like a three-year-old. She is giving at the present time under ordinary conditions 85 pounds of milk per day. She is the only cow that has given over thirty pounds of butter a week for five years in succession. She has had nine calves and is milking better than ever.

Daisy Mottle Beauty, weighing, we would estimate, about 1700 pounds, is a typical dairy cow. She had a bull calf by a son of Lulu Keyes who gave 122.8 pounds of milk per day and over 36 pounds of butter fat in a week. This cow as a four-year-old gave 31 pounds of butter fat averaging about 100 pounds of milk per day. The dam of Daisy Mottle Beauty gave 20,000 pounds of milk in a year's test and was milked only twice daily.

Another of Mr. Flatt's beauties. Observe the straight top line and the V-shaped body of the typical dairy cow. Utility and quality are combined in this cow to an extraordinary degree.

Royalton Canary Echo, a daughter of P. DeKol Violet, has given 17,000 pounds of milk in one year. She is a cow of outstanding quality and has exceptionally well developed milk veins. She has a bull calf whose sire's dam was the famous Lulu Keyes.

Ardella DeKol Teusen as a junior two-year-old made a world's record by giving 19 pounds of butter fat in one week 19 months after freshening. She and her four sisters are without doubt the finest group of Holsteins, so far as quality is concerned, we have seen.

A Sheaf of Maxims.

The end of reading (as of everything else we do), should be self-improvement.

Though you think all the world's a stage, learn to act well your part.

Education which does not promote conduct bears within it a moral stain.

It takes time and pains to learn what it is most profitable to do.

The spirit and love of dogmatism characterizes the imperfectly educated.

Live thy religion; then, shalt thou not need to argue or dispute about it.

We begin with studying how to learn, and end with learning how to study.

Principle is more than knowledge; a loving heart is better than much gold.

If to be just like others is your aim, you are predestined to be inferior.

To do our work well, we must believe in the worth of the work we are to do.

Our self-respect is largely due to the love we get in childhood and youth.

In the best poetry is found the richest expression of the deepest thought. —Archbishop Spalding.

Magnets May be Utilized.

A subsea magnet invented by a Japanese scientist named Nakahara, promises to be instrumental in locating many of the sunken submarines, warships and transports which have gone down in comparatively shallow water.

Tests of the magnet over the Japanese naval target grounds recently brought to the surface thousands of projectiles fired in practice. At the present price of scrap iron, the 680,000 shells which lie scattered at the bottom of the Japanese bays will be worth some $3,000,000.

It is suggested to use the magnet in extracting the shell scraps from the soil of the European battlefields. The value of this scrap iron alone would mount up to a very large sum. A development of the Nakahara magnet promises to be powerful enough to actually lift sunken vessels from the bottom of the sea. Magnets are now in use on land which are able to elevate a weight of 40,000 pounds.—New York "Journal of Commerce."

Dress-Ups.

Pussy-willow taffeta.
Point lace, and much of it.
Hand-embroidered organdies.

MARKET REPORTS

TORONTO MARKETS.

FARMERS' MARKET.

Dairy Produce—
Butter, choice dairy	$0 [illegible]	$0 [illegible]
Eggs, new-laid, doz.	[illegible]	0 40
Cheese, lb.	[illegible]	0 30
Do., fancy, lb.	0 [illegible]	0 35
Dressed Poultry—
Turkeys, lb.	0 30	0 32
Fowl, lb.	0 25	0 28
Spring chickens	0 [illegible]	0 45
Fruits—
Rhubarb, 3 bunches	0 00	0 10
Strawberries, box	0 12	0 15
Vegetables—
Asparagus, Can., bunch	0 07	0 08
Beans, new, small measure	0 00	0 20
Beets, new, bunch	0 00	0 05
Cucumbers, each	0 05	0 10
Cauliflower, Can., each	0 12	0 25
Carrots, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Celery, per bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cabbages, each	[illegible]	[illegible]
Horseradish, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Leeks, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lettuce, doz., bchs.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., head, doz.	[illegible]	1 00
Onions, bundle	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., small bkt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., Bermuda, box	[illegible]	[illegible]
Peas, Can., 6-qt. bkt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., 11-qt. bkt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Potatoes, per bag, old	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., new, bag	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., new, peck	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., small measure	[illegible]	[illegible]
Radishes, 2 bunches	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spinach, new, peck	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sage, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Savory, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Turnips, new, bunch	[illegible]	[illegible]
Tomatoes, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., bkt.	[illegible]	[illegible]

MEATS—WHOLESALE.

Beef, forequarters, cwt.	$14 00	$16 00
Do., hindquarters	18 [illegible]	[illegible]
Carcases, choice	16 50	17 50
Do., common	12 50	[illegible]
Veals, common, cwt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., medium	12 50	14 50
Do., prime	[illegible]	[illegible]
Heavy hogs	18 50	[illegible]
Shop hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mutton, heavy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Abattoir hogs	21 [illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., Spring, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]

SUGAR MARKET.

An advance of 10c per cwt. was brought into effect yesterday at [illegible] on all grades of Canadian refined sugars.

Local wholesale quotations on Canadian refined sugar, Toronto delivery, in effect July 10—

Lantic, granulated	100 lbs.	$[illegible]
Royal Acadia granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Redpath granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Dominion Crystal	100 lbs.	[illegible]
No. 1 yellow, all refiners	100 lbs.	7 [illegible]
Dark yellow	100 lbs.	7 [illegible]

[illegible] bags, [illegible] granulated 100-lb. bags; 20-lb. bags, 10c over 100-lb. bags; 5 and 2 lb. cartons, 20c over 100-lb. bags.

TORONTO CATTLE MARKETS.

Export cattle, choice	11 [illegible]	[illegible]
Butcher cattle, choice	10 [illegible]	11 [illegible]
do. do. medium	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. common	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butcher cows, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. medium	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do. canners	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. bulls	[illegible]	[illegible]
Feeding steers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Stockers, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Milkers, choice, each	[illegible]	[illegible]
Springers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sheep, ewes	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bucks and culls	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs	16 00	17 00
Hogs, fed and watered	16 [illegible]	[illegible]
Calves	[illegible]	[illegible]

OTHER MARKETS.

WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE.

Wheat—	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Oct.	[illegible]
Oats—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dec.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Flax—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	2 64	[illegible]
Dec.	2 61	2 61	[illegible]	2 61

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

Minneapolis.—Wheat—July [illegible]; September, [illegible]; cash—No. 1 Northern, $2.35 1-2 to $2.45 1-2; No. 2 do., $2.25 1-2 to $2.35 1-2. Corn—No. 3 yellow, [illegible]. Bran—[illegible].

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

Duluth.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, [illegible]; No. 1 Northern, [illegible]; No. 2 do., [illegible]. Linseed—[illegible]; July, [illegible]; September, [illegible]; October, [illegible].

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Cattle, receipts [illegible].
Market strong.

Beeves	[illegible]	[illegible]
Stockers and feeders	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cows and heifers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Calves	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hogs, receipts [illegible].
Market slow.
Light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mixed	[illegible]	[illegible]
Heavy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Rough	[illegible]	[illegible]
Pigs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bulk of sales	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sheep, receipts [illegible].
Market weak.
Wethers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs, native	[illegible]	[illegible]

CHARM OF THE BIBLE.

Its Poetic Beauty and the Marvel of Its Word Pictures.

[illegible] book as the Bible [illegible] poetic beauty. We read the book of Job—which, by the way, [illegible] is said to have [illegible] and as we read it even the stars themselves seemed less wonderful than the description of their marvel and mystery.

Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades or loose the bands of Orion?

Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth in his season? Or canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons?

Or we read in the thirty-seventh chapter of the book of Ezekiel of that weird valley that was full of bones—and as I prophesied there was a noise, and behold a shaking and the bones came together, bone to bone—surely one of the most wonderful [illegible] in all literature.

Or we read the marvelous [illegible] of Jeremiah and Isaiah or the music of the melodious [illegible] of King David. We read the solemn [illegible] of the "King Ecclesiast" to remember our Creator in the days of our youth, with haunting pictures of old age, and the loveliness of "The Song of Songs" passed into our lives forever.

To this purely literary love of the Bible there has been added within the last few years a certain renewed [illegible] for it as the profoundest book of [illegible] and [illegible] it has regained even some of its old authority as a spiritual guide and stay. And I will confess for myself that sometimes as I fall asleep at night I wonder if even the most [illegible] of modern writers has written anything to equal the [illegible].—Richard Le Gallienne in [illegible].

Well Dressed.

This year it is—
To be "pleasingly" gowned
To give at least the impression of simplicity.
And to surrender all thoughts of the bizarre until fall

The farmers who have made a rule of eating only what they cannot sell are likely to starve this year.—Marinette (Wis.) Eagle Star.

Just because a fellow can't get into the aviation corps he needn't go up in the air about it.

THROUGH MANY TRIALS

"I am going now, Lionel. I have such a lot of practicing to do to-night, dear; and Mr. Dumaresq has come to keep you company, so——"

When she is interrupted by the pillows being flung off with startling vehemence—flung up in the air, in fact, and the prostrate figure leaps into an erect position with equal suddenness, and Dumaresq notices that though she winces for an instant, Imogene never moves or shrinks an inch, and smiles pleasantly.

"One would think you were playing 'Jack-in-the-box,' Lion!" she says, laughing. "You have made my heart quite jump!"

"I don't want anyone to keep me company!" he says, with furious emphasis; "and I won't have this man in here! I don't want him, and I won't have him, and I won't allow him to come into my rooms! I told you I would not!" to his sister, "and I will not! And I will have my way in spite of all the crew downstairs—Dr. Rowlands and the governor, and Aunt Althea, and Evelyn! I'll pay them out if they meddle with me!"

And he emphasizes his assertion by dealing the sofa such a tremendous kick and push that it runs on its casters across the wide room, veers half around like a crazy old ship, and goes ashore with a resounding crash and bang against the sideboard; and Dick Dumaresq bursts out laughing.

"Excuse my laughing, sir," he says, frankly and respectfully, but laughing still; "but I never saw a much better kick than that!"

And after a moment's pause and a wrathful stare, the lad joins in the laugh himself; but it is a loud, noisy, discordant laugh, that Dumaresq knows is surely ominous of a diseased brain.

"Yes!" he retorts, speaking angrily and resentfully still; "I could kick you into the middle of next week, if I tried!"

"Oh, Lionel, dear!" Imogene mutters, softly touching his arm as she passes with the lamp she has just lighted.

And then, for the first time, Dumaresq sees Lionel Trefusis as he stands by his sister's side, and sees that he is a tall, powerful made young fellow, looking older than his eighteen years, with handsome features, white skin, deep-blue eyes, and dark hair, and that he is a maniac.

"Could you, sir?" Dumaresq says, good-temperedly, in reply to the menace. "I hope you won't, then; I have some letters to write to-morrow."

And once again the lad bursts into a harsh, nervous laugh.

"Well, you shan't stay here, at all events," he says, obstinately. "I said I wouldn't have you here, and I won't, so take your departure, if you please, as quick as you can!"

"Well," Dumaresq retorts, "I shall be very happy to obey you, Mr. Trefusis, if I can open this door. Your footman put me in here, but I'll be shot if I can tell how to get out again!"

And for the third time young Trefusis laughs and seems intensely amused at some idea of his own, and Imogene laughs a little as she looks in uncertainty from one to the other. She moves forward a step or two as if to show Dumaresq the fastening of the door, but at his quick gesture of refusal turns aside to an old-fashioned corner cupboard, where she affects to be very busy, and Dumaresq fumbles at the door, until young Trefusis, out of patience, strides across to open it himself.

"You're a pretty sort of fellow for a soldier!" he says, scornfully. "Can't find how to open a door?"

"Well, Mr. Trefusis, I've a puzzle tobacco box, and I'll wager anything you like you can't open it!" Dumaresq retorts, pleasantly still.

"Do you? Bring it out. Wager you anything you like you lose!" the lad says, excitedly. "Wager you half a sovereign I open your puzzle box! Come!"

"Done!" Dick Dumaresq laughs. "I'll fetch it, Mr. Trefusis; it's in my box. Wherever my room is, though, I can't tell," he adds, suddenly.

"Did not Borlase tell you your room was in here, Mr. Dumaresq?" Imogene asks, in a distressed tone. "He should have done so. The room [illegible] my brother's, Mr. Lionel's, is yours—that door yonder."

"I say, Minnie, what a folly you told him!" Lionel exclaims, maliciously; "for you might have taken him down the front staircase and brought him up the turret stairs, and he would never have known where his room is, after all."

Where the point of this jest lies Dumaresq fails to discover, as he hurries to the door the young lady has indicated, and he hears her kind, sweet, young voice saying something gently reproachfully.

He discovers his room, discovers his trunk with some difficulty—fails to discover a light, matches or candles in the gray twilight, but manages, nevertheless, to find the puzzle box, wash and brush his hair in a few minutes and returning quickly, discovers Imogene Trefusis trying to [illegible] heavy round table into an upright position.

She looks up with a simple blush and a quick, grateful smile, as Dumaresq lifts the table up and in the centre of the room in half a minute, and then Imogene spreads a white cloth on it herself.

"The servants have so much to do elsewhere," she says quietly, "and we make so much extra work up here in Lionel's rooms that I like to do all I can. And look, please"—she points to the broken cups and saucers which she had gathered into a little basket, and then to the china on the tea tray—"when—when anything gets broken, please tell me. I always keep cups and saucers in that cupboard," she says, in a low tone, "and we replace them without saying anything."

"I understand, Miss Trefusis," Dumaresq says, quickly. "A little accident with china or glass isn't worth making a bother about."

"And I thank you so much," continues Imogene, very earnestly, looking up at him with those wistful eyes, "for managing so well about the door, when he told you to go, you know. He was so angry and excited because they told him he was going to have 'a keeper'; he has been so angry all this afternoon when he heard you were coming. He said that he would not have 'a keeper' for him, and I only wanted Lionel to think you came to teach him fencing, and walk with him, and keep him company; he is so dreadfully lonely when Vivian goes back to school, and I am only a girl!" the poor little sister says, with tears.

"Lady Althea objects to my being here at all, I suppose," Dumaresq says, quietly. "I thought as much downstairs. Well, don't trouble yourself, Miss Imogene; I will try to make your brother like me for a companion when he is pretty well; and when he is ill and irritable, why, a few hard words won't hurt me."

He laughs cheerily as he marches about with his measured, soldierly tread, putting the chairs in their places and straightening the rugs, and drawing down the blinds, while Imogene lays the table neatly for tea.

Later on in the evening, for no one comes to disturb the little party of three by the cheerful fireside, a sudden odd fancy occurs to Dumaresq respecting Imogene. There has been a long, quiet pause, as Lionel is growing sleepy, and, as it is nearly supper time, Imogene is busy with some fresh housewifely occupation.

And, as Dumaresq sits listening to the wind howling drearily outside, and the rain beating, storming against the windows for the lowering gray skies have amply fulfilled their promise—and watching the fair, young, maidenly figure as it flits about in the firelight, he suddenly fancies that she—the youngest daughter of the house of Trefusis—is very like what he should have pictured the Venetian senator's fair and hapless daughter to have been.

He does not, or he does not care to, pursue the association of ideas which leads him to compare Imogene with Desdemona.

It may be the coincidence of Shakespearean names; what other similarity should then be between Othello's bride and this fair child in "the maiden blossoms of her teens?"

Respecting Dumaresq himself, Lionel seems to have strange fancies on his own account, for once, when Dumaresq is telling an anecdote of one of his comrades, the boy asks, curiously:

"A sergeant? Did you say you were a sergeant?"

"I had the honor of being a non-commissioned officer in her majesty's service," Dumaresq answers, gravely.

"Non-commissioned! Why weren't you a commissioned officer—a lieutenant or a captain—in the rank of a gentleman?" Lionel inquires, with an imperious frown.

Imogene, standing near, sees Dumaresq flush to the roots of his crisp, wavy hair, and her own fair face flushes as deeply in sympathy.

"Why should I be in the rank of a gentleman?" he asks.

"Because you are educated!" Lionel says, shrewdly. "You speak grammatically, you know French and German—ay, better than Evelyn, and she thinks she is highly accomplished, I can tell you! You say you can draw, and you know something of music; you have white hands, and you look like a gentleman, and you had no business to go into the army along with men who cleaned boots and ran errands!" says Lionel, excitedly, with a resentful memory of the absent brother of Sam Trecithick.

"Perhaps you are right," Dumaresq says, slowly, in a low tone of forced composure. "Perhaps I ought not to have done it; but that is years ago, and it's too late to regret it now."

He laughs carelessly as he speaks, but rises from his seat and goes to the window to look out into the murky night.

Oh, Lionel!" Imogene says, with keen reproach in her gentle tones, murmuring in her brother's ear—"you have hurt his feelings. Poor Dumaresq! How can you tell why he enlisted, Lionel? There may have been some strong reason for it."

She is kinder than ever, more courteous than ever, to make amends for her brother's fault for the rest of the time, and when she sits down once more to preside at the simple supper table of homely dainties—the big glass jug of sparkling cider, another big glass jug of fresh creamy milk, home-baked fresh bread, butter of that day's churning, and sweet, new cheese, and silvery-green lettuces—she says, with a smile and sigh of regret:

"I always do like my supper up here in Lionel's rooms so much! So much better than dining downstairs at seven o'clock with papa and Aunt Althea and Evelyn!"

"Ugh!" from Lionel, in a growl of disgust. "I wouldn't dine downstairs every evening for any amount of money!"

"Well, you see, I must, dear; papa wishes it—unless when you are alone," Imogene says, reluctantly. "And now Mr. Dumaresq has come, you know I have no excuse!"

"And shall we not see you of an evening any more, Miss Trefusis?" Dumaresq asks, regretfully.

"Oh! I shan't say any more! I generally manage to steal up here for an hour if I can't stay longer," laughs Imogene; and then, by and by she rises, and bids Dumaresq a cordial good-night, kisses her brother, and departs, and half the brightness and warmth of the room seem to depart with her.

Lionel sighs impatiently once or twice in the blank that her absence seems to have caused to fall on their spirits.

"I say, Dumaresq," he says, at last, in his abrupt manner, "what do you think of my sister?"

Dumaresq starts slightly at the question.

"I think," he says, slowly and constrainedly, "she is a very kind-hearted, amiable young lady."

"She is more than that, sir!" young Trefusis says, flushing with excitement, "She is the best girl, and the kindest girl, and the most faithful girl that ever lived, and no one could help liking her and respecting her that knew her, sir!—no one! And the man that didn't like her must be a fool—a fool sir, and he ought to be hanged for a fool—and I would tell him so to his face!"

When his charge has gone to rest, late on toward midnight, Dumaresq sits alone by the low-burning fire on this first night of his life in this new sphere of existence, and thinks and thinks, fruitlessly and profitlessly, and regretfully—with regret that is without hope.

"I wish I had not come here," he says, at length, rising with a bitter sigh, to lean his head on his clasped hands on the mantelshelf—"I wish I had never come here! It has made me feel for the first time in ten years that I made a mistake. It has made me feel what I never thought I should have felt—bitter regret for my lost birthright! It has made me feel," he says—and his head sinks lower, clasped round convulsively with his hands—"as if I saw the ghost of myself going on lonely, unloved, wifeless, childless, homeless—leaving what might have been all behind me! I felt it when that sweet, high-bred girl was here, and I thought how, once, I might have had the right to sit by her side as her equal, instead of being honored by her kind condescension as a servant. I wish I had never come here," he says, looking about wildly for a moment; "I wish I could escape now—walk right out into the rain and storm—run away, in fact, like a coward, from a place where I feel as if there was a battle to be fought—ay, fought out single-handed, between myself and a bitter temptation!"

CHAPTER V.

"Dear me! such a lot of things seem happening now!" Imogene says, running into Lionel's sitting room the next afternoon, crimson and panting with haste and excitement. "Only think, Lionel"—and then she sees Dumaresq, and blushes and laughs in girlish embarrassment, "I didn't know you were there, Mr. Dumaresq," she says, naively; "but I really could not keep my news to myself any longer, and I haven't a moment to stay. Aunt Althea wants me, and Evelyn wants me—only think, Lionel! Evelyn and Aunt Althea have got an invitation to go to London for two months, and they are going off the day after to-morrow! Evelyn is so delighted, and so am I——"

"You're not going, Minnie," Lionel interrupts, with a look of entreaty and alarm.

"No—no, my dear; why should I go?" Imogene says, simply. "Only Evelyn will have her first season in town, and she has been looking forward to it so much, and she is so glad that, of course, I am gad, too, though it will seem so lonely downstairs without her."

"Will it? Well, it won't be lonely upstairs," growls Lionel, sullenly, "for she never comes near me from one month to another!"

"Well," Imogene says, striving to speak as brightly as before, and failing, "from whom do you think the invitation has come? You would never guess, Lionel!"

"If it was for Aunt Althea particularly, I could guess in a minute," answers Lionel, looking wickedly jocose.

"Who?" asks poor Imogene, innocently.

"A gentleman who is not mentioned in polite society," Lionel says, demurely.

"I—don't know what you mean, Lionel," his sister says, flushing again, but speaking with reviving dignity, and continuing her story nervously, lest he say something worse. "The invitation has come from some poor mamma's cousin, Sir William Fetherick, you know."

"Yes, I know," Lionel says, vexatiously, "a horrid old fellow, with a surly underlip and a face all full of wrinkles and puckers, as [illegible] as a Jew, and as mean as he can be."

"Well, you may say what you like, Lionel," Imogene retorts, warmly, "but he has written a very nice, kind letter of invitation to papa and Aunt Althea, and he says he has lately taken a nice house at Kensington, and his young niece has come to stay with him, and he thought it would be well if she and Evelyn could go into society together this season, and Aunt Althea chaperon them. And he is very wealthy, you know, and said that as far as lay in his power he would afford the dear girls every advantage, and would order riding horses for Evelyn and Myra, his niece, and oh! everything that they can wish for they will have, and Evie will go everywhere she is longing to go, and see all the plays and operas and pictures, and all the celebrated people. And I think it is so delightful for her. I can't help being as glad as can be!" concludes Imogene, her eyes shining like stars, and the color ebbing and flowing beneath the clear, smooth skin in her unselfish joy and excitement at the good fortune that has befallen her sister.

"You are as pleased as if you were going yourself for the season, Miss Trefusis," Dumaresq says, watching the bright, pure, happy face intently.

"A great deal better," laughs Imogene, gayly. "Now I must run away and help Evelyn with ever so many things."

"Dressmaking and millinery, of course," Lionel observes, with a contemptuous expression.

"No, indeed," Imogene answers, with dignity. "Evelyn would not wear a country-made dress in London, Lionel. She is to have a lot of new dresses made in town as soon as she goes."

"Dear me," the boy again says, sarcastically. "Aunt Althea has been pinching and saving to some purpose."

(To be continued.)

MAGIC BAKING POWDER
READ THE LABEL
NO ALUM

FARM AND GARDEN

(Experimental Farm Notes.)

While a maximum production of honey is of pressing importance in this war-food year, yet increasing the bees for next season must not be neglected.

Roughly speaking, the bees that are in the hives at the commencement of the honey-flow gather the crop, while the brood builds up the colony for next year, unless there is to be another important honey-flow. This brood is very valuable for forming nuclei, because these, started early with the laying queen, or ripe queencell, will build up into strong colonies during the honey flow. This is the basic principle upon which an apiary can be quickly built up while at the same time an almost full honey-crop is secured.

In newly-formed nuclei containing brood in all stages there is always more or less desertion of bees and consequent death of the young brood and sometimes chilling and death of the older brood even when the nuclei are skilfully made by an experienced apiarist. Further, queens may not be obtainable, or they may be lost in introduction. Robbing of the newly-formed nuclei has also to be guarded against, but during the height of the honey-flow only carelessness will cause this; towards its end, however, the danger of robbing grows so great that it is difficult to maintain newly-formed nuclei even when strong. Desertion may be checked by stopping the entrance with grass; the bees will make their way out when the grass dries and shrinks in about two days, but care must be taken to avoid overcrowding the confined bees, which would lead to stifling, especially in hot weather. A good way to overcome the loss of young brood is to place the brood over a queen excluder a week before its removal from the parent hive. This may be done in the ordinary course of relieving congestion in the brood chamber as a means to discourage swarming, a frame or two of empty comb or of foundation being placed in the brood chamber when the brood is raised.

All of these risks may be greatly minimized as follows:—

Have all the queens' wings clipped (this is not essential), and when a colony of a strain that it is desired to propagate swarms, move the parent hive to a new stand, and place the swarm in an empty hive on the old stand, the queen having been picked off the ground and placed in the empty hive. The swarm will return to the new hive at the old stand. The field bees will now join the swarm, and the super should be transferred from the parent hive to the swarm which will produce the crop of honey. The colony, now depleted of bees but rich in brood, is divided a week later into three to six nuclei, each nucleus consisting of two or three frames containing brood and honey carrying two or three queen-cells containing queens soon to emerge with the adhering bees.

This method has the great advantage that it not only controls and satisfies the troublesome swarming instinct but it helps to secure the desired ends by natural means. The honey gatherers are segregated into a strong force, and the brood, being mostly capped, is not likely to get chilled; the bees desert neither it nor the queen-cells readily, and all trouble in raising and introducing queens is avoided. The bees in the newly formed nuclei are in the post-swarming stage, when their instinct is to spread themselves over and incubate as much brood as possible, and especially the queen-cells.

The beginner should be warned not to divide the parent colony into too many weak nuclei, but this fault may be rectified in the autumn by uniting. The ideal conditions for building up nuclei are a slow honey-flow throughout August and early September. Fortunately these are supplied in most Canadian localities by goldenrods, asters and buckwheat.

Mismated queens should be replaced any time up to the first or second week in October, preferably not during the robbing season.

PEACH TREE BORER.

Borers are a source of great trouble to tree owners, ruining many fruit and ornamental trees every year.

The moth of the peach tree borer is thin winged and of a bluish color. It lays its eggs at the base of the trunk of the tree just below the surface of the ground on the bark of the tree. Around most trees there is a space between the tree and the soil made by the swaying of the tree or the earth drying up, and it is here that the moth deposits its eggs in the early summer.

The eggs hatch early in August and the little white grubs, so small they can scarcely be seen, begin eating their way into the bark of the tree.

In young trees the bark is pierced in a few days, but it takes them longer to get through the bark of old trees. Their presence can be detected by the yellowish brown powder exuded and the yellow gum formed by the sap of the tree.

An old fruit grower suggests banking up the earth around the base of the trees early in May and removing the earth in August. The eggs will be laid on the elevated soil, which will fail to hatch if the soil is removed at the right time, and if left until the eggs are hatched the borers are easily found and destroyed before they get into the tree.

The trees should be gone over every two weeks and see that the soil is packed close to the trees to prevent the moth from depositing the eggs far below the top of the little mound.

Six or eight inches high is sufficient for the mounds around young trees, but with large trees eight to ten inches is none too high.

NOTES.

Extreme hot or cold weather is not a good time for pigs to be born.

It is a good plan to start a hog on milk, feed it on grass, and finish it off on grain.

Stalls around the pig trough will prevent the stronger animals from plowing away the weaker.

Generally a well-matured sow does not cost as much for keeping as a young and growing one.

If you want your horses to be sleek, fat and strong, feed them molasses—the old-fashioned New Orleans black article. Mix it with chopped hay, a pint to a peck, and the horse will do the rest.

When the owner of a good mare breeds her to a stallion interior either in breeding or individuality to herself, he has taken a step backwards. A mare should be bred to her equal always, and to her superior if such a horse can be found.

Tacking small squares of tarred paper over leaks in a roof will prove an inexpensive method of checking them. The upper edge should be tucked under the shingles.

A coat or two of varnish will effectively stop small leaks in oil or gasoline can. Apply on the outside.

The stub of an ax handle that sticks tight may easily be removed by boring a number of small holes close together with a small bit and then joining them with a chisel. The pieces can then be driven out.

A farmer may stamp all his tools and machinery by tracing his name on the metal part of them in sulphuric acid. A nickel's worth at the drug store will do the job. Apply with a piece of wood.

As an assistance in preventing lice from overrunning the colts some of the different coal-tar dip preparations sprayed into the coat frequently will do a lot of good. It is quite dangerous to use a wash preparation in cold weather, and spraying will be found much more satisfactory than dusting with powder.

A check in the growth of a colt means something off his value when he becomes a horse.

A fine-appearing horse with a poor ancestry is a very uncertain kind of breed too, and should be avoided if a well-bred horse can be secured.

Given all other requisites, the perfection of bodily vigor and ability to perform depend largely upon the food, its character and amount.

In neglected orchards the bark becomes dull and lifeless. A limb cut or broken off leaves a dead stump. Many little suckers cover the body of the tree, and thereafter such trees will not produce clean or full-sized fruit. Many results are the direct effect of neglect, either from want of knowledge or attention. Orchards in this condition may be revived and made productive by the use of the pruning knife and scraper, and the practice of spraying, breaking up the sod ground underneath the trees and cultivating it.

A good stimulant liniment for use in the stable is made of two ounces each of alcohol, oil of turpentine and liquor ammonia fortier, with water to make a pint. This liniment is strong or weak in proportion to the amount of water used.

Have your bees in condition that the slightest flow of nectar can be gathered and stored. Remember it takes 21 days from the time the egg is laid by the queen until the baby bees commence to climb out of the cell, to act as nurses and general servants inside the hive; then a few days more before they enter the strenuous life of the foragers, gatherers of pollen and nectar.

Good drainage is an important factor in selecting muck soil for profitable onion growing.

Lime cannot be applied with profit except to the acid muck soils.

Boys and Girls.

The difference is apparent early: A boy has as much fun in stoning a cat as a girl has in hunting for violets. A boy's curiosity is directed to the ice-box, a girl would like to see what is in the top bureau drawer.

A girl can give the impression when away from home that her parents are wealthy; a boy cannot.

Every boy is old enough to be welcome to sit in the neighbor girl's parlor many years before his sister thinks he is old enough to sit in the parlor at home.

A girl is never so young that she will reveal to guests at a party that the spoons are borrowed; a boy child never grows so old that he fails to.

Give a boy a dollar and he will eat it; give his sister one and she will wear it.

A brother and sister may have hair of the same shade, but the boy's is called red and the girl's auburn.—Youth's Companion.

A Strange Beast.

The most primitive order of mammals, the monotremes, are confined to Australia. There is the platypus, a strange beast which lays eggs like a turtle, but suckles its young, has horny pads for teeth and a bill like the duck. Its front feet are webbed, and both back and front feet have claws. Little wonder that he has received many names or that his scientific designation is Ornithorhynchus paradoxus.—National Geographic Magazine.

Redpath SUGAR

has sweetened half a century with the same crystal purity that makes it the favorite to-day. Buy it in original packages and be sure of the genuine.

"Let Redpath Sweeten it."

2 and 5 lb. Cartons—
10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.

Made in one grade only—the highest!

HOW IS YOUR APPETITE?

Loss of appetite during the summer months is a common trouble, and indicates that the digestive system is out of order. Lacking a healthy appetite, many people—especially women—go too long without food, or eat sparingly because food seems to distress them, and it is no wonder that they complain that they are constantly tired and unable to stand the hot weather. This simply means that the digestive system is not doing its proper work; and that the nutriment that should come from the food is not being distributed to the various organs of the body. In other words, the blood is growing thin and watery.

You need a summer tonic, and in all the realm of medicine there is no tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Take a short treatment with these pills now and notice how promptly your appetite returns and your power to digest food improves. Your food will then do you good, your strength will return and you will no longer complain that the hot weather tires you out.

The best time to begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the moment you feel the least bit out of sorts. The sooner you do so the sooner you will regain your old time energy. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PUT UP PLENTY OF PRESERVES

INCREASED COST OF SUGAR IS SURPRISINGLY LOW.

Women Now Realize What a Foolish Extravagance it Was to Do Without Homemade Preserves.

There is nothing quite so effective as facts and figures to demolish a fallacy.

Last year, when sugar went up a few cents in price, some people decided that they would not keep up their regular supply of home-made preserves. They could only see the 2-cent or 3-cent increase in the price of sugar. They could not see how much more it would cost them to replace preserves with anything else. They did not stop to figure how this increase in the cost of sugar was going to affect the cost of preserving.

Others did, however, and proved that the cost of preserving, due to the increased cost of sugar, had been greatly exaggerated.

Here is the way these clever women proved it. Before the war, we know that sugar was 5½ cents a pound. Because of war conditions, the price of sugar fluctuates, but the retail price for the best granulated sugar averages 8½ cents a pound. This is an average increase of only 3 cents a pound.

Every good housekeeper knows that a quart jar of preserved berries or fruit requires only half a pound of sugar, so that the increased cost of preserving, due to the increased cost of sugar, is only 1½ cents a pound.

This is why a jar of home-made strawberries, raspberries, cherries, plums, peaches or pears is about the most inexpensive sweet or dessert that can be put on the table.

Besides the economy of putting up a goodly supply of home-made preserves, there is another reason. We must conserve our food supply. We must save our fruit crops. Last year, because of the mistaken idea of economy, hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of berries and fruit were wasted. Now that the women realize that the cost of preserving was greatly exaggerated last year, they are determined to do more preserving, and also to enjoy an abundance of delicious home-made jams, jellies and preserves this winter.

Traffic in Human Hair.

Italians take the lead in human hair traffic, the main source of their supply being obtained from the peasant women of Italy, Dalmatia and Switzerland. Several times a year these human hair merchants send their agents around to collect supplies, which are usually immense, for hair-growing is cultivated on a very large scale by these women and wields a good remuneration to the producer. Two crops of hair a year is not extraordinary among the peasant women. Half the hair at the back of the head is shorn off, the remaining half being drawn over the exposed part and dressed in such a manner as only to be detected on very close scrutiny and by those experienced in the trade.—Family Herald.

He Saved Time.

An English weaver who had spent two or three years in America, was paying a visit to the old mill to see some of his former workmates.

One of them said to him: "I hear it's all hustle and bustle in America. In fact, you haven't time to eat."

"Hustle and bustle," said the visitor. "Why, when I left here, I spelt my name 'Mirrill,' but now I spell it 'Merrill.'"

"How's that?" asked his friend.

"Because," replied the Americanized one, "I haven't time to dot the i's."—Exchange.

Taking Him Down.

A lawyer with a liking for billiards had occasion recently to visit a small town in the west of Scotland. While there, seeking to pass the time, he found a new and excellent billiard table. Upon inquiring if there was anybody about who could play the landlord referred him to one of the natives. They played several games, but the result was against the lawyer. Try as he might, the countryman won every game.

"Mr. ——," the lawyer remarked, "I've quite a reputation at home. They consider me a good billiard player, but I'm not in your class. May I inquire how long you have played?"

"Oh, for awhile back," replied the native. "But, I say, I dinna want to hurt yer feelin's, but you're the first fellow I ever beat!"—London Tit-Bits.

The only turning point in many a man's life is when he is turned down.

Corsets
Hosiery
Underwear
Handkerchiefs

Are a specialty in the Ladies' department. A splendid range in Raw Silk at greatly reduced prices this month, see the window display on Saturday.

Butter and Eggs Wanted

Falconer Bros.

Delayed Shipments
Just Arrived . . .

Now is the time to get goods that have been almost impossible to get. We have just got in delayed shipments, bought last fall at last last year's prices.

Cotton, Silk and Real Cashmere Hosiery
From 15c to 60c. To-day's values 25c to $1.00

Gloves in kid, silk and mercerized lisle, and chamoise lisle. Floor coverings, linoleums, and oilcloths. Get them quick, they are going fast. We cant replace them.

Bring your butter and eggs
And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.

Bruce Tp. S. S. Officers

Following is a complete list of officers of Bruce Tp. S. S. Association officers:

President. W. J. Blair; Vice Pres. J. B. Strathers; Sec. Treas. Milton E. Dahmer; Superintendents as follows: The Elementary Grades Division—Miss Bessie McNaughton. The Second Grades Division—Mr Eugene Montgomery. The Adult Division—Mr. R. E. Carswell. Home Department Division—Mr. P. J. Brown. Teacher's Training Class—Rev. C. Waddell. Temperance—W. J. Howe, Missionary—Miss Lyla Cunningham.

Mrs. R. Fleming, one of Paisley's pioneer residents, died last week. Mr. Wm. McRae, of Port Elgin, is a brother.

A burglary took place at Kolb's store Elsinore, on Saturday night, when goods to the amount of $-0.00 were stolen.

Lawn Supplies

Taylor-Forbes Lawn mower
Rubber hose
Hose nozzles
Couplings & clamps
Hose reels
Garden shears
Cultivators

Thomson's
Hardware Store

A Chance Not Often Given'

A Special opportunity for a few days only, some extra fine House Dresses
Only $2 each
Ladies, these are extra good values.

B. HELKER

ALLENFORD

After almost three years of service Milton J. Aiken of Allenford has risen to the rank of Captain being recently appointed second in command of B. Co. of the famous 160th, Bruce B'n, now in England.

DIED

CURRY—At lot 24, Con. 7, Bruce Tp., on Saturday, July 7, Maria Galbraith, relict of the late R. B. Curry. The interment took place of Monday, July 9th to the Paisley cemetery. Aged 73 years.

BORN

SMITH—On Tuesday, June 19th, to Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, 10th, Bruce, a son.

SMITH—On Saturday, June 30th, to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Smith, 10th, Bruce, a son.

JONES—On Sunday, July 1st, to Mr. and Mrs James Jones, 4th, of Bruce, a son.

TURNER'S

Haying has started and some fine fields of alfalfa are being laid low.

Miss Annie McKinnon of Paisley, is visiting with friends here.

Mr. Adam Munroe has given up store-keeping for a few days and has gone home to help with the hay.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McCarrol of Meaford, visited with Mr. and Mrs. Adam Cairns.

Quite a number attended the memorial service in St. Andrew's church on Sunday held for the late George Muir who fell at Vimy Ridge. The church was with decorated maple leaves and flags. Mr. McDougall spoke from psalm 91 verses 1 to 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Thede spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] at Burgoyne.

The Red Cross met in No. 5 school house on Monday and packed 28 boxes, one for each soldier out of the sections 1, 5 and 6. Other boxes were also packed for the Red Cross containing pyjamas and socks.

Mrs. Plant, son and daughter, of Arran, spent Sunday at Mr. Charles Kettles'.

Miss Bickie Ratcher is holidaying with friends in Port Elgin.

It was with deep regret that this community learned of the death of Mrs. McRae on Wednesday morning. Mrs. McRae lived here for many years and was always known as a kind and good neighbor. The sympathy of the community goes out to Mr. McRae and family in their bereavement.

Mr. Ray Pollock has purchased a fine new driver from Mr. N. McGillivray.

The concert given by Miss Robb's pupils in Sang's School last Friday night, was in every way a very successful entertainment. The program was entirely by the children, every pupil taking part, from the little tots who started to school at Easter to those in the entrance class, and they certainly did credit to their teacher, as well as to themselves and their parents. It was the same program that was given at Easter, and was so much enjoyed then, that Miss Robb was asked to repeat it, this she kindly consented to do and handed over the proceeds, $23.59, to the Red Cross Society. The entertainment was so thoroughly enjoyed that many were heard to remark that they could enjoy it a third time. Mr. Byron Swinton had his gramaphone there which pleasantly filled in the gaps in the program when the pupils were behind the curtain preparing for drills, etc. Norman McLeod, Jr., made a very efficient chairman, and in a happy and able manner referred to the good work being done by the Red Cross Society, and did not forget to pay a hearty tribute to Miss Robb's work in the school, which brought forth applause from the audience. Miss Robb has voluntarily closed her connection with this school and the best wishes of all go with her to her new field of labor. Miss Lila Kennedy has been chosen as her successor.—Beacon.

NORTH BRUCE

The Methodist church was well filled Sunday morning when Rev. Mr. Hawke preached to the Orangemen.

Miss Sarah and Abraham Robinson have returned to Hamilton, after a holiday with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Grogan Toronto, are visiting at Mr. Jno. Nuttal's.

Mrs. Cushman Smith, and children, spent a few days last week with her parents near Owen Sound.

Miss Annie Steele, Guelph, is holidaying at Mr. H. Hoover's.

Goes to Press

JULY 20TH

Please report changes required to our Local Office, to-day.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada

UNDERWOOD NEWS

Get your gasoline at The Hardware.

Save wood and coal, use an oil stove. We have some coal oil stoves which will save the women work, and save money too. Thede & Brill.

Mr. Geo. Hood is home for a holiday. He has a responsible position on the teaching staff of the city of Welland public school. Mrs. Hood and family will leave in a few weeks to take up residence in Welland.

An interesting horse case was tried before Judge Greig at Underwood on Friday morning last. Hugh Smith Kincardine Tp. sued Thos. Currie 6 th Bruce for damages. He bought a horse from Currie and the horse afterwards developed cataracts on both eyes. Currie claims he told Smith the horse's eye was sore at the time of the sale. Smith stated that Currie told him the veterinary said the horse would be all right in a short time. J. Armitage, V. S. and J. F. Marcus, V. S. both Kincardine swore that the horse's eyes were affected with cataract. The judge's decision was reserved.—Reporter.

Mr. and Mrs Marshall Orford, of Tiverton spent Sunday with Mrs. John Orford.

Miss Ina McNab is spending his vacation with his parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Colwell, of Detroit, were home here attending the funeral of his mother.

Mrs. Scott of Port Arthur, is here on visit to her mother Mrs. John Orford.

The first cut of hay around here began on Saturday last.

The sudden death took place here on Monday evening of last week of one of our old neighbors Mrs. John Colwell, who died in her 84th year. Funeral services were held in the Methodist church on Thursday, Rev. Hawke conducting the services. The remains were interred at Bal-de-dore.

The following articles were shipped to Red Cross headquarters Toronto on July 13th by the Underwood Red Cross workers: 30 tennis shirts; 24 flannel shirts; 60 pairs of sox. Value $122.

BURGOYNE AND DISTRICT

Rahns, de new cook' prate pow'ful ekemonical' bout de state larder ain't uncet some' ow.

The ladies had a bee on Wednesday cleaning and polishing the church for the summer.

The men had their annual bee cutting grass and weeds on the cemetery lot last week.

Orchard grass is in every corner just now shot out tall as the fences and grass along the highways, except near the village. Could easily be mowed for hay.

Corn and potatoes are suffering from too much sap.

One cannot turn anywhere without seeing newly shingled roofs, Continued heavy rain has shown up the leaky spots.

Mr. and Mrs John Richardson and Miss Margaret, of Port Elgin, and Mr. Howard Richardson, Underwood, were visitors at Sam. Smith's on Sunday.

Miss Jean McLeod, daughter of Mr. Norman McLeod, underwent an operation for appendicitis in Guelph Hospital last week. Latest accounts she was doing well and Mr. and Mrs. McLeod who accompanied her to Guelph are expected home soon.

Not an auto, but a bran new manure spreader was found stored in the church shed Sunday morning. How the machine came to be there was a mystery to every one and remained unsolved, but the fact of its being there was very suggestive.

After the church service Sunday morning a standing vote was taken to ascertain whether the congregation was was ready to extend a call to a minister. The vote showed a large majority in favor and a meeting will be called as soon as the formalities will allow. These require a notice read two Sundays.

Rev. M. Aitken, from near Toronto, preached two excellent sermons Sunday, and Rev. Mr. Watson from Toronto, is expected to be here next Sunday.

6th. Con. Bruce

On June 29th. some of the parents of the children of S. S. No. 2 met in the school to spend a few social hours and bid the teacher farewell previous to her departure. There was a short program prepared. Master Chambers McKinnon was chosen as chairman. The first on the program called was our worthy trustee, Mr. Joe Hyde. He spoke very highly of the year's work done in the school. After a few readings and songs by the school children. Miss Megraw was asked to come forward and an address was read by Chambers McKinnon, while Floyd Wrightson made the presentation of a beautiful necklace. The address was signed in behalf of the section by Floyd Wrightson, Wm. Smith, Howard Smith, and C. McKinnon, and set forth the appreciation of the parents and the love of the scholars for Miss Megraw, who has proved a highly efficient teacher.

Mr. John Cobean is very low.

Mr. Wellington Steele has purchased Mr. John A. Kephey's farm on the 6th of Saugeen. Possession is to be given in the fall, and Mr. Kephey will likely move to town.

The gravel contract for the road from Chippewa Hill to Slabtown was let last Monday by Reeve Johnston of Arran and Reeve Craig of Amabel. This is at present the worst piece of road in this district, but the $200 to be spent on it should help considerably. Mr. John Cook got the contract for the east portion at 80 cents and will get his gravel at Mr. Spurrell's. Mr. Wm. Shular got the west portion at 80 cents and will get the gravel at Wm. Donaldson's.—Beacon

The Roland News contains an announcement of the death of Mrs. S. E. Eby, after an illness of only nine days, from pneumonia. Deceased was born near Kitchener, Ont. in 1861, the only daughter of Mr. Mrs. John Reinhart. Thirty-one years ago she was married to Mr. Samuel A Eby and later moved to the west, first to Alberta, then to Manitoba, where the family still reside. Her death is greatly lamented by many friends, and church workers in Roland. She is survived by a husband, three sons and five daughters. Three brothers reside in Ontario, Messrs A. Reinhart, Port Elgin; J. H. Reinhart, Southampton, and John, of Stainer.

If you have a thing to sell let The Times tell the people about it.

Special Sale

STARTING TO-MORROW MORNING

Special Sale of Men's and Boys' Suits, Raincoats, Trousers, Shirts, Underwear, Straw and Felt Hats, Caps and Furnishings at BIG REDUCTIONS. It's a rare chance to save some money. Don't miss it. . . . .

About fifty men's tweed and worsted suits reg $14 to $16 for 11.95

Men's raincoats 13 & $15 for 10 50

50 prs men's odd pants worsted finish, good $2 value for 1.69

Men's straw hats, reg 2.50 for 1.75; $2 for 1.50; 1.50 for $1; $1 for 75cts

Men's felt hats, reg 2.50 for 1.75.

Men's merino underwear good value at 65c, special price 50c

Men's working shirts splendid $1 lines for 79c.

Fine negligee dress shirts reg. $1 and 1.25 lines for 79c

50c ties for 39 cents

These goods are goods you need now, that's why this sale is so important to you. You must buy these things sooner or later, anyway why not get them now. All that you save by buying now is clear profit to you.

Come and see the big values for little money

F. R. BARBER
MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

SOME PRETTY PAPERS

WALLPAPER at Pattison's is selling as Cheap as ever. Over 500 lines to choose from. We carry the largest and best stock in Bruce county. Call in and inspect our goods and be convinced. You can save money, by buying wall paper at Pattison's. No trouble to show goods.

All papers trimmed free of charge
Eggs taken in exchange for Wall paper . . .

Electric Vacuum Cleaner For Rent

: : J. W. Pattison : :
Furniture Dealer and Undertaker

Now Comes The End

The greatest of all closing out sales will finish soon.
This week we will clear all ladies' goods. Here are some of the values Offered

White dresses, reg $6, for 3.95 Embroidered and new styles, only 3 left, sizes 36, 32

Muslin dress, black and white, a pretty dress for afternoons, 3.95

Fine gingham and chambray house dresses, reg. 1.25, now 75c.

Raincoats, 3.95

Dust coats for auto, 1.95

Black moire underskirts, reg. 2.50, now 1.45

Ladies' cloth skirts, serges 25 of these to go at 1.95

White voile waists reg $2 now 95 cents

White skirts, made with one pocket, and belt reg. $1.50 for 95cts

Middies, reg $1.50 and $1 buttoned front, with strap, with blue and white trimming

Underskirts, embroidered reg $1.50 now 75cts

Middy suits, white brocaded trimmings, new styles, reg $6.50 now $3.95

Wise women will get some of these goods right away. At the above prices they can't last. No trouble to show goods. Come and look around our store. This is an unprecedented sale. The chance will not come again.

H. KATZ Next to North End Store

Subscribe for The Times and get all the local news.

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 30 PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1917 $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

Good Roads

Warden Izzard, Reeve William Hunter, Clerk Malcolmson and Engineer Huber of the Good Roads Dept., were a party inspecting the roads system in this section of Bruce on Thursday and Friday of last week.

The Times in conversation with Engineer Huber asked how he found the roads he had been over. The reply was:

"Bruce county has at some time or other in the past taken a great deal of pains with it roads, and as a result we find a good roadbed, the grade good, and taking it altogether the cost of construction and upkeep is going to be light with you, as compared with some other counties."

"Will you begin any work of construction in Bruce county before the war ends?"

"Not likely. Of course, these are all county roads now under the Good Roads System, and we must see that they are not allowed to deteriorate in any sense. Any work that is done now of a repair or maintenance nature will be done with an eye to permanency," said Mr. Huber.

COMING EVENTS

10c. per line
No notice less than 25c

PATRIOTIC GARDEN PARTY—The one you all want to attend, will be held at the home of Mr. John Cook, Saugeen, on Tuesday, July 31st. A good program has been arranged of speech and song, besides the Indian silver cornet band will be on the grounds. The admission is only 25 and 15c. Help the big cause of patriotism. See bills also.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

FOR SALE—Black currants and raspberries. Apply to Miss Gear, Port Elgin.

FOR SALE—2000 cement blocks, smooth faced, for sale. Apply L. M. Sees.

FOR SALE—Frame barn, 19x24. Apply Wm. Sparks, Port Elgin.

FOUND— A lap rug. Apply at Times office.

FOR SALE—Five pigs four weeks old. Apply to Ernst Miller, 6th of Saugeen, Port Elgin P. O.

WANTED—Girl with good education, for composing room. Apply in own hand writing, to Editor. Times office.

FOR SALE—The Andrew Sutherland property at the South End. Fine brick house, 7 rooms and shed. Good basement, also stable. Possession given immediately. Apply to Geo. S. Webb and James McEwing, executors. 2d-tf.

WANTED—We are paying the highest prices for beefring hides. B. Zelkind, Port Elgin.

FOR IMMEDIATE SALE—Good frame house with all the modern conveniences, good fruit bearing trees. A piano also for sale. Apply at The Times office.

PHONOGRAPHS!

How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.

Louis Bloch's Music Store
Owen Sound

DENTAL

W. P. POWER, D. D. S., Dentist, office over South End Store. Hours 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

MEDICAL

DR. F. H. WELLS, Office and residence on Green street, one door west of Bank of Hamilton.

W. J. CHAMBERS, M. D., L. R. C. P., L. M., Edinburgh. Office and residence "Lakeview Hall" opposite South End park Port Elgin.

DR. W. S. LAIRD, Oculist, Specialty in Nose and Throat diseases. Guarantees all his fitting of glasses. Office hours Wednesday afternoons. Next to Metropolitan Bank

LEGAL

W. BURGESS, LL.B., Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public &c., &c. Office, Hutton's Block. Private and other funds to loan.

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. 429, G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communications in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at 8 p. m. Visiting brethern cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Gu[illegible]smith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE, No. [illegible] I.O.O.F., of Ontario, meets at 8 o'clock, p.m., every [illegible] hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N.G.; T. Rankin, Rec.-Sec.; D. Geddes, Perm Sec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer of marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office in Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin.

UNDERTAKING

J. W. PATTISON, Funeral director and embalmer. Residence on premises. Rural [illegible] No. 22.

Advertise it in The Times.

A Difficult Task Splendidly Performed

Messrs. Joseph Wrightson and James McKinnon, of the 6th of Bruce, accomplished a wonderful piece of work the other week.

It will be remembered by many in the district that the large iron cross on the Catholic church at Formosa was struck by lightning and brought to the ground. The church officials were some time looking around for men who would undertake to put the cross back to its proper place.

Finally Mr. J. Wrightson and Mr. J. McKinnon went down and took a look at the job. They agreed that they could do the work, and said they would do it for a thousand dollars. The church officials accepted the offer and the two men went at it. The first thing to be done was to get the cross repaired as it was broken. By the aid of autos it was conveyed to the Hunter Bridge Co. at Kincardine, there repaired, and then taken to Formosa. Then the tug of war began. It had to be put on the high steeple which was over 200 feet from the ground and the cross weighed 1800 lbs. By the use of scaffolding which reached up 200 feet and gin-poles beside the church and steeple the huge cross was successfully landed to its proper position, and securely fastened without accident of any kind.

The work is considered quite wonderful, since it was done by two men who had no previous experience in that class of work. Mr. Wrightson is an expert carpenter and framer, while Mr. McKinnon is experienced in cement and bridge work.

OBITUARY

The passing of John Cobean on July 19, in his 80th year, took from this community another of the pioneers. He was born in Mono township, Dufferin county in 1838, being of Irish descent. In 1862 he was married to Mary Lewis, and farmed in Dufferin county. About 42 years ago they moved to Saugeen.

The late Mr. Cobean was a very likeable man. He was always of a jovial spirit, and enjoyed the friendship and followship of hosts of people. He served in the Saugeen council for some time, assisting his community in many ways in a public capacity. For thirty years he has served Burgoyne Presbyterian church as elder. He was a kindly man, an honest man and a neighbor whose hospitality and willingness to assist anyone was counted much in the early days. For a number of years he has not been well, and the past few months has been very feeble.

He is survived by his wife, four daughters and one son, Mrs. Piper, Mrs. Beatty in Michigan; Mrs. J. Ross Munro in Ottawa; Mrs. Rowand, Saugeen; and Lewis, on the homestead, who will have the sympathy of all. He leaves also a sister in Rodney, and a brother in North Dakota. The funeral was held on Saturday from Burgoyne church to Burgoyne cemetery, and was very largely attended.

Be Particular

The particular housewife wants only the best in meats during the very hot weather, and that's the reason Eaton's butcher shop serves so many patrons with dainties in cold meats, lamb, beef, pork etc., We have also package soups, vegetables, etc. Phone your order to the Shop of Quality. A. E. Eaton, Prop

Tax Collector Wanted

Applications for the position of collector of taxes for Saugeen Township for the year 1917, will be received up to 1 o'clock on Saturday, August 11th. Salary $55.00.

F. W. Elliott, clerk.

Eggs and Butter

This week we are paying for fresh eggs 34c per dozen.

For nice fresh made butter, fit to retail to particular customers, we are paying 36c, trade or cash quality must be good.

N. McGillivray
North End Store

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. John Cobean and family desire through The Times to thank many friends for their sympathy and kindness in their bereavement.

NOTICE

All horses, cattle and sheep found trespassing on lot 14, Lake Range, after this notice will be put in pound. C. L. McEvers, Proprietor.

Do your ordering of meats early in the morning. The best service given then. Our shop may be closed a few afternoons to give me opportunity to go into the country buying. Then order early. Our stock is excellent. Try us, L. Hamilton, butcher.

LADIES DEPARTMENT

See the splendid display in the Ladies' department in the following lines.

Women's Bathing Suits
Misses' Bathing Suits
Ladies Underwear
Fine Hosiery
Corsets

Falconer Bros.

"The Flying Corps in The Field"

Written For The Times by Lieut. John R. Geddes of the Royal Flying Corps

In the past war the only means of securing information regarding the whereabouts of the enemy was cavalry or infantry scouts. In the present war this information is secured principally by aeroplanes. The use of aerial reconnaissance has altered tactics a great deal. Troops must not only be concealed from the view of scouts but must be concealed from the view of aerial observers.

This is one of the chief reasons that the supremacy of the air is so vital to the success of our armies at the front. It is only due to our superiority in the air that our armies have been able to accomplish the success of the Somme, Arras, and Messines battles. To be successful in the future that superiority must be maintained.

The duties of the Flying Corps comprise chiefly: reconnaissance, photography, artillery registration, bombing, and fighting.

Reconnaissance undertaken by the R. F. C. is chiefly long distance. Enemy railways, depots, roads, and dumps are the most important objects to be watched. New roads, may be noticed, movements of troops toward any point in the line, or new lines of defence under construction are found and reported to headquarters. These reports serve to verify the opinions of commanders with regard to the enemy movements.

Photography is a valuable aid to reconnaissance. It verifies the reports of pilots and observers. Photographs are taken at stated periods and furnish the most valuable information that maybe obtained in aerial reconnaissance.

By the use of wireless, and special codes very accurate artillery registration is carried out. It is due to our efficiency of co-operation in this respect that our artillery fire now surpasses that of the enemy. This is a very interesting duty as one's attention is wholly occupied with rooting Fritz from his trenches and deep dugouts.

Bombing is perhaps one of the most dangerous tasks allotted to the flying corps. The enemy seems to have a special accuracy in detecting the purpose of the raiding aeroplane and gives it a warm reception.

Fighting is the most dangerous as well as the most fascinating duty of the pilot. A fighting aeroplane must afford protection for the aeroplanes on other duties. The pilot of a fighting aeroplane is in continual danger. In many cases it is he who is reported "missing". The reason, of course, is that he has been shot or forced down while in pursuit of an enemy far behind the lines. This pilot must acquire a very high standard of efficiency. He must know the country thoroughly, must be able to control the fire of the machine gun accurately, must be able to recognize any of our own or enemy aeroplanes at sight, and he must be a good pilot or in the words of the corps, "a stunt pilot."

The first few flights under service conditions are needless to say, very trying on the nerves of the young aviator. The German "Archie" (anti-aircraft) has a world wide reputation especially to those who have encountered it. That vicious "wongh," wongh"—and bursts of black smoke surrounding the aeroplane temporarily puts "the wind up" and pilot and awakens him to the fact that immediate action is vital to his health and that realization is transmitted to his aeroplane as he endeavours to escape the rain of shells.

Besides the "Archie Plague" he must meet another, not by any means to be despised—"the enemy in the air." Now is to come his real test of skill as well as nerve. Now the value of his training will be revealed. But he surmounts this difficulty also. He stakes his skill, nerves, and aerial tactics against those of his opponent, and wins. The Hun has a nasty habit of diving unexpectedly on one from regions above, down sun, or from some angle that his approach may be hidden by some portion of the aeroplane. But our new pilot soon learns the enemy tactics so expected, and guarding against these, employs his own.

I could give a much more detailed account of the work of the Flying Corps had I time but I think the above will give you an idea of its duties and work.

Lieut. Mansell Scanlon

Since the news of his son having been killed in action has been spread over the Dominion, Dr. Scanlan has been receiving numerous letters of condolence from people in prominent and official positions in Canada. These letters bear testimony to the splendid heroism of Lieut. Mansell Scanlan, and also his ability and prominence in his capacity as a newspaper man. The letters are from the Governor General, the Minister of Militia, Officers in commanding positions, The Hamilton Conference of the Methodist church, Col. Hugh Clark, M. P., and from several prominent editors and the Regina Boat Club. The Regina Leader pays the following editorial tribute to Lieut. Scanlan:

"Scan," as he was familiarly and affectionately known to the staff, was one of its most versatile and popular members.

An able writer, a good musician, speaking French and English, and an active participant in amateur sports. Mr. Scanlan was an all round favorite.

When war broke out and the call for the first contingent was made Mr. Scanlan resigned from the staff and enlisted as a private with the first group of 95th Saskatchewan Rifle [illegible] to leave for the front. He was thus one of the number who assembled at Valcartier and crossed to England with the great Canadian armada. In England this battalion, the 11th was broken up and Private Scanlan was transferred to the famous Fighting Fifth. He was in the big fight at Festubert and in all the engagements which afterwards followed. He seemed to have a charmed life, and step by step rose from the ranks. Finally in the Battle of the Somme he won the Military Medal and also his commission.

And now he has made the supreme sacrifice for Canada. While sorrowing for a good comrade gone, and paying tribute to his fine and manly qualities, we cannot but feel a deep pride that one of our number has given his life in the noblest cause that ever called people to arms. Lieut. Scanlan's life and death will remain an inspiration to The Leader staff in the performance of the duty to Canada and the Empire and the cause of Humanity and Freedom as we are given to see it."

One On The Reeve Of Saugeen

At the Evangelical garden party last week Reeve Christie had a neat little joke unintentionally placed on him.

The program included several speakers.- Mr. Rowman and Mr. McCannell had spoken when the chairman arose and announced "This is not a political gathering, but as we have heard from two prominent Liberals, we will now have the privilege of hearing from a gentleman of the other stripe—Reeve Christie."

Mr. Christie was given an ovation. The Times has not interviewed him as to whether he has changed his politics. Altho it's quite the fashion just now, it's quite likely Mr. Christie is still a Grit.

LITTLE LOCALS

Miss Cumming has returned from Toronto for a holiday.

Mrs. John Richardson is visiting in Harriston at Kitchener.

Mr. Wm. Dudgeon of Elderslie, was a week-end guest of Mr. Robt Chalmers.

Mr. and Mrs. McConnel and Mrs. Hucks of Harriston, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Barber Sunday.

Misses Irma and Vera Lyon, of Portage, La Prairie, are visiting their aunt Mrs. Robt Chalmers.

Miss Mary McDougal, Miss Artie McDougall and Mr. and Mrs. Alex Kippen, visited at Mr. Cann's Sunday.

Misses Edna and Iva Elliott, Harriston, and Isabell Richardson, Underwood, are holidaying at John Richardson's.

A petition circulated by merchants last week asked the council to set aside Monday, August 6th as civic holiday. It didn't say that the day was wanted to help the farmers in the harvest, but we presume that was the aim, so the farmers should select their men at once.

Ontario Liberal editors are meeting in Toronto to-morrow to consider the political situation. A general meeting of Ontario Liberals is to be held in Toronto on August 2 and 3. Apparently the gathering of a few Liberal politicians last week to dictate what the Liberal party as a whole shall do is not taking very well.

The Presbyterian, Methodist, Evangelical and Baptist Sunday schools have joined in for one big picnic to-morrow at Ross' Grove. Plans have been arranged for a big afternoon's fun, and no doubt the teachers, officers and scholars will have a fine time. Any of the town schools are heartily invited. The union idea is a good one, and efforts are being put forth to make it the best picnic ever held. All Sunday school children to meet at the Presbyterian church at 1.30.

Make Donations

A short time ago the Women's Hospital Aid of Port Elgin, whose officers are Mrs. Chas. A. Gilbert president, and Mrs. R. Munro, secretary, had a "shower" to help the Bruce County hospital at Walkerton. The affair was quite a success and the officers have sent the following to the hospital:

Cash, $19; 15 bath towels, 6 pairs huck towels, 2 pairs kitchen towels, 1 dozen face cloths, 2 tins cocoa, 3½ lbs. tea, 2 lbs coffe, 2 packages corn starch, 4 feather pillows, 2 quarts canned fruit.

Result of Junior Public School Graduation Diploma Exam. 1917

Following is the list of successful students for the above examinations. No. of marks possible 1000. Marks necessary to pass, 600, for honours, 750.

HONOR CANDIDATES

M. Alexandra Carleton 835, Tiverton P. S. teacher Miss Alexander.

Catherine Ord 793, Tiverton, Miss Alexander, teacher

Reta McKenzie 789, S. S. No. 7 Bruce, Miss M. McRae.

PASS CANDIDATES

Jean M. Stroud 737, S. S. No. 10 Kincardine, Miss Alberta Bell, teacher.

Ruth Montgomery 714, S. S. No. 7 Bruce, Miss McRae, teacher.

Johnina Matheson 687, Tiverton P. S., Miss Alexander, teacher.

Isabel McNabb 664, S. S. No. 7 Bruce, Miss McRae, teacher.

Hazel B. Cameron 666, Tiverton P. S. Miss Alexander, teacher.

Jean McLean 662, S. S. No. 3 Arran, Miss Kennedy, teacher.

Sadie M. Carleton 628, S. S. 7 Bruce, Miss McRae, teacher.

Mary M. Fletcher 602, S. S. No. 7, Bruce Miss McRae teacher.

Viola Fraser and Donald L. McEwen were awarded Junior High School Certificates.

TOWN TOPICS

85 in the shade here on Monday.

Mr. N. McGillivray and Eric motored to Hamilton, and spent the week end.

Mr. John McLean of Paisley has been engaged to teach at the Dunblane school.

Miss Gertrude Megraw of Paisley is the new teacher at No. 6 Saugeen.

Mr. J. Mould, of Toronto has been visiting at Mr. Davies'.

Miss Dorothy Wells is home for vacation.

Miss Chrissie McLaren has been enjoying a holiday home.

Mr. and Mrs. Tackaberry of Lion's Head, are guests at Mr. Martin's.

Misses Bessie and Margaret Wankel, are visiting in Owen Sound.

Mr. James Kellior is very seriously ill.

Miss Gunn, of Detroit, is the guest of Mrs. George Chapman.

Norval Smith is home from Buffalo for a holiday.

Mr. Irwin, of Walkerton, has rented Mr. Lowry's summer cottage.

Miss Viola Kolb has been spending a holiday with her sister in Kincardine.

Mr. Daniel Ewald, of Brooklyn, N. Y., is visiting relatives here.

Mrs. J. J. George has sufficiently recovered from here operation to come home, and is improving daily.

Alex. Smith, Esq., of Ottawa, was a guest of his brother, Dugald, over the week end.

Mr. Charles Sees is visiting the old home after an absence of thirteen years in the west.

Miss Bell and Miss Tumber, of Detroit, are visiting Mrs. Ronald Bell.

Mrs. Martin and Mrs. McKenzie of Toronto, are visiting Miss Vida Sees

Bert Cottrill was in Hamilton over the week end.

Miss MacAuley, of Southampton is visiting Miss Maggie Webb.

Mrs. Ryckman and Mrs. Hiltz, of Owen Sound, are guests of Mrs. McMurray.

Mrs. Norman Smith of Fort William, and Mrs. R. Ferguson of Owen Sound, spent Sunday with Mrs. Wm. Ferguson.

Mrs. Schaab of Chesley, and Mr. and Mrs. Karcher, of Aberdour, were guests of Mrs. Hessenauer last week.

The Meaford town council decided on a 35 mill tax rate at the meeting last Monday.

Owen Sound is likely to get another large industry for the manufacture of steel products.

Miss Winnie Struthers has resigned her position on the public school staff, and will take an extended rest.

Miss Janet Wells of Fort William, has been engaged to teach at No. 6 Saugeen.

Mrs. Higbee and children of Toronto are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Struthers.

Mrs. (Dr.) Hewitt and Mrs. J. C. Kennedy are expected this week from New York, and will spend a holiday with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kennedy.

Lieut. William Northgrave is on his way home, having secured a furlough to recover from his wounds. It is not known when he will arrive here. He sailed on the 12th

Lionel Shipley sold some fine beef cattle last week. He sent out twelve big ones averaging 1410 lbs. for which he received 12½c per lb. live.

The young men in Port and Southampton mustered enough to play a game of baseball here on Friday night. The game did not start until late, and therefore only a few innings were played. Port lost 3 to 1. Quite a number went down to the cricket grounds to see it.

Rev. A. H. McGillivray, of Hamilton, was called here last week on account of the serious illness of his mother. The latter, we are glad to report, is improving splendidly, and hopes are entertained that she will soon be around again, although in her 90th year.

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for 50 lines or over in a year 5c a line; regular weekly users of liners, 8c per line casual users of liners, 10c per line Black type, count two lines for one.

McMurray's for pure ice cream.

Oats for sale. North End Store.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

Fleet Foot shoes at F. R. Barber's.

Neckties, 50c lines for 39c at Barber's.

Big reductions in a sale now at Barber's.

White tennis trousers, $1.75 a pair at North End.

Fresh oranges, lemons, and bananas always on hand. North End Store.

Straw hats at below cost at Barber's reduction sale.

If you want a pint of good cream try McMurray's.

Another shipment of feed wheat, North End Store.

It's a great chance to get a raincoat at a slashed price at Barber's.

McMurray keeps good milk for sale.

Congoleum border, 36 inches wide, 60c per yard at North End.

Boys wool and cotton Jersies at South End.

Men's work shirts, $1 lines for 79c at Barber's.

Dyola Dyers in Black, Navy and all scarce colors, now in stock. South End.

A good time to look round for a suit. Try Barber's.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

Fleet foot running shoes, all sizes, white, tan, navy. North End store.

Men's Balbriggan and Merino underwear at the South End.

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koebke's

Try Koebke for your next grocery or fruit order

William's shoes, solid leather goods at lower prices, at South End.

Koebke sells Neilson's soldier chocolate. Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front

Red Cross supplies. Special prices in grey Scotch fingering yarn. South End.

Is it hot enough for you ?

Miss Williams and Miss Wildfong are guests of Mrs. Ed. Fisher.

Miss Edna Crowe, of Toronto, is holidaying here.

Mr. Bolender is having a cottage built at the lake.

Mrs. Hay and party of Listowel, are at Gobles Grove.

Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. Giles were up from Tiverton Monday.

Miss Cassie Willoughby is home from Detroit for a holiday.

Heller & Helm have improved their watchouse by painting.

W. Bray has a contract for painting and decorating the Baptist church.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Webb visited at D. McIntosh's in Tiverton last week.

Mr. John McEwing is holidaying with his daughter in Battle Creek.

Mrs. Oelschlaeger is home after an extended visit, with her daughter, Mrs. Ernst, at Kitchener.

Mrs. S. B. Fleming of Paisley, and Miss Skeffer of Toronto, spent last week with Mrs. Jos. Johnston.

Mrs. Hancock has arrived from spending the past few months in Washington, D. C., and has opened up her summer home at Gobles.

Morris Hendry was operated on for hernia at Guelph hospital last week. He is doing nicely now, and is expected home next week.

Mr. Justin Burwash of Calgary, spent a few days here last week, on his way to Toronto, were he joined the aviation corps.

Judge Klein was in town last week. The Judge continues in very poor health and has not yet been able to assume his duties on the bench.

The moving picture show in the town hall Saturday night was quite well attended. There were a couple of reels of the latest war pictures shown, and some comic features.

L. Hamilton will give a cut of from two to four cents on all [illegible] meat. Prices are likely to be lower and when a drop comes the reduction will be made. We favor the consumer. Try our butcher shop for meats. We will continue to keep all during the summer all good things in meat, as [illegible] usual. Try us. Prompt attention to all orders. Anyone having good butcher heifers for sale, notify us. L. Hamilton, butcher. We want only the best of cattle.

Advertise it in The Times.

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE

Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address

LOUIS BLOCH,
22-tfc Owen Sound, Ont.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson V. July 29,1917.

God's Gracious Invitation.—Isaiah 55. 1-13.

Commentary.—I. The invitation extended (vs. 1-5).—1. Ho—This word is used to call attention to something of great importance. He who sounds forth the word realized the dire need of those to whom he speaks, and longs to have their souls satisfied. every one that thirsteth—All those who thirst for the living waters are included in the call. Physical thirst is an intense longing. The agony of those who are dying from the lack of water is indescribable. come ye to the waters—Salvation is brought to a place where we all have access to it, but we must come. There is something for us to do. The fountain is opened and everything is ready, but we must individually take the steps that lead to it. The grace of God is frequently spoken of in the scriptures under the figure of water. Water is fertilizing and satisfying in its nature and is abundant. he that hath no money—In Oriental cities it is a common sight to see a water-seller with a goatskin bottle of water upon his back, going along the street offering water for sale. We need no money to procure salvation. wine and milk—The unfermented juice of the grape is said to contain thirty per cent. more nourishment than milk. Milk contains all the food elements essential to the sustenance and growth of the body. The saving and keeping grace of God is presented under the figures of objects that are of great value and that are highly esteemed. without price—Salvation cannot be purchased with money. While it is of priceless value, it is absolutely free. It can be obtained by the rich and the poor on equal terms. All must come to the Great Source; all must come with penitence, submission and faith, and all who meet these conditions will be satisfied.

2. wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread—The prophet gently rebukes those who are spending money and labor for the vanities of this life when they can secure salvation and eternal life without money and without price. The condition of Israel then was the same as is that of those who are giving themselves up to pleasure. hearken diligently unto me—Jehovah insists upon gaining the attention of the people for he has a message of great importance. The Lord has for them the highest good. Their souls may be abundantly satisfied. 3. Incline your ear—Pay careful attention. hear, and your soul shall live—There are conditions which we must meet if we would have spiritual and eternal life. Those who hear and heed God's gracious invitation secure soul life. an everlasting covenant—God made a covenant with Abraham and his posterity that promised great temporal and spiritual blessings. There was included in the covenant the coming of the Christ, through whom all the nations of the world would be blessed. sure mercies of David—The mercies which God had promised to David. If Israel would turn fully to him these blessings would be bestowed upon them. 4. I have given him—Jehovah had promised the Messiah to Israel and to all the world, and it is of him the prophet speaks under the term David. Jesus was promised as the great Teacher and the Captain of our salvation. 5. thou—The Israelitish nation. Through Israel other nations were to be blessed. shall call a nation that thou knowest not—The nation here mentioned refers to the peoples who would own the sway of the Messiah and enter his kingdom. It would include the Christians in all ages. nations that knew not thee—Gentiles shall run unto thee—Shall be attracted to thee. because of the ... Holy One of Israel—God draws individuals and nations to himself. Through Israel came the law, and through Israel came the gospel of Jesus Christ. he hath glorified thee—The Holy One of Israel has conferred honour upon Israel and granted [illegible] blessings to the nation.

II. Conditions to be met (vs. 6, 7.) 6. Seek ye the Lord—The invitation to partake of the benefits of the gospel has been extended, and the prophet proceeds to make clear what conditions are to be met. It is necessary for us to seek the Lord if we would find him. There must be a whole-hearted seeking, for only that kind of seeking will be rewarded (Jer. 29:13). While he may be found—These words very clearly declare that there is a time when men may find the Lord, and just as clearly declare that there is a time when they may not find the Lord, and just as [illegible] the time will come when [illegible] find him. A persistent rejection of God's offer of salvation will result in the final withdrawal of the Holy Spirit. Call ye upon Him [illegible] seeks after [illegible] forth a [illegible] cry to him. While he is near—The figure used is [illegible] there is one [illegible] able to [illegible] within hailing distance [illegible] beyond the [illegible] of the [illegible]. It [illegible] to call for [illegible]. 7. Let the wicked forsake [illegible] with such [illegible] the Lord [illegible] thinking of sin. The [illegible] in the [illegible] way. [illegible]. There can be no pardon [illegible] their sins. [illegible] thoughts—Not [illegible] outward sins [illegible] evil desires. [illegible] that is the [illegible] but there [illegible], since no sinner [illegible] own strength." [illegible] unto the Lord. One must not only turn away from all sin, but he must definitely and determinedly turn to the Lord. will have mercy... abundantly pardon—This gracious promise will be fulfilled in the case of every [illegible] the conditions here mentioned.

III. Inducements offered (vs. 8-13). 8. My thoughts are not your thoughts—[illegible] would be inclined to let a [illegible] offender perish rather than extend mercy to him. God offers full pardon to every repenting sinner, no matter how far he may have gone into sin. 9. As the heavens are higher than the earth—The heavens which hang the earth—The heavens where hang the sun, the moon and the stars extend an unmeasured distance above the earth, so God's thoughts of love and mercy toward us are immeasurably greater than ours for our fellow men. 10. As the rain cometh down, etc.—In the material world the Lord sends the rain and the snow to provide moisture for the growth of all vegetation that it may mature and supply the physical needs of mankind. Not a drop of water fails of accomplishing its mission. 11. So shall my word be—God's warnings, threatenings, instructions, and promises are sent forth with a definite purpose. They are intended to bless the world. They will not fail. Some may reject that word and the penalty of its rejection will be paid in accordance with that word. Others will receive it and receive all the blessings which are promised in it. God's word will accomplish his design in giving it and will prosper in spite of all opposition. 12, 13. The deliverance from Babylonish captivity would be an occasion of great rejoicing, and all nature would seem to be in an ecstasy of joy; but this gladness well typifies the blessedness of the kingdom which Christ would set up in the fulness of time. The subjects of this kingdom are infinitely more prosperous and happy than are they who are outside. They have an enduring consciousness of their relation to the King and they have righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost.

Questions.—Who was Isaiah and when did he prophesy? What invitation is extended? To whom is it extended? For what do wine and milk stand as symbols? What rebuke is given in the second verse? What are the conditions upon which one may obtain salvation? In what sense do God's thoughts differ from ours? How is the efficacy of God's word illustrated? What figures are used to show the value of Christ's kingdom?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Spiritual Transformation.

I. The great need of humanity.

II. The revealed plan of God.

I. The great need of humanity. This very memorable chapter may be called God's own gospel sermon. It is an invitation from Jehovah to hearken diligently unto him and to find peace in him. The voice of Jehovah, the God of truth, of love, of all patience and consolation, invites, entreats, expostulates. The chapter sets forth the nature of true repentance and saving faith. It shows how vastly important it is to have right ideas of God since character and conduct are shaped according to one's thoughts of him. This chapter gives a biblical picture of a sinful man when he realizes his soul's needs, lost in the desert, parched by thirst, faint with hunger, deceived by the mirage, ready to perish. All unregenerate souls are said to be thirsting with more or less intensity for that which they have not. The call is for a return to God, to first relations, to natural courses of conduct. There is a contrast between the blessings offered and those for which men so laboriously toil. There is a foolish course to be avoided and a wise method to be pursued. To incline the ear and hearken diligently unto God is to follow the divine teachings as to the aim and method of life. The covenant here mentioned is one in which God promises to bestow freely upon his children a variety of the greatest and most needed blessings. The contents of the covenant are the same as the mercies promised to David and his house. Nothing necessary is left unsaid to the inquiring soul. The whole fact of human responsibility and divine promise concerning man's salvation is set forth. The teaching here is that man has lost the Lord. The appalling fact is that he is unconscious of the terrible catastrophe which has befallen him. In the central verse of the chapter is the gateway from the desert to the garden, "Let the wicked forsake his way." Repentance is enjoined as a condition of pardon.

II. The revealed plan of God. After the glorious gospel invitations, expostulations and exhortations follows the declaration, "Behold, I have given Him." There is no gospel apart from our Lord Jesus Christ. He is God's witness, revealing the truth. He is a "commander" because He has power to enforce His proclamations. He was signally qualified to act as a "witness to the people" because of his perfect knowledge of the whole counsel of God. The gospel is the exhibition and bestowment of all these blessings which were promised to David as the type of Christ. They are "sure" as respects the foundation from which they were derived, the love and compassion of the holy and eternal One. There is nothing in which God's thoughts and ways are more clearly seen to be higher than man's than in his own ways and yielding to God's that man finds difficulty when he undertakes to seek the Lord. God looks with tenderness and questioning pity upon his erring people. He calls them to reflect upon their own ways and tell Him why they spend their time and destroy their power on vain pursuits, when life is given for the purpose of growth in wisdom, experience and divine likeness in character, and earth is the school in which they are to be trained and educated for highest worship and noblest service. Through the varying scenes of life there continues the one purpose stated in Christ Jesus, to redeem man and reconstruct human society. The great purpose of God can not fail. Isaiah described a gospel through which success is guaranteed, a gospel full of grace and encouragement, revealing divine provision for man's necessity with full assurance of a complete transformation in the heart and life into which it comes. The gracious invitation, "Come," is universal, full and free. Christ is the all-sufficient supply of every thirst of the soul. There is transformation through obedience to the divine plan, which is complete, perfect and infallible. The laws of Christianity are as unerring as the laws of nature. The word of God is sent for the enlightening, convincing, converting and comforting of mankind to mould character and regenerate life. —T.R.A.

The arms are fair when the intent of bearing them is just.—Shakespeare.

BANG GO SAXPENCE!

It is part of our Service to worry for you, so why should you worry about the high cost of living interfering with your annual vacation.

Our excellent buying facilities combined with increased patronage is enabling us to give the high cost of living a black eye, and with our assistance you can get more for your saxpence than you can elsewhere.

That is why you should spend your vacation in Toronto, Canada, or send your wife and kiddies, they will be very much at home at the Walker House, the House of Plenty, as the management give special attention to ladies and children traveling unescorted.

REASONABLE RATES

AMERICAN PLAN | EUROPEAN PLAN IF DESIRED

The Walker House Geo. Wright & Co. Proprietors Toronto, Canada

SUNDAY AT HOME

Beneath thy wing.

Be thou a bird, and trust, the autumn
come.
That through the pathless air
Thou shalt find otherwhere,
Unerring, home.

BE THOU A BIRD, MY SOUL.

Be thou a bird, my soul, and mount and soar
Out of thy wilderness,
Till earth grows less and less,
Heaven more and more.

Be thou a bird, and mount, and soar,
and sing,
Till all the earth shall be Vibrant with ecstasy

JOINT HEIRS WITH CHRIST.

If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God.—Thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.—Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will.

Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am: that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me.

He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations.—To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

SHADOW.

On a sundial in the old land you will find the words, "I tell the time in every shining hour." When the sun is obscured, or there is a fog, there is no time recorded. Paul tells us the law had a shadow of good things to come. A shadow means darkness, obscurity, seclusion, defined limit, unreality.

The Mosaical economy was only a dark, obscure representation of Christ, who was the substance of the legal types and shadows. A scaffold is a temporary structure to support workmen. It hides the proportions of the building inside. It is very wonderful to think of this architecture coming from the mind of God, revealed to Moses in the mount, constituted to be a skeleton, a scaffolding, a temporary veil, hiding, hinting, foreshadowing the sublimest palace which angels and saints will ever behold and enjoy.

Who does not sympathize with the devout Jew, whose satisfaction was great when he saw the divinely appointed temple, services with priests and offerings and sacrifices of praise? To think of this being mere scaffolding, destined to disappear, was a dream not to be tolerated, and yet, when challenged by the ruling, angry class about His authority, He replied, with a composed and lofty dignity, "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will build it up."

No wonder they said, "What can we do with this man? He wears a peasant's garb; he has neither money nor title, nor prestige; he has no sword, no uniform, no sign of royalty, no learning; he is not of the priesthood; he is a root out of a dry ground. What pretensions are these? He springs like the grass. Forty and six years was this temple in building," was their plea for permanence, and yet we learn that this humble, mysterious Man was given the task to demolish this scaffolding and make plain and clear the building not made with hands.

Men may ask, To what purpose is this waste? There is no waste. Was the destruction of the temple an accident? God meets with no accidents. Was the mission of Christ a failure? Only to the blunt, the sordid and the sad, only to the politician and the bigot, only to the man of the world whose portion is in this life.

The mighty past is only a monument to the greatness of man, a preliminary to his grandeur, a preparation for his exaltation. The greatness of a man's power is the measure of his surrender. He who gives all receives all, and out of the empty tomb of Christ there rises an enduring glory, which shall yield good things to come.

Two worlds are ours; 'tis only sin
Forbids us to descry
The mystic heaven and earth within,
Plain as the sea and sky.
The late H. T. Miller.

Wigg—I don't see how that fellow Skinnum can be laughing all the time. He's so crooked. Wagg — Yes, he can't even keep a straight face

MAKING POULTRY PAY

SEASONABLE HINTS.

Because you have your "stock" chickens all hatched that does not say that you should stop. Remember the shortage of meat and hatch! hatch! hatch!

Ducks make rapid growth and the late hatched ones do well provided they are given plenty of shade.

Geese also grow rapidly and they are the cheapest raised of all the fowl.

Keep a sharp lookout for foxes, skunks, hawks, crows and all other furred or feathered enemies of the young chicks. Don't even be too trusting with the family cat. "Scarecrows" are useful and may be made of cloth streamers or bits of tin or glass dangling from poles or string stretched across the poultry yards. Trap all four footed marauders and knock them on the heads or shoot them.

Get rid of all your surplus Leghorn cockerels as soon as they reach broiler age; about a pound and a quarter to a pound and a half makes good broilers.

WEED OUT THE MALE BIRDS.

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The worker bees put their house in order by killing off all the male bees as soon as their services are no longer required. What a great benefit it would be to the poultry producer and the poultry market consumer if the hens of the flock would likewise dispose of the male birds in those flocks that are indifferently managed. The worker bee permits no star boarder to loaf around and consume the product of her labor. The hen is not like the bee in asserting her rights. If she were, then her verdict would be, "Rooster you must die."

There are over two million five hundred thousand roosters of the various breeds of chickens kept for breeding purposes by the people of our country. Of this vast army perhaps one hundred and fifty thousand have a right to live for another year of service. One hundred and fifty thousand may be good enough as individuals and in breeding to be used in the increase of their kind. What of the two million three hundred and fifty thousand that are usually permitted to live, birds that consume feed, worry the hens and reduce the quality of market eggs?

The function of the rooster is to develop and distribute germ cells, during a short period of three months, February, March and April. These germ cells should be distributed only to such egg laying individuals as are desired to perpetuate the breed. The germ cell is a living organism capable of starting a chain of development and here is where the mischief lies if they are distributed where they do not serve their proper function in race perpetuation.

The function of the modern hen is to produce eggs, ten per cent of which may be desired for the increase of the breed and the remaining ninety per cent for human food. Nine eggs are used for human food where but one is used for hatching. Only one tenth of the eggs that a hen lays require fertilization. Why fertilize the nine-tenths of the product that is used for human food? The addition of a living germ cell to an egg that is produced for human food does not add anything to its value and may set up a chain of embryo development that will make the egg quite unfit for human food.

Eggs gathered from flocks where the roosters are permitted to run after the hatching season is over, are not desirable for storage. They are not desirable in the pantry during periods of warm weather as high temperatures will start incubation. Eggs in the first stage of decay are not desirable for human food.

It is an easy matter to prevent the fertilization of eggs. If the male bird is just an ordinary one, an axe and a block of wood will prevent further mischief. If the male bird is possessed of such merit as would warrant his being boarded for a year to be used in the next season's breeding operations, then give him an enclosure of his own and see that he stays in it.

The cost of the feed consumed by an ordinary rooster is about twenty cents a month. Can you afford it? If you keep poultry with profit as your object, can you afford to keep a star boarder for nine months and perhaps having him doing mischief all the time?

The two million, three hundred and fifty thousand odd, unnecessary male birds are costing the country about three and a half million dollars per year while enjoying life. These unnecessary birds are at the same time doing about ten million dollars' damage to the egg-producing business. If every person owning a rooster would manage him as a male bird should be managed, the poultry industry would be benefited by additional profits many millions of dollars.

DANDELIONS.

Gardeners tell us that the best way to get rid of dandelions is to cut the plant below the crown. That may be very true, but it is a most tedious job trying to clean a lawn of dandelions unless there is some other incentive given. This may be furnished by using the dandelions for feed for the chickens and poults. Both chicks and poults are exceedingly fond of them and they are one of the best green foods that can be given.

A WHEATLESS RATION.

At the present time it should be the aim of every one to economize on the use of wheat to as great an extent as possible. Now that such a large have been drawn from production famine will inevitably come unless the greatest care is exercised. The authorities would be quite justified in forbidding the use of milling grades of wheat for stock feeding so as to hold it for human consumption. At the United States Department of Agriculture Farm Experiments have been carried on to show that it is possible to feed fowl without the use of wheat and still show results that which wheat is fed.

Thirty white Leghorn pullets have been on the test for a year and a half and in their pullet year they averaged 147.3 eggs each. This is not a phenomenal record but it is a good record and one that is very much above the average throughout the country. This pen averaged during the first sixteen weeks of its record year 29.7 eggs which shows that the ration has produced no bad effects.

The same ration has been fed since last November to a pen of Buff Orpingtons pullets. This pen holds the highest egg record of any pen on the farm, namely, fifty-three eggs in twenty weeks. Two other pens similarly fed, however, are less than one egg per hen behind this one.

The ration used was, for scratch feed two parts cracked corn to one part oats and for mash, three parts corn meal to one part beef scrap, all by weight.

The scratch feed was fed sparingly so as to force the birds to use more of the dry mash than they would otherwise have done The amount of food consumed per hen was fifty two pounds, of which half was scratch feed and half mash feed. These results were interesting, but judging from the notice that one American paper gives of these experiments it would surprise our American neighbor to know that the wheatless ration is no novelty in Canada. There are hundreds, yes, thousands, of farmers whose flocks never see wheat from one year's end to the other. The writer has one young farmer in mind who averaged one hundred and thirty four eggs and made a profit of $2.50 per bird per year. This flock was fed almost on Barley and oats with a little corn and buckwheat for the whole grain part of the ration. The only wheat used was one bushel and this was fed to the small chickens.

Barley is an excellent feed and can be readily substituted for wheat. At present prices in Eastern Canada oats is about the cheapest feed that can be used.

PAPER CONTAINERS FOR HONEY

We have received the following comment from Mr. Morley Pettit, Provincial Apiarist, on Mr. Sladen's article entitled "An attractive paper container for honey," that appeared in our issue of June 16:

"I consider that Mr. Sladen's work in this line is very opportune, as present indications are that tin will be practically beyond the reach of beekeepers by another year, unless we should be favored by the unexpected but much desired early and favorable conclusion of the war.

"Beekeepers have been experimenting with paper honey containers for many years. These may be divided broadly into two classes, the container which is filled before the honey granulates, and the cardboard box wrapping placed about bricks of honey cut with wires from honey which has already granulated and become hard.

"There are two serious objections to either form of honey package for retail. The first and greatest of these is the fact that the general buying public, particularly of Ontario, does not care for granulated honey and will buy much more readily honey in small packages where the honey is well and carefully liquefied before selling. If beekeepers are compelled through necessity to force granulated honey on the consumers of Ontario, it will be a serious detriment to the sale of honey. The second objection to the paper package is the fact that when stored for several months, particularly in warm or damp places, granulated honey becomes soft and in paper packages would become less attractive, if not unsaleable. In other words the honey would not have anything like the keeping qualities that it has in a tin or glass container.

"You will note that I have referred to the sale of honey in Ontario. While it may be positively stated that well liquefied extracted honey sells more readily to all classes of buyers in Ontario, it seems that in the Western Provinces the preference is for honey in the granulated form. This is very doubtless because they have not had well liquefied honey offered them. But since they do buy it readily a satisfactory paper or wooden container would be very acceptable for Western shipment. In addition to the small package, a 5 lb. and a 10 lb. container are also much to be desired.

"Finally the argument that an impervious container to prevent spread of disease has much to commend it. The other advantages which favor the consumer are questionable. It is a rule in business that the consumer pays all the cost of production and distribution including extras such as the war tax, etc. He (or she) always pays for the package either by weight or by price. It is now understood that small tin containers of honey are sold gross weight and the transfer to net weight in paper would only be of temporary advantage to the buyer, while it would put the producer at a disadvantage during the transition."

—The Canadian Countryman.

MARKET REPORTS

TORONTO MARKETS.

FARMERS' MARKET.

Dairy Produce—
Butter, choice dairy	$0 35	$0 40
Eggs, new-laid, doz.	0 35	0 40
Cheese, lb.	0 00	0 30
Do., fancy, lb.	0 30	0 35
Dressed Poultry—
Turkeys, lb.	0 30	0 35
Fowl, lb.	0 25	0 28
Spring chickens	0 40	0 50
Fruits—
Rhubarb, 3 bunches	0 07	0 10
Strawberries, box	0 13	0 15
Vegetables—
Asparagus, Can., bunch	0 07	0 08
Beans, new, small measure	0 00	0 20
Beets, new, 3 bunch	0 10	[illegible]
Cucumbers, each	0 05	[illegible]
Cauliflower, Can., each	0 15	0 20
Carrots, new, bundle	0 05	0 10
Celery, per bunch	0 10	0 12
Cabbages, each	0 10	0 20
Horseradish, lb.	0 00	0 15
Leeks, bunch	0 10	[illegible]
Lettuce, doz., bchs.	0 20	[illegible]
Do., head, doz.	0 00	[illegible]
Onions, bundle	0 00	0 10
Do., small bkt.	0 50	0 65
Do., Bermuda, box	0 50	0 65
Peas, Can., 6-qt. bkt.	0 00	0 40
Do., 11-qt. bkt.	0 00	[illegible]
Potatoes, per bag, old	0 00	[illegible]
Do., new, bag	0 00	4 50
Do., new, peck	0 00	0 50
Do., small measure	0 00	0 20
Radishes, 2 bunches	0 00	0 05
Spinach, new, peck	0 15	0 25
Sage, bunch	0 05	0 10
Savory, bunch	0 05	0 10
Turnips, new, bunch	0 05	0 10
Tomatoes, lb.	0 00	0 15
Do., bkt.	0 00	[illegible]

MEATS—WHOLESALE.

Beef, forequarters, cwt.	$14 00	$15 00
Do., hindquarters	18 00	20 00
Carcases, choice	16 50	17 50
Do., common	12 50	13 00
Veal, common, cwt.	9 50	11 50
Do., medium	12 50	14 50
Do., prime	19 00	21 00
Heavy hogs	16 50	18 50
Shop hogs	21 50	22 50
Mutton, heavy	10 00	12 00
Do., light	17 00	19 00
Abattoir hogs	21 50	[illegible]
Lambs, lb.	0 21	[illegible]
Do., Spring, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]

SUGAR MARKET

Local wholesale quotations on Canadian refined sugar, Toronto delivery, in effect July 16:—

St. Lawrence, granulated	100 lbs.	$8.34
Lantic, granulated	100 lbs.	8.34
Royal Acadia, granulated	100 lbs.	8.34
Redpath, granulated	100 lbs.	8.39
Dominion crystal	100 lbs.	8.24
No. 1 yellow, all refiners	100 lbs.	7.94
No. 2 yellow	100 lbs.	[illegible]
No. 3 yellow	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Dark yellow	100 lbs.	[illegible]

TORONTO CATTLE MARKETS.

Receipts—341 cattle; 2[illegible] calves; 1,[illegible]4 hogs; 329 sheep.

Export cattle, choice	11.00	11.50
Butcher cattle, choice	11.00	11.75
Butcher cattle, medium	9.50	10.00
Butcher cattle, common	8.50	9.00
Butcher cows, choice	8.00	8.85
Butcher cows, medium	7.00	7.50
Butcher cows, canners	5.00	6.00
Butcher bulls	7.00	9.50
Feeding steers	8.50	9.00
Stockers, choice	8.00	8.30
Stockers, light	7.25	7.55
Milkers, choice, each	40.00	120.00
Springers, choice, each	40.00	120.00
Sheep, ewes	8.00	9.50
Buck and culls	6.00	7.00
Lambs	14.00	15.50
Hogs, fed and watered	15.75
Calves	7.00	15.00

OTHER MARKETS.

WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Wheat—
Oct.	2 00
Oats—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dec.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Flax—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	2 55¾	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dec.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

Minneapolis,—Wheat, July closed, [illegible] 1-2; September closed $1.96. Cash—No. 1 hard, $2.75; No. 1 Northern, $2.60 to $2.70; No. 2 do., $2.50 to $2.60. Corn, No. 3 yellow, $1.90 to $1.92. Oats, No. 3 white, [illegible] 1-2. Flour unchanged. Bran, [illegible] to $32.00

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET

Duluth,—Wheat, No. 1 hard, $2.61; No. 1 Northern, $2.60; No. 2 do., [illegible]; No. 1 hard on track, $2.32; July, $2.56 (all nominal quotations). Durum on track, No. 1 [illegible]; No. 2, $2.17; July, [illegible] (all nominal). Linseed, [illegible] 1-2; July, [illegible] 1-2; September $3.11; October, $3.04.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Cattle, receipts 15,000.
Market steady.

Beeves	[illegible]	[illegible]
Western	[illegible]	[illegible]
Stockers and feeders	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cows and heifers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Calves	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hogs, receipts 29,000.
Market slow.
Light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mixed	[illegible]	[illegible]
Heavy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Rough	[illegible]	[illegible]
Pigs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bulk of sales	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sheep, receipts 3,000.
Market firm.
Wethers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs, native	[illegible]	[illegible]

BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

East Buffalo, Despatch—Cattle receipts 125; slow.

Veals: receipts, 150; slow; $5 to $15.

Hogs, receipts, 2,500; slow; heavy, $15.85 to $15.90; mixed, $15.75 to $15.85; yorkers, $15.60 to $15.80; light yorkers, $15.25 to $15.50; pigs, $15.25. roughs, 13.85 to 14; stags, 12 to 12.75.

Sheep and lambs, receipts 100; steady and unchanged.

Spelling of Surnames.

You mention four spellings of Sir Walter Raleigh's surname, but there were many more. Witness the following list from the Index of Register of the University of Oxford: Ralegh, Raleigh, Ralleigh, Raughley, Raughlie, Raughly, Raughleighe, Rauleigh, Rauley, Raulie, Rawleigh, Rawley, Rawleygh, Rawlet, Rawlighe, Rawlye and Raylye.

As to Shakespeare, it is enough for me that his fellow actors so spelled the name in capitals in their dedication of the First Folio. It so appears also in "Venus" and "Lucrece," the only compositions to which he affixed his name. There was no fixed spelling of ordinary words, much less of proper names, in that age.—J. A. Huckeira in the New York Tribune.

"John, did you take the note to Mr. Jones?" "Yes, but I don't think he can read it." "Why so, John?" "Because he is blind, sir. While I was in the room he axed me twice where my hat was, and it was on my head all the time."—Puck.

Tommy—Pop, what is a delicacy? Tommy's Pop- (Suffering from dyspepsia)—A delicacy, my son, is merely something the doctor forbids us to eat.

Through Many Trials

"Lionel!" Imogene exclaims, flushing deeply, and looking more indignant than Dumaresq could have supposed possible. "For shame! To sneer at your sister, to sneer at the fortune of your family, and—before a stranger, too!"

Dumaresq reddens a little, and draws aside involuntarily.

"My presence need not matter, Miss Trefusis," he says, quietly, but his face has paled exceedingly. "I am unlike other servants in one respect at least: I never repeat—never interest myself even in the conversation of employers."

It is a bitter speech for all it is uttered so calmly; it is unlike what one might expect from Dick Dumaresq's frank bright face, and ready, pleasant smile, and Imogene looks first startled and then almost abashed.

But the sweet, true, womanly instincts of the girl are never at fault.

In a moment she crosses over to his side of the table, where Dumaresq is sitting with Lionel's drawing-book before him, making a sketch from memory of an Indian station which the boy has asked him for.

"Please do not be offended because I said 'a stranger,'" she says, gently, the delicate pink flush that rises with the least emotion, tinging her cheeks, "I meant it in no unkind sense, Mr. Dumaresq."

"I am sure you did not, Miss Trefusis," he says, heartily, reddening deeper. "I beg your pardon for reminding you of your words in such an ill-bred manner."

And, as she extends her little, soft, white hand to him, and he takes it respectfully in his, a strange thing happens—a strange thing, but a slight thing, a little hinge on which "the massive gates of circumstances" begin to turn.

The baize-covered swing door, which gives entrance to the corridor, opens, or has opened noiselessly, and, as Dumaresq's strong, sinewy fingers close over Imogene's fair, pink-tipped fingers, they both look up with a sudden start, a swift thrill of alarm that tingles through the clasping fingers, and the hands fall apart with mutual flush, and a sense of transgression at the sight of Lady Althea de Burgh, standing silent and stately in the doorway, her gold-rimmed eyeglasses raised, and their cold glitter bent steadily on Dick Dumaresq and her niece Imogene.

"My dear child," her ladyship begins, with gentle severity, "what are you doing here at this hour of the day? Wasting your brother's time, and—ah—Mr. Dumaresq's time, as well as your own. I have been waiting for you for ten minutes, my love; please come to my dressing room. Giving Lionel a lesson in drawing, Mr. Dumaresq?" Her sharp eyes are on the page, and on everything else in the room in a few minutes. "That is very nice. Ah, an Indian scene, I see. I hope you are feeling quite well this morning, dear boy? Ah, I believe Mr. Dumaresq has cheered you and done you good already. It is a delicious morning for walking; have you been walking, Lionel?"

"No, I haven't!" Lionel says, sulkily and shortly, and partly turns his shoulder on his gentle interlocutor, who, however, only smiles very sadly, glances very significantly, with a gentle little hopeless nod of her head at Dumaresq, and goes away as calmly and noiselessly as she had come.

"She is a cat, you know—a regular cat!" Lionel hisses, fiercely. "She is always creeping guiltily about like [illegible], and always comes in smiling and talking as if she were in an angelic mood, when she is a regular cat, you know!" and he thumps the table and makes the pen jump out of the inkstand to emphasize the epithet. "She is always prying and peering, and creeping, and listening!" he goes on, waxing furious, "stately and dignified, and so sweet as she looks! Bah! she is a hypocrite, if you like. What was she prying, and peeping, and watching, and listening for here, I wonder?" he asks, suddenly.

"I am sure I cannot tell," mutters Dumaresq, and the point of his fine sketching pencil snaps at a sudden undue [illegible].

It is not until the twilight of the next day that Imogene can find time to go up to her brother's rooms; and though he is absent, she sits down and waits. And when he and Dumaresq return from a long moorland walk they find her there by the fire. She looks very pretty, but her face is very white, and there is an air of timidity or constraint about her.

Dumaresq notices it instantly as they come in, and notices it more as she shakes hands with him. She is almost cold in her manner, and the few words of respectful greeting poor Dick has longed to utter die on his lips.

"More news, Lionel, dear," Imogene says, presently, with that sprightly air of forced brightness of manner still observable. "Who do you think has come here to stay and keep house while Althea is away?"

"Don't know," growls Lionel; "I think we might keep our own house for once in a while for a change. Somebody is always 'keeping house' for us!"

"But this is somebody we like very much, Lionel," Imogene persists, pleasantly, "some one who has a nice house, and a lovely garden, and where we go to eat fruit—raspberries and cream, and—why, don't you see these lilies? We haven't any nearly as fine; they are Perrantower lilies, you foolish boy!"

"Oh! Mrs. Lilly," Lionel says, in a more modified tone. "Oh, well, she isn't a bad sort by any means. She is a nice old Quaker lady, who lives in a beautiful place called Perrantowers," he adds, turning to Dumaresq, "and she always—"

"What did you say the name was? Lilly?" Dumaresq interrupts, drawing a quick, hard breath. "Do you happen to know her Christian name?"

"Yes, of course," Immogene answers, looking at him with some curiosity. "The other Friends always call her by her baptismal name, 'Miriam.' And she is such a nice lady—not very old either, but you will see her presently; she is coming up to see Lionel—she is very fond of Lionel. Do you know her, Mr. Dumaresq?"

"Well, yes, I think it is the same," Dumaresq is saying, confusedly, not venturing to meet Imogene's clear eyes, when there is a soft tap at the door, and the next moment a stout, comely woman, about fifty years of age apparently—though she may be more, for the thick, abundant hair partly covered by her white net cap is iron gray—comes into the room with a placid smile on her grave, shrewd face.

"How does thee do, Lionel?" she says, coming forward, with sedate cordiality. "It is a strange thing, does thee know," she replies, rather suddenly, "but I have heard that thou hast a person engaged as thy tutor and companion, and I think that he—"

"Why, he is here!" Lionel exclaims, laughing, for she had not observed Dumaresq standing by the open bookcase doors, which partly hid him. But as he and the gray-haired Quakeress come face to face, there is a strange, swift look of recognition between them, and then a moment's dead silence.

"So thou are Richard Dumaresq," Miriam says, with stern significance.

"Yes, I am Dick Dumaresq," he answers smiling; but Imogene notices that he holds his breath and the careless smile is on a blanched face as he waits for the next words.

"I did not expect to see thee here, Richard Dumaresq," Miriam Lilly says, sternly, and there is neither satisfaction nor greeting in her cold, hostile tones; there is neither gladness nor welcome in her face and Imogene's young heart quickens its throbbings in vague, unreasoning pity for Dumaresq's awkful position.

"No, I suppose not," he says, carelessly, with his hand gripping the chairback still, and that set smile on his face. "It is as great a surprise to me. I did not know that you lived in this part of the country."

"Dost thou know," she says, abruptly, addressing the brother and sister, "that Richard Dumaresq is my sister's son?"

"No, indeed!" Lionel exclaims, and Imogene says, "No, indeed!" likewise, with the brightest and kindest of smiles, and a look of quick, friendly interest towards Dumaresq that makes his pale, rigid face change visibly.

"What a strange thing that Mr. Dumaresq should be your nephew, Mrs. Lilly!"

"An unworthy nephew of a worthy aunt, I am afraid, Miss Trefusis," Dumaresq says, huskily, though he strives to keep the careless, half defiant smile still upon his features.

"I trust thou art speaking too lightly of thyself," Miriam Lilly responds, with increased sternness. "I trust thou wilt try to be most worthy of the post thou hast taken on thyself to fill," and with these words she turns aside in cold displeasure, and does not address a word or a look to him until, as she rises to leave the room, she says with a quiet decisiveness that is almost a menace: "To-morrow, after Lady Althea and Miss Trefusis have gone—before I engage myself in any of the household duties I have come to take in my charge—I should like to see thee and speak with thee for a little while, Richard Dumaresq, if Lionel Trefusis can spare thee."

"Certainly," he says, quietly, but looking earnestly and sorrowfully into her grave, impassive face, and as she goes toward the door, he hurries to open it for her, and Imogene hears a quick, passionate mutter of some words as Miriam Lilly passes through.

"Not say who I am—Heaven's sake!"

But as he is avowedly a relative of Miriam Lilly—a nephew for whom she does not seem to cherish much liking—Imogene perplexes herself for a few minutes concerning these half-caught words; and then, in the "sweet charity that thinketh no evil" that abides in her nature, she decides that she has not heard clearly, or understood correctly, and does not attach even a blameful memory to anything she has heard or seen.

Only she cannot avoid watching Mrs. Lilly somewhat wistfully next morning, and wondering sorrowfully if the gray-haired Quakeress, who has been a childhood's friend to her and her brother, and gives them many an innocent pleasure and enjoyable treat, can be stern and unforgiving—can cherish bitter dislike and enmity and for what cause?

The luncheon had been served early on account of the travellers, and Sir Philip had requested that Lionel and his "tutor"—the appellation seems to have been adopted in spite of Lady Althea—may be present, and so it happens that Dumaresq meets, for the first time, Evelyn Trefusis, and he is fairly startled by the beauty of Imogene's beautiful sister.

She is a living picture, and she knows it. Her complexion is rarely beautiful and flawless, and it is a marketable possession of great value. Her rich, brown hair is such as few women can boast of, in texture, color, length and abundance—and every silken tress of it has its price, its price as choice merchandise.

"That girl will make a grand marriage in the first season, I should not wonder," Dick says, mentally; "a wealthy marriage, very soon, I am morally certain. At any cost or any price, she will enable herself to be a popular beauty, surrounded by luxury; she will be a leader of fashion, she will be adored by men, detested by women; she will steep herself to her lips in very sensuous enjoyment; she will go any length to possess anything she desires, honor, conscience and principle being put quietly aside out of her path. In a word, I believe in my soul," he says, watching her more intensely, "that beautiful girl will be a very bad woman!"

And just at this instant she looks up and sees Dick Dumaresq's intent gaze change into embarrassment as he hastily averts his eyes, and the light of gaiety on Evelyn's bright, fair face grows brighter. She is in the carriage which is to take her to the station with the Lady Althea by her side, and the other members of the household standing on the doorsteps to say good-by, and Dick Dumaresq is standing on the lowest step just by the carriage door, with the soft afternoon sunlight shining full on him—his tall, muscular, soldierly figure, the bold bright face, the heavy, golden-brown moustache, the brilliant, falcon-like eyes, and the crisp nut-brown hair.

She smiles sweetly, a smile of pleased vanity, as she sees his embarrassment and the conscious look in his eyes as she bids him adieu, graciously and kindly, and the carriage drives away.

"I have never seen Lionel's tutor before," she observes, half laughing. "If I had known he was so well worth looking at, I should have made his acquaintance sooner. What a handsome fellow he is!"

"Do you think so, dear?" Lady Althea asks, slightingly. "He is a stout, strongly-made man, with rather good features, certainly, but I noticed nothing more."

Evelyn smiles contemptuously.

"I have a keener eye for masculine beauty than you, ma tante," she says, lightly, "if that is your real opinion. I consider Mr. Dumaresq—but a good name he has, too—quite a dangerously handsome man!"

"Indeed!" Lady Althea says, serenely, with her little sarcastic laugh. "I fear your ideas of masculine beauty are very much below the proper standard, dearest; wait until you have been in society."

"I am very sure I shall not meet a handsomer man while I am in London," Evelyn says, coolly, "and I am quite sorry I didn't have time to make him fall in love with me! I believe he is a gentleman, even if he did enlist in the army, and when we come back from town, if it is as dull and wretched at home as it was last winter, you shall see if I will not make Mr. Dumaresq fall in love with me pour passer le temps."

Lady Althea is silent for a moment or two; she never permits Evelyn to perceive that she has the power to anger her.

"Then for poor 'Mr.' Dumaresq's sake," she says, with placid contemptuousness, "I shall not be sorry if Hoskyns, the head housemaid, falls in love with him. She is a pretty girl, and a respectable girl, and as maid-servants have such an extraordinary attraction for the 'gallant sons of Mars,' I should not be at all astonished to find things had arranged themselves so on my return."

"Not only might Sarah Hoskyns, the housemaid, fall in love with Mr. Dumaresq, which would betoken very good taste on Sarah's part," pursues Evelyn, sedately buttoning her glove, "but your guileless niece—romantic, impulsive and sweet sixteen—might fall in love likewise with so goodly a specimen of the flower of manhood—rather a rara avis in our dismal walls, I grieve to say."

"Do you mean to say that your sister, Imogene, is in danger of falling in love with this man Dumaresq?" Lady Althea exclaims, and remembering, just as she speaks, the scene she discovered only two days before, of the pair standing with clasped hands, she absolutely gasps for breath.

"I should say she was in a peculiarly great danger," Evelyn says, serenely, "shut up in that lonely house through long summer days with a man like Richard Dumaresq, untrammeled by duenna or conventionalities or any sort whatsoever."

"Mrs. Lilly is a most strict, careful and prudent woman," Lady Althea says, sharply and excitedly. "I gave her certain close injunctions about Imogene's leisure time also, and—"

"And she is Richard Dumaresq's aunt. She told you so," Evelyn says, smiling, she is so gratified at Lady Althea's mental disturbance. "There is no use in your distressing yourself now, Aunt Althea; here is the station, and our train is due in five minutes; but I must say I never knew you to do so careless a thing before."

"Miriam Lilly knows her position thoroughly, and knows her nephew's position, and I am sure he does also, and would never dream of transgressing the boundaries of his position, even if you leave honor and self respect out of the question!" Lady Althea says, her face puckered and her lips trembling, making her look to the full her fifty-four years.

"A handsome young man with a pretty young maid are apt to disregard such cold constraints as differences in social position," Evelyn retorts, maliciously, "and I must say, under the circumstances they are not much to blame. Existence in Portdreath would excuse the rashest of rash acts, if it were conducive to a little less dullness. I am sure it were excusable to transform it into a Fool's Paradise, when so lonely an Eve meets so goodly an Adam."

"You have been reading some horrid books lately, I should think, Evelyn," Lady Althea says, her voice quite shrill with suppressed wrath. "I never heard you talk such horrid sentimentality!" She turns her head and glances a quick, almost terrified glance into the face of her beautiful niece. "One would think," she says, scoffingly, to hide her perturbation, "that you had fallen in love with Richard Dumaresq yourself!"

Evelyn laughs aloud her clear, ringing laugh.

"One might have thought a far more unlikely thing if I had been obliged to stay a few months longer at Portdreath," she retorts, gayly. "The ennui and dreariness of the ancestral abode would tempt one to plunge into anything, even a mesalliance, to change the current of existence."

Lady Althea pauses abruptly as the two ladies walk up and down the platform, waiting for the train, which is delayed, after all.

"Evelyn, pray do not say anything so dreadful," she says, imploringly, as her nerves are beginning to be affected by her niece's suggestions, and she knows of old that Evelyn is pitiless in small, subtle annoyances, if she choose to revenge herself so for any cause. "Pray do not," she pleads; "I shall be in a fever all the time we are away, if I imagined there was the least dawning possibility of any dreadful entanglement of the kind. I should come back from town at an hour's notice, and take Imogene away myself!"

(To Be Continued).

Toronto Fat Stock Show

It is doubtful if any of us realise the need that there will be for meat and live stock in the European countries after peace is declared. Canadian breeding stock and Canadian meat products will be in demand. It behooves the Canadian breeder and feeder to grasp the opportunity and produce a maximum of live stock when prospects are so good for continuous high prices. No better outlet for the best of his stuff can be found than at the auction sale of the Eighth Annual Fat Stock Show, Union Stock Yards, December 7th and 8th next.

He Saw Double.

A city man of [illegible] habits got into difficulty in a small town. Indeed, he found himself haled before the local magistrate.

"The constable," observed the city man to the magistrate, "seemed wonderfully certain about the details of my case. How is it he doesn't call his fellow-officer to corroborate what he says?"

"There's only one constable in this village, sir," explained the magistrate.

"But I saw two last night!" indignantly asserted the accused.

"Exactly," said the magistrate, smiling broadly. "That's just the charge against you."—Exchange.

ROYAL YEAST
MAKES PERFECT BREAD

Redpath
SUGAR

No one ever doubts REDPATH quality, because in its Sixty Years of use no one has ever bought a barrel, bag or carton of poor Redpath sugar. It is made in one grade only—the highest.

"Let Redpath Sweeten it." 12

2 and 5 lb. Cartons—10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.

Canada Sugar Refining Co., Limited, Montreal.

FARM AND GARDEN

FARM MANURE WASTE.

Barnyard manure is a by-product, and affords a means of returning to the soil the unused portion of the crop. This is the year of all years when the most should be made of all possible economic fertilizer measures. Much nitrogen will go into munitions. Sodium nitrate will therefore be scarce, and the other carriers of nitrogen will be correspondingly high in price. Potash is practically unobtainable. Manure carries not only nitrogen and potash, but some phosphorus as well; and the New York State College of Agriculture urges that the farmer should make all possible use of this source of plant food.

Farm manure carries but small percentages of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash as compared to common commercial fertilizers. It is usually applied in such large doses, however, that the aggregate amount of plant food added is large. Twenty tons of manure is equivalent, as far as fertility is concerned, to a ton of quickly available mixed fertilizer and to a ton of slowly available fertilizer besides. In addition, there are the benefits derived from the added organic matter and the stimulated bacterial action, and we cannot afford in the present crisis to neglect or waste such values.

Not only should all possible farm manures be used, but it should be used as soon as possible. Storage even for a short time and under the best conditions entails waste and losses of from one third to one-half of the fertilizer value of manures. Once in the soil it is safe. We cannot afford the [illegible] waste in peace, and much [illegible] time.

Manure is an unbalanced fertilizer in that it carries too much nitrogen for its phosphorus. Acid phosphate is obtainable and can be used to advantage in correcting this deficiency. Added at the rate of from 50 to 100 pounds per ton the effectiveness of both the manure and the phosphate may be markedly raised. The returns from this re-enforced manure will also be increased by fineness of division and uniformity of spreading. The use of a manure spreader is advised wherever possible. When the amount of manure is limited smaller applications over a larger area will raise the crop yield for each ton applied.

POTATO BUG AND DISEASE CONTROL.

Bordeaux mixture, made of four pounds of copper sulphate, four pounds of quicklime and fifty gallons of water, is used by potato growers to ward of fungous diseases. If paris green is added to this material, it will kill the bugs within a day; and, when arsenate of lead is also mixed in, the poison is effective often for several weeks after applied to potato vines. The Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station advises the use of these compounds soon after potatoes came up, and again about two weeks later. Sometimes a third application ten days or two weeks after the second is necessary. Early in September the second brood of beetles appears and the treatment must be repeated then and about two weeks later. On young vines fifty gallons will be sufficient to spray an acre, but when the vines are large two or three times this amount is necessary. Dusting with paris green diluted by bulk with twenty parts of finely ground lime and shaken from cheesecloth bags or blown from a suitable powder gun over the foliage is also recommended. The powder is dusted on the plants according to the schedule for spraying stated above.

SAWDUST BEDDING.

A shortage of bedding has two effects—discomfort to the animal and the loss of the most valuable part of the manure. Unless the liquid portion is saved, the fertilizing constituents to be returned to the land are very materially reduced. Nearly half of the nitrogen and potassium from farm animals occurs in the liquid excrement. It is therefore important that this be saved through the use of sufficient absorbents. The claims of sawdust as a material for bedding, both as an absorbent and for providing comfort where a supply is available. It undoubtedly answers very well for this purpose. It is true, of course, that this product of the sawmills is not by any means the equal of straw in this respect, which latter after all is said and done, is the best and indeed an ideal kind of litter for use in the stable; but, despite its general inferiority to straw as litter, sawdust proves very useful. The outstanding feature of sawdust, insofar as regards its suitability for litter in stables, is that it possesses great absorptive powers for liquid, and in this particular respect it ranks considerable above straw. Whereas the absorptive capacity for liquid of straw amounts to only about two and a quarter times of its own weight, sawdust—provided it is perfectly dry—is capable of absorbing liquid to the extent of about four times its own weight. Thus, thanks to its great absorptive capacity, sawdust makes both a dry and a cleanly bed. It does not afford such a soft bed as straw litter, but still animals are quite comfortable on it, provided the sawdust is put down sufficiently thickly.

BRISTLES.

It is as natural for pigs to eat grass as it is for any other animal to do so.

Many people seem to forget that pigs need pasture.

To keep pigs shut up in a pen and feed them on swill is a proof that you are not up-to-date, but a back number.

The feeding period of a pig is short, and the rapidity and the amount of growth is up to the man handling the feed.

A stingy feeder never get anywhere, for he is "penny wise and pound foolish."

The cleaner the feed the more rapid and healthful the growth.

The pails and tubs should be kept as clean as the dairy utensils.

Since the flesh of a pig is for human food, it should at least be grown on clean feed.

Pigs will be clean if given the chance.

Give the little pigs all the whole oats they can eat up clean on an enclosed platform where the sows cannot enter. Sweep the husks off every day.

Careful observation and selection will help one to secure pigs of inherited quality.

But don't turn the new stock right in with the old. There'll be trouble if you do.

The question, Who is boss? arises the moment you shut two strange hogs up in one pen, [illegible], or the bristles will fly.

One of the finest things we can do is to provide plenty of pen room for our hog herd.

There is a fortune awaiting the man who will invent a good, practical way of keeping hog-pens dry.

NOTES.

The pig and the chicken are best for quick meat production.

Lime will speed up garden crops. It is particularly beneficial on new land. For both flower and vegetable gardens hydrated lime is safest to use. Sprinkle it around the base of the plants and along the rows close to plants, but not touching them, and work it in the soil.

Spraying with a solution of two pounds of powdered arsenate of lead or four pounds of arsenate of lead in the paste form or one pound of Paris green to fifty gallons of water should be begun against the cabbage caterpillar as soon as the plants are set out and should be repeated again while the plants are small, if necessary. The common cabbage worm is the larva of the small white butterfly, having black tipped wings. Micro can be used for cabbage caterpillar, applied with a blow gun made for the purpose.

SUMMER HEAT HARD ON BABY

No season of the year is so dangerous to the life of little ones as is the summer. The excessive heat throws the little stomach out of order so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand the baby may be beyond all human help before the mother realizes he is ill. Summer is the season when diarrhoea, cholera infantum, dysentery and colic are most prevalent. Any one of these troubles may prove deadly if not promptly treated. During the summer the mothers' best friend is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and keep baby healthy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE CRIME OF GREY.

(New York Sun.)

A general European war was was nearly precipitated by the settlement of the first Balkan war. The terms of peace were settled at a conference of Ambassadors in London, and Sir Edward Grey, then and till recently British Minister of Foreign Affairs, made strenuous efforts to avert war. In this he was assisted by Germany, and was successful.

To this the present German Chancellor bore testimony. On April 7, 1913, in introducing the extraordinary and unprecedented army and taxation bill, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg said: "Europe will feel grateful to the English Minister of Foreign Affairs for the extraordinary ability and spirit of conciliation with which he conducted the discussions of the Ambassadors in London, and which constantly enabled him to bridge over differences. Germany shares all the more sincerely in this gratitude because she knows herself to be at one with the aims of English policy, and, standing loyally by her allies, has laboured in the same sense."

Fifteen months later there was another Balkan crisis, this time between Austria and Servia, and Sir Edward Grey worked as he did a year earlier to preserve the peace of the world, but this time he was not supported by Germany, and he did not succeed. He was not supported by Germany because Germany was not ready for war before the military law of 1913, and was ready, and desired war, after it. What that army increase was made for isn't left to conjecture. In that same speech of April 7, 1913, the Chancellor explained that the increase of the army was needed because the Balkan war had resulted in weakening the power of Servia, the protege of [illegible].

But now, as England is more hated by the Germans than any other nation, so Sir Edward Grey is singled out as the most detestable Englishman. Professor Forster, of Munich, speaks of Sir Edward as one of the "scoundrels and hypocrites who have this war on their consciences." [illegible] Tolzien, of Schwerin, says Sir Edward "has a cancerous tumor in place of a heart."

Why is the man to whom Europe should be grateful in the early part of 1913 for preserving the peace such a scoundrel and hypocrite and cancerous wretch in the middle of 1914? Because at the earlier date Germany wanted peace and supported Sir Edward. At the later date it didn't want peace and thwarted his efforts. But Germany has decided to assume the attitude of a victim compelled to defend itself against attack, and this pretense is refuted by Sir Edward's efforts in all the European capitals to avert war, and as he is the principal witness for the conviction of Germany as the wilful and deliberate cause of this war, it is necessary for the German intellectuals to single him out for abuse as the most hated individual in the most hated nation in the world.

CHOICE CHEESE RECIPES.

Cheese balls are delicious. To make one very good sort, simply mix American cheese with a little boiled or mayonnaise dressing. Stir in equal amounts of chopped English walnuts and pimento. Form into balls the size of small walnuts. It is fine with potato or other heavy salad.

CREAM CHEESE SALAD.

Mix with Philadelphia cream cheese as much chopped pimento as will give a decided flavor; add a few chopped nuts and mold into shape of egg and place on lettuce leaves on individual plates. Put a spring of parsley on top and pour around mayonnaise dressing thinned with cream.

COTTAGE CHEESE SALAD.

Mold cottage cheese into small cakes and place on bed of crisp lettuce; cover with thickly mayonnaise dressing and garnish with stuffed olives. Serve with hot salted wafers.

CHEESE RAMAKINS.

In a gill of milk boil two ounces of bread crumbs until smooth, then add four tablespoonfuls of cheese, two of butter, and stir over the fire one minute. Remove and add a little cayenne pepper, one-third teaspoonful mustard, and beaten yolks of two eggs, last the stiff whites, and turn into ramakins and bake 15 minutes in a quick oven. Serve immediately.

Happy are those who get what they want, and forget what they don't.

THAT

Holiday Trip !

Hot Weather is here, and with it comes the thought of a holiday trip, and with the holiday trip comes the thought of a suitable

Suit Case or

Club Bag

We are ready to supply you. A splendid variety here. Just what you want at the price you wish to pay.

Call and see our stock. You will find it easy choosing from our large assortment.

We pay cash for eggs

N. McGillivray

North End Store

BANK OF HAMILTON

Established 1872

Capital Authorized, $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up, - $3,000,000
Surplus, ... $3,500,000

Ambition

THAT one idle dollar on hand for which you have no particular need, will start a savings account in Bank of Hamilton. Your ambition to get ahead financially will grow as your saving accumulate. Capital is the key that opens the door to success.

R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
PORT ELGIN BRANCH

41-C

Can you afford to be without The Times ?

Children's

Ready-to-Wear

Garments

In prints, galateas, and other cotton materials, at the cost of materials only, much below to-day's values.

Children's aprons at 15c	Rompers and play suits from 40 to 75c
Childrens dresses, good style, 40c to 50c	Womens' overal aprons and house dresses 50c to $1.25
Middies at 50 cents

We pay Cash for Eggs.
Produce wanted.

See our big display in our north window

South End Store

N. McGillivray & Co.

The Port Elgin Times

MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

ADVERTISING RATES

Farms or Real Estate for Sale 50c each insertion; Miscellaneous articles, To Rent, Wanted, Lost, Found, etc., each insertion 25c. Local Readers, Notices, etc., 10c per line per insertion, 5c each subsequent insertion. Cards of thanks 50c. Legal advertising 10 and 5c a line. Black-faced type, count 2 lines for 1. Display rates, yearly contracts, 12c per inch, 6 mos. 15c per inch. In memoriam poetry 5c per line. Professional cards $6 per year in advance.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The Supreme Court of Canada, in a suit for libel, in which the Edmonton Bulletin was defendant has decided that when evil conditions are notoriously prevalent in a municipality, the newspaper which says the Councillors are to blame, and names the men, is within its rights.

• • •

Hon. W. J. Hanna, Canada's Food controller, says there may be compulsion to force the people to observe rules for conserving food and especially wheat foods. Does he mean that he will stop the manufacture of whiskey. Quite a lot of real good grain is being used for the wasteful purpose of booze making. Let us gather up the real waste. The manufacture of whiskey is waste.

• • •

A recruiting officer was recently driving through this section seeking recruits. As the evening shades were falling he espied a stalwart young man sitting on a three-legged stool milking a cow. The officer approached the young man with, "Say, young fellow why are you not at the front." The young man looked up at the officer from under the rim of his straw sunshade, and quietly replied, "Because the cow gives her milk at this end, Sir." The officer waited for no more.—Winchester Press.

• • •

Owen Sound may secure another large industry, which will employ several hundred hands. One thing about the men of the board of trade and industrial committee of the council is that they never give up trying. Their persistence is gradually making of Owen Sound an important place, and prospects are that it will not be many years ere Owen Sound will be one of the big cities of Ontario.

• • •

An increase of letter carriers' wages in cities, and towns to meet the higher cost of living was announced in parliament. We have no doubt these men need the raise, but who will take up the case of the rural route carriers, who not only have the same expenses as the town and city men, but also the keep of horses or autos?

An Election Soon

It looks like an election, and that soon. Possibly the memorable date, 21st of September, will be chosen by the government to appeal to the people, although it is difficult to see how things can be got ready in so short a time. On Friday last Liberal members of the Dominion House, and candidates for the same, met in Toronto to formulate a plan of campaign. A statement given out shows that these men assembled there will support Sir Wilfrid Laurier. They also oppose a coalition government and an extension of parliament.

Since this meeting many Liberals have declared themselves as against any few men, such as were at the Toronto meeting, dictating as to what policy the Ontario Liberal voter shall accept.

This condition may create a desire for third candidates, and in a three cornered fight a number of these candidates would be elected.

Should Have Credentials

A Bruce township farmer informs us that a short time ago a couple of men clad in khaki, solicited subscriptions for a certain paper, on the 8th of Bruce, and in the surrounding concessions as well, and that a great many of the farmers subscribed, believing they were helping returned heroes. After the men had made a thorough canvass of the neighborhood, and left the district, in about ten days the same men returned, but they were in civilian clothes, and not looking too prosperous. In fact they were begging. They secured good big lunches from at least five prominent farmers, whose names we have, and after looking over what they were given proceeded to pitch the food in the ditch.

What the people want to know is, how are they to tell whether men canvassing for various articles are bona fide returned soldiers? Should not the Militia Department provide credentials if soldiers are to represent certain firms, who seek to make money out of the uniform?

And still another one. The Windsor Weekly Record gave up the ghost last week.

It should be counted an offence to stop a man from hoeing just to have a little talk.

With the Motor Transports

Pte. Eldon Dell in a letter home says our daily routine is not regular, as our column is a headquarters to all Canadian supply columns. Unless we are going out early we rise at 6.30 and our first parade is at 7.20. On this parade all orders are read. As soon as it is dismissed the mechanics go to the workshops and the drivers to their lorries. If we are not going out we scrape the mud or dust off the lorry, and as soon as that and the greasing is done we wait until we are ordered out, and that is generally when we are about half through with the cleaning. On the other hand we may be called up at any hour and ordered to get out as soon as possible. This is when a train of stone or ammunition has to be unloaded quickly.

When are on rations we generally leave the park about 8 a. m., but that is never regular, as they only come in when the track is clear. A run generally takes six hours, besides the waiting round to be loaded and unloaded, so that we are doing well if we get back by 4.30 p. m., in time for supper.

Then the roads need repairing, and a carload of stone arrives, so that after supper we start in again and haul stone for perhaps ten hours or so, then we return to the park to get some sleep. Of course, we sleep in the lorry, so it don't take long to make our beds. Then, we may not have much work for a week or two, then it comes with a rush, so you see we get our sleep and work in bunches, and can never depend on a night off.

We generally try to have a Sunday off, but I expect I will be on coal tomorrow morning, anyway. Reg. Campbell and W. Overton are with the 15th Canadian Scottish billeted here. I have also seen Ewart Geddes, Stan Morton, Fin Hepburn, and Bill Cairns. I get most of the papers, but it is hard to keep track of all the papers that are sent across. Best regards to all old friends.

Late John McGillivray

John McGillivray, who was killed at Hatton, Sask., on Saturday June 16th, was the eldest son of Mrs. McGillivray, 1037 First Avenue Northwest. He was born March 24, 1857, at Bentinck, County Grey, Ontario, and spent his younger days there, later moving to Bruce County and from there he and his first wife came to the west 19 years ago last spring. At first he settled at Glen Valley, near Disley, Sask., where he took up a farm, but three years later he came to Moose Jaw, where he engaged in the livery business. Mr. McGillivray spent the last three years with his brother Malcolm, southwest of the city, but last fall went to Hatton. The funeral service was held on Tuesday June 19, at 10:00 a. m., Rev. D. R. Sharpe, pastor of the First Baptist Church officiating and his remains were interred beside his first wife.

He leaves to mourn his loss his aged mother, two daughters, three sisters, four brothers and a host of relatives and friends.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

Farmers need assistance just now. Anyone with extra time can put it to good use on the farm.

Miss Minnie Allan was operated on at Walkerton hospital last week. She is improving nicely.

Mr. Krug, of Chesley, has purchased some of Mr. John Ross' property at the Grove, to erect cottages.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. James Stephenson, 10th of Bruce, on Friday, July 13th, a daughter.

Crown Attorney Dixon has been appointed a deputy Judge, to assist with the work of Judge Klein, who continues on the sick list.

Patriotic money to the amount of $340 was paid by the local branch of the Canadian Patriotic fund for the month of July, on Saturday.

There will be no fall fair at Walkerton this year. The directors attach the blame for no show on the condition of the building which is badly out of repair.

A new Methodist hymn book has been produced, which will be available next fall. Many changes have been made, and the new book will have about one third fewer hymns and twice as many tunes as the old one.

Mr. Allan Bell, who was so seriously injured on July 2nd, is improving steadily. Dr. Lucy was in consultation with local physicians last week, and pronounces Mr. Bell's progress as satisfactory.

Warden D. J. Izzard, Port Elgin, was here on Friday last, and with Reeve Wm. Hunter looked over the two county bridges that were damaged by the flood. Action will at once be taken to have them repaired.—Kincardine Reporter.

The new road on the 6th con. to the lake has proved a great boon to all the people of the community. Sunday afternoon there were scores of cars on the lake shore, the motorists enjoying the cool breezes of the lake.

Mr. M Davidson of Aberdour, brought to the Times a sample of wheat straw which measured 5 feet 9 inches. Mr. Davidson has several acres of wheat that is extra fine, and promises a good yield. Crop generally in that section is reported as good.

Mrs. McLean, of Port Elgin, Ont., who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. John Malcolm, for some time, left Tuesday for home. Mrs McLean is a proud lady to have fourteen grandsons at the front. Mrs. Malcolm accompanied her as far as Winnipeg, where she will visit relatives there.—Red Deer News.

CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE
Stratford, Ontario

Ontario's Best Business College
FALL TERM FROM SEPT. 4TH
Commercial, Shorthand and Telegraphy departments.

We have thorough courses, experienced instructors, and we place graduates in positions. The Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalog.

D. A. McLACHLAN, PRINCIPAL

Fine Lawn Social

The lawn social under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Evangelical church on Thursday evening was a great success, from a social and financial standpoint. It was held at the splendid home of Mr. Henry Thede, and his fine lawn was prettily decorated for the occasion with flags and bunting. Every convenience was afforded. Individual tables were arranged about the lawn, these being served by the ladies. You see, the lunch was on the European plan. Ten cents was all the admission fee, and one was served at the tables with whatever was ordered. There were strawberries and ice cream, sandwiches, coffee, cake, etc. The arrangements included seats for all when the program began. Altogether the committee in charge had been very thoughtful for the comfort of the crowd.

The fish pond created a great deal of amusement, and there was a crowd around it all the time. Some were even fortunate to get roosters on their hook. There was also a refreshment booth, which was liberally patronized. Bert Raynor had his orchestra there, and they gave some enjoyable selections. The orchestra is a very popular company at the parties this year.

Rev. Mr. Gischler, the popular pastor, presided over the program in his usual cordial manner. The numbers on the program were exceptionally well rendered, and were loudly applauded, those taking part being the Misses Ewald, Mrs. Walker, the Misses Hindauer, Miss Seeling, (Hanover), Donald McArthur, Miss Sutherland, the Misses Ebert. Addresses were made by C. M. Bowman, M. P. P., ex-Warden McCannell, Reeve Christie and E. R. Sayles.

The ladies are greatly pleased with the result of their lawn social, and will have a goodly sum for Red Cross.

Death of Joseph E. Tranter

A prominent man of our community and a member of a family who took a large part in the early settlement of this district, passed away July 1st, in the person of the late Joseph Enoch Tranter. He was in his 66th year and had enjoyed good health up to the time his eldest son Capt. Lionel Tranter, was killed in action in France. He felt the death of his son very keenly, but up to a couple of months ago his condition was not considered serious, since then to the end he failed very rapidly, the immediate cause of death being cancer.

The late Mr. Tranter was born in Miramichi, New Brunswick, 1851. He was the youngest of twelve children, and came to Saugeen when about three years of age, where he has since resided, with the exception of a few years spent in Pennsylvania. In 1886 he married Annie, daughter of the late John Cook of Saugeen. There were six children to bless this union, and besides his widow, four of these survive him Stanley, Hazel, Ella and Mary, all at home. A daughter, Katie, died in 1912 and Lionel was killed in France in 1916. Three sisters also survive him Mrs. Morll, Bradford, Pa., Mrs. Wm Gilbert, Southampton and Mrs. David Gibbard Saugeen. The late Mr. Tranter was a staunch member of the Anglican church in the work of which he took an active part and was a warden for a number of years. The funeral services were held at his late residence, Revs. Parke and Diehl conducting the services, and the very large attendance testified to the esteem in which deceased was held. Interment took place at Southampton cemetery under auspices of the I. O. F. of which deceased was a member.—Beacon.

TIVERTON

Mrs. D. Nelson and children have returned from a visit at Clinton.

Mrs. N. Schell, of North Bruce, has been visiting here.

Mrs. Hawke is on holiday in Clinton.

BULL FOR SERVICE—Terms $1 for season cows. Payable January 1st. Wm. Robertson dairyman, Port Elgin.

The Times, as good as a letter from home. Send it to your friends.

BLACKSMITHING

N. KILT, Blacksmithing, horse-shoeing and general repairs. Tire-setting a specialty

Just the Thing

for

Summer Wear

Boy's khaki bloomers, in good quality denim two special lines at 90 cents and $1.25

Boy's wash suits, in tan or blue linen and striped percale, in sizes 2 to 8 years, reg. up $1.50 to clear at 98 cents.

To save those good leather boots, buy a pair of harvest shoes. We have them in all sizes.

Youth's at $1.35 per pair
Boy's at $1.65
Men's at $2.65

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon.

Roppel Bros.

Rural phone, Underwood

Advertise it in The Times.

SPECIAL

We have a few of Dr. Pierce's Family Medical Advisors, Good cloth binding which we offer at

50 cents each

while they last.

R. C. Crawford

Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent

Cow Ease . . .

Now that real hot weather has come, you find the cattle and horses suffering from attacks of flies, they cannot feed or work in peace Cow Ease gives instant relief. It keeps flies away. Horses can work better and quieter, milch cows increase flow of milk. Cow Ease pays for itself.

Half a gallon tin 60cts
Gallon tins $1.00

Paris Green and Bug Death for the potato bugs

McLAREN'S HARDWARE

CLIP THIS AND PIN ON WIFE'S DRESSER

Cincinnati man tells how to shrivel up corns or calluses so they lift off with fingers.

Ouch ! ! ! ! ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn or hardened callus stops soreness at once, and soon the corn or callus dries up and lifts right off without pain.

He says freezone dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels. If your druggist doesn't have freezone tell him to order a small bottle for you.

HAVE YOU BEEN SICK?

Then you realize the utter weakness that robs ambition, destroys appetite, and makes work a burden.

To restore that strength and stamina that is so essential, nothing has ever equaled or compared with Scott's Emulsion, because its strength-sustaining nourishment invigorates the blood to distribute energy throughout the body while its tonic value sharpens the appetite and restores health in a natural, permanent way.

If you are run down, tired, nervous, overworked or lack strength, get Scott's Emulsion to-day. At any drug store.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.

BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA ESTABLISHED 1832

Save and Serve

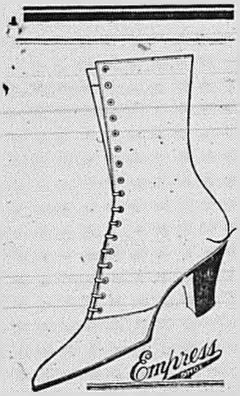
Serve your country by helping in the accumulation of savings; remember that thrifty individuals make a prosperous nation. Also the larger the people's savings, the more able will the country be to bear the burdens of the war.

The readjustment period after the war will be a trying time for those without money. Be prepared for this by opening a savings account in the Bank of Nova Scotia and depositing regularly from your income. 51

The Bank of Nova Scotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 130,000,000

PORT ELGIN BRANCH.
A. L. Wyant, Manager



This shoe will be advertised from Coast to Coast in Canada as "Empress" Shoes have been for years, and each season adds newer lines and greater beauty to this well-known shoe for women. Always above the others. We are agents.

James George & Son

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS

To

Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganotawan River
Lake of Bays
Kawartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourists tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares, with liberal stop overs.

GET YOUR TICKET IN ADVANCE

J. S. Cameron, Agent, Port Elgin, Both telephones.

Alleged Profits of The William Davies Company in 1916 on Bacon, as Indicated by Department of Labor to be Five Cents per Pound, Untrue:

Actual Profits Two-Thirds of a Cent per Pound

THE statement issued by the Department of Labor concerning the business of The William Davies Company Limited has been given widespread circulation throughout the country and provoked public unrest.

Whatever the technical wording of the report was, the effect has been that the newspapers have published that "the profits on Bacon alone" of this Company "for 1916" were about "five millions of dollars." This interpretation of the official report is not surprising in view of certain statements that the Commissioner of the Cost of Living makes. The Commissioner is reported as saying that "There were two individual cases of profiteering in 1916 and that had these cases occurred since the passage of the cost of living Order-in-Council, he would consider it his duty to recommend that the facts be laid before the Attorney-General for consideration as to their criminality." The situation created by such erroneous and damaging statements is serious as emanating from a Government official, from whom one looks for not only accurate statements but correct conclusions.

The William Davies Company, being a private concern, has followed the practice of all private corporations, except when it made a bond issue in 1911, in that it has not published reports of its assets and liabilities or profit and loss. The present circumstance, however, in which a Government Official has led the public to false conclusions, makes it advisable for this Company, for both the public interest and its own interest, to publish particulars of its business as well as point out the error of the statement of the Government Official.

For the last fiscal year ending March 27th, 1917, The William Davies Company bought and killed 1,049,000 head of Live Stock (Cattle, Hogs and Sheep.) This, plus purchases of outside Meats, produced 160,000,000 pounds of Meats. The Company handled 6,550,000 pounds of Butter and Cheese, 5,650,000 dozens of Eggs, and manufactured 26,500,000 tins of Canned Goods.

The net profits on these were .68 cents (or two-thirds of a cent) per pound on meats, 1.04 cents on Butter and Cheese, 1.04 cents per dozen on Eggs, and .47 cents (or slightly less than one-half a cent) per tin on Canned Goods. These profits include profits on all By-Products derived from these accounts.

During the year the Company served at its retail stores 7,500,000 customers, the average purchase of each customer was 35c., and the net profit upon each sale was 5-8 of 1 cent.

The turnover of the Company from all its operations for the last fiscal year ending March 27th, 1917, was $40,000,000. The net percentage of profit upon this turnover, after deducting war tax, was 1.69 per cent., or including war tax 3.45 per cent.

The William Davies Company has assets of $13,385,000 of which $3,865,000 is tied up in fixed investments.

To provide the necessary facilities for the increased volume of business the Company expended $750,000 in buildings and equipment during the year.

Companies of other character present no more reasonable statement of profit and loss based upon the investments made in the business.

The William Davies Company offered to the Imperial authorities, as well as to the War Office Service (which represents the Imperial authorities in Canada) to place the output of its Factory with respect to Bacon supplies, Canned Beef and Pork and Beans at the service of the authorities, on the basis of cost plus an agreed percentage. These offers were successively declined as the authorities evidently desired to purchase in the open market, and on this basis The William Davies Company has secured War Office business by open competition with the world.

Respecting the Report of the Commissioner on the Cost of Living:—

Last Winter the Commissioner, under authority of Order-in-Council, required packers to submit statements under oath for some years back and up to December 1st, 1916, of incoming stocks of Meats and the cost of such, as well as statements of outgoing product and the selling value. This Company represented in writing at the time that the information as specifically required was not in accordance with Packing House Accounting methods, and invited the Commissioner to send an Officer to the Head Office of the Company to examine the books for any information desired, and to secure a viewpoint as to the best way of collecting data which would be of use to the Government. This offer was declined, and there was nothing to do but fill in the information required as literally as we could determine it. For example, there was no recognition of the fact that a raw product may enter a factory under a specific classification and leave the factory as a finished product under some other classification.

We submitted a series of accurate figures based upon our interpretation of the official requirements which made no provision for charges of any description other than incoming freight and unloading charges to be included in the cost or to be deducted from the selling price. There was nothing in the report which could be read so as to determine a profit and loss statement. The very fact that with only a statement based upon cost of raw products and value of sales in Great Britain a Government Official has deduced "Large margins," "Profiteering" and "Criminality" if it had occurred since the passage of a recent Act, shows too dangerous a trifling and incapacity to be permitted to deal with any important situation. The statements of this Company have been treated by the author of this report as if the out-going product was identical with the incoming product, and from the series of reports he has singled out two items—the Bacon and Egg reports—and from them deduced an erroneous "margin" which the newspapers have interpreted as "profit." The author of the inquiry shows a strange lack of even a fundamental knowledge of simple bookkeeping and a dangerous inability to co-ordinate figures. The following are specific and outstanding errors in the report:

The principal item that is causing excitement deals with cold storage bacon. The term "cold-storage" is not defined, and the public is allowed to make its own definitions. As all Bacon in a packing house is under refrigeration it is really all cold-storage, and therefore this Company's figures of cold storage Bacon represent the complete quantity of Bacon handled in its entire Plant, whether in freezers or in process of cure for immediate shipment. That some companies interpreted cold-storage product as "freezer" product only is evidenced by the smallness or entire lack of [illegible] for some Plants, indicating that many firms did not submit statements of their complete stocks, as did this Company. An Official of this Company pointed out this cold-storage distinction to Mr. O'Connor and Miss McKenna in Ottawa a few weeks ago, and the failure to make the [illegible] after having had it pointed out evidences lack of desire for accuracy of the real information desired.

It is true The William Davies Company, in 1916, exported 97,791,000 pounds of Bacon, but we do not know how the margin of 5.05 cents per pound is arrived at by Mr. O'Connor, as there were no figures to justify such a conclusion. The probabilities are that the margin is arrived at by taking the average cost per pound of incoming product from the average selling price per pound of outgoing product. This may be a rough way of estimating the gross margin when dealing with small figures, but when dealing with figures the size that Mr. O'Connor has to deal with, a very small fraction of a cent per pound of error makes a very important difference in the total, and one must be careful to make sure that the outgoing product is the same finished merchandise of the incoming product reported on.

Allowing it to pass, however, as a rough estimate, we wish to point out—(first)—the inquiry of the Commissioner allowed only for incoming freight and unloading charges, and made no provision whatsoever for operating charges of any kind, such as labor, curing materials, refrigeration, et cetera. Such actual charges on the 97,791,000 pounds exported were $1,162,00[illegible]—or 1.2 cents per pound. This amount covered all charges up to the point of placing the Bacon on cars f.o.b. packing-house. In addition to this was the actual cost to land and sell this 97,791,000 pounds in England after leaving the packing house, which involved charges of 2.9 cents per pound—or $2,8[illegible]. Thus 2.9 cents per pound included inland and ocean freight, landing charges, war and marine insurance, cables, and selling commission to agents. The ocean freight and war risk alone would make up 2.4 cents of the charge of 2.9 cents per pound. This 1.2 cents, plus 2.9, cents—a total of 4.1 cents—must be deducted from Mr. O'Connor's margin of 5.05 cents per pound, leaving a margin of .95 cents, or slightly less than a cent per pound, which still has to be reduced because of the error of premises and because of further factors which have to be considered to determine net profit.

It is quite evident some of the other packers did not show selling values in the country in which the goods were sold—a proceeding quite proper, as the forms submitted to be filled in were indefinite and ambiguous, thus permitting without charge of evasion a variety of interpretation as to the information required. It is thus possible that of all the figures submitted by the different packers that no two sets of costs and sales prices are determined at the same common point. It is this difference of interpretation of what was required that accounts for the difference of the alleged "margin" made by the different companies. Common conclusions, however, have been drawn by the author of the report from varying bases of premises.

The figures of the Egg business were submitted on the same basis as Bacon, and similar deductions must be made.

(Second)—The above margin is further reduced in that the author of this inquiry singled out the Bacon figures as an item in which the selling price shows an alleged improper advance over cost, but he did not give us credit for the statements of other products, of which figures were submitted the selling prices of which were under cost. The reason of this was that through failure to inquire the Department entirely overlooked the fact that product may come in as pork and, through the process of manufacture, go out as Bacon or, in another instance, enter the factory as beef and go out in the form of canned meats; for example: much of the product which came in as pork, and which was entered on the pork sheet submitted to the Commissioner—about which he makes no mention—was cured and left the factory in the form of Bacon, and was, therefore, entered on the outgoing side of the Bacon sheet—the result is that the Bacon sales are increased by this amount over the incoming stocks of Bacon, and, likewise, the sheet showing sales of pork is reduced by the amount that went out in the form of Bacon. If the Department takes one set of figures that show favorable to the Company they should take another set of figures that show unfavorable, as the principle in either case is the same, and failure to do so looks as if the author of the report was exercising more enthusiasm than sound judgment in his investigations.

(Third)—It is queried in the report, that "if the margin of 3.47 cents," alleged to have been made in 1915, "was satisfactory, why was it necessary to show increased margin in 1916?" Assuming again for the moment the soundness of the premises in asking such a question based on an erroneous "margin", it will be found that the increased margin is chiefly absorbed in increased ocean freight rates and war risk insurance in 1916, of which apparently the author of the report was in ignorance.

The Company does not challenge either the legal or moral right of the Government to investigate business enterprises when public interests dictates such an investigation should be made. If an investigation of the packing and meat business is ordered, the Company will place at the disposal of the Government not only the data it would be required to supply under Order-in-Council directing that inquiry be made, but will place the experience of its officers at the disposal of the investigating committee, if it is considered they can render any service which will be of value. The Company has not now—nor at any time during the fifty years of its operation—anything to conceal in method or practice of carrying on its business. It does, however, claim the right to conduct its export business without abusive comment from Government civil servants—especially when the conclusions drawn from the data asked for are improper and false.

One of Canada's chief export industries is the packing business. It is essential to the live stock industry, and, along with other export industries, it maintains the financial stability of this country, and should, providing it is on a sound basis, receive encouragement and not slanderous abuse. In view of the publicity given to the report of the Commissioner on the cost of living, the Company demands the same publicity in having an official Government investigation of this report to determine the truthfulness or untruthfulness of its conclusions. We do not seek public consideration as a company, but we do say that untruthful official statements, or statements the effect of which is to create an untruth, adversely affect the live stock industry of this country, which is so valuable and essential a wealth-producing power and, in the long run, are harmful to the very people that the statement seeks to benefit.

If the passing out of existence of a corporation such as The William Davies Company, or if nationalization of packing houses would materially and permanently reduce food prices, then in view of the present world tragedy it ought to be consummated without delay. The fact of the matter is, however, that with millions of people in Europe turning from producers into consumers because of the war, and the tremendous destruction of food products incident to war, there is no remedy for the high prices of food while such conditions last, except the remedy of thrift and increase of production.

Long before there was talk of a Food Controller in the United States or Canada The William Davies Company urged the Government at Ottawa, in writing, to appoint a Food Controller with full power to do what he saw fit, as we realized at that time the upward tendency in the price of food commodities unless checked by official effort. At the most a great deal cannot be done in reducing food prices while currency is inflated and until the scale of prices of all kinds of commodities declines also. What can be done can only be done by a Food Controller. We wish to point out that nothing at all can be accomplished unless the data secured are accurately and clearly made and the deductions therefrom sound. Only public harm arises from dangerous incompetency in the haphazard collection and careless use of important figures.

As far as The William Davies Company is concerned this terminates all public statements of the Company, and it will pay no more attention to speculative and haphazard statements made either by newspapers or civil servants. The only further statement that will be made will be at an official investigation.

E. C. FOX, General Manager

Toronto, July 17th, 1917

THE WILLIAM DAVIES COMPANY, LIMITED

SAUGEEN COUNCIL

The Saugeen council met as per adjournment, members all present but Mr. Chappell.

1. Minutes of last meeting read and on motion of Atkinson and Webster adopted.

2. Greathead and Webster—That the Reeve draw from the Bank of Hamilton $400 to pay current accounts, carried. A petition was presented re culvert on Lake Range Con. 4. No action taken.

3. Greathead and Webster—That the following accounts be paid. Carried. Jas. G. Scott, 4 sheep killed by dogs, $[illegible]; Wm. Gowanlock 58½ hrs. grading 90c $52.65, less use of grader $4.50, $48.15; Arthur Campbell, grant re McKillop's side road, $10; Jas T. Wallace grant re blind line, $27; F. W. Elliott, 3 mons. salary Clerk and Treas. $62.50; The Times acc. to date, $7.15; Alex Brunton, culvert on side road, $4; R. Telfer 60 rods wire fence lot 21 E. R. $[illegible]; council meeting No. 6, $12.03; H. Nelson grant to Con. 6 Lake Shore, $15.

4. Christie and Atkinson—That we desire to place on record our sincere regret at the sore affliction, a member of this council, Mr. Maurice Chappel, through a dispensation of providence, has been called upon to pass through. We desire to assure him and his boys of our sincerest sympathy, and commend them to the loving care of Him, who doeth all things for His glory, and for our good. Carried.

5. Greathead and Webster—That the sum of $54 has been raised by voluntary contribution, towards cementing and improving road, on Con. 6 leading to lake, and whereas the sum of $69 was required to complete said work. Be it therefore resolved that this council grant the sum of $15.00 for said purpose. We further desire to express our appreciation of the services rendered by Mr. Nelson and others, in carrying out this work. Carried.

Council adjourned to meet on August 11th at 1.30 p. m.

F. W. Elliott, Clerk.

J. R. Lynes sent out 22 fine cattle to Toronto last week. They averaged 1300 lbs. and brought 11½ cents per lb. live.

Mrs. J. A. [illegible] of the 12th of [illegible], had a narrow escape from injury on Thursday. She was assisting Mr. [illegible], and was driving a team on a [illegible]. The team, for some reason or other, made a bolt and running against a post, freed themselves from the [illegible] and throwing Mrs. [illegible] from the [illegible]. Fortunately there were no broken bones, but she was badly shaken up.

RASH ON BABY CAUSED PAIN

Itched Very Much. He Was Always Scratching. Cuticura Healed Him.

"My baby was suffering with scaling and crusting of the skin and scalp which caused a good deal of pain. The breaking out was in a red rash on his face which was sore and itched very much, as the child was always scratching till it would bleed.

"I thought I would try Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I used about one box of Cuticura Ointment and two cakes of Soap when he was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Harthorne, 940 Old Orchard Ave., Notre Dame de Grace, Montreal, Que., Dec. 16, 1916.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment prevent pimples or other eruptions.

For Free Sample Each by Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

FOR HOUSEWIVES.

How to Keep Fruit Juices Without Sugar.

Fruit juices can be kept without sugar for use later on in jelly making. This enables the housewife to get along with fewer jelly glasses. Moreover, with bottled juice a greater variety of jellies can be made, as juice that will not jell can be put up when the fruit is ripe and combine later with fruits that will jell. or fruit ripening at different seasons can be combined. Juice of strawberries, cherries or pineapple can be kept without sugar and later when apples are plentiful made into combination jelly.

It is really surprising how much fruit is allowed to go to waste in the ordinary garden. Until one has made an effort to save all the fruit grown, including the windfall apples, no idea can be had of the large amount wasted. An effort to save all the fruits and vegetables will result first in the housewife learning that there are probably only about one-third or one-quarter of the necessary cans on hand and finally that to save all the food drying will have to be resorted to in some cases.

The next noticeable result will be that more fruits, vegetables, jellies and jams will be served all winter, the family will fare better and enjoy better health and meat bills will diminish correspondingly. It may be even necessary to supply less fortunate neighbors with some of the preserves to finish them up at the end of the season, or some may be carried over, as unsugared sterilized juices of currants, apples, crabapples and grapes keep from nine to eighteen months and then make excellent jellies.

To put up unsugared fruit juices for jelly making, proceed exactly as if jelly were to be made at the time. Cook the fruits until they are soft and strain out the juice through a flannel bag. Heat and pour while hot into bottles, previously scalded. Fill the bottles full, leaving no air space between juice and cork or seal. Place the filled sealed bottles on their sides in water near the boiling point, and keep them in the bath for about thirty minutes. Make sure that the corked or sealed end is under the hot water. As soon as the bottles are cool cover the cork with a paraffin seal. Thorough sterilization and sealing are absolutely essential to success.

To made jelly from the sterilized juice, test its jelling quality, add the proper amount of sugar, and proceed as in making jelly from freshly expressed juice.

Minard's Liniment for sale everywhere.

GERMANY'S CREDIT.

An Estimate of the Economic Conditions of the Empire.

The war has begun to go against Germany, says President Wilson, and the average man immediately looks at the war map, compares it with the war map of two, three or six months ago and sees that this is so. If he were to look at the economic map he would see that the war is going against Germany even more pronouncedly, and in a way which no Hindenburg line can check.

Cabled reports from Berne on Saturday week stated that the exchange rate for German reichsmarks had fallen to 71 Swiss francs per 100 marks as against a normal mint parity of 123.42 Swiss francs for 100 marks. The rate for Swiss francs at New York on that day was 5.03 francs for a dollar. Arbitraged under the system of international exchange, this would make the mark worth 14.1 cents here, or at rate of 56.4 cents for four marks, the unit of quotation which prevailed before we entered the war. This represents a discount of 40 3-4 per cent., the lowest, so far as we in America know, that German exchange has gone.

The greatest discount on German exchange prior to our entrance into the war was 30 1-2 per cent., reached on February 3th last, and on March 30th, the last day marks were quoted in the New York market, the rate stood at 70, which showed a discount of approximately 26 1-2 per cent. Thus, the German exchange, which is the measure of her credit, has fallen 14 1-4 per cent. since the United States became arrayed against her.

In the matter of her exchanges with Switzerland, the case is even worse than it appears to be. Germany has free and unrestricted facilities for trading with Switzerland. No barbarous British blockade can interfere with these relations. She can export anything she wants to the country, and she can import what she needs or can get. The fact that her exchanges are so poor indicates that she has been importing from Switzerland on a vast scale. But she is paying for these imports at a ruinous rate. The argument that she must hold on to her gold to protect her circulating paper currency will not explain away the situation, for Switzerland has more gold than she knows what to do with, and would gladly accept goods in payment for goods, as she is doing with her two entente neighbors—France and Italy.

The plain, evident truth is that Germany can neither pay in gold nor in goods, but must pay in credit, which is worth less than 60 cents on the dollar. How long this can continue nobody knows, and it would be rash to predict a speedy collapse, in view of the lessons taught by the war, because of what the financial markets show. But it is quite apparent that Germany is desperately hard up, much more so than either England or France, her chief European rivals, and it is also apparent that she has no "vast accumulation of goods with which to deluge the world when peace returns." This seems to be pretty much of a myth, else she would use some of her goods in correcting her exchanges with Switzerland.

Germany is having an unhappy time of it in a military way. We hope and believe she will have a worse time before the war ends. But when the war does end she will have an even greater problem to solve, and one the solving of which will require more than wartime financial legerdemain.—Brooklyn "Eagle."

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

Gratitude!

An usual form of testamentary gratitude is recorded in the diary of Henry Greville. "A man who had spent much of his time in fishing left a direction in his will that as he had derived much nourishment as well as pleasure from the fish he had caught at Chertsey it was only fair to the descendants of those fish that he in return should become their food. He therefore desired that his body be cast into the Thames at Chertsey."—London Tatler.

WHEN YOUR COLOR FADES

When a girl—or a woman—finds her color fading, when her cheeks and lips grow pale, and she gets short of breath easily and her heart palpitates after slight exertion, or under the least excitement, it means that she is suffering from anaemia—thin, watery blood. Headache and backache frequently accompany this condition and nervousness is often present.

The remedy for this condition is to build up the blood, and for this purpose there is no medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They build up and renew the blood, bring brightness to the eyes, color to the cheeks, and a general feeling of renewed health and energy. The only other treatment needed, is plenty of sunlight, moderate exercise and good, plain food. The girl or woman who gives this treatment a fair trial will soon find herself enjoying perfect health.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine, or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Poison Gas of Beetles.

Most people think that the use of poison gas in warfare is a purely human, or perhaps one should say, inhuman idea. Yet the plan has been adopted by nature. Certain kinds of beetles known as bombardiers, and called by scientists branchinus, make free use of poisonous fumes to keep their enemies at bay. A typical species known as as branchinus crepitans is largely attacked by certain ground beetles. These ground beetles are very active, and can easily overtake the bombardiers. Just as they get within reach, however, a strange thing happens.

The bombadier has the power of jecting a peculiar liquid which when it comes into contact with the atmosphere, bursts into a sort of a pale blue-green flame. This is immediately followed by a kind of smoke. Now this smoke has a remarkable effect upon the pursuer. No sooner do the flames come into contact with the ground beetle than the creature is blinded and stupified. A strange paralysis overtakes the insect, and it seems unable to move any farther. Quite a while elapses before the ground beetle recovers. In the meantime the bombardier makes good his escape.—The American Boy.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia

REVERSION TO TYPE.

Habits of Animals Which Date Back to Days of Their Ancestors.

Just as men have developed from their savage state into pleasant civilized beings, so naturally dogs and cats and horses and hogs and other domestic animals are very different from the wild things that were caught in the forest and trained to usefulness, but there are some habits inherited from their far away ancestors which they still retain, and by which they are distinguished one from the other.

We never question, for instance, why a horse runs so swiftly and has such power of endurance, but we must remember that his ancestors had to flee and defend themselves from the wolves—their greatest enemies— and that their rearing and plunging was also a former means of defense if the enemy sprang on their backs. Their neigh was a watchword and call when wild horses went in droves, and some sort of signal was necessary to keep them from straying.

Sheep, when frightened, always run to an elevation, because their ancestors originally came from the mountains. They always follow a leader, because in the dangerous mountain passes their ancestors had to go in single file.

Hogs grunt because their feeding grounds were thick woods, where they could not see one another and sound was necessary to keep them together.

Dogs have a way of turning around several times before they lie down. This looks very foolish now, but when they were wild things, centuries ago, they slept in the tall grass and turned around several times to hollow out a bed, and they have never outgrown this habit, but to this late day they will turn around on a rug, just as if they were in the tall grass.

Cats have, perhaps, the most traces of old ancestral habits, says the Virginia "Pilot." Many times they do have a trace of the lion or the tiger very near the surface. Their uncertain temper, their purring and growling, their sudden bounds, their tendency to scratch, all come from the forest and the jungle.

All these and many more traits can be found, but when we canter across country on our ponies and fatten our respectable hogs for the markets, and make pets of our dogs and cats, we forget how far these traits have traveled, and that when the world was younger its live stock was of a very different order.—Buffalo Commercial.

Ripe Cherries

and

Lantic Sugar

"Pure and Uncolored"

make delicious and economical preserves

In 10, 20 and 100-lb. sacks, 2 and 5-pound cartons

PRESERVING LABELS FREE Send red ball trade-mark for book of 54 printed gummed labels to

Atlantic Sugar Refineries Limited

Power Bldg., Montreal

145

PURI.

Indian City of Juggernauts' Temple and Chariot.

To say of any place in India that it is strangest and most curious city in the empire is to make a bold statement, for India is a museum of curious places, each one stranger than the last. Yet it is probably true that Puri is the strangest place in India. Here in this little seaside village, only a few hours from Calcutta, you come closer to the mysteries of India than anywhere else, in a physical sense at least.

At Puri is the world-famous temple of Juggernaut, whose death-dealing chariot has become a stock figure for ruthless destruction of human life in every modern language. The Car of Juggernaut is perhaps not quite up to advertisement, but there are strange things enough in Puri to make up for that.

The temple of Juggernaut houses the rudely-carved figure of the god himself, hewn out of a log and never finished. The story goes that a certain king was instructed from above to build the temple, and the god would come from the sea. He came as per schedule in the form of a floating log, and the gods sent a sculptor from their immortal realm to carve the log into god-like semblance. The sculptor arrived and set to work; but the gods are jealous of heavenly secrets in the way of carving. The people were warned that no man must watch the sculptor at work. The king who built the temple, with a highly human curiosity bored a hole in the wall and peeped. The sculptor disappeared in a rage and left the god half-finished; and that half-carved log is perhaps the most sacred idol of India to-day.

Once a year he is placed on a great car and drawn through the streets for a visit to another temple. This is the occasion when the devout fling themselves beneath the wheels of the chariot, but the car is hardly heavy enough to account for much mortality. Most of the casualties occur in the struggle to get a hand on the ropes that haul it.

The greatest mystery of Puri is its effects on the matter of caste. India is iron-bound in the matter of caste—as much to-day as ever. No man may eat, or drink or sleep or marry, above or below his caste. Only in one place does caste become meaningless, and that is Puri. Here caste counts for nothing, and the head priest of the temple is of the lowest of all castes, a sweeper. And yet that temple is so sacred that no European has ever crossed the threshold. The viceroy of India came to Puri to visit it, and was refused admittance. More than that, the grand lama himself, the exalted head of the very religion of which the temple is a part, most sacred of all mortals, is not permitted to enter the temple. Truly, India is the land of incomprehensible contradictions.—Frederick J. Haskin.

Odd and Interesting Facts.

Switzerland in June and July had the heaviest, most continuous rains known for fifty years.

Sacramento, Cal., business men have formed a Barefoot League for health and amusement objects.

By a new French process aluminum can be so substantially nickel-plated that the metal can be hammered and bent without cracking.

Iron safes and cash boxes are in demand nowadays among native merchants of Indo-China, and Chinese doing business in the faraway region of Asia.

Successful experiments with cotton growing have been carried on in the canal zone by a North Carolina man.

The United States has more telegraph offices and more line mileage than any other nation. Germany is second in rank.

MAKE TOURISTS MARVEL.

The Sharp Contrasts Between Australia and New Zealand.

One of the first surprises awaiting the tourists from the northern hemisphere is to find that Australia and New Zealand may not be grouped as two islands of like appearance, differing mainly in size, near neighbors which may be treated as a unit. New Zealand is nearly twice as far from Australia as Bermuda is from New York and not only east, but also south.

Four days' travel across a chilly sea is required for the traverse from Wellington to Sydney, and after exchanging the chill midsummer climate of the New Zealand lake region for the heat of Adelaide one readily accepts the evidence of the map that the southern coast of the Australian mainland has the latitude of central New Jersey, while the southernmost of the three islands which compose the Dominion of New Zealand occupies the position of southern Newfoundland.

In climate and vegetation the two dominions are as unlike as Norway and South Carolina. New Zealand is a land of mountains, gorges, rivers and fiords. The higher peaks of the South Island are eternally snow capped, and the glaciers of its southern Alps rival those of Switzerland. The surrounding seas are too cold for corals. Among the mountains of the North Island volcanic fires are still active, and the geysers and hot springs are little less impressive than those of the Yellowstone park. The aboriginal inhabitants of New Zealand at the time of their discovery by Dr. Cook were the most advanced of all the south Pacific races, while the aborigines of Australia are the lowest in intelligence of all human beings.

Australia is in no sense inferior to New Zealand in geographic interest, but lofty peaks, profound canyons and active volcanoes are lacking. Its rivers are unimpressive and its permanent lakes small and few in number. It is a continent composed of plains interrupted by ridges and mountain knobs.—National Geographic Magazine.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited

Dear Sirs,—I can recommend MINARD'S LINIMENT for Rheumatism and Sprains, as I have used it for both, with excellent results.

Yours truly,

T. B. LAVERS.

St. John.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

Neck of Mutton.

Don't despise it.
It makes fine broth.
Judiciously cooked it is good eating.
Cooked by itself it may not be tempting.
A little elaboration and the whole thing is transformed.
Try cooking it slowly in a little water till nearly done.
When nearly done cover with the following mixture:
Two cups breadcrumbs, two tablespoons fine-chopped sweet herbs and the yolk of an egg.
With this mixture over the mutton, neatly brown the whole in the oven.

Blessed are the happiness makers! Blessed are they that are without friction, that makes the course of life smooth and the intercourse of men gentle.—Henry Ward Beecher.

30 cents per lb. for beef is not high when compared to 50 cents per lb. live weight paid for the champion of the Toronto Fat Stock Show. Start feeding that steer now and get some of the big money at the

EIGHTH ANNUAL

TORONTO FAT STOCK SHOW

Union Stock Yards Toronto

Dec. 7th and 8th, 1917

Secretary Will Mail Prize List on Request

BATHS A MONTH LONG.

Natives of Japan Take Them Hot and Sleep in the Water.

The number of baths taken daily by the Japanese at the hot springs and the length of time they remain in the water run counter to all western medical opinion regarding the utility of hot baths for invalids. Five or six times a day for an hour or longer at a time would not be considered an uncommon regime.

A smile of incredulity was raised some years ago when Professor Chamberlain told us of a tiny spa where the bathers stayed in the water for a month or more, with stones on their laps to prevent them from floating in their sleep. Yet I could name another remote little spot where a very old man—well advanced in the nineties, in fact—has literally lived in the shallow warm water of the spring for years, his knees and neck supported by a beam, from early morn till midnight.

The high temperature at which the baths are taken has excited the wonder of the spring for years, his knees and neck supported by a beam, from early morn till midnight.

The high temperature at which the baths are taken has excited the wonder of many travelers. At Kusatsu, for instance, that of the chief bath is 125 degrees F., but such a temperature necessarily involves special precautions before entering the bath, with a limit of from three and one-half to four minutes' immersion.

When we remember that water at 115 degrees F. can just be borne by the hand, but not by the whole body, it is possible to realize the agony of afflicted humanity in the Kusatsu baths. At the same time the Japanese skin cannot be so sensitive as that of the European, for the daily bath is enjoyed by the natives at a temperature that makes the boldest of us wince.—Herald of Asia.

IT IS UP TO CANADIANS

In order to facilitate train movements and release passenger train crews for other work, the railways of the United States are making drastic reductions compared to which those in Canada early this year appear mild. Thus, for instance, the Pennsylvania Railroad merely on its lines east of Pittsburg has eliminated no less than 102 trains, or more than double the number taken off the whole of the Canadian railways. This will cut down the passenger movement by an amount equivalent to 2,268,000 train miles per annum or over 6,500 train miles every week day. A number of parlor cars, restaurant cars and observation cars are being discontinued. The Boston & Maine has taken off no less than 255 trains or more than five times the number taken off in Canada, saving approximately 41,000 train miles per week. Strenuous efforts are also being made to increase the carload and to impress on merchants the importance of rapid unloading so that the freight equipment shall be kept busy to its utmost capacity, and terminals should be kept clear. The American railroads realize that speed in freight movement is one of the greatest aids they can give to help win the war and according to all reports are achieving remarkable results. It is up to Canadians to see that Canada is not left behind in this patriotic race.

Widowed Birds.

The married life of most birds could be taken for a model by members of the human family. For instance, the staid, dignified and homely baldheaded eagle never mates but once and lives with his one mate until he or she dies. If left a widower—even a young widower—the baldheaded eagle never mates again. He remains alone and disconsolate in the nest of the rocky craig or in the branches of the tall pine that formed his domicile while his mate was alive. No other female eagle can tempt him to forsake his desolate life. With him once a widower, always a widower. The golden woodpeckers live in a happy married state, mating but once. If the male dies his mate's grief is lasting, and she remains a widowed bird the rest of her life.

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN!!

I, a woman, can ease your suffering. I want you to write, and let me tell you of my simple method of home treatment, send you ten days' free trial, postpaid, and put you in touch with women in Canada who will gladly tell what my method has done for them.

If you are troubled with weak, tired feelings, headache, backache, bearing down sensations, bladder weakness, constipation, catarrhal conditions, pain in the sides, regularly or irregularly, bloating, sense of falling or misplacement of internal organs, nervousness, desire to cry, palpitation, hot flashes, dark rings under the eyes, or a loss of interest in life, write to me to-day. Address: Mrs. M. Summers, Box 8, Windsor, Ont.

The Echo.

Midst mountains wild I met a shepherd once,
Who blew upon a long, long English horn,
And sweet his melody did flow. The horn,
So strong the resounding, was but the instrument
That midst the hills the charming echo wakened
And every time the shepherd waited, silent,
Until the echo died, that long lingered
And flew from height to height, the sounds were sweet
Beyond compare, and inexpressible,
It seemed to me, a choir invisible
On instruments ethereal were expressing
The earthly longing in heavenly, wondrous language.
And thought I then—"O genius! Like this horn,
Thou, too, must sing the earthly song to waken
In hearts another song. Blessed be who hears!"
And midst the mountains heard I in reply:
"Nature is but a symbol, like his horn
She sings but for the echo, which is God.
Blessed be he who hears the song, and hears the echo!"
—Viacheslav Ivanov in Russian Review.

How to Carry Water.

If you want to carry a full pail of water any distance without spilling or to carry water from one room to another in a flat dish or tray, you should always have something floating on it. If it is drinking water a clean saucer will do, and a flat piece of wood is the best thing for a pail. It is the little waves that arises from the water's lapping against the sides and then rushing to the other side that makes the water spill over. The floater stops this.—New York Sun.

Next to its unique flavor, the great economy of Salada Tea has been the reason for its enormous sale.

ISSUE NO. 30, 1917

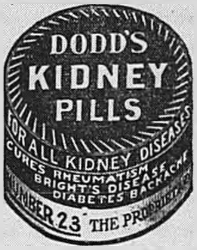
HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Wellandra Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

WANTED A GENERAL SERVANT for only two in family. Apply 88 St. Mathew's Ave., Hamilton, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

A DOMINION EXPRESS MONEY ORDER for five dollars costs three cents.



What It Would Be.

A teacher was endeavoring to explain the term "facsimile" to his class.

"Now," he remarked to one sharp youth, "what is your father's trade or profession?"

"He's a lithographer," was the reply.

"Very well. Supposing a man came to your father with a document which he wanted reproducing in every particular, your father agreed and the document was faithfully copied, what would it be?"

"Well," replied the boy thoughtfully, "it depends."

"On what?" asked the teacher.

"On the document."

"How so?"

"Well, if it was a ten dollar bill, for instance, the other would be a counterfeit. If the document was a check the copy would be a forgery."

"You don't understand what I mean."

"Oh, yes, I'm quite sure I do," went on the boy. "I'm just coming to it now. In either case it would be about ten years."

Other People's Money.

In handling other people's money the principal must be kept intact. If, as a trustee, those to whom you are responsible insist upon an income which you in your heart know cannot be obtained without taking some slight chance, give up the trust without hesitation, says World's Work. There is no more bitter experience through which an honest trustee can pass than the rendering of an accounting for a lost or depositied trust. No reason or excuse can weigh for an instant against the actual result which faces. A single slip in the handling of funds like this may doom all future generations of that family to lives of poverty. This is the greatest responsibility ever laid upon a trustee, an executor, a banker or an adviser, and no honest man should assume it unless he is prepared to endure for the sake of the future all the criticism that may centre upon him on account of extreme conservatism in the present.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

What Tipping Means.

Fourteen thousand six hundred per cent is a pretty high rate of rent! But it's just what you pay when you hand the cloakroom pirate a jitney for watching your hat for an hour. Do you get us? Well, it's just like this: When you pay 10 cents for the loan of a dollar for a year you pay 10 per cent. But if you pay 10 cents for the loan of a dollar for a day you pay 365 times as high a rate, or 3,650 per cent. It's just the same way with your $3 hat. When you pay 5 cents on it for an hour you are paying the rate of $438 a year, counting only twelve at the rate of 14,600 per cent. Tell this business hours a day. And this is to the cloakroom girl to-day and get her "comeback." But don't blame us if she's a bit snippy.—Worcester Post.

As the Years Go By.

The letterhead of a certain lawyer bears a legend that savors of sound philosophy. It runs, "I am anxious for business, but have passed the experimental age and am now demanding cash for my services."—Case and Comment.

Ex-King Constantine is one man who is justified in talking about the trouble caused for him by his wife's relatives.—Washington Star.

The Waste of War is terrible, but the waste of food in times of peace is colossal. Rich and poor alike eat tons of food that has little food value—and this useless food breaks down the so-called eliminating organs and depletes the physical and mental powers. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is all food, prepared by a process which makes every particle thoroughly digested. It is 100 per cent. whole wheat. Two or three of these Biscuits with milk, make a nourishing meal, supplying the greatest amount of energy at lowest cost. Delicious with sliced bananas, berries or other fruits.

Made in Canada.

TEUTONS HELD BY RUSSIANS

Reinforced Austo-Germans Are Not Advancing.

Gen. Korniloff's Troops Stand Firm.

London cable says: General Korniloff's army in East Galicia is stubbornly holding back the reinforced Austro-German armies, which at various points are endeavoring to wrest from them the positions recently won in the Halicz and Kalusz sectors. In the latter region near the village of Novica the enemy won a vantage point from the Russians, but immediately afterwards in a counter-attack lost it again. The Germans are violently bombarding the Russians south of Brzezany and near Halicz.

The Petrograd War Office statement follows:

"Western front: There has been intense artillery fighting on the part of the enemy in the region of the village of Potutory, south of Brzezany, and in the neighborhood of Halicz.

"South of the village of Novica, to the south of Kalusz, enemy detachments after strong artillery preparation attacked and occupied one of the heights. Our detachments slowly retired on the line of the River Berezrica.

"An hour later the enemy renewed the attack from the direction of the village of Novica, but as the result of a valiant counter-attack by our infantry and cavalry the enemy was thrown back and we re-occupied the above-mentioned height.

"There has been no material change in the situation on the Roumanian and Caucasian fronts."

BULLET IN HIS HEAD,

But B. C. Aviator Guided Plane to Safety.

Baltimore Despatch Captain M. Bell-Irving, of Victoria, B. C., of the Royal Flying Corps, is in Baltimore to enter the Johns Hopkins Hospital with the hope of having a bullet removed that is lodged dangerously near the brain. About a year ago, while flying over the German trenches in an aeroplane, accompanied only by a pilot, Captain Bell-Irving was struck by a missile from a German anti-aircraft gun. He remained in his seat although dazed by the bullet, which had penetrated his head. With the assistance of his pilot he was able to reach the British line and was taken to a military hospital and operated on, but the bullet could not be removed. Later he was sent to his home in Canada.

"I am in hopes that the bullet can be removed," said he, "so I can return to France and resume my duties in the Flying Corps." Capt. Bell-Irving asserted that both the British and French people were most optimistic about the outcome of the war, especially since the entry of the United States into it.

"The moral and financial effect has already worked wonders to hasten the end of the war," he said. "The effect of the navy of the United States has been instantaneous, and this is shown by the falling-off of the ships sunk by the German submarines. I have received a letter from my brother recently, who is in the British service, and he tells me the condition of the Germans grows worse each day."

NAVY PRIZES ARE VALUABLE

German Ships Taken Trim, Serviceable Craft,

And All Contain Cargoes That Will Help.

London Cable — Telegrams from an unnamed east coast port to where the German ships were brought after being captured by British destroyers in the North Sea, say they are all trim, serviceable craft, manned by some a dozen to eighteen men. They contain valuable cargoes of coal, coke and provisions.

An unconfirmed report says one of the vessels is the Great Eastern Railway steamer Brussels, whose captain, Fryatt, was executed by the Germans, after his capture in June of last year.

A despatch from Amsterdam says steamers are constantly plying between Rotterdam and Hamburg, carrying provisions and German coal. The latter is sent by the Rhine to Rotterdam, whence it is shipped to Hamburg, in order to relieve congestion on German railroads.

A TOTAL WRECK.

Ymuiden, Holland, cable says: The German merchantman Magdalena Blumenthal, which went ashore off Zandvoort while attempting to run the British blockade from Rotterdam to Germany, is a total wreck. The crew, one of whose members was wounded, has been landed. The Blumenthal was one of the seventeen German merchantmen which put out from Rotterdam, most of which were either stranded or sunk or captured by British destroyers.

* * *

"Dad, what was the labor of Sisyphus?" "Sisyphus rolled a stone up a hill, and as fast as he rolled it up it rolled down again. It was a mythological episode. Nothing like that to-day." "Oh, I don't know," interposed ma. "Washing dishes is just like that." — Louisville Courier-Journal.

RUSSIAN DELEGATES' LEADERS UPHOLD COURSE OF KERENSKY

Strong Backing for War Minister — Another Demonstration Tuesday.

Petrograd Cable — Another manifestation of armed sailors and soldiers and workingmen and women, in which shots were fired, took place along the Nevsky Prospect yesterday. The extent of the casualties is unknown.

Yesterday's disturbances were a repetition of those of the day before, except that they occurred at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, whereas the first outbreak occurred around midnight.

The manifestants were grouped along the same part of the Nevsky Prospect. A number of stray shots were heard, followed by the firing of rifles against upper windows and roof tops at a seemingly imaginary foe.

KERENSKY UPHELD.

London Cable — Leaders of the workmen's and soldiers' and peasants' delegates issued an appeal to all workmen and soldiers of Petrograd. The appeal says:

"Certain persons, who are unknown, summon you, contrary to the unanimous general will, not excepting that of the Socialist parties, to appear in the streets with weapons, and invite you to protest in this fashion against the disbandment of regiments which have dishonored themselves at the front by criminal breach of their duty towards the revolution.

"'We, the delegates of the revolutionary democracy of all Russia, declare that the disbandment of the regiments was the result of representations by the military committee, and by order of Minister of War Kerensky, whom you elected. Consequently, every act in defence of the disbanded regiments is an act against your brothers shedding their blood at the front. We remind you that no military unit should appear with arms without special authority of the commander-in-chief, who is in agreement with us.

"'Whoever infringes this order we brand as traitors and enemies of the revolution. We are taking all measures in our power to see that this order is carried out.'

"Simultaneously the provisional Government posted a proclamation reading:

"'In view of the armed demonstrations of certain military units July 16 and on the night of the 16th and 17th, which resulted in several people being wounded, all demonstrations are prohibited.'"

NAVAL HEADS MAKE APPEAL

To Shipyards Men's Patriotism in Production.

Must Replace Vessels Sunk by the Foe.

London Cable says — The Iron and Steel Confederation of Great Britain has received the following message signed by Sir Edward Carson, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Admiral Jellicoe, First Sea Lord:

"The Board of Admiralty wish to impress on all engaged in the building and repairing of ships how serious are the times in which we live. A determined enemy had set himself to blockade our islands and destroy merchantmen bringing food to our people and supplies to our armies, using methods contrary to the law of nations. Every day merchantmen are sunk. We need all our resources to prevent the threatened starvation. The enemy knows this, and has staked everything upon it. If he succeeds, victory will rest with him; if he fails his defeat is certain.

"There are only two weapons we can use, both forged in our shipyards. One is a class of warships that will enable the navy to hunt down and destroy submarines; the other is every new merchantman that will replace a ship sunk. These weapons must be used together. Upon the men in the shipyards and engineering shops depends entirely their output. How the latter can be increased concerns everyone and no measure which will enable the better use of labor and machinery can be neglected. We who are secure in our homes owe it to the brave men dying every hour for us at sea, on land, and in the air to spare no effort to give them the weapons with which to win the war.

"We are confident that in this supreme crisis in our history the men of the shipyards and workshops will see that this appeal does not fall upon deaf ears."

LOOTED BANK.

Carranza Robbed British Mexican Institution.

Washington Report — The extent to which the Carranza administration has gone to raise funds to maintain itself has just been exposed in an edition of El Universal — formerly an organ of the defacto Government — which has been received here.

The paper sets forth in detail the manner in which the British-owned Bank of London and Mexico was looted out of approximately $8,000,000 by agents of the administration, and points out that the only foreign gold is now held by Germans. It generally is estimated that there is at least $20,000,000 in German gold in various sections of Mexico, owned by Germans, and if Carranza decides to break off with the Kaiser's Government this bullion probably would be seized without delay.

COSSACKS WILL SUPPRESS RIOTS

Patrols of Picked Troops in Petrograd Streets.

Premier Lvoff's Statement On the Trouble.

Petrograd cable: For the first time since the revolution Cossacks appeared to-day and patrolled the streets. Companies here and there carried machine guns strapped to their saddles, the men leading their horses.

The Council of the new body of Soldiers, Workmen and Peasants of all Russia, the extremists abstaining from participation, passed a resolution to-day after an all-night session rejecting "with indignation all attempts to influence" the attitude of that body.

"It is inadmissable," continued the resolution, "that armed demonstrations should seek to impose the will of isolated military elements upon the whole of Russia. All these acts towards our revolutionary army, which is defending the conquests of the revolution at the front, are acts of treachery and felony. Whoever attacks the recognized democratic agencies, whoever sows discord in their ranks, is striking a dagger's blow in the back of the revolutionary army, which is fighting against the troops of William."

The resolution protests against "deplorable symptoms of decomposition which compromise the whole national authority and the future constituent assembly," and it demands that an end be made once and for all "to all acts which dishonor revolutionary Petrograd."

NOTIFICATION BY PREMIER.

Premier Lvoff to-day sent the following telegram to all provisional Government commissaries:

"In reply to your enquiry, the Minister of the Interior informs you that the reports regarding the arrest of members of the provisional Government are false. As to the appeals to overthrow the Government by force of arms and transfer all powers to the soldiers and workmen, these appeals had the character of irresponsible acts on the part of the members of an extreme minority, and were received in an unfriendly manner by the people.

"At the same time, the Government in full agreement with the soldiers', workmen's and peasants' delegates and the Duma, is taking measures to avert the occurrence of incidents which might be inimical to the state. The events of yesterday and today have for the time being interrupted the negotiations which are in progress for the completion of the Cabinet, but as soon as the disorders are at an end the negotiations will be resumed with a view to forming a cabinet in which representatives of the various political views will find a place, as in the preceding Cabinet, a matter which has the full approval of the Executive Council of the soldiers', workmen's and peasants' delegates."

GERMAN HEADS URGE PATIENCE

Amsterdam Cable — Many Germans have become faint hearted, says General von Stein, Prussian War Minister, as quoted by the General Anzeiger of Dusseldorf. The General, replying to a telegram from the German National Union, expressing confidence in him, gave the following advice:

"Everyone should possess confidence in the future greatness of Germany, but an excessive anxiety and faint-heartedness is still troubling many persons. Everyone should endeavor to give an example of self-renunciation and sacrifice, and to make selfish and faint-hearted persons ashamed of themselves."

Admiral von Tirpitz, replying to a similar telegram, said:

"The U-boat is extremely effective but needs time."

CONTROL SHIPPING.

New French Official Has Wide Powers.

Paris Cable — Anatole de Monzie, the newly-appointed Under-Secretary of Maritime Transports, has obtained the Cabinet's approval for the institution of a general control over the mercantile fleet. The decree instituting the measure refers to the increasing diminution of tonnage due to the submarine war as necessitating intense rational use of the whole mercantile fleet.

The decree authorizes the Under-Secretary to undertake all means to control freight rates and to utilize ships. Every ship of more than one hundred tons must have a license from the Under-Secretary, which must be presented at every port entered, in order that the voyage and cargo may be controlled. M. De Monzie has the power to requisition every ship he considers insufficiently utilized.

* * *

When Job spoke of the war horse sniffing the battle from afar he doubtless intended to intimate that the noble animal was ready to do his bit. — Washington Post.

DUTCH CLAIM OF VIOLATION DISCREDITED BY THE FACTS

Practically Impossible for British Ships to Have Been in Holland Waters.

London Cable — The allegation of Dutch newspapers that part of Monday's encounter between British destroyers and German merchantmen, which were attempting to run the blockade from Rotterdam, occurred in Dutch territorial waters, is generally discredited in naval circles here. The only reports thus far received from the Admiralty come from commanders of British forces in the action, in the form of wireless summaries, the substance of which was covered in yesterday's official statement. The complete reports, when received, are expected to clear up the situation satisfactorily.

It is explained that the shoals along the Dutch coast in this district extend so far to sea that it is necessary for ships to steer a course well outside the territorial limits. The attack is said to have occurred at a point more than four miles from shore.

It will be a source of great satisfaction to all the allied countries if Monday's coup succeeds in putting a halt to the traffic between the Rhine and Hamburg, which has been increasing in recent weeks, with greater boldness on the part of the German captains. The British withheld their stroke until the largest flotilla thus far sent by this route was well on its way, and then dealt a quick, hard blow.

Already it has been announced from Rotterdam that Germany has decided to lay up thirty coal steamers there instead of attempting to run them home through the sea lane.

MESOPOTAMIA PROBE DROPPED

Campaign Enquiry Not to be Proceeded With.

John Dillon Raps Government On Its Course.

London cable says: Announcement was made in the House of Commons by Andrew Bonar Law that the Government had decided not to proceed with the proposed judicial inquiry into the report of the commission which investigated the Mesopotamia campaign.

In coming to this decision, the Chancellor said, the Government had been guided by the objection raised during the debate on the report to a further inquiry, and also was influenced by the undesirability of diverting the thought and energies of the Legislature and the executive at this critical time for the prosecution of the war. The soldiers would be dealt with by the Army Council in the ordinary way, and the decision announced as soon as possible.

The Government, on the representation of the Foreign Secretary, who alone was in a position to judge, Mr. Bonar Law continued, had decided that it would be detrimental to the interests of the Foreign Office if it should, at the present juncture, be deprived of the services of Baron Hardinge, Under Foreign Secretary, and had therefore refused his resignation, which had thrice been tendered. If it had been in the power of the Government to refuse the resignation of J. Austen Chamberlain as Secretary for India, Mr. Bonar Law added, it would have done so.

John Dillon, Nationalist, announced that he would move an adjournment of the House in order to discuss whether the resignation of Baron Hardinge should not be accepted.

In moving the adjournment of the House, Mr. Dillon powerfully indicted the Government, and said that the matter involved the great principle of Ministerial responsibility and Parliament's sole means of influencing the executive. Mr. Chamberlain had resigned, but Baron Hardinge, whose responsibility was the heavier, was, because he possessed powerful social influence, allowed to ride off in honor.

The relatives of the men who died in unspeakable agony on the banks of the Tigris, said Mr. Dillon, would condemn a Parliament guilty of such neglect of its duty. What would the country say when it learned that the culpable officers had been court-martialed, while the civilians went free? He understood that the next Dardanelles report was going to be very unpleasant.

"Are we to perpetuate the British habit of saying 'Forget it all!'" asked Mr. Dillon.

NEW KING TO GO?

Alexander Likely to Follow Father's Footsteps.

Washington Despatch — Information regarding the Greek situation reaching Washington through reliable channels indicates that King Alexander of Greece will literally follow in the footsteps of his father and lose his crown unless he abandons an obstructive policy and permits Premier Venizelos to proceed unhindered with the execution of the compact between Greece and the protecting powers. Word reaches Washington that the fact has been made plain to the young King, and he is expected to yield to the authority of the nation expressed in the person and the acts of Venizelos, it was asserted to-day.

Greece is not expected to engage soon in active fighting. Her participation in the war, it was stated, will be limited to the assistance she receives from the allies. The Greek army prepared to take the field is very small. It is necessary for the allies to furnish arms and ammunition to the Greeks, and it will take considerable time for this.

Italy will assist in the equipment of that portion of the Greek army which will operate in Upper Epirus and in Macedonia. Until Italy is able, however, with the other allies, to furnish provisions to the Greeks, the Italians will continue to hold lines they now hold in Upper Epirus on Greek soil.

BRITISH TANKS AIDING RUSSIA

Washington Report — British armored motor detachments are taking part in the Russian offensive in Galicia, according to semi-official information received to-day from Petrograd by the Russian Embassy here. This is the first mention of the presence of British forces in Russia, and says the armored cars are co-operating effectively with Belgian detachments sent there soon after the war began.

ENDANGERED CARDINAL BEGIN.

Quebec Report — His Grace Cardinal Begin, at 8 o'clock this morning was being driven down Mountain Hill in this city to the ferry, when the horse slipped on the pavement, bolted and came near upsetting the vehicle. The wagon skidded to the sidewalk, stopped only along the walls of the buildings. Cardinal Begin, with his two companions, escaped injury.

ENEMY FORCES DETERIORATING

Bavarian Boys of 18 Already at the Front.

Foe's Artillery Fails to Check the Canadians.

(By Stewart Lyon, Canadian Press Correspondent with the Canadian Forces.)

Canadian Army Headquarters cable: There has been a remarkable increase during the past forty-eight hours in the volume of the enemy's fire all around Lens salient, from Hill 70, on the north, to Avion, on the south. In some places the German fire was of the nature formerly preceding an assault, but the enemy's object was the destruction of our trenches and positions in the ruined houses, in preparation for an attack. Vimy, three miles from the nearest German battery, was bombarded with high explosives, six hundred 5.9 shells falling in a relatively small space. Avion and points to the north almost as far up the line as Vermelles, were subjected to fire of considerable intensity.

The enemy's observation was better than for some time past, eight balloons and many aeroplanes being engaged in spotting for his gunners. The Canadian artillery was not diverted by the German activity from its appointed task of methodically destroying the enemy's trenches and defensive lines. In this work much progress was made during the day, as well as in counter battery operations.

The Germans during the night put down a barrage along a large part of the front under the belief that an advance was imminent, but no infantry action followed.

A prisoner, recently captured, states that in the 3rd Bavarian corps area the depletion of the number of effectives was so great that all lads of 18 had already been called to the colors in service. Boys of this class of 1920, that is, those who will be 17 sometime this year, are now being embodied for training. Deterioration in fighting qualities in Bavarian troops, some of whom are invariably in the line on this part of the front, is due largely to their feeling that they are bearing an undue part of the burden.

GERMAN LABOR DEMANDS PEACE

Copenhagen Cable — Already [illegible] received from Dusseldorf say that the state of siege there, the results of food riots, has been raised, after 155 persons received sentences averaging eighteen months. At a big labor meeting vigorous protests were made against the severity of the sentences. Suspension of the sentences of children and [illegible] against reduction of the bread ration were demanded.

Twelve thousand workmen attended a meeting at Bielefeld, the centre of the Westphalia linen industry, and adopted a resolution demanding peace without annexations or indemnities. They asked the Reichstag to support only a Government making unequivocal declarations along these lines.

DR. ADLER ESCAPES DEATH.

London Cable — The Austrian Premier has decided that Dr. Friedrich Adler, the assassin of Dr. Karl Stuergkh, Premier of Austria should have been tried by a civil instead of a military tribunal, says an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Copenhagen to-day. Consequently, it is added, the death sentence imposed upon Adler will not be carried out.

CHANGES IN CABINET OF LLOYD GEORGE

Sir Eric Geddes First Admiralty Lord, Churchill Munitions Head.

CARSON'S NEW POST

Joins War Council — E. S. Montagu Indian Secretary.

London Cable — Sir Edward Carson has relinquished his post as First Lord of the Admiralty, and joined the War Cabinet without portfolio, according to an official announcement of the new ministerial appointments issued this evening. Sir Edward will be succeeded by Sir Eric Campbell Geddes, who has been Director-General of Munitions Supply.

Winston Spencer Churchill succeeds Dr. Christopher Addison as Minister of Munitions, Dr. Addison becoming Minister without portfolio in charge of reconstruction. Edwin Samuel Montagu, a former Cabinet Minister, is made Secretary for India.

One of the most acceptable appointments, as far as the general public is concerned, is that of Mr. Montagu. He is one of the very few members of the Asquith Administration, in which he was Minister of Munitions, to join the Lloyd George Ministry.

Mr. Montagu has had considerable experience in the affairs of India, having once held the post of Under-Secretary for India. Lately he has been in charge of a large committee exploring the ground for reconstruction after the war, and before the recent resignation of J. Austen Chamberlain as Secretary for India was announced, it was generally supposed that Mr. Montagu eventually would become Minister of Reconstruction. The necessity for finding a new Secretary for India, however, caused a modification in the plans, and Dr. Addison, who had been slated for the projected Ministry of Health, now becomes head of this reconstructive committee, which had been created into a kind of Ministerial department.

The new Cabinet appointments, arising out of the resignation of Mr. Chamberlain as Secretary for India and Andrew Bonar Law's desire to be relieved of his duties as a member of the small war Cabinet, which he found incompatible with his heavy responsibilities, first as Chancellor of the Exchequer, and, second, as leader of the House of Commons, contained two complete surprises — the appointment of Sir Eric Geddes as head of the Admiralty, and Winston Spencer Churchill as Minister of Munitions.

Much controversy has revolved for a long time past over the name of Mr. Churchill. It was stated some time ago that he would succeed Lord Cowdray as chairman of the Air Board, but the idea, evidently then contemplated by Premier Lloyd George, met with such strong opposition in influential quarters, that the project had to be dropped. Mr. Churchill's appointment now as Minister of Munitions will undoubtedly lead to a revival of that agitation, and, although it was foreshadowed that he would re-enter the Ministry, it was universally supposed that it would be as president of the Air Board.

The appointment of Sir Eric Geddes as First Lord of the Admiralty is another break with the tradition that the Ministers should be members of one of the Legislative Houses. The new First Lord is a railway man, not a politician. Until recently he was in charge of the whole army's transportation; then he became controller of the Admiralty, with charge of all naval construction. Such a rapid rise to the position to which he is now appointed is quite remarkable and another instance of how Premier Lloyd George breaks with old political traditions.

The appointment of Sir Edward Carson to replace Mr. Bonar Law as the fifth member of the War Cabinet is likely to create more uneasiness and stronger criticism among the older Liberals than any other appointment. The War Cabinet now in practice consists of only four men, Mr. Henderson, the Labor member, being still on a mission to Petrograd. Of these four, Earl Curzon, Lord Milner and Sir Edward Carson are all Conservatives of the most extreme type, and complaints, constantly heard from the Liberal and Radical press, of the undue preponderance of Conservative influence in the Government since Mr. Lloyd George took the helm, will now be intensified.

REPATRIATING FRENCH.

London Cable — French men, women and children, [illegible] and more than fifty years of age are being returned by the Germans to France from the occupied portion of the northern part of the country at the rate of 1,500 a day, according to advices received by the [illegible]. Repatriation is being carried out through Switzerland.

Thousands of these refugees have arrived at Evian-les-Bains in the department of Haute-Savoie on Lake Geneva. Their condition is described as most pitiful.

WHITE SLAVERY CHARGED.

Windsor Report — Nelson Tipton, [illegible] of Detroit, was arraigned in the Police Court here to-day, following a complaint made by his wife that he had been coming to Windsor, meeting young girls and inducing them to return to Detroit with him. Mrs. Tipton declared her husband was practically engaged in a "white slave" trade [illegible].

After hearing the evidence Police Magistrate Leggatt remanded Tipton for a week, so the charges may be thoroughly investigated.

* * *

Save all meat skewers to clean out seams of kettles and pans.

Falconer Bros.

Home of Good Groceries

Headquarters for all the Requisites of the Pickling & Preserving Season

Pure Cane Gran. Sugar
Wilson's Pure Spirit Vinegar
Allan's Pure Cider Vinegar
Gem Jars, Rubber Rings
Pure Spices of all kinds

Special for This Week !
100 men's work and dress shirts
Only 75c each
Worth, $1, $1.25 and $1.50
See them in the window

BRING US THE BUTTER AND EGGS

Falconer Bros.

Delayed Shipments

Just Arrived . . .

Now is the time to get goods that have been almost impossible to get. We have just got in delayed shipments, bought last fall at last last year's prices.

Cotton, Silk and Real Cashmere Hosiery

From 15c to 60c. To-day's values 25c to $1.00

Gloves in kid, silk and mercerized lisle, and chamoise lisle. Floor coverings, linoleums, and oilclothes. Get them quick, they are going fast. We cant replace them.

Bring your butter and eggs
And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.

If you have a thing to sell let The Times tell the people about it.

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now, will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places, and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College

Owen Sound, Ontario

remains open all summer to help meet the demand for trained office help. Enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Dept. A., Owen Sound, Ont.

Lawn Supplies

Taylor-Forbes Lawn mower
Rubber hose
Hose nozzles
Couplings & clamps
Hose reels
Garden shears
Cultivators

Thomson's
Hardware Store

Had Fine Trip

Mr. and Mrs. R. Crawford of Arran have returned from a very pleasant holiday up the lakes to Marquette, Mich.

Mr. Crawford, in conversation with The Times said that the crops looked fair through Michigan, Marquette is a railroad centre, and a centre for the iron industries. He enjoyed the fellowship and hospitality of the Reany Bros., old Saugeen boys, who took pleasure in showing him around the city. "Everything is war over there" said Mr. Crawford, "and the people generally are very anxious to have the allies win now. Great amounts of money are being raised for Red Cross, and also for the big loans. The young men are also enlisting and being drafted in rapid order. Mr. W. D. Reany's son went shortly after the declaration of war."

Mr. Crawford is some improved in health after his trip.

A Handy Thing

The handiest thing in the world is a wrist watch, and especially so in the summer weather. You'll be interested in looking at them.

Let us show you one of our fine line of clocks

Rowlands
The Jeweller

A Chance Not Often Given'

A Special opportunity for a few days only, some extra fine House Dresses
Only $2 each
Ladies, these are extra good values.

B. HILKER

Successful Candidates

Below is the list for Bruce County of successful candidates in the Lower School exams for admission to Normal Schools and Faculties of Education:

A. Alton, M. Bonnyman, L E Bilger F. Bradley, D. M. Bell, B. F. Bowman B. Buschlen, D. S. Colwell, H. A. Campbell, M. Cameron, A. Carr, L M. Errington B. L. Emmerton, L. Finlayson, (honors) E. J. Glane, G. S. Geddes, I. W. Gowan, J E. Gemmel, J Hetherington, C E. Hoeflin, O. G. Isard. A. C Johnstone E. A Jackson, M. M. Kenney, L. P, Laird, E. M. Longe, R. H. Mitchell, W. McGraw, R C Martyn, A E McVannel, H S. MacKenzie, M. J MacDonald, C. G MacNay, V. M. MacPherson, M. N. MacKay, A. M. McLeod, A. MacKenzie, B S MacKee, A. MacArthur, A. E. McKague, A. T McKinnon, W. G Pollock, E L. Perkins, T. B. Queen, J. C Quandt (honors), A M. Reinhart, B. Rahl, T. Rogers E. E Ross, M. J. Rathwell, B. A. Ruthven, I. M. Robson, E A Rowlands, E. C. Stevens, J. A Stothers, S. A Shoemaker, A. J. Stewart, H. Stevens, N. F. Thompson, E. C. Thornburn, A. C Weiler, M. O. Westfield, V. Winch G. I Young (honors), V. Young.

Letter of Condolence

To Mr. James Avis, Tiverton, Ont:

Dear Friend and Bro.:—The officers and members of Underwood Lodge No. 328 I. O. O. F. desire to extend to you, your wife and family their sincere sympathy in your sad bereavement caused by the death of your father.

Since he has been unable to be about he has been very much missed and now that he has gone we know that there is no place he will be missed like in the home.

We trust you will look upon this dispensation of God's providence in the proper light and think about his great goodness in sparing him to you to such a good old age.

Signed on behalf of Underwood Lodge with all sympathy and sincerity.

Yours fraternally,
Thos. Brown, Rec. Secy.

NORTH BRUCE

The culvert on Goderich road south of the 12 Con. Bruce, was washed out on Tuesday of last week, causing traffic to go arond the block. The contract for a new culbert was let to Mr. Thos. Nelson, and the job was soon completed.

Rev. and Mrs. Douglas McCulloch left on Monday for their home at Appin, after a pleasant holiday with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Nicholson, of Winnipeg, are visiting with friends here and in Southampton.

Mrs. Roy Brigham and little son of Toronto, are holidaying at Mr. H. Carr's.

The G. S. C. are having a picnic at the Grove next Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Bart Staugh and daughter Thelma, of Fort William, are holidaying with friends here.

Rev. and Mrs. W. D. McIntosh and Marjory of Nairn, are spending their vacation with friends at Tiverton and North Bruce.

Tom Brigden has completed the cement wall under Mr. Chas. Schell's barn, and is now building a well for Mr. Wm. Bottrill.

Mrs. N. Schell has returned from Tiverton where she spent a few weeks with Mrs. Dave Nelson.

Printing at Reasonable Prices

The Times has unexcelled equipment for producing fine printed matter of all kinds. Business Stationery and Office Forms, Advertising Booklets, Circulars, bills tickets, envelopes, etc. Prices are always reasonable.

Alarm Clocks

Why do most people go to Busby's for alarm clocks ? Because we have the best stock, also when repairs are necessary you know our reputation.

We have in stock.

Big Ben Vigilant
Cyclone Turnout
Vantite Icallu
Giant Spasmodic
Suminous Sunrise

J. J. BUSBY,
The Quick Repair House

BURGOYNE AND DISTRICT

Quite a few attended the Egg Circle meeting Thursday evening to hear Mr. Mercillce of Ottawa, who was organizing circles throughout the county. While the Circle has good points there are also objectionable ones. Local requirements need a market, but those who join the circle are not allowed to sell for local trade, even the eggs too large for crating or others that may grade too small, must not be sold. They may be eaten, given away or destroyed but positively not sold for cash or trade.

J. W. Reany has had his barn reshingled.

Miss Winnie McLean is home from Guelph for a holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chappell visited in Paisley last week.

Messrs. J. Ferguson, S. Schwass and E. Schwass, were visiting in Waterloo county last week.

Presbyterians meet Tuesday to consider the important matter of calling a minister.

Rev. Watson, of Toronto, preached here Sunday.

The new spreader mentioned in last week's corr. came from Tara, and was on its way to Mr. D. Bryce, near Paisley.

Burgoyne has lost another of its old reliable standard-bearers in the person of Mr. John Cobean, who passed peacefully away to rest a few days ago after many weeks of comparative helplessness.

UNDERWOOD NEWS

Get your gasoline at The Hardware.

Save wood and coal, use an oil stove. We have some coal oil stoves which will save the women work, and save money too. Thede & Brill.

Mrs. J. G. MacKay has returned home from Guelph hospital.

Mrs. Holden and daughter Mrs. Walker and baby son, of Toronto, are spending a pleasant visit at Mr. M. Avis'.

While the Methodist church is being renovated, the congregation are holding their services in the Presbyterian church. Rev. Waddell of the Baptist church Tiverton, conducted the service on Sunday.

Mrs. A. J. MacDougall and children of Hamilton, are holidaying at Mr. Dan. Brown's.

Rev. and Mrs. McNabb, and family are at their cottage at Bruce Beach. Miss Ina, nurse in training at Guelph, is spending her vacation with them.

ELSINORE

Elsinore Red Cross have done the following work in April, May and June:

Socks—Mrs. Brant, 11 pairs, Hazel Nelson 5, Mrs. A. J. Nelson, 11, Mrs. Fraser 15, Miss L. Donaldson 5, Mrs. Donaldson 3, Mrs. Wm. McIntosh 4, Isabelle Fraser 5, Mrs. McRae 1, N. Forsyth 3, Mrs. Chebots 1, Mrs. Wilson Nelson 2, Mrs. Kolb 1. Mrs. Maxwell 9, Viola Maxwell 5, Olive Smith 1. Alice Fraser 2' Mrs. C. Eby 6. Mrs. Kabbege 2, Mrs. Webbege 3.

Flannel shirts—Mrs. William Nelson 7, Mrs. G. Eby 5, Mrs Kolb 6, Miss L. Howe 5, Mrs H. Porter 2. Total of 97 pairs socks and 25 shirts. Cash on hand, June 30, $40.63.

One box each month will be sent to the boys from this neighborhood overseas. The box for June was prepared and sent by Mrs. Brant and Mrs. W. Nelson to Pte. F. Farrell.

Mrs. Brant, President, Nellie Forsyth, Secretary.

Advertise it in The Times.

GLAMMIS

Miss McNally has returned from Owen Sound.

Miss F. McLennan has gone west on a visit to her sister.

Miss Lily McKinnon has returned to Brantford.

Mrs. Ed. Wood and daughter of Superior, Wis., are visiting Mrs. K. McLennan.

Miss Lillico, of Chicago, visited Miss McKeeman,

Rev. Rock of Walkerton, and Mr. McCauley exchanged pulpits Sunday.

Miss Kirkton has returned from Tiverton.

Miss McEachren has returned to London after a visit with Miss Lila Cunningham.

Conductor McLean of Parry Sound, is home on his holidays.

The Misses Cuthbertson returned to Toronto last week.

Mr. C. Young, Misses Laura Cunningham, and Margaret Currie, Sundayed in Walkerton.

The ice cream social by St. Paul's Ladies' Missionary Society was a good success.

Miss Jennie McKeeman is on the sick list.

Miss Frances of Toronto, is visiting her cousin, Miss Maude McKay.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Burgess, and daughters accompanied by his sisters, Mrs. L. Keake of Underwood, and Mrs. Ben Moulton of Kiogs.., left on Thursday on an auto trip to visit friends at London, Springfield, Toronto, Hamilton and other points.

The B. Y. P. U. Society here held a social evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Woods, 9th. Con., on Friday, and report an enjoyable time.

While Pte. Rhoderick Thompson was home from camp Borden over the week end last week, Guild of St. Pauls church gathered at his home in a surprise party and presented him with a wrist watch.

The three pupils from here who wrote on the entrance exams, were all successful. Congratulations to pupils and their teacher, Miss McKinnon.

Mr. Fisk of Walkerton, Sundayed at Jos. Wrightson's.

Miss Nora McNally has been engaged as teacher at S. S. No. 11 on 10th. Con. Kincardine and Miss Nettie Gunn in S. S. No. 7, 9th Con. Kincardine.

Mr. and Mrs. L. McIntyre of Edmonton Alberta, and Master Campbell McIntyre of Toronto are visiting at J. C. McIntyres.

Special Sale

STARTING TO-MORROW MORNING

Special Sale of Men's and Boys' Suits, Raincoats, Trousers, Shirts, Underwear, Straw and Felt Hats, Caps and Furnishings at BIG REDUCTIONS. It's a rare chance to save some money. Don't miss it. . . . .

About fifty men's tweed and worsted suits reg $14 to $16 for 11.95

Men's raincoats 13 & $15 for 10 50

50 prs men's odd pants worsted finish, good $2 value for 1.69

Men's straw hats, reg 2.50 for 1.75; $2 for 1.50; 1.50 for $1; $1 for 75cts

Men's felt hats, reg 2.50 for 1.75.

Men's merino underwear good value at 65c, special price 50c

Men's working shirts splendid $1 lines for 79c.

Fine negligee dress shirts reg. $1 and 1.25 lines for 79c

50c ties for 39 cents

These goods are goods you need now, that's why this sale is so important to you. You must buy these things sooner or later, anyway why not get them now. All that you save by buying now is clear profit to you.

Come and see the big values for little money.

F. R. BARBER
MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

PATTISON'S
FOR FURNITURE

July and August is the time to save money by buying your Furniture at Pattison's.

We are sole agents in this vicinity for the Famous Singer Sewing Machine, also the White, Beaver and Raymond Models. Sewing Machine Oil, Needles, and Repairs always in stock.

We are also agents for the Columbia Grafonola and Records

: : J. W. Pattison : :
Furniture Dealer and Undertaker

"Yes---They're Cleaner, Fresher---

"when washed with Sunlight Soap, I find it cleans the clothes more thoroughly and with less work than ordinary soaps. It doesn't hurt the clothes and I must say my hands never feel the worse for it either. I really do not find it hard to look after the wash myself, because Sunlight Soap does so much of the work for me.",

Sunlight Soap

Madam—there's nothing but truth in this lady's remarks. Sunlight Soap is made so well and so honestly that our guarantee of $5,000 that it contains no impurity has never been challenged.

All grocers sell Sunlight Soap.

LEVER BROTHERS LIMITED, TORONTO.

Send The Times to
The boys at the front

Subscribe for The Times and get all the local news.

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 31 PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 1, 1917 $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

Sudden Death of Elias Kolb

Wednesday night last Elias Kolb, a well known resident, died suddenly at the home of his son, Arthur, in Saugeen Township, in his 6th year.

The late Mr. Kolb was in good health. He had for some time been assisting his son on his farm, and had retired for the night as usual, when about midnight the son was awakened by hearing his father breathing rather heavily. He went to the room, and found his father dying.

A physician was at once summoned but death ensued almost immediately from heart failure.

The late Mr. Kolb was a farmer in Saugeen for a number of years and also an expert framer. Several years ago he went west, and was engaged in carpentering. The past year he has been with his son in Saugeen.

The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon, and was largely attended. Besides a wife there are left to mourn, four sons and three daughters: J. H. at Winnipeg; Josiah, Elsinore; Arthur, Saugeen; Hugh, (160th Batt.); Mrs. A. Miles, Winnipeg; Mrs. H. Kauffman, Kincardine; Viola, at home.

COMING EVENTS

10c. per line
No notice less than 25c

REGULAR MEETING—Of Red Cross in library at 7.30 p. m. Wednesday, August 1st.

Red Cross Report From July 4th to 31st

Tea Room—July 7, Evangelical Y. P. A. $21 05; 14, Ladies Aid Presbyterian ch., $19.76; 21, Ladies Aid Baptist ch., $10.55; 28, ladies of Red Cross, $13.90; Donations— Ladies Aid Evangelical church lawn social, $40.30; Dominion Day committee surplus on celebration, $250.00

Grand Total for the month, $335.56

Warden Izzard has received a telegram that the by law of the County of Bruce adopting the good roads system has been approved by the Lt.-Governor in Council.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

LOST—Either at the lake, or coming from the lake, on July 24, gold locket and chain, valued as keepsake. Finder please leave at Times and receive reward.

FOR SALE—2000 cement blocks, smooth faced, for sale. Apply L. M. Sees.

STRAYED—To premises of Mrs. Saleman, a black and white spotted hound. Owner may have same by paying for this advt.

FOR SALE—The Andrew Sutherland property at the South End. Fine brick house, 7 rooms and shed. Good basement, also stable. Possession given immediately. Apply to Geo. S. Webb and James McEwing, executors. 28-tf.

WANTED—We are paying the highest prices for beefrings hides. B. Zelkind, Port Elgin.

PHONOGRAPHS!

How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.

Louis Bloch's Music Store
Owen Sound

DENTAL

W. P. POWER, D. D. S., Dentist, office over South End Store. Hours 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

MEDICAL

DR. F. H. WELLS, Office and residence on Green street, one door west of Bank of Hamilton.

W. J. CHAMBERS, M. D., L. R. C. P., L. M. Edinburgh. Office and residence "Lakeview Hall" opposite South End park Port Elgin.

DR. W. S. LAIRD, Oculist, Specialty in Nose and Throat diseases. Guarantees all his fitting of glasses. Office hours Wednesday afternoons. Next to Metropolitan Bank

LEGAL

W. BURGESS, LL.B., Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public &c., &c. Office, Hutton's Block. Private and other funds to loan.

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. 429 G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communications in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at 8 p. m. Visiting brethern cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Gus Smith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE, No. 179, I.O.O.F., of [illegible] o'clock, p.m., every Monday in their hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N.G.; T. Rankin, Rec.-Sec.; D. Geddes, Perm Sec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer of marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office in Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin.

UNDERTAKING

J. W. PATTISON, Funeral director and embalmer. Residence on premises. Rural phone No. 22.

Advertise it in The Times.

Good Roads Supt. Appointed

Reeve Wm. Hunter has resigned as reeve of Kincardine town, having been appointed, provisionally, superintendent of the good roads system of the County of Bruce.

Proclamation

To the Citizens of Bruce County:

In connection with the request of the Lieut. Governor of the Province of Ontario, I hereby call upon the loyal citizens of the County of Bruce, to again, on the third anniversary of the war, solemnly pledge ourselves as to the righteousness of the Allied cause:

To record our inalienable loyalty to our beloved Mother Country.

To acknowledge and impress upon our children and all people that although this war is fought upon a foreign land, it is our fight, and one in defence of our homes

To honor the heroes who have fallen in defence of our country.

To support and assist those who are bereft of heroic men, who have laid down their lives in our behalf.

To thank those on land and sea who are prepared to give up their lives in our defence

To pledge ourselves to give assistance to every cause and work which may bring victory to the Allied cause.

And to pray that Almighty God may aid the cause of the Allies for universal peace.

D. J. Izzard, Warden
W. D. Cargill, Pres Bruce Preparedness League.

Hoard in the Bean Patch

G. E. Falconer, manager for Fruitgrowers, Limited, has a patch of beans covering 11 acres. Last week a bunch of small lads were engaged to hoe the big field

The manager in looking over the work overheard a real up-to-date classification of the bean, when a young lad remarked to another :

"I'll bet this is the biggest field of whistle-berries in Bruce county."

94 in the shade, and Warden Izzard says that's just the right weather for laying bricks.

Rev. Gilbert Lamont, of Michigan, was a visitor with his brother, A. J. Lamont, at Aberdour, this week.

Many friends regret that Irving McVittie has had to return to Guelph hospital for another operation on his foot.

The hot dry weather makes it hard to keep main street dampened sufficiently to keep down the dust. The merchants are experiencing difficulty in keeping their goods clean. Water is not proving the best means. Oil will have to be considered.

Dissolution of Partnership

All concerned are hereby notified that the partnership existing between myself and Mr. Crowe for hog buying has been dissolved.

Lambert Hamilton.

Be Particular

The particular housewife wants only the best in meats during the very hot weather, and that's the reason Eaton's butcher shop serves so many patrons with dainties in cold meats, lamb, beef, pork etc., We have also package soups vegetables, etc. Phone your order to the Shop of Quality. A. E. Eaton, Prop

Tax Collecter Wanted

Applications for the position of collector of taxes for Saugeen Township for the year 1917, will be received up to 1 o'clock on Saturday, August 11th. Salary $55.00.

F. W. Elliott, clerk,

Eggs and Butter

This week we are paying for fresh eggs 34c per dozen.

For nice fresh made butter, fit to retail to particular customers, we are paying 30c, trade or cash quality must be good.

N. McGillivray
North End Store

Do your ordering of meats early in the morning. The best service given then. Our shop may be closed a few afternoons to give me opportunity to go into the country buying. Then order early. Our stock is excellent. Try us, L. Hamilton Butcher.

LADIES DEPARTMENT

See the splendid display in the Ladies' department in the following lines.

Women's Bathing Suits
Misses' Bathing Suits
Ladies Underwear
Fine Hosiery
Corsets

Falconer Bros.

TOWN TOPICS

Rev. M. D. Hallman has taken Saints Rest cottage at Paradise Grove.

The extreme heat made for small attendances at the churches on Sunday.

Mrs. Lymburner and Masters Kenneth and Charlie are holidaying here,

Fred Hanbidge is home from teaching school for the holidays.

Mr. J. A. Thomson was holidaying in Owen Sound last week.

Mr. Lloyd Veitch, of Toronto, was here for the week-end.

Mrs. Jenner and Mrs. Walker went to Flint, Mich., last week.

Miss Helen Stevens is holidaying in London.

Miss Bona Fairweather, of Drayton, is the guest of Mrs. J. S. Cameron.

Miss Annie Schrank is home from Clifford.

Mr. Irwin and family, of Walkerton, are occupying a cottage at the lake.

An invitation is extended to the ladies to attend a Red Cross quilting in The Library, Friday afternoon, Aug. 3rd.

Rev. Christie and family, are to spend a vacation here, occupying a cottage at the lake.

Miss Forrester of Kincardine, is visiting her grandmother. Mrs. Wm. Forrester.

Miss Frances Hanbidge has been engaged by the Kincardine High School board.

Mrs. Armour McCullough left last week for Walkerville, where she will join Mr. McCullough.

Mr. Dan Ewald has returned to Brooklyn, after a visit with his brother, Mr. Herman Ewald.

Mrs. Thaner and Master Orville, of Kitchener, are guests of Rev. and Mrs. Hallman.

Sheriff Thomson of Owen Sound has been spending a few days in town, the guest of his brother, J. A. Thomson.

Mrs. A. Bowes, of Detroit, has returned home after spending a month with Mr. and Mrs. D. McCarrel.

Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman of Kincardine, have been spending a few days with relatives here.

You will be money in pocket by making a careful study of The Times ads. every week.

In this fruit and vegetable season people should eat what they can and what they can't, can.

Mrs. George Falconer and Master Duncan returned from Toronto last week.

A bunch of the smaller lads are engaged these days on the big bean field of Fruitgrowers' Limited.

Strawberries are about done. It has been a very prolific season, and the quality was good.

The editor was delighted with a beautiful boquet of roses laid on his desk on Tuesday, by a reader who grows beautiful flowers.

There were just fifty-seven applications for the junior teacher's position at the high school.—Kincardine Reporter.

Bicyclists on the roads would be safer in providing themselves with lights. Some narrow escapes have been reported recently.

Mr. Ross Munro, news editor of The Journal-Press, Ottawa, and family, arrived here last evening to spend a vacation.

The Baptist Sunday school will meet in the U. B church during repairs to the Baptist church.

The church services in the Baptist church have been cancelled for the next two weeks on account of the building being renovated and decorated.

Mr. Watson, of Creemore, a former proprietor of The Times, in the days of Johnson and Watson, was a caller at The Times office last week. He was a guest of Mr. George Henry.

Postmaster McBeth, of Milverton, and editor and proprietor of The Milverton Sun, was on a motor trip through this section last week, calling at The Times office and on his old friend Mr. R. J. Ranney.

The fire alarm sounded Thursday about 10 o'clock, for a fire at the Stevens-Hepner Co. It was only a small blaze in the brush department, and was extinguished with chemicals by the workmen.

An auto containing a Wingham party of five persons turned turtle in the ditch near Sparks' corner on Sunday morning. The car was somewhat damaged, while one of the ladies sustained a broken ankle. The injured woman was taken to Southampton.

The secret of good writing is sincerity. This applies to all departments—advertising, editorial and news. The sincere advertisements will always command attention. Are the local merchants' names kept before local people as often as the departmental store? If not, whose fault is it if business goes out of town.

We are asked: "How can one tell when a car is going more than 15 miles an hour." It is rather difficult for anyone who has not a car, or is not used to riding in one. But it's a very simple problem if you are in a car running at 15 miles an hour. So many other cars will pass you. Then another way to tell, is, there will be very little dust created by a car running only 15 miles an hour.

The Reeve Comes Back

Last week the petition presented to Reeve Izzard for a civic holiday prayed that he would proclaim the day in Port Elgin in "particular" and in "the Dominion in general."

The reeve issued his proclamation, and ordered the bills printed. He calls upon all loyal citizens to observe the day and then "gets back" at his petitioners in an "N. B." as follows: "Any citizen performing patriotic or productive work in a neighboring municipality will be considered sufficiently loyal."

Which is a gentle hint to go out in the townships and work.

Cement Road Great Benefit

The new road to the lake on the 6th concession is proving a great boon to the people of this district. The big sand pile between the end of the road and the lake has been bridged with cement, and autos and teams with loads of people can now drive right through to the lake side.

A good deal of credit for the bringing of the roadway to completion must be given to Horatio Nelson. He took the trouble to circulate a subscription list, secure men to draw gravel, and generally look after the affair. As a result many more people now enjoy the swimming and the general good time which is usually had by the lake during the hot weather.

This road will have to be watched closely and taken care of for a few years. It should be a trifle wider with gravel where the heavy sand is, and there should also be a couple of good gravel "turning out" places. Two autos meeting near the sand bar just before the cement, generally get stuck. Then, too, a little clean up on the lake shore wouldn't be a bad idea. But, most people are thankful for what has been done, further improvements will come later.

The road cost $69.25, the Saugeen council giving the gravel and $15, while motorists gave $34 in cash. Those who gave their time and teams in hauling the gravel were: R. Scott 2 loads, M. Zant 2, J. Ross 3, E. Leeder 4, G. Jamieson 2, J. Stauch 2, E. Eidt 3, C. Guyor 2, E. Hase 2, W. Jenner 2, C. McEvers 2, R. Campbell ½ day.

The contributors were:

$2—A. P. George.

$1—J. Hepner, H. H. Stevens, G. M. Scott, J. H. Kennedy, G. McMurray, A. E. Eaton, G. McLaren, Eric McGillivray, R. C. Crawford, H. Koebke, W. Baker, Dr. Power, T. Bridgen, L. M. Sees, Aug. Koebke, A. Brunton, H. Eby, T. Swalwell, J. W. Pattison, E. Martin, R. Fenton, R. Ranney, W. F. Bald, J. C. Thede, J. H. Wismer, J. B. Cottrill, G. Christie, M. Chappel, W. Greathead, W. Atkinson, S. Schrank, Bert Struthers, G. Black, A. Upshall, Jas. Scott, W. Bottrill, J. Agar, C. Johnson, E. R. Sayles, J. N. Vanalyke, S. H. Lowry, W. Karcher, H. Thede, Dr. Wells, W. H. Lustig (Chesley), A. Lamont, J. A. Thomson, J. H. Webster, N. McGillivray, S. Cameron.

50c—J. R. McGillivray, G. Seiffert, P. Thomson, G. Jamieson.

From roadwork 25c.

Burgoyne Calls Minister

Burgoyne and Dunblane congregations have called a minister. At a joint meeting Tuesday evening, presided over by Rev. Mr. Mann, of Port Elgin, it was agreed to extend a unanimous call to Rev. Mr. Strachan, lately from the west.

From later information it is understood that Mr. Strachan has signified his intention to accept the call when duly presented by the Presbytery, and his induction will probably take place about the middle of August.

Necessary papers were all made out and signed by the officers, also copies of the call are being circulated for signatures.

By the action of last general assembly the minimum stipend was raised to $1200 and a free manse, and by a motion passed by the meeting here, Rev. Mr. Mann was instructed to insert the amount in the present call from the joint congregations, of Burgoyne and Dunblane.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Kolb and family, through The Times, thank many friends for expressions of sympathy in their bereavement.

Shingles For Sale

A carload of B. C. Shingles, xxx and xx just arrived. Get prices at Miller Bros., Port Elgin. 31-2p

Learning Every Day

More people are learning every day that trading at Barber's store affords splendid advantages in goods and styles, and most important of all, in paying less money. Making wise selections, means saving these days, and any selections made here always result in satisfaction. This week special bargains are being offered in shoes for Men and Boys. Take time to enquire at Barber's store for special shoe values.

New Shingles Arrive

A carload of shingles just in. B. C. XXX. Apply J. B. Cottrill, Port Elgin.

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for 500 lines or over in a year 5c a line; regular weekly users of liners, 8c per line casual users of liners, 10c per line Black type, count two lines for one.

McMurray's for pure ice cream.

Oats for sale. North End Store.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

White tennis trousers, $1.75 a pair at North End.

The South End is showing a big range of crepe, silk and voile blouses.

Fresh oranges, lemons, and bananas always on hand. North End Store.

If you want a pint of good cream try McMurray's.

Another shipment of feed wheat. North End Store.

We have added two new lines of Collene corsets, prices are lower than regular lines. South End store.

McMurray keeps good milk for sale,

Congoleum border, 36 inches wide, 60c per yard at North End.

Cheap shoes, Misses, Ladies' and Men's, not up to date in style, from 35c up.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

In teas we are giving absolutely the best value in town. South End store.

Fleet foot running shoes, all sizes, white, tan, navy, North End store.

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koebke's

Sugars are advancing in price. Get your supply from the South End.

Try Koebke for your next grocery or fruit order

Koebke sells Neilson's soldier chocolate Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front

Lieut. Wm. Northgrave, M. C. Returns on Furlough

Lieut. Wm. Northgrave returned home from the front last night, having recovered sufficiently from wounds in his legs to be given furlough.

Lieut. Northgrave enlisted as a private in a machine gun section, and won his lieutenancy and the military cross for bravery on the field of battle.

He was met at the depot by Warden Izzard, Reeve Christie, and relatives and friends and welcomed home.

News of the Vicinity

Mr. Max Singer is here from Toronto.

Toronto evening dailies raise their rates on the first of August.

J. A. McDonald of Tara, is the new D. D. G. M. for the Masonic Lodges of this district.

A large number of autos conveyed the S. S. picnic of Paisley churches to Southampton on Friday last,

Hanover citizens are happy. They have succeeded in reorganizing their band.

Among the many fine gardens in this section is the one at the Chippewa school, where the Indian scholars have done excellent work in a large school garden.

Prof. Bangs, of the U. B. College at Huntington, who spent a few days in this district first of July, was married July 18th to a young lady at Attwood, Kansas.

Some of our sidewalks needs looking over. There are several places where some hard bumps are being experienced by pedestrians through sagging of the blocks.

Some booze was seized at Paisley station last week. It seems there is too much whiskey coming in to suit the inspector, and he will investigate.

Before bread can come down to eight cents for a pound and a half loaf, wheat must come down to $1.70 per bushel, so say the Bakers' Association.

Premier Borden will direct a competent officer to investigate the O'Connor report regarding the Wm. Davies Co. making $5,000,000, profit on bacon alone in a single year.

Owen Sound lost $20,000 by having a second mortgage on a cement plant there. It had either to take over the first mortgage of $31,000. They chose to lose the smaller amount,

The most absent-minded man we have come across was a Walkerton profession[illegible] put in his office door the other day the words "Out—Will be back soon" and on his return sat down on the doorstep to wait for himself. —Telescope

The 160th Battalion lost another member by death recently. Pte. Given of Mar, near Wiarton. He succumbed to gastritis at Branshott Military Hospital. Pte. Given is the sixth man to pass away during the past year out of the [illegible] men who enlisted in the Bruce battalion.

The Paisley Advocate reports that one its merchants is going after the farmers' business by putting a man on the road with an outfit for the purpose of buying butter, eggs, etc. The auto is fitted up for carrying egg crates. This is one way of beating out the ever increasing inroads of the mail order house.

Taylor Fleming Makes Two Rescues

The Times is informed that of late there have been several accidents from canoeing in the lake, and that at least two lives have been saved by Taylor Fleming who, by prompt action and skilfulness, has succeeded in bringing to safety young lads who where too venturesome.

Service like this should receive more than passing mention, and Taylor should come within the notice of the officials of the society which has for its purpose the rewarding by medal of those making heroic rescues.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. Bolender of Stratford, is a guest of Mrs. Ed. Fisher.

Mrs. S. Winch and daughter of Paisley, spent last week at Mr. H. Crowe's.

Miss Lulu Rushton has returned from a holiday with relatives at Elsinore.

Miss Dorothy Wells is the new teacher at S. S. No. 4 Saugeen.

Miss Mary Lamont is home from Toronto.

Mrs. Adam Brill is visiting her son in Stratford;

Miss Stella Kauffman, of Mildmay, is visiting Mrs. J. H. Brill.

Mr. and Mrs. George Willoughby of Detroit are spending a holiday here.

Mrs. Ed. Eckel of Paisley, is the guest of Mrs. W. Gray.

Mrs. W. Gray spent a few days in Paisley last week.

The Misses Welsh and Johnston have purchased a Ford car.

Messrs. Cornish and Telfer of Toronto are visitors with Mr. Jack Chapman

Mr. and Mrs Dietrich, of Chesley, were visitors at Mr. Ebert's.

Mrs. Edwards and family of Toronto are guests of Mrs. Ernest Roberts.

Miss Irving of Toronto and Miss Ziegler of Guelph are visiting at Mr. John Rushton's.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Richardson and family motored from Toronto and are visiting at Mr. John Richardson's.

The public school board has engaged Miss Edith Tuft, of London, to take the place of Miss Winnie Struthers, resigned.

Mr. Cameron, principal of the public school at Byng Inlet, was a guest of Mr. John McCallum Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rushton and Leonard spent Sunday with Mr. Wm. Rushton D. line Amabel.

Mrs. Sterling and Miss Sterling of Bayfield, are guests of Mrs. H. D. McLaren.

Mrs. J. Deight Potts, of Ebenezer and Mrs. Underwood, were guests at Mrs. Henry Crowe's this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Stout and Mr. and Mrs. Dorland of Guelph, and Miss Hazel Strachan of Glencoe, are visiting at H. Crowe's.

Mrs. Howitt and Mrs. Kennedy of New York were detained from their trip here last week owing to an auto accident in which Dr. and Mrs. Hewitt were badly shaken up.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Schwartz, Mr. and Mrs. Wismer, and Margaret Schwartz have been on a motor trip the past few days up the Bruce peninsula.

Hogs went to $15 this week.

Dairy butter is very scarce and high in price.

Pte. N. McLeod, of Paisley is reported Wounded.

Inspector Bald can pitch hay like a Trojan. We don't know whether he is open for a job, but when we saw him working in a hayfield north of the town he had all the motions of a first-rate harvest hand, and is doing good work in assisting in the harvest.

Capt. A. D. George and Col. McKenzie arrived home from England on Saturday night, and spent week end with A. F. George here. These two officers did much work in recruiting the 141st battalion at Fort Frances. When the battalion arrived in England, there was room for privates, but little room for the higher officers. The age limit for officers reverting is 35, for those going to France. Both Capt. George and Col. McKenzie were over the age limit for reverting, and therefore returned home.

The Union Picnic

The union picnic was quite well attended on Thursday afternoon. The affair was gotten up rather hurriedly, and as a result the program did not include races and games. The picnickers were taken to the beach in autos, seven or eight motorists being kind enough to use their cars for taking the scholars [illegible]. The boys and girls had a good time at the lake, as the day was a very hot one.

The older ones looked after the arrangements for supper. There were about three hundred present.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. James Young, Chinook Alta., a son, July 16th.

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE

Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address

LOUIS BLOCH,
22-tfc Owen Sound, Ont.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VI. August 5, 1917.

Manasseh's Sin and Repentance.—2 Chronicles 33; 1-20.

COMMENTARY.—I. A wicked king (vs. 1-10). 1-8. Manasseh was the son of Hezekiah and Hephzibah and was born three years after his father's extraordinary recovery from illness. At the early age of twelve years he succeeded his father upon the throne of Judah and reigned for fifty-five years. In his early years as king he must have been under the influence of advisers and it is reasonably certain that they were ungodly and idolatrous, and Manasseh was turned from the good way which his father had taken, and "did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, like unto the abominations of the heathen" (v. 2). He restored the idolatrous worship which Hezekiah had zealously destroyed. He went so far as to build heathen altars in the house of the Lord, thus rivaling Ahaz in his desecration of the holy place. He set up groves, of carved wooden pillars, for the worship of Asherah which involved the most degrading and abominable practices. He worshipped Moloch, the god of the Ammonites. It is believed that a part of this worship consisted of placing children in the arms of a brazen image of the god, while the image was made hot by fires burning within it, and thus they were sacrificed to this god. Manasseh employed magic and witchcraft, giving himself up to the superstitions and deceptions of the heathen." His course was so wicked and he was so persistent in it that the Lord was greatly displeased with him, and the conditional promise which had been given to the nation could not be much longer fulfilled, unless there should be a change in Judah's attitude toward the Lord. 9. Worse than the heathen—Manasseh was Israel's king and wielded a powerful influence. His people followed him in evil-doing. His reign was long, and his efforts and example were uninterruptedly bad for more than forty years. Josephus says, "He barbarously slew all the righteous men that were among the Hebrews, nor would he spare the prophets, for he every day slew some of them." The nobles who took their part were thrown headlong from the rocky cliffs of Jerusalem (Psa. 141:6, 7).—Stanley. 10. The Lord spake—By the prophets. Possibly Isaiah and Micah were among them. Tradition says that Manasseh caused Isaiah to be sawn asunder.

II. Severe punishment (v. 11). 11. the Lord brought upon them—Judah was not wholly free from Assyrian domination, and the latter nation desired full submission on Judah's part. "The Lord brought" the king of Assyria against Manasseh in the sense that he withdrew his protection from Judah and permitted him to carry out his purpose. among the thorns—"In chains."—R. V. Assyrian kings sometimes thrust a hook into the nostrils of their captives, and so led them about. The practice is illustrated on many Assyrian reliefs in the British Museum.—Cam. Bib. fetters—Fetters of brass on hands and feet. to Babylon—"It is a confirmation of the sacred history to remember that just at this time Babylon, and not Nineveh, was the seat of the Assyrian Government. Esarhaddon, who mentioned Manasseh among his tributaries, was the only king of Assyrian who held his court at Babylon." It was not merely that Manasseh might be made to suffer for his sins that the Lord used these severe measures with him, but that he might be brought to a state of penitence and might be made a righteous man.

III. Penitence and Pardon (vs. 12-20). 12. besought the Lord—Manasseh knew about the true God and hence had sinned against great light. In his exile and captivity he thought of the extremely wicked course he had taken. He realized that it was, because of his persistent and high-handed rebellion against God that this great calamity was brought against him. When he came to himself, he called upon the Lord, humbled himself greatly—"When the rod spake he heard it (Micah 6:9), who would not hear the word (v. 10). His prison proved more profitable than his palace had been. God sent him into a dungeon to repent, as he did David into the depths, and Jonah into the whale's belly, to pray." 13. he was intreated—It is impossible that any sinner who desires to forsake sin and turn to God will be refused mercy, after the record of pardon from God to a man like Manasseh. Does this not explain why Manasseh was permitted to live the life he did? Would the Bible be the book it is, if sin were not personified by such characters, and grace personified in Christ to meet their need?—Whittle. Heard—Though affliction drives us to God, he will not therefore reject us if we sincerely seek him, for afflictions are sent us to bring us to him.—Henry. Brought him to Jerusalem—"When Manasseh is brought back to God and his duty he shall soon be brought back to his kingdom. See how ready God is to accept and welcome returning sinners, and how swift to show mercy. Let not great sinners despair when Manasseh himself, on repentance, found favor with God; in him God showed forth long-suffering (1 Tim. 1: 16; Isa. 1-18)." Into his kingdom—Manasseh could scarcely have hoped that he would be restored to his place on Judah's throne after his deep humiliation at the hands of the Assyrians, but God saw his hearty repentance and the transformation in his character and did for him that which was apparently impossible.

14—after this—After this repentance and restoration. build a wall without the city—the language indicates that Manasseh built a new wall to make the defence of Jerusalem as strong as possible against Assyria and all other nations. He was active in working for the material interests of his kingdom. compassed about Ophel—This was the southern slope of Mount Moriah on which the temple stood. a very great height—Excavations have shown that a wall was built here to the height of more than seventy feet. the fenced cities of Judah—An army was organized of sufficient size to garrison the several fortified cities of the land. Manasseh sought to preserve the integrity of the kingdom which constituted the Lord's chosen people. If he had trusted alone in his army, other nations would have found him an easy prey. It is to be noted that he did not stop with making military preparations for the preservation of Judah. 15. he took away the strange gods—As in the beginning of his reign Manasseh undid the good work his father had done in re-establishing the true religion in Judah, so after his conversion and restoration to his throne he undid his own evil work in bringing in a fearful tide of idolatry. He took away the heathen gods and the idol which he had set up in the temple, and he removed the heathen altars which he had built. He made thorough work in the reform which he inaugurated. 16. Repaired the altar of the Lord—His work was negative first in putting away idolatry, and then it was positive in restoring the worship of Jehovah. Commanded Judah to serve the Lord—With Manasseh it meant more than to be right with God personally. As the leader of the nation he must use his best efforts to bring the people into right relations with God. It is certain that his repentance was genuine. His restoration to his kingdom is evidence that the Lord regarded him as sincere. The king's course upon being placed again on the throne shows that he was bearing the fruits of a true reformation and transformation of character. 17-20. He was largely successful in his work of restoring the worship of the Lord among the people. His life would have been of far greater worth to his nation and the world had he followed from the beginning of his reign the good example of his father. At his death he "was buried in the garden of his own house" (2 Kings 21: 18).

Questions.—Who was Manasseh? When and where did he live? Who was his father? What can you say of Manasseh's character? What heathen gods did he worship? How did he desecrate the temple? What is meant by passing through the fire? What was the valley of Hinnom? What is meant by observing times? How was Manasseh punished? When and where did he repent? Show that his repentance was thorough. How did the Lord show him favor?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Retrogression.

I. A national covenant broken.
II. A foreign religion adopted.
III. A reformation proclaimed.

I. A national covenant broken. Manasseh violated a covenant made at Sinai which had been repeatedly renewed in the history of the Hebrew nation. There has never been in any land a greater change, a sadder reaction, than that experienced by Judah when the godly Hezekiah was succeeded by the apostate Manasseh. He imitated the heathen. He dishonored his father. He defied Jehovah and rejected the admonitions of his holy prophets. During Manasseh's long reign the true character of the nation's sin, the essential nature of idolatry, the inherent wickedness of such apostasy from Jehovah, was unmistakably revealed. The image set up in the temple was the summing up in symbol of the whole apostasy of the people, the formal token of their breach of the covenant, on the integrity of which depended their possession of the land. Carried away by the impetuosity of youth under the advice of evil counselors Manasseh threw himself into a movement directly opposite to that instituted by his father. His deeds were a repetition of the worst deeds of his predecessors. He sinned under the light of revelation. He was king of a nation to which God had made fully known the truth of His existence, character and attributes, a nation which had laws and statutes given to it, that no other nation possessed, and which had the ministry of holy prophets. Manasseh's sins were of a very heinous character and were committed under circumstances which greatly aggravated their enormity.

II. A foreign religion adopted. Manasseh restored Canaanitish abominations. He revived Baal and Moloch worship. He extended star worship. He plunged into the mysteries of sorcery. In a short time he completely changed the whole religion of the kingdom. He welcomed heathen, idolatrous creeds and rites of all kinds, from all sources. He seemed to aim at nothing less than a complete suppression of the worship of Jehovah and the reorganization of the religion of the nation upon foreign models. Judah changed her God for senseless idols. These were the abominations for which God had cast out the original inhabitants of the land. Manasseh reinstated them in full force. He exceeded Ahaz in the zeal with which he imported idolatry from foreign nations. There was a vigorous idolatrous party at court. Though it was suppressed by Hezekiah, with Isaiah's help, the spirit of idolatry was not eradicated from the country nor greatly weakened in its energy.

III. A reformation proclaimed. The divine forbearance and long suffering extended to Judah's king and people indicated God's yearning for their restoration. In this case nothing appeared potent enough to arrest him in his reckless career. Not until he was led captive into Babylon, did he pause and begin to reflect on his wickedness. It was not a matter of chance that Manasseh fell into adversity. It was a scourge expressly set upon him for his transgressions. It was not by chance that he was restored to his kingdom, but by the unseen interposition of the all-wise Dispenser of events and in consequence of his deep humiliation and humble prayer. It was well for Manasseh that he was checked in his iniquities. He discovered that the Lord was God both in his power to afflict and to restore. He was brought to see how immeasurable had been his sin of apostasy. He was constrained to recognize the God of his fathers as a God full of compassion and of great mercy. No sooner had he transferred his allegiance to Jehovah than his captivity was ended. He made earnest endeavor to undo the wrongs he had committed. He faithfully employed his regal authority and his personal example to induce his subjects to renounce idolatry. He could not by one enactment or many bring back the situation he had so completely broken up, nor could he restore to life those faithful men whose lives were sacrificed under his cruelties. Thirty years of idolatry had debauched the heart of the nation. Corruption was deeply seated. The spirit of true religion could not be brought back by command of the king. The wrongs he could not undo caused the final destruction of the kingdom. T. B. A.

The Sadness of a Wedding.

There is something sad about a wedding. The young groom is leaving a home in which he always has had his way and is going into one in which he never will have his way. Although his parents do not go through the formality of giving him away at the altar, they know well enough that in a few minutes he will be a son-in-law to another woman, while to them he is a nothing but a son. There he comes, with another man holding to his arm. It looks as if he might have made an attempt to escape and that the strong best man captured him and brought him back. He is as happy as he is nervous and so trustful that he has no fear for the future.—Claude Callan in Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

SKIM-MILK AS FEED FOR CALVES, PIGS AND POULTRY

Dairy By-Products as Feed for Live Stock---First of Three Articles

(By Prof. H. H. Dean.)

The chief dairy by-products are skim milk, buttermilk and whey. We shall deal with these in three articles.

A farmer's main business is to produce food for the consumers of the world. Incidentally, he expects to make a profit on the business and thereby add to his own comfort and happiness. The chief drawback in farming hitherto has been, that the farmer was expected to contribute too much to the comfort and happiness of others and not enough to that of himself and family. He has been regarded as a super-altruist, by a lot of persons who ought to know better. In fact, the Altruist School of Philosophy has had altogether too much to say, and too much to do, in determining personal actions, and shaping national and world-wide politics. It is a very pretty theory, but the results in practice are disastrous, as it encourages selfishness on the part of the strong and aggressive persons and nations, while the weaker individuals and nations become the prey of these super-selfish personages and peoples.

THE FARMER A VICTIM.

The farmer, particularly, has been the victim of Altruistic Philosophy, but he is beginning to see where "the shoe pinches," and "whose ox is being gored," by these suave, smooth-talking gents, who are out to do the farmer, and everyone else. However, not all Altruists are of this class. Some are well meaning and would not take advantage of anyone. Nevertheless, the effects of their doctrines are almost as harmful as the teaching of the first class, except that they do not personally profit by the other fellow's weakness. It is surprising to see the large number of men who are apparently working for the good of others in the most disinterested manner possible, but who manage to get "rake-offs" for themselves and friends at a rate that would astonish the unthinking and unwary man on the street and on the farm.

But to return to the subject.

Skim milk contains practically all the feeding materials found in whole milk, except the milk-fat, or what is commonly known as cream. When milk fat is worth from 40 to 50 cents per pound, as it has been for some time, the dairy farmer may well pause before feeding it to calves or any other animals on the farm.

The first thing necessary in order to save all the milk-fat possible for sale as cream, is a suitable means of recovering the fat from the milk-serum, or what is commonly known as skim milk. There are two general methods of creaming milk—by gravity, where the milk is set in pans or deep cans for the cream to rise, which is usually a wasteful method of obtaining cream; and, second, by the mechanical or separator method, which is almost perfection so far as recovery of milk-fat is concerned, where a modern cream separator is used under proper conditions. There are two forms of applying power to a cream separator—by hand, or by some mechanical contrivance, such as steam engine, electric motor, gasoline engine, tread power, etc. Both are satisfactory if properly applied.

SKIM MILK FOR POULTRY.

In the practical operation of cream separators, the main point to watch carefully is that of speed. Because speed has a very important effect on "closeness of skimming," and on the percentage of fat in the cream, assuming that the machine is properly constructed and is operated according to directions of the manufacturer. The law of the effect of speed on centrifugal and centripetal forces may be stated briefly as follows: Double the speed, diameter of separator bowl being constant, and the centrifugal and centripetal forces, which cause a separation of the cream from skim milk, are increased fourfold. This being the case, we see how important it is to have the speed of a separator sufficient and uniform for best results. The latest types of machines have an arrangement, usually in the form a bell, which calls attention to the fact when speed drops below normal. This is an excellent device which is especially needed on the farm, where the tendency is to allow the speed to drop too low at some time during the separating.

After the calf gets a start of two to four weeks on whole milk, it may be gradually changed to warm, sweet skim milk from which the foam has been removed, if fresh from the separator. Too much should not be fed at one time. A gallon at one feed is plenty for a calf up to two or three months old, after which the quantity may be increased slightly, but in no case should a calf receive more than three gallons of skim milk in twenty-four hours. It may be fed in three feeds during the first six weeks and in two feeds after that time.

Calf pails should be kept clean and sweet, otherwise there is danger of stomach troubles with the calf, more especially "scours."

To replace the fat removed in the form of cream, ground flaxseed, corn meal or oatmeal porridge may be added—to the milk at first, then later it should be fed dry, along with clover hay and roots in winter; green feed or grass in summer. The skim milk may be continued until the calf is six months old or longer, if the milk be available.

Just before, and immediately after weaning pigs, there is scarcely anything which will replace skim milk. Tankage is recommended as a substitute. The writer's experience with tankage has been very limited. He purchased 200 pounds one time for a bunch of pigs, but they could scarcely be induced to eat it. The smell of it was vile. The cattle and horses were nearly crazed by the smell of blood from it. From this one experience with tankage, we would conclude it not to be satisfactory material to have round the stables on a dairy farm. It may be all right where hogs only are fed, but other live stock do not take kindly to the odor.

The best combination for young pigs appears to be milk and middlings. Later barley, or barley and corn meal, or corn on the cob, may be added, especially for the fattening stage with hogs. At the present time, when the price of live hogs is hovering between $16 and $17 per 100 pounds live weight, and the retail price of bacon is 40 cents per pound, "pigs is pigs" all right. Brood sows have sold at auction sales during the past winter at $75 to $90 each—as much as a horse, or cow, ordinarily used to sell for.

FEED CALVES UP TO SIX MONTHS.

The skim milk may be continued as part of the ration until the hogs are ready for sale at a weight of about 200 pounds, which should be attained in about six months' time. While it is not advisable to crowd the pigs too much, it is plain that the shorter the time during which the hogs can be got ready for market, the greater the saving of feed for maintenance. A certain amount of the feed given to any animal is required to maintain it, or keep it alive and furnish energy for bodily functions. The longer the time this maintenance is needed, the less the profits. It is a fine point in feeding to know how to cut maintenance cost to the last month, week, day and hour, absolutely necessary for best results. This is a point that confronts the feeder with each new lot of pigs, and has to be determined twice a year, with each litter when they are weaned, and while being fed for the packing house, local butcher or for home consumption.

The Danish pig feeders informed the writer that they consider skim milk essential in the successful feeding of bacon hogs. Canadian feeders do not seem to have fully realized the value of skim milk for bacon production. As the Canadian bacon trade increases in importance we may expect dairy farmers to pay more attention to the value of dairy by-products in the production of what promises to be one of the most important side lines in the dairy industry of Canada.

Dairy cows, bacon hogs and good fat sheep are the three best things a farmer can keep.

The hen, as a sideline in farming and back-yard gardening, is receiving considerable attention at the present time. Some of those who have been engaged in poultry farming on a small scale estimate that their eggs did not cost them much over one dollar a dozen during the winter of 1916-17. However, others think they were able to reduce this cost considerably in spite of the high price of feed.

On the dairy farm, where dairy by-products are available, eggs and fattened chickens can be more profitably produced than elsewhere. The New Jersey Experiment Station reported during the past winter that "Egg producers can afford to pay 40 to 80 cents per 100 pounds for skim milk."

For best results in feeding poultry, it is found advisable to allow the milk to sour, as the lactic acid produced by souring seems to have a beneficial effect on the digestion of their food by poultry. It is claimed also, that sour milk will stop the habit of eating eggs, which is quite common in winter when hens are unable to secure their natural food supply.

While it is undoubtedly true that the most economical way to utilize skim milk is directly as human food, mild to sour, as the lactic acid produced by souring seems to have a beneficial effect on the digestion of their food by poultry. It is claimed also, that sour milk will stop the habit of eating eggs, which is quite owing to the prejudice in Canada and the United States against skim milk for persons, it is not likely to be used to any great extent in the dietary of Canadians for some time to come. In European cities it is largely used. At the time of the writer's last visit to Copenhagen in Denmark, he was told that nearly as much skim milk was sold in the city as of whole milk. The price of skim milk was about one-half that obtained for whole milk. In America, if it were known that certain families were buying skim milk, the children would likely be taunted by the expression, "O, see the Skim Milk Kids!" It is a matter of boasting among our people that they buy the most expensive foods regardless of their nutritive qualities. When shall we learn to buy food with economy?

—The Canadian Countryman.

Eyes of Rubber.

Artificial eyes of rubber are taking the place of the old style glass optic in Europe. The rubber eyes have the advantage of being unbreakable, and as they are of pneumatic construction they maintain an elastic contact between the eyelids and the back of the orbitary cavity.

To make the new rubber product a cast formed of liquid plaster is made of the orbitary cavity, and from this is constructed an eyeball, the face being of vulcanite. The front and back parts are made of soft rubber, there being a space between the two parts which is occupied by air, making the eyes pneumatic.—Popular Science Monthly.

Key of Tibaldo.

The "key to death" is a large key which is shown among the weapons at the arsenal at Venice. It was invented by Tibaldo, who, disappointed in love, designed this instrument for the destruction of his rival. The key is so constructed that the handle may be turned around, revealing a small spring, which being pressed a very fine needle is driven with considerable force from the other end. This needle is so very fine that the flesh closes over the wound immediately, leaving no mark, but the death of the victim is almost instantaneous.

SUNDAY AT HOME

THE WAY OF PEACE.

I sought the way back to peace—
So long I sought and far—
A place where nought might enter in,
My happiness to mar.

I sought, and sought in vain,
Until, with fainting heart,
I turned about and found a place
Where I could bear a part

In lifting heavy loads,
In sharing others' woes;
And in the path of duty, lo!
I found my heart's repose.
—Edith Virginia Brady.

IN FAVOR WITH GOD AND MAN.

I think that one of the most interesting verses in the Bible is that which tells us that our Lord grew "in favor with God and man."

So many people seem to have the idea that, so long as they are doing what they believe to be right, it doesn't matter a bit what anybody thinks of them.

To a certain extent this attitude may be all right, but I am sure it can easily be carried too far. To grow "in favor with God and man" is, it seems to me, far better.

Anyway, our Lord managed to combine the two; so there is no reason why we should not try to do so.

DOWNWARDNESS.

(By the late Rev. H. T. Miller.

The Divine downwardness is uplifting. This brings us to a paradox. If you go down you are in company with the humble; if you go up you are liable to be burnt with the fever of the proud. God looks down in majesty and meekness. Man looks up in feebleness and hebetation. God's hands are full, and man's hands are empty. God's people sit in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, others toil along, hard bested and hungry.

The prayer of the lowly is: "What in me is dark illumine, what is low raise and support; That to the height of this great argument I may assert eternal Providence And justify the ways of God to men."

The prayer of the worldly-wise is to make a chart of the ways of man to God. His lantern is dull, he travels in a fog, his oil is scanty, his pilot is not sure, at the end he says: "I do not know."

Do I speak to teachers and preachers? Here is your calling. To justify the ways of God to man. That means that you walk with God as Enoch, that you listen to Abraham, that you tremble as Jeremiah when he saith: "Preach the preaching that I bid thee, lest I confound thee before them."

The rain comes down from heaven, with constant blessing. The sparks from the fire of man's mental furnace go up a little way. They flicker and go out in darkness.

There is much in attitude when the soul is well furnished. "I stand in the presence of God," said one. Milton stood in dignity when he asserted Eternal Providence; and every true man to-day, whether in the pulpit or on the sidewalk, stands arrayed in the panoply of God; the powers concentrated in Him are not seen, the secret is not known. Lo these are part of His ways, and yet how little is known of Him.

I look into the wallet of the downward servant, and I find a feast of good things. I look into the basket of the man who is upward in his look, and I find a few crumbs of faith, very precious. The man means well, but his attitude towards God is laborious, and his apprehension of God's attitude toward him is very largely astray. Men dress for certain functions. The woman dress for a party or a ball, the generals dress for parade, the kind dresses for great state occasions. But how should we come before the Lord? Is it with great retinue and available of offerings? Nay! But it is an empty, lowly, humble heart. This is the sacrifice that is well pleasing to God. Think of His line coming down and reaching even to you, then your gratitude will shine in jewelled garments in the light of the Father's face.

"Day by day His tender mercy,
Healing, helping, full and free,
Sweet and strong, and oh, so patient
Brought me lower, while I whispered,
Less of self and more of Thee.

Higher than the highest heavens,
Deeper than the deepest sea,
Lord, Thy love at last hath conquered,
Grant me, now, my supplication,
None of self, and all of Thee!"
H. T. Miller.

MARKET REPORTS

TORONTO MARKETS.

FARMERS' MARKET

Dairy Produce, Retail—
Eggs, new-laid, doz.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bulk, going at	0 45	[illegible]
Butter, farmers' dairy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spring chickens, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Roasters	[illegible]	[illegible]
Boiling fowl, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Live hens, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spring ducks, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Poultry, Dressed—
Spring chickens, lb.	0 35	[illegible]
Spring ducks, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Roosters, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fowl, lb.	0 30	[illegible]
Turkeys, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Squabs, per dozen	[illegible]	[illegible]

MEATS—WHOLESALE.

Beef, forequarters	$12 50	$14 [illegible]
Do., hindquarters	18 00	20 00
Carcases, choice	16 00	[illegible]
Do., common	12 00	13 50
Veal, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., medium	12 00	14 00
Heavy hogs	[illegible]	[illegible]
Shop hogs	20 00	21 00
Mutton, light	15 00	[illegible]
Do., heavy	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lambs, yearlings	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spring lambs	[illegible]	[illegible]

SUGAR MARKET.

Local wholesale quotations on Canadian refined sugar, Toronto delivery, in effect July 19.—

St. Lawrence, granulated	100 lbs.	$8.34
Lantic granulated	100 lbs.	8.34
Royal Acadia, granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Redpath, granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Dominion crystals	100 lbs.	[illegible]
No. 1 yellow, all refiners	100 lbs.	[illegible]
No. 2 yellow	100 lbs.	[illegible]
No. 3 yellow	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Dark yellow	100 lbs.	[illegible]

TORONTO CATTLE MARKETS.

The demand for cattle was slow, but prices were fairly steady. Calves were weak hogs slightly steady. Calves were

Export cattle, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butcher cattle, choice	[illegible]	10 75
do. do., medium	9 00	[illegible]
do. do., common	[illegible]	8 50
Butcher cows, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do., medium	[illegible]	[illegible]
do. do., canners	[illegible]	[illegible]
do., bulls	[illegible]	[illegible]
Feeding steers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Stockers, choice	[illegible]	[illegible]
do., light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Milkers, choice, each	40 00	100 00
Springers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sheep, ewes	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bucks and culls	6 00	[illegible]
Lambs	12 00	[illegible]
Hogs, fed and watered	[illegible]	[illegible]
Calves	7 00	[illegible]

OTHER MARKETS.

WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE.

Wheat—	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Oct.	2 21	2 21	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oats—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dec.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Flax—
July	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Oct.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Dec.	[illegible]

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

Minneapolis.—Wheat—July closed $2.[illegible]; September, $2.21; cash, No. 1 hard, [illegible]; No. 1 Northern, [illegible] to [illegible]; No. 2 Northern, $2.59 to $2.90. Corn—No. 3 yellow, $2.12 to $2.13. Oats—No. 3 white, [illegible]. Flour unchanged. Bran, [illegible].

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

Duluth.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $2.81; No. 1 Northern, [illegible]; No. 2 Northern, [illegible]. Linseed, $3.16; July, $3.16; September, [illegible]; October, $3.16.

BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

East Buffalo, Despatch—Cattle receipts 500; slow.

Veals, receipts 100; steady; $5 to $14.25.

Hogs, receipts 1,000; strong; heavy, $16.40 to $16.50; mixed $16.35 to $16.45; yorkers $16.25 to $16.40; light yorkers $15.50 to $15.75; pigs, $15.25 to $15.50; roughs $14.25 to $14.50; stags $12 to 13.

Sheep and lambs, receipts 800; active; steady and unchanged.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Cattle, receipts 26,000.
Market weak.

Beeves	[illegible]	[illegible]
Western	[illegible]	[illegible]
Stockers and feeders	6 25	[illegible]
Cows and heifers	[illegible]	[illegible]
Calves	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hogs, receipts 25,000.
Market slow.
Light	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mixed	14 45	[illegible]
Heavy	14 25	[illegible]
Rough	[illegible]	14 50
Pigs	11 50	[illegible]
Bulk of sales	[illegible]	[illegible]
Sheep, receipts 20,000.
Market weak.
Wethers	7 75	11 60
Lambs, native	[illegible]	[illegible]

ONE RIVER SYSTEM

Australian Continent is Unique in This Respect.

"There are in Australia no Coloradas or Columbias or Tennessees, trenching plateaus and crossing mountain chains, and no counterpart of the thousands of spring-fed brooks and streams issuing from lakes widely scattered over the country. The large area in Utah and Nevada from which dwindling streams never escape to the sea is represented in Australia by an enormous expanse of territory, comprising fully half of the continent.

The heart of the United States is a well-watered land of fields and woods and cities; the corresponding part of Australia is dry and barren and thinly populated. The Murray-Darling is the one great river system of Australia. It drains five-sixths of New South Wales, more than one-half of Victoria, and nearly one-seventh of the entire Australian continent.

Because of its unfavorable outlet, its small volume, its snags and sand-bars and great sinuosities, navigation of the Murray is limited to small light draft steamers towing one or two barges. Regular traffic in grain and wool is maintained during seven months of the year from the mouth of the river to Wentworth, 500 miles and small boats reach Albury.

In the flood year of 1870 a steamer went beyond the Queensland border along a river 60 miles wide, and in 1890 steamers on the Darling between Wentworth and Burke travelled for hours without seeing any land, and in one instance discharged cargo 25 miles from the ordinary channel of the river." But a few years later (1912-1913) the Darling ceased to flow for eleven months. During exceptional years the bed of the Murray is partly dry and the waters near the mouth become too salt for stock.—U. S. National Geographic Magazine.

An eastern physician says girl babies begin talking earlier than boys. We could add something to that statement, but we know better than to do it.—Macon Telegraph.

Through Many Trials

CHAPTER VI.

"Dost thou know, Richard Dumaresq," Miriam Lilly asks, in coldest, severest tones, and with her searching gaze fixed on him in rapid judicial criticism, "that thou are situated here in a peculiar position, and that one of great trust?"

"Yes," he answers, briefly, "I know it."

The stern woman is sitting as an inquisitor before him, and Dick Dumaresq, rather troubled and gloomy of countenance, is standing at the other side of the square table in the housekeeper's room, which—there being no such stately functionary in the Portcreath household, her office being filled by the portly cook—is a nondescript species of apartment.

It is a low-ceiled room, on the ground floor, with a square window with French sashes opening outward. They stand open now in the warmth of the spring afternoon, and deep green ivy leaves, and the tender red shoots of the rosebushes frame the open window round about.

A narrow courtyard, warm and sunny, lies round about.

A narrow courtyard, warm and sunny, lies beyond, and the high stone wall, time-lichened and gray, on which the sunlight falls, is covered over with the tracery of branches and and green leaves of a spreading fig tree; and the outlook through those open French sashes, with their frame of green leaves, into the sunny silence of the old gray courtyard, with its fig-tree-covered wall, and the deep blue sky above, send Dick Dumaresq's thoughts suddenly and strangely astray. Strangely astray to one who did not know the true history of this young fellow's life, the true history of a noble, gentle nature, whose best and tenderest capabilities have been wrought upon so foully as to have been the means of leading him to social ruin.

His thoughts have fled far away in an instant of time, and a scene rises before him of just such another view, the window framed in deep green leaves, the sunny, gray courtyard, the spreading branches of ruins and fig trees, and the deep blue sky above—and the small, low-ceiled room is in an old house in an old, sunny, sleepy, French town. And in a room, on a bed, lies a young man, suffering in the slow convalescence, the protracted struggle of life and youth painfully fighting the battle with death, of tedious recovery from a dangerous illness. And in the scene before Dumaresq's mental vision there is another young man sitting by the bedside, and holding the sick lad's hand—they are neither of them more than one-and-twenty years of age, the invalid youth is scarce nineteen, and his comrade is talking earnestly to him.

Dick Dumaresq can hear the words now, echoing back through the chambers of memory, although that scene is bygone by ten years.

"It is the best thing that could have happened to you, after all, old fellow," the sick lad's friend is saying. "He cannot steel his heart against you when he sees you like this, weak and worn out after this terrible illness. He is a hard man, and a stern man, we both know too well; but he can't be merciless to his only sister's son! He will forgive you everything, Richard, old boy—let him think what he likes of me."

"No, I won't consent to that," the sick boy says, feebly. "I won't go back to Heneage Court without you, Dick."

And Dick gently strokes back the roughened hair from the boy's white brow with a tender touch and trembling fingers.

"We must think of your health first, Richard, old fellow," he says, with a voice that trembles likewise; "that is the first thing. I shall never forgive myself for bringing you here. I must undo what I have done so far as I can; I must get good food, and wine, and pleasant, airy rooms, and good medical attendance for you, lad, and—I will do it."

And then he goes away, and Dick Dumaresq, standing still in those few minutes, looking out at the sunshine in the old courtyard at Portcreath, sees that the sick boy's friend goes into another room and writes a letter—not a very long letter—but one which takes him two hours to write, and which he reads over to himself, puts into a envelope, and addresses to:

Viscount Dumaresq,
Heneage Court,
Herefordshire,
England.

Then he stands a minute with the letter in his hand, gazing at it with eyes too misty with tears to read the words—a minute when he wages a fierce conflict with himself—and then, a minute later, he has conquered, snatches up his hat and rushes out of the house to post the letter.

Four days later he is sitting in the square low-ceiled room, still by the sick bed of his companion, and gazing out through the open window framed in green leaves, at the bright hot sunshine on the flags of the old courtyard.

The weather has grown sultrier, the invalid seemingly weaker, unaccountably more restless and feverish, and low spirited, and the bright face of the watcher by the bedside is haggard and strained with anxiety.

The sick lad is muttering some feverish longings for fruit, and the poor little plate of cheap plums which his friend has brought in does not tempt him.

"Do you remember the grapes and the peaches at Heneage Court, Dick?" he says, sorrowfully.

"Yes," the other says, his face lighting up and quivering with a mixed expression of pain and pleasure, "and the pines and the mulberries! Do you remember the big mulberry trees, Richard? What a lovely old place it is! There is nothing finer than that mulberry walk in England, I think. To see those trees all laden with the big, purple berries. And then the bee garden, Richard; what fun that bee garden was, to be sure, when we used to take off the honey glasses, and the bees used to chase us!"

"It was better fun eating the delicious white honey with cream at our breakfast afterward!" the sick boy says, with the usual despairing moan at the pleasant reminiscence. "Oh, if I had some of that honey and cream now, how I should like it!"

"Perhaps you soon will, lad," Dick answers, in a faltering voice; "perhaps uncle will forgive you all the past, and—and take you back to comfort and luxuries, and—and—the dear, old place once more."

"He won't—what nonsense you talk," the sick boy mutters, in a lower tone, and a faint red color staining his pallid cheek. "He swore he would never forgive me about that wretched cheque book."

"Yes, yes, I know," the other says, hastily, and blushing deeply in his turn. "Well, he had a right to be angry then, but nothing came of it; and you said you were sorry, and gave him up the cheque. He will forgive that, surely, Richard!"

"Never," the boy says, despairingly. "He said I had disgraced the name of Dumaresq, and that he would never trust or believe me again, and insulted me so horribly, when his own abominable stinginess was the cause of my being ever tempted to touch his cheque book! I never could forgive or forget the way he spoke to me, as if I had been a common thief."

"Never mind all that now," the other says, hastily starting up in an attitude of listening. "You must forgive, and he will forgive, and be kinder to you than ever, I feel sure, when there will be only one nephew left to his guardianship."

"What are you saying?" the sick boy asks, impatiently. "I can't hear your voice with the horrid clatter on the pavement of horses' hoofs, and wheels, and the cracking of whips! It is the omnibus come up from the station, I suppose."

"No, no—I think," the other says, tremulously, getting up and going toward the door—"I think, Richard, it is some friends—a friend to see you."

He has the rickety little door open, and is looking down the narrow stairs, up which comes the sound of a slow, ascending step.

"Yes, a friend, Richard," he says, brokenly, and he draws back hurriedly. "Cheer up, old fellow, your troubles are over! Here is Uncle Dumaresq come to see you!"

And the sick boy, with an outburst of hysterical emotion, stretches out his wasted hands, sobbing aloud, as the tall, thin, elderly man, with the hard, clean, high-bred face, and white, slender, well-bred hands, comes into the shabby room, looking so much shabbier by the contrast of that stern face and figure, and the careful elegant attire of the visitor.

And he takes one of the weak, wasted hands in his; but there is no softening in his mien, or in his cold, grave voice.

"Do you ask my pardon, nephew?" he says, calmly, "your disobedience and ingratitude have borne you bitter fruit, I think."

"Yes, uncle, I am heartily done!" the boy sobs, and the uncle's narrow, high forehead darkens with a frown.

"That is why you seek my forgiveness, I suppose, sir, because you are brought so low," he says, scornfully; but the elder nephew interposes stoutly.

"Richard regrets the past, sir; but it was I who wrote the letter to you."

"I am aware of that, Richard Dumaresq!" the old man says, turning suddenly on him with a face flushed with wrath and fierce, flashing eyes. "I am not so old or so blind that I could not read the signature to your confession. For you, sir, I have no feeling but contempt; I did not know why you tried to screen your dupe so much before."

"My dupe, sir? I neither—" he exclaims, paling and flushing crimson.

But the elder man's face grows steel-like in its haughty scorn and determination.

"Not that word, sir, never again," he says, steadily; "there is no relationship between me and a scoundrel! Your own words betray you, sir; this weak boy has been your dupe—his disobedience and misconduct is but a boyish escapade compared to your falsehood and hypocrisy! You were trusted the most, you were liked the best"—and the harsh voice trembles ever so little—"so much the baser has been your treachery."

"That will do, sir," the young man interrupts, as sternly as the old man has spoken. "If you believe this of me, of course we cannot be anything but strangers henceforward. But I trust that Richard will not suffer for my folly; you see how ill he is. Nothing you could say could make me repent any share in our disobedience to you as the sight of him ill and suffering like this has done."

"I should be infinitely sorry to waste words on you, sir, to induce you to repentance," Viscount Dumaresq retorts, scornfully, and once more the face of the elder nephew pales to the lips.

"You have the instincts of a scapegrace in you, as your father had before you," the old man goes on, mercilessly. "As you have begun so well, you will no doubt pursue the career that suits you to the end. Only remember one thing," and the thin white hand, held up menacingly, trembled with rage—"however low you may drag the name of Dumaresq in the mire, and however much you may boast yourself of good connections, I know the tricks of spendthrifts and scapegraces, sir—remember this, you are neither kith nor kin of mine from this hour forward; your assumption of relationship with me or mine will, therefore, be a lie!"

And then Richard Dumaresq; his hot, young blood maddened by these insults, leaps up in a fury, and fiercely swears that he will not claim kinship with Viscount Dumaresq or his kindred ever while he lives, not if it were to save that life, or all that was so dear!

And then there is one scene more to be recollected.

The waiting carriage, filled with luxurious rugs, and shawls and invalid appliances, and the perfectly trained deferential servants in handsome liveries, arousing much shrill admiration and discussion from the French gossips in the narrow, rough paved street.

And then the sick lad carefully carried down, and laid resting on the air cushions, muffled in downy, warm rugs, his eyes brightening, his cheeks flushing with hope and returning health already.

And then his thin, white hand stretched out in a hasty, nervous goodbye to his cousin standing beside the carriage door, and then he nestles down again his cushions again, with his attentive valet sitting beside him, with a travelling bag, a liquor case, and a luncheon basket of the most tempting invalid dainties. He sinks down gladly among his luxurious surroundings; he never once turns his head or tries to alter his position to look back at the solitary figure standing there still gazing at the retreating carriage.

And the solitary figure goes back slowly into the low ceiled room—the squalid, poor bedroom, looking out on the quaint old courtyard, the room tenantless now, forlorn and wretched looking in the confusion of a hurried departure, with its one shabby chair, and rush-bottomed chair, and falls into an attitude of thinking, then counts over the contents of a shrunken purse.

"Just enough to pay my fare back to London," he says, quietly, "and not half a crown to spare. Well, I know where there is a shilling to be had, at all events."

And then—forlorn, lonely, heart sore and friendless, as well as penniless—there is a dark hour suffered by the solitary one sitting in that low-ceiled room—a dark hour, in which the strength and courage of his young manhood give away in an agony of despair.

"For," he whispered to himself, lying face downward on the bed where the sick boy had lain through weary weeks, "it was bitterer than death to hear him call me a scoundrel, to know he believes me to be one—treacherous and dishonest—when I was innocent, quite innocent! But I can bear it; Richard's poor lad! he has suffered enough in body and mind to be forgiven anything. Yes, I can bear it better than Richard—I can rough it. I shall like to rough it; I could not stand that languid slow, stately, luxurious life at Heneage Court much longer. I have a dash of renegade in me, as he said. I should like to rough it—it would have killed poor Richard; he is a delicate lad. Only—only if the old man had parted good friends, had even shaken hands and said, 'I forgive you,' I could have stood the last bit. If he said, 'Good-by, Dick, I forgive you,' my heart would have been light, as it is, it feels bursting," the poor fellow mutters to the pillow, which is damp with no unmanly tears. "For the old man was very good to me, and I believe he cared for me as much as if I had been his son. Heaven bless him! I forgive him his hard words, at all events. And I'll never drag the name of Dumaresq in the mire, as he said I should—never, so help me, heaven!"

. . . .

And then Dick Dumaresq, standing gazing in a reverie through the open window into the sunny old courtyard at Portcreath, rouses himself suddenly with a quick, deep sigh, and hears Miriam Lilly's stern, cold voice addressing him still.

CHAPTER VII.

"Thou didst not offer me any assurances, Richard," Miriam Lilly is saying in a voice of extreme displeasure. "I confess I should like to at least have thy assurance respecting thy fitness for this post. I tell thee plainly it is not good report I have ever heard of thee, and I have been at some pains to discover the true character of the son of my sister Katharine, the child of her most imprudent marriage."

"Why imprudent, Aunt Miriam?" Dick Dumaresq asks, quickly, with a frown and a hot flush. "My mother was very happy in 'her imprudence,' so I have always heard. My father's circumstances were not all that could be desired, certainly; but they loved each other, and my mother was very fond of him, and proud of him, and happy with him until the day of her death. Aunt Jane knows that well."

"Jane is a foolish woman, with a weak head and a soft heart," Mrs. Lilly retorts, more coldly. "I shall not speak evil of the dead; but there was little in poor Katharine's hasty, flighty love match to gratify any relative who held her in esteem."

"You are speaking evil of the dead—of my dead father, Harold Dumaresq," Dick interposes, with gleaming eyes. "Say what you please of me—I dare-say I deserve it."

"I fear thou dost," Miriam Lilly says, with increased displeasure. "Thou art of a godless race, Richard, and their blood has run riot in thy veins—so much so that thou hast even made thyself an outcast from thy father's kindred. Ah, I know it but too well; I tell thee plainly that even the door of thy uncle's home is shut against thee!"

"What have you heard against me?" he asks, in low tones. "I have been wild in my boyhood, and—and ran up debts and—and my—the viscount disowned me."

"And justly, if half of what I have heard be true," Miriam Lilly says, agitatedly. "Thou hast been a prodigal without the return to repentance. I tell thee I know well, too well, of thy career, Richard, and I have had a serious time during the hours of last night, in communing with my heart concerning thee and my desire to befriend the son of my dead sister, and my equally earnest desire to do what is right and just to these, my friends, Sir Philip Trefusis and his children. I put the question to thee solemnly, Richard Dumaresq—answer me with no illusions—dost thou know that thou art situated here in a position of great trust?"

"Yes, I do know it," he says, coldly and haughtily, "and permit me to say I need no reminders—I will suffer no reminders on the subject. What I am I am. An honest man, earning my bread honestly. My boyish sins I have done with. No one has a right to remind me of it now."

"I am not speaking so much of the past of years ago as of the immediate past life," Miriam Lilly says, looking at him with kindling eyes. "If thou wilt have me speak plainly, I will. Thou hast led a [illegible] life of liberty and of [illegible] of late years, and [illegible] since thy return from India thou hast frequented places that thy [illegible] not admit the [illegible] just been seen amongst the loosest and the basest—seen and known, and I tell thee I will speak out plainly—there is the woman, the [illegible] house woman, the woman who ought to have been thy wife but was not! Now, have I spoken plainly to thee?"

"I cannot say anything, Aunt Miriam," he says, biting his lips, and restlessly shifting his feet, and clinching his hands, "only you are wronging me, on my word and honor. I cannot explain to you; appearances are against me; but you are wronging me, on my word and honor."

(To Be Continued).

Little Son Was A Pitiful Sight

With Ringworm Which Turned to Eczema. Just One Mass. Cuticura Completely Healed.

"My little son, three years old, took ringworm on his left arm, and he scratched it so that it turned to eczema. It then spread to his back, chest, arms, legs and head. It was just one mass of corruption and it made my heart ache to see him scratch; he would just tear himself. He was a pitiful sight.

"I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment. By the time I had used the second box of Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap he was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. R. R. Peachey, R. R. 1, Waldemar, Ont., December 30, 1916.

Cuticura Soap daily for the toilet and Cuticura Ointment as needed prevent pimples, blackheads or other eruptions.

For Free Sample Each by Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

GERMANY'S NEED

MAXIMILIAN HARDEN IN DIE ZUKUNFT.

"Our princes," said Lagarde once, "must not imagine that among their subjects there lives none equal to them!" He pointed out with rare clearness the fatality of such a notion of a monarchy. Parliamentary government is the solution of our internal problem. For a full decade it has been preached in these columns. Upon those in power our arguments made no impression. Meantime the inevitable has come to pass.

Hark back for a moment to the spring of 1907.

"Is the German empire," I asked then, "fenced about by sky-high barriers shutting off all view to its neighbors? The spectacle of our internal strife might well induce our enemy to try his hand at crowding his inconvenient competitor to the wall before the favorable hour has passed.

"We Germans have a right to be proud of much that we have accomplished. Our farmers, workmen, soldiers, and business men all hold their own. Our technique, industry, and commerce are doing at least as well as those of other countries. In many fields we are achieving more, with smaller resources. Our army lieutenant is still the best. Our officials are industrious and honorable. But because this is so we do not have to conceal the fact that we are badly governed.

"The most important institution of our state do not meet the requirements of the times. Our international affairs are so badly bungled that our hands are tied for years to come. Uncle Edward has seen to that. And we are partly to blame. A great combine of nations is closing a ring around us, hoping to prevent, without war, the expansion of this unsated empire. We must sit tight, keep quiet. But no bluffs should frighten us. A great empire cannot be governed from the cabinet chamber, through hand strappers. No provocation of foreign nations; cool caution; calm consideration of every decision into its minutest consequences; fearless adherence to that which has been recognized as imperative—such must be the basic principles of our policies. That is what we must work for; that and one other thing—the right of a mature nation to govern itself."

Ten years ago!

And what happens? The triple entente grows more from month to month. Our relations with every great power were—on the surface—as gentle as the gentlest lamb in a shepherd's ballad.

Then came the world crash.

Russia, France, and British empire, Japan, Italy, Belgium, two Serb states, Portugal, Roumania and America—all against us; counting the colonial inhabitants, almost a billion souls.

Neutrals on three continents accuse us—openly or secretly—of brutal violation of international law. The republic of China (300,000,000 inhabitants) brusquely breaks off diplomatic relations with the German empire.

* * *

Can the government that was unable to avert such a lineup of opposition deem itself superior in statesmanship to a democracy? Torrents of blood have washed away all doubts. The people, who down to the humblest humpback tailor and the crippled maid were summoned to save the empire, have forgotten fear—[illegible] whatever may be the issue of this war, behind it stands, rocklike, the certainty that Germany can be governed in future only by the will of her people.

Even to-day a prudently prepared democratic programme would find a tremendous following.

If the dear folks now living in the privileged spheres escape with only the liberalization of the Prussian electoral system effected (altogether too much prated about), they may compare their good luck to that of the man who, having reached the highest rung of the scaffold ladder, hears that he is only sentenced to get a shave at once.

The upheaval that is on the march is of a different sort. This is no time for half measures. Make haste, you who counsel the princes. He who quickly grants what is necessary avoids the appearance of humiliating compulsion.

Giving life, home, belongings, the hope to have children and grandchildren, giving all for the empire and yet having no right to take a hand in the shaping of German destiny—that was yesterday.

From that night resurrection is dawning upon the fatherland's firmament.

We are told that internal reforms hamper the conduct of the war. The answer is that they pave the way to peace, provided they are voluntarily granted. The striving for a reconstruction of the national groundwork does not derail the empire; it lays the main track upon which the attainable goal may be swift attained.

A nation conscious of its strength, strong in its freedom, rejects arrogant efforts of outsiders to push it into an Eden. It will never allow them to force "happiness" upon it.

But we are spurred on by the call of mankind; we are driven by the vital essence of natural, necessary evolution.

Progress—Because the enemy commands it? Never!

Nor must we, mind you, stand still because the enemy desires that we make headway.

* * *

The heads of the billion souls aligned against us regard with sinister glances our yearning for peace because they fear that the armament fever will keep on, that the German empire will not rest until, in a world unwilling or incapable of fighting a new war, it has surrounded a hundred million humans with all that which will serve that number; coal and ore, corn and cattle, cotton and timber, and raw materials for every branch of industry.

That would be domination over the continent—would bring every one within the treaty violator's reach into constant menace of life.

"Such a peace alone would pay for the German sacrifices" is the sentiment voiced in one of the many misleading utterances of the last few weeks. Here ways part—and worlds.

In this, too, where war advocates and pacifists, militarists and politicians part! The executors of the Old Testament believe—even with gentle hearts—still in force; they see beyond the borders of their land nothing but malice and envy. they reject all hope in a change of human nature and shun no means, not even the ugliest, if these means justify the aim of defense (which inevitably must turn into attack if the outside pressure becomes too great).

Whatever is said against their theory, they reject as shallow sophistry.

"The thing to do," they assert, "is to conquer, to take from the conquered whatever the fatherland needs, and then arm it, stronger than ever, against all revenge—or one is beaten and dies with honor. Whoever can see any other outcome is a fool or weakling."

Thus reasoned also the Spartans, who went out into battle against the Athenians for the freedom of the sea and in the tenth year of war had to accept peace and an alliance with the sea tyrant.

What became of Goethe's belief in still is spun on the same wheel as 430 B. C.

Peace must blossom forth from understanding with all neighbors and must be cemented by reason. It must allow every man's evolution toward a higher, nobler plane if the thread of thought to-day nation, even the smallest, to life free beside the free.

No man is so fast that he isn't occasionally loose.

EGGSHELLS STRONG.

Great End to End Pressure Required to Break Them.

Few people are aware of the wonderful provision made by nature to protect against breakage the egg of a bird, by the use of the arch.

"The fact that no man, no matter how strong he may be, is able to break a sound hen's egg by squeezing it between his hands, applying the pressure according to the axis of the egg, made me try to find out the resistance that an egg can withstand in this way," says G. Herristl, of Westerly, R. I., in describing his experiments in the Scientific American.

"Brown eggs proved stronger than white ones and broke under a pressure averaging 155 pounds, the minimum being 125 pounds and the maximum 175.

"White eggs broke under an average pressure of 112.5 pounds.

"The method employed was as follows: "The egg, setting point upward, was placed on a platform scale and pressure was applied to it by a lever and a jack. Felt seats conveniently disposed prevented the egg coming in contact with the wood.

"The shells were measured for thickness and found to be .012 inch to .014 inch. When it was considered that the average diameter of the eggs was 1½ inches, some idea may be formed of the enormous strength provided by nature."

Roof Garden of Continent.

Bolivia is the Tibet of South America. It is the highest inhabited country in the Western Hemisphere. Although only ten degrees from the equator, Bolivia is colder than Maine. It's a rich country. Think of it—you could put sixty Belgiums into Bolivia, and yet this great land has only one third of Belgium's population. Foreigners and foreign capital are now pouring into Bolivia, and her immense stores of that exceedingly precious metal, tin, promise much for the future.—World Outlook.

Dissolve a pound of washing soda in a pint of boiling water and flush sink pipes, refrigerator drain, and all set tubs at least twice a month.

The world wants peace, but Germany merely wishes a resting spell. This war should be finished while we're at it.—Savannah News.

THE STORY OF THE STAIRS

Every time you go upstairs you can test your state of health—the condition of your blood.

Do you arrive at the top of the stairs breathless and distressed? Does your heart palpitate violently? Do you have a pain in your side? Perhaps you even have to stop half way up, with limbs trembling and head dizzy, too exhausted to go further without resting. These are unfailing signs of anaemia. As soon as your blood becomes impoverished or impure the stair-case becomes an instrument of torture. When this is so you are unfit for work; your blood is watery and your nerves exhausted, you are losing the joy of an active life and paving the way for a further break-down and decline. In this condition only one thing can save you. You must put new, rich, red blood into your veins without further delay, and so build up your health anew. To get this new, rich blood, give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and they will give you new vitality, sound health, and the power to resist and throw off disease. For more than a generation this favorite medicine has been in use throughout the world and has made many thousands of weak, despondent men and women bright, active and strong.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RESTRAINT.

My heart was filled with Billingsgate
And on my fiery tongue
A scorching flame of hatred
And of fierce invective hung.

I longed to tell the country
Of my party's wrongs and woes
And to crush beneath a load of scorn
My party's hated foes.

But I heard a cry that stayed me,
A cry from the shores of France,
Where Grit and Tory side by side
Have stemmed the foe's advance.

'Twas the cry from the stout battalions
The sweat in the thick of the fight;
A cry for supports for the firing line
That conquered my petty spite.

And I swore by the land that bore me
That no bitter word of mine
Should delay the help that is called for
By the boys in the firing line.

That with charity to all my race
And bitterness to none,
I'd stand behind the gallant men
Who stand behind the gun.

Economy Sauce.

It's a wonder,
Though nothing new,
For it pads out left-overs,
And makes 'em go 'round and round.
Try it on those few peas or beans—
Just plain everyday cream sauce.
You know.

Fattening Foods.

Potatoes, cereals, bread and all starchy vegetables are fattening, but should be well chewed and tasted before swallowing. Thin, anaemic people derive much benefit from egg lemonade, or eggnogs (without alcohol) made from the yolks, which contain fat, iron and other valuable elements. Butter and olive oil are better than other fats and less likely to disturb the digestion.

Redpath SUGAR

has never been offered as "just as good" as some more famous brand; for Sixty Years it has itself been that more famous brand—and deservedly.

"Let Redpath Sweeten it." 13

2 and 5 lb. Cartons—10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.

Made in one grade only—the highest!

THAT

Holiday Trip !

Hot Weather is here, and with it comes the thought of a holiday trip, and with the holiday trip comes the thought of a suitable

Suit Case or

Club Bag

We are ready to supply you. A splendid variety here. Just what you want at the price you wish to pay.

Call and see our stock. You will find it easy choosing from our large assortment.

We pay cash for eggs

N. McGillivray

North End Store

BANK OF HAMILTON

Established 1872

Capital Authorized, $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up, - $1,000,000
Surplus, - - - - - $1,500,000

A Dollar a Week

NOT much, is it? But if you deposit that small sum in the Bank of Hamilton regularly, it will amount to almost $1,000 in 10 years. This habit once formed, is easy to continue.
Begin to-day with one dollar.

R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
PORT ELGIN BRANCH

41-C

Can you afford to be without The Times ?

Clearing Lines At Cost

The following lines of Seasonable goods will be sold at or less than cost price. . . . .

All canvas shoes, leather or rubber soled many lines in practically all sizes, men's ladies' and children's.

Your chance to Save Money

Ladies' and Misses' colored parasols below cost price.

Straw hats for every day or better wear clearing below cost.

Let us supply your wants.

Produce Wanted—Highest Price paid.

South End Store

N. McGillivray & Co.

The Port Elgin Times

MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

ADVERTISING RATES

Farms or Real Estate for Sale 50c each insertion; Miscellaneous articles, To Rent, Wanted, Lost, Found, etc., each insertion 25c. Local Readers, Notices, etc., 10c per line per insertion, 5c each subsequent insertion. Cards of thanks 50c. Legal advertising 10 and 5c a line. Black-faced type, count 2 lines for 1. Display rates, yearly contracts, 12c per inch, 6 mos. 15c per inch. In memoriam poetry 5c per line. Professional cards $5 per year in advance.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The hot weather has proved great for the haying, but it has been hard on the men in the field. Reports generally are that despite the shortage of help hay has been stored away in good style. More machinery was used, and the newer inventions are being planned to take the place of man power. A farmer who is able to equip himself with modern machinery is practically independent of the labor problem, With more machinery around him the next consideration of the farmer is that of giving it proper care when not in use. The wise farmer will see that his machinery is properly housed and greased after the season's use.

• • •

It is regrettable indeed, that some sort of observance of automobile regulations cannot be secured in Port Elgin. On Saturday night the main street is not fit to move about on. With glaring headlights facing one in all directions pedestrians cannot safely walk on the streets without bumping or stumbling into someone or something. If the council finds it difficult to arrange a set of rules it would be a good idea for them to invite some motorists to consult with them with a view to arranging some rules. Glaring lights, parking on wrong side, running on wrong side, and making sharp turns is a great nuisance in Port Elgin.

• • •

Last week The Times had a page advertisement of the William Davies Co. against a statement by O'Connor of the Labor Department that five million dollars had been made by this company off bacon in the year 1916. Whether or not this company made one or five millions in the past, the fact is, for the future, the farmers of Ontario should bestir themselves and organize. Prices of hogs should be controlled by the producer, the farmer, and not by the packer. The western farmer has blazed the trail in organization When will the Ontario man who works the land stand out for his rights ?

• • •

If the harvest, and it is large, is safely housed, without much loss, a great deal of credit will go to the women. Many farmers are receiving great help these days from their daughters and wives right in the field as well as around the home. This is not what the men themselves like to see, but the case is a strenuous one, and to their credit the women have heroically asked to assist in the field. In the haying they successfully drive the rake and assist in making coils. Last year we knew of two young girls who built every one of eighty loads of hay which were stored in a Bruce township barn. Produce is helping to win the war Without it the army cannot fight, and the women have had a hand in the heavier duties, as well as the lighter ones.

• • •

Dollar day was a big feature in Owen Sound last Thursday. The Sun came out on two occasions with 16 page papers, and many columns of advertising from the merchants. It is reported that the day was a great success, and attracted people from far and near. The automobiles are making it possible for farmers generally to go miles, and wise merchants are going far afield to entice trade to come their way. A short time ago an aggressive firm in Owen Sound sent out invitations to all the women of families where automobiles were owned, asking them to visit the city of the north and to shop at their store, offering a private parlor, toilet rooms, and the use of the telephone and rest rooms. This is a progressive idea, and one which should set small-town merchants a-thinking.

• • •

One would think by reading Toronto dailies' reports of Food Controller Hanna's meetings and ideas, that the women of the country were throwing the food out the back door as fast as the men can earn it. What's all this fol de. rol about bread-wasting, anyway ? In the average family in this country to-day the war has come to them so severely that there is scarcely any waste in their homes, and certainly none when it comes to bread and meat. The women, the thoughtful ones, who have families to look after, very properly resent this sort of goff. Let the food controller get down to work and shut off the manufacture of whiskey and liquors generally.

Here is a paragraph from the soldiers' paper, the Listening Post, which will interest the ladies: "Let us hope that after the war the simplicity and directness of army English may replace the cumbrous and involved wording of, say, the marriage ceremony. Instead of "Wilt thou have this woman," etc., what could be better than "Dating from the 3rd instant, Jane Smith is attached to Thomas Jones, for rations, duty and "discipline." Particulary note the word "discipline," please.

• • •

They are enjoying hot weather religion up in Smith's Falls. During July and August the Presbyterian and Methodist congregations unite in their service. Each pastor takes his turn in holidaying, and the members of the two churches who cannot get out of town on Sunday find they can agree to unite during the hot season. It a is convenient religion, anyway.—Winchester Press.

• • •

This nation ought to be big enough to box the ears of both its political leaders and its party heelers and all and sundry who are fooling with after war details and making useless martyrs of the brave boys serving life-sentences in the trenches —Brantford Expositor.

• • •

The new income tax gets after the man with two and three thousand dollar incomes, but does it get after, in the same degree, the organizations that reap five million dollar incomes?

• • •

The convention of Liberal members and candidates in Toronto the other week has done considerable good, in that it has stiffened up the Liberals as a whole that it is about time the constituency controlled the member and not the member or candidates the constituency. It is a weakness of both parties that any man is allowed to run off and do as he likes without consulting the people he is supposed to represent.

ACTION NEEDED

Away back in May conscription was mentioned. Three months have elapsed and still Canada is nowhere.

Some men, believed to be big men in national affairs, have "bucked," and are disposed to go their own way. Because of this, those who espoused the selective draft idea have become lukewarm, and as a result we are still marking time.

What is needed to day is action. Some men call upon the people to put the politician out of the way, but that's not so easily done. They have controlled too long in the little bickerings until to day they are lost when it comes to measuring up to the big affairs this war has brought about.

Conservatives blame the Liberals for blocking the road to compulsory service, while many Liberals blame the Conservatives, and remind them that they are in power and should proceed in a win-the-war fashion by forming a strong war cabinet.

The people of Canada want action. They are, The Times believes, prepared to stand for extreme measures In calling men to the colors, taxing wealth, and war profits, and in forcing industrial and commercial institutions to become subservient to the winning of the war.

These are things that well thinking men and women call for.

A clear-cut service is demanded. Thinking men, and women, too, know that fairness in the administration of compulsory service, in the forcing of war profiteers to disgorge, in the making of industry and commerce subservient to war purposes, and in giving a whole-souled service to the Empire, can only be done in Canada by a war cabinet of the best men of both parties, or of the best men of Canada.

This is the course demanded How long must we wait for it ? Action is needed, and at once.

The Fight For Business

Small towns are threatened with extinction, so far as general stores go, unless by good organization and business ideas the small-town stores are able to gain the support and sympathy of the community which they try to serve in a greater degree than in the past.

Brampton has a branch store of the Eaton Co., and we understand Orangeville is to get one, too. We are also told that other communities are to have one of these stores, and it may not be long before an Eaton store is established in our midst.

Commenting on the establishment of those stores The Simcoe Reformer says it promises to become to the retail mercantile trade of Ontario quite as much of a menace as is Germany to the world. It will surely be up to those whose business existence is at stake to devise ways of meeting the menace. And by co-ordinated action the retail merchants should be powerful enough to accomplish something worth while. Here is a suggestion: Why not unite on a demand on the government for a rearrangement of the business tax so that Toronto does not get it all, but that it is divided fairly ? If Simcoe sends $100,000 worth of business to Eaton's in a year, why should not that business be made to pay to Simcoe its fair share of lighting Simcoe, maintaining Simcoe's schools ? The Simcoe merchant has to pay towards these things. If a business tax at all, why not an equitable one ?

Of course the theorists will tell us that our suggestion is utterly wrong in principle. But the problem of the town and country merchant is not theoretical. It is very practical; and he wants some practical suggestion that will immediately enable him to fight the great aglomerations of capital in the city stores that propose to eliminate him from the equation.

Church Merging

The idea of combination in restraint of trade may, after all, have been the precursor of combinations in relief of religion. Already there is a well marked movement to combine churches in the smaller towns, thus making one church take the place of a number. The result is a saving in expense and an increase in power. One of the most notable examples of the application of this principle is in Bisbee, Arizona, where there were formerly twelve churches, each with its own preacher. Under the direction of the Rev. John J. Pritchard these churches were merged into one big one, known as the Union church. Other communities are adopting the idea, with great benefit to everyone. Why not ?

OBITUARY

The Park River (N. D.) Gazette, has the following:

Charles McLean, one of the old residents of Silvesta township, died at his home there on Sunday evening, July 15 at the age of 52 years He had been afflicted with pulmonary tuberculosis for several months. During the summer he spent six weeks at the sanitarium at Dunseith but finding he was receiving no benefit he returned to his home a week before his death. He was buried in the Odalen cemetery in Tiber township beside the grave of his wife who died fourteen years ago. Rev. Klendal of Adams officiated.

Mr McLean came to North Dakota from Underwood, in the spring of 1895 and purchased the farm on which he made his home until the time of his death.

He leaves four children one son, Harvey and three daughters, Marie, Lauretta and Rena He also leaves three brothers, Allan and James of Tiber township and Duncan of this city, and two sisters, who are living in Canada.

Charles McLean was a brother of Mrs Dan McLeod, of Queen Hill, and of Mrs. C W Kerr, of Kamloops, B C, formerly of Saugeen, and his wife was a daughter of Neil McDonald, of Port Elgin.

Facts Not Worth Knowing

No stepladder is needed in picking potatoes.

Aviation hasn't anything on food prices.

Goldfish are usually silent and health iest when quite damp.

Postage stamps can be moistened by leaving them out in the rain.

Never carry a pocketbook full of money as a watchcharm unless you want to have it stolen.

Getting ill is a common habit.

No census has ever been taken of cold cures

Cold can be cured by coal set on fire.

Flash Lights

The result of an election doesn't really matter if a man has the conscientious belief that he voted right anyhow.

Actions speak louder than words; that's why father has to go upstairs and shake the boy in order to get him up in time for school.

When a man gets that far away look in his eyes you can bet that your tale of woe isn't interesting him.

Folks who go out looking for sympathy all the time get nothing but that when they need help.

The safest time to give advice is when it is asked for and then it isn't always safe.

BLACKSMITHING

N. KIDT, Blacksmithing, horse-shoeing and general repairs. Tire-setting a specialty

Just the Thing for Summer Wear

Boy's khaki bloomers, in good quality denim two special lines at 90 cents and $1.25

Boy's wash suits, in tan or blue linen and striped percale, in sizes 2 to 8 years, reg. up $1.50 to clear at 98 cents.

To save those good leather boots, buy a pair of harvest shoes. We have them in all sizes.

Youth's at $1.35 per pair

Boy's at $1 65

Men's at $2.65,

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon.

Roppel Bros.

Rural phone, Underwood

Advertise it in The Times.

SPECIAL

We have a few of Dr. Pierce's Family Medical Advisors. Good cloth binding which we offer at 50 cents each while they last.

R. C. Crawford

Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent

Cow Ease . . .

Now that real hot weather has come, you find the cattle and horses suffering from attacks of flies, they cannot feed or work in peace Cow Ease gives instant relief. It keeps flies away. Horses can work better and quieter, milch cows increase flow of milk. Cow Ease pays for itself.

Half a gallon tin 60cts

Gallon tins $1.00

Paris Green and Bug Death for the potato bugs

McLAREN'S HARDWARE

WONDERFUL STUFF! LIFT OUT YOUR CORNS

Apply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

This drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have freezone have him order it for you.

HAVE YOU WEAK LUNGS?

Do colds settle on your chest or in your bronchial tubes? Do coughs hang on, or are you subject to throat troubles?

Such troubles should have immediate treatment with the rare curative powers of Scott's Emulsion to guard against consumption which so easily follows.

Scott's Emulsion contains pure cod liver oil which peculiarly strengthens the respiratory tract and improves the quality of the blood; the glycerine in it soothes and heals the tender membranes of the throat.

Scott's is prescribed by the best specialists. You can get it at any drug store.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.

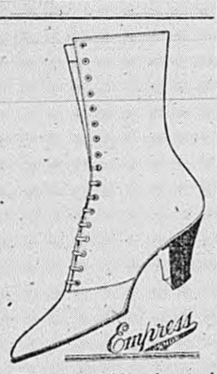
85 Years

The fact that this bank has been in business for the long period of 85 years, and has grown until its Total Resources have passed the hundred million mark, is proof of careful, conservative, and yet progressive management on the part of directors and officials. Safe banking methods appeal both to the conservative business man and the savings bank depositor. 65

The Bank of NovaScotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 110,000,000

PORT ELGIN BRANCH.
A. L. Wyant, Manager



This shoe will be advertised from Coast to Coast in Canada as "Empress" Shoes have been for years, and each season adds newer lines and greater beauty to this well-known shoe for women. Always above the others. We are agents.

James George & Son

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS
To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Kawartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourists tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares, with liberal stop overs.

GET YOUR TICKET IN ADVANCE

J. S. Cameron, Agent, Port Elgin, Both telephones.

ARMORED VESSELS

How the Great Steel Plates That Protect Them Are Made.

A SEVERE TEST OF SKILL

The Various Processes That Produce the Conflicting Properties Necessary In These Modern Projectile Resisting Warship Jackets.

Only armored warships could live in a naval battle with modern big gun projectiles in use, and hence the making of armor plate has become a science. The manufacture of armor plate has developed considerably in recent years, and in no branch of the steel industry is there greater opportunity for engineering and mechanical skill, coupled with metallurgical knowledge, than in the operations of forging and rolling, followed by the exact heat treatment essential to produce the almost conflicting properties necessary in modern armor.

The plate must be hard, glass hard, to resist penetration by heavy projectiles moving at tremendous velocities, yet tough and fibrous enough to take up the momentum without cracking or distortion. Mechanically, then, the plate must have an extremely hard surface and a fibrous backing. These requirements were attained in part by the old compound armor. Molten steel was poured on to a wrought iron plate and cooled. The slab was then reheated, forged and rolled to the required dimensions. If the operations were successfully carried out the line of demarcation was scarcely visible.

Recently a modification of this process was introduced to cheapen and render less tedious the production of armor. A layer of hard steel was poured into a cooled mold, the underside quickly setting. On the still fluid or pasty surface a thick layer of soft steel was poured. By careful manipulation the union of the surfaces was almost complete, and it was impossible to detect the break in composition on viewing the fractured section. This method of manufacture was undoubtedly an improvement on the old compound method.

The increasing size, velocity and hardness of modern armor piercing projectiles have necessitated the introduction of the modern armor. The process of manufacture essentially consists in case hardening to a depth of about two inches the surface of a homogeneous tough nickel chrome steel. Special air or self hardening nickel and more complex steels are used for lighter armor, gun shields and cast armored structures.

The steel is made in Siemens furnaces and carefully cast into ingots up to eighty tons in weight. These ingots are then slabbed under powerful hydraulic presses (18,000 tons) or rolled direct to the required dimensions, depending on the power of the mills and appliances. During the rolling operation, which lasts about an hour the slab is reversed and inverted to attain uniformity of working, and scale is removed by wood fagots and water jets. After rolling the plate is usually quenched.

The next operation is that of case-hardening, and in this two plates are put face to face, separated by a layer of the carburizing reagent if it be solid, or if gaseous hydrocarbons be used the plates are slightly separated, to allow free passage for the hardening gases, by bricks arranged in rows. The plates are maintained at redness in a car furnace for three weeks and withdrawn after the hardening carbon has penetrated to the required depth. The plates are thus carburized and so made capable of being hardened, but they are not yet actually hard. At this stage all holes are drilled and plugged, and any bending or machining necessary is carried out.

From this point onward the treatments differ. Some makers insist on heating and quenching in oil or water to remove any coarse structure that may have been formed during the long annealing while carburizing. The next essential operation is that of hardening, and this is usually carried out in one of two ways. Either the plate is uniformly heated to the hardening temperature and quenched by a series of water jets playing on the upper surface with sufficient force to prevent the formation of steam or by a process known as "differential quenching," by which the carburized surface is heated to a temperature from which it will harden and the under side kept well below, so attaining a gradual fall in temperature from the top to the bottom. The whole plate is then immersed in water, the hotter surface alone being hardened, while the bark is toughened. Further mechanical operations can be carried out only by grinding or cutting with oxyacetylene, as the plate has now undergone the treatment conferring maximum hardness.

In resume, it will be noted that there are three distinct operations in modern methods of manufacture—the mechanical working of the plate to the required dimensions, the carburization of the surface, quenching the carburized surface to harden it. These operations call for exact manipulation, supervision and control, for the skill of the engineer and metallurgist may be put to the severest tests, not of the laboratory or the testing machine, but out in the "gray mists," when failure of a unit may imperil the safety and cohesion of the whole.—Chambers' Journal.

One that confounds good and evil is an enemy to good.—Burke.

SAVE THE TREES.

The White Pine Blister Rust and a Warning and an Appeal.

The American Forestry association has issued a warning and appeal for co-operation in fighting the disease known as the white pine blister rust that threatens the destruction of all the white pine and other five leaved pine trees in the United States.

This disease has already appeared in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Minnesota and in Quebec and Ontario.

There is no known cure for it. It kills the white pines infected, and it spreads steadily. The spores or seeds are blown from diseased pines to currant and gooseberry bushes. They germinate on the leaves of these bushes. The leaves then produce millions of spores or seeds of the disease, which are blown by the wind from the bushes to the pines, and these, even those several miles distant from the nearest bushes, are infected, become diseased and die.

The white pines in New England are worth $75,000,000, in the lake states $90,000,000, in western states $60,000,000 and in the national forests $30,000,000, or a total of $261,000,000.

Unless the ravages of the white pine blister rust are stopped these pines will be destroyed.

The American Forestry association urges people in all the regions where the disease has been discovered to destroy at once all currant and gooseberry bushes, diseased pines and others exposed to infection. This will help stop the spread of the disease.

The great forests of dead and dying chestnut in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts stand today mute but convincing witnesses to the fact that such diseases must be checked, if at all, in their early stages.

The pine growth of this country is far more valuable than the chestnut ever was, and the damage the blister rust may do is accordingly greater than the injury that has been or can be wrought by the chestnut blight. But experience proves that the ravages of the blister rust can be, if taken in season, stopped much easier than the chestnut blight. In a number of places where started it has been nearly or entirely eradicated. May the pine forests of America be saved and not neglected as the chestnut until it is too late!—Tree Talk.

Musical Vibrations.

We can take the scale of vibrations, beginning with the shortest wave lengths that have been measured—the gamma rays given off by radium, which are only about one one-hundredth of a millimeter long—and ending with the longest known electromagnetic waves, 10,000 meters or more in length, and arrange them in a scale of octaves like the musical scale. In the Scientific Monthly Professor David Vance Guthrie of the Louisiana State university says they will cover just about forty-eight octaves, of which the rays that are visible to our eyes comprise but one.

Wrens Good Insect Eaters.

The wren, according to A. A. Saunders of Norwalk, Conn., is a valuable and interesting bird. It has a cheerful song, and during the summer months it sings almost incessantly. Its food is largely insects. A pair of wrens will work from daylight to dark during long June days gathering caterpillars and other harmful insects to feed their young. I have known them to visit the nest with insects on an average of three times in five minutes. The number of insects destroyed by a pair of wrens and their young in a season is enormous.—Tree Talk.

The Constitution.

The constitution is either a superior paramount law, unchangeable by ordinary means, or it is on a level with ordinary legislative acts and, like other acts, is alterable when the legislature shall be pleased to alter it. * * * Certainly all those who have framed written constitutions contemplate them as forming the fundamental and paramount law of the nation, and consequently the theory of every such government must be that an act of the legislature repugnant to the constitution is void.—Chief Justice John Marshall.

Judging a Potato.

A good potato should be firm and crisp when cut, and a thin cross section when held between the eyes and the light should show a relatively uniform distribution of starch throughout its whole area, as opposed to a large, translucent, watery central area, which denotes a lack of starch in this portion of the tuber. The even distribution of starch insures greater uniformity in cooking and in texture of the flesh when cooked.

Useful Curtain Suggestion.

The small metal office clips so handy for keeping papers pinned together will be found exceedingly useful for clipping up the curtains at night. The advantage over pins in preventing curtains from blowing out the screenless windows at night is that the clips leave no telltale holes.

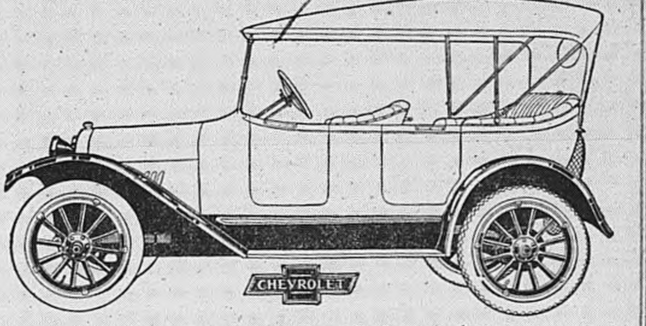
The National Hymn.

"The Star-Spangled Banner" is honored as the national air not by act of congress, but by regulations of the military services, which prescribe that it shall be played at colors and retreat.

Drops of dew refresh the faded flowers; so do kind words cheer the aching heart.

The Car De Luxe

Of the small car class.



Series 490A CHEVROLET $750.00

A really beautiful small car, equipped with every desirable appointment for comfort and convenience.

Note these exclusive feature

Yacht line body.
Finished in rich Chevrolet green.
Demountable rims
Sloping windshield
One-man mohair tailored top.
New design front and rear fender skirts
Non-Skid tires on the rear wheels.
Electric Lighting and starting system
Three speeds
Oil indicator
Robe Rail Foot Rail
Large, handy pockets in all doors
Hand pads on doors
Tire carrier designed with tail lamp and a license bracket attachment.

—SOLD BY—

POWER & COULTER, Port Elgin

CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE
Stratford, Ontario

Ontario's Best Business College
FALL TERM FROM SEPT. 4TH

Commercial, Shorthand and Telegraphy departments.

We have thorough courses, experienced instructors, and we place graduates in positions. The Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalog.

D. A. McLACHLAN, PRINCIPAL

Eleven Paisley pupils wrote on the High School Entrance all being successful.

DECLINED $7,500 SALARY TO SERVE PUBLIC FREE

MR. JOHN G. KENT, a man of wealth and extensive business interests, who has refused to accept any remuneration whatever for his services as General Manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, preferring to serve the public free of charge. He is President of the Toronto Board of Trade and has been on the Exhibition Board since 1905, always showing a close interest in the work. He was President in 1912-13, the two best years in the history of the institution. Mr. Kent is head of the Boy Scouts in Toronto and is identified with many philanthropic enterprises. Long and continued illness has compelled Dr. Orr, Manager since 1903, to seek a long rest.

Western Fair

London, Canada

Sept. 7th to Sept. 15th, 1917

1867-"A half Century of Success"-1917

The Great Agricultural Exhibition of Western Ontario

$32,000.00 in Prizes and Attractions

A very interesting programme, including Military and other features TWICE DAILY

FIREWORKS EACH NIGHT
TWO SPEED EVENTS DAILY

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES

Prize Lists, Entry Forms and all Information from the Secretary.

Lieut.-Col. W. M. Gartshore, President
A. M. Hunt, Secretary

TIVERTON

(Intended for last week)

Last Wednesday afternoon the Bible class of Knox church here had their photo taken on the church grounds. Although the event had been postponed on account of the rain the day before there were only about one half of the members present. This was rather disappointing since a picture of the whole class was expected.

On the same afternoon the whole congregation gathered at the lake to enjoy their annual picnic. Everyone voted the picnic a real success in every way.

The Methodist church held their picnic on Tuesday afternoon. Although the weather was unfavorable the picnic was enjoyed by all.

The Agricultural Society held their annual garden party in their hall on the evening of July 23. Needless to say a splendid programme was enjoyed under the presidency of Mr. Hugh McDougall.

Miss Lottie Cartledge of Stratford, is visiting Mrs. D. Nelson.

Mr. Ollie Catta has opened up the blacksmith shop, formerly occupied by William Dobbs.

Miss M. McNeil and Miss McKinnon spent a day last week berry picking.

The many friends of Murdoch McNeil are pleased to see that he is able to be around again.

Campers are still continuing to come to Inverhuron. This speaks well for the place.

Mr. and Mrs. Burnham have moved to the village for a few months.

The Times, as good as a letter from home. Send it to your friends.

The T. Eaton Co. have established a branch store at [illegible]. Another store will likely be established in Orangeville, and other small towns are being looked over. The old idea expressed by some merchants this way, "Well, if they want my goods they know where to find me," is a losing game nowadays.

A Handy Thing

The handiest thing in the world is a wrist watch, and especially so in the summer weather. You'll be interested in looking at them.

Let us show you one of our fine line of clocks

Rowlands
The Jeweller

EATS DIRT
GILLETT'S
LYE
CLEANS DISINFECTS

AT A CHINESE INN.

The Scene in the Interior of the One Roomed Mud Hut.

The building was a long, one-storeyed mud hut, with thatched roof. We entered. Behold what the frontiersman had created! The long room was the scene of homely industry. From the centre rafter hung a big oil lamp, shedding its rays over a patriarchal family as busy as a hive of bees. By the clay stove sat the grandfather feeding the fire with twigs and tending a brood of children playing on a dirt floor packed hard, swept clean. From one corner came the merry whir of grinding millstones as a blindfolded donkey walked round and round, while a woman in red with a wonderful headdress gathered up the heaps of yellow cornmeal that oozed from the gray stones. More women in red threw the bright meal high in the air, winnowing it of its chaff; others leaned over clay mortars, pounding condiments with stone pestles.

Men were hurrying here and there with firewood, cooking for the travelers. One end of the room was reserved for these wayfarers, but the k'ang at the other end was divided into sections. From each rafter over each section swung quaint little cradles. In each cradle was a little brown baby, each baby tended by a larger child. Far away from the loud clamor of the western world we fell asleep in a clean inner room, to the soft sound of swinging cradles and grinding millstones.—Atlantic Monthly.

THE NEW FRENCH PANTHEON.

(New York Tribune.)

Amongst the phrases destined to survive this war there is only one which promises to rank in expressiveness and vitality with "As cruel as a Boche." That is the phrase "As stupid as a German." Sooner or later the typical, spectacular movement of the Kaiser's Sacred Cow, the Great General Staff, turns out to be a blunder. The invasion of Belgium brings England into the war, and Zeppelin baby-killers, mobilized to discourage her people, rise up a multitude of conquering soldiers. The United States, flouted as negligible, is at last drawn by the ruthless submarine campaign into the circle of Germany's foes, and the nervous bluffings in her press show how surely she regrets it. Immense devastation of Northern France, from the killing of fruit trees to the swish violation of graves, all supposed to further the process of bleeding a people white, serves but to kindle new fire in the veins of an avenging host. And now in its turn comes the German's due reward for that fine flower of German stupidity, the persistent demolition of Rheims.

"The Germans without reason," runs a late despatch from France, "continue to bombard the town of Rheims, on which 2,000 shells were fired today." Had the Boche gunners heard perhaps the news from Paris, that the French Government has determined not to restore the cathedral, but to hang up in its ruins the battle flags of the allies and to dedicate it forever as a pantheon for the unknown dead of all the armies fighting in France? Surely there could be no outcome of German stupidity so harmful to Germany as this, and one could well understand how the Kaiser would now only be too glad to blot out by complete destruction all evidence of his original mistake. For this pantheon will hit his country hard when peace comes.

The Kaiser must know, what the dullest schoolboy could tell him, that the most favorable peace is going to mean a heavy burden to him and his people, that the sooner French hatred dies down the better it will be for him and them, and that he must think of German trade, to say nothing of German comfort, in a thousand phases. There will be monuments all over France to keep hatred alive, but consider the overwhelming, world wide significance of this one, reared, as it were, by the Kaiser himself. The stupidity of it the illimitable, ineffably German stupidity of it! To have secured with their own hands the creation of the one everlasting reproach, the one undying appeal to the imagination of mankind against the German spirit!

"I will not call him king," said Joan the Maid of the Dauphin, "until he shall have been anointed and crowned at Rheims." On that talismanic point France was with her, and to this day Republican France preserves in its soul a kindred legendary emotion for the most renowned of all her fanes. Upon her Pantheon at Paris she has inscribed her tribute—"Aux grands Hommes la Patrie reconnaissante"—and before its portals she has placed "Le Penseur," an image of thought. This new pantheon she gives not to her great men, nor to her men of fame, but to the unknown dead who have saved her, and before their shrine the Maid will sit bestride her charger, a symbol of the heart, of all that most swiftly and most simply touches every type of man.

We are swayed by our heart. Long after the cold-blooded theorist, working out on paper the artificial solidarity which he mistakes for the true brotherhood of man, shall have demonstrated to his own satisfaction the absolute necessity of "making friends with Germany," Rheims will give pause to all men who can feel as well as think. And the Kaiser will have done it. Not until he and his kind, he and his millions, have done penance in sackcloth and ashes will the penalty of their blasphemous destruction lose a tithe of its weight.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Dear Sirs,—I can recommend MINARD'S LINIMENT for Rheumatism and Sprains, as I have used it for both, with excellent results.

Yours truly,
T. B. LAVERS,
St. John

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS
Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.
Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Consultation Free
DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.
Please Mention This Paper.

Minard's Liniment for sale everywhere.

TRADE BRIEFS.

The city walls of Canton, China, are to be removed and roads and tramways leading out of the city built.

Numerous kinds of American package groceries are on sale at St. Etienne, France, but there is still an opening for the introduction of pickles, jams, sauces and fancy crackers.

Swiss merchants are in the market for children's washable cotton clothing. Importations from Germany have stopped, and local manufacturers do not seem to be able to supply clothing of as good quality as that formerly imported.

American automobile buses have been put in operation with success at Merida, Yucatan.

Plans are being made to clear vast tracts of land in the Straits Settlements for the production of bananas.

Moss is being used in America as a substitute for cotton in articles that require packing and filling, such as cushions and mattresses. Louisiana supplies most of the moss used in this way. The selling price ranges from five and a half to six cents a pound. Last year's output had an estimated value of $2,000,000.

Iron working machinery is needed at Genoa, Italy.

There is a market for typewriter accessories at Bilbao, Spain.

Nail making machines, equipment for manufacturing wire for nails and nail wire are in demand at Alexandria, Egypt.

A firm at Grosby, Caucasus, Russia, would like to represent American manufacturers of steel, iron, shoes, dry goods, leather supplies, gas tubing and rope.

There is a market for roofing materials at Havre, France.

A company Bahai, Brazil, has asked for catalogues of American furniture.

Incinerators of American make are in demand at Sao Paulo, Brazil.

Shanghai, China, presents a good market for mineral lubricating oils and greases.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours' illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevents stomach and bowel troubles, or if trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CULINARY DELICACY.

Soy Bean Which Comes from China, is a Meal in Itself.

For full particulars concerning the soy bean, says the New York Evening Post, it would perhaps, be best to consult the natives of China and Japan or else the Italian army. It seems like a long jump from the soy bean fields of China to the battle-front of the Isonzo, but that is the route that the only respectable lot of soy beans yet shipped to the United States has taken. It appears that the soy bean, despite the fact that it is the world's champion all-around food, did not leap into instant popularity on its arrival here, and so in the course of events it was shipped over to Italy to nourish the boys in the trenches.

Not only is the soy bean the world's champion all-around food—a dish, in fact, that makes a laughing-stock of our elaborate course dinners, since it is everything from soup to nuts, all rolled into a bean—but it is, so far as is known, the only bean in captivity that grows whiskers, and red ones, at that. Unfortunately, the soy beans selected for exhibition by the department of agriculture have all been shaved, and look as smooth-skinned and sleek as any bean ever raised in Boston town, but, for all that, in their natural state the soy beans are found dwelling two to five in a pod, and "covered with a stiff reddish hair."

There are, by actual count, forty-nine varieties of the soy, or soja, bean, and these forty-nine varieties could easily be grown here and used to keep the great American people alive and well and out of the poor-house, whether meal and eggs and other popular fodder went soaring or not. New York, in fact, has already taken a fancy to one of the innumerable roles in which the red whiskered bean of China is wont to masquerade. It's the juice of the soy bean that forms the basis of Worcestershire sauce—that indispensable relish which, we all insist on having in restaurants, though seldom at home.

And that isn't the only guise in which we know the soy bean. Persons who patronize Chinese or almost Chinese restaurants know that there is an indefinable something that distinguishes everything the Chinese cook. It is the soy bean, the sauce from which is put into nearly everything produced in a Chinese kitchen.

But soy sauce is only a side-line compared with the other activities of the soy bean. Under treatment, the soy bean can be made into butter, milk, oil, breakfast-food cereal, crackers, cakes, bread, muffins, pancakes and a kind of April-fool coffee, which, being free from injurious caffein, should be just the thing for the nerves of the tired business man. Besides these things, there are delicious dishes to be had from roasting, baking, broiling, frying, stewing, boiling and hashing the soy bean. At least, they must be delicious, since they're served to keep one of the oldest civilizations in the world alive these many years and have contributed largely to "the endurance and strength of the Japanese and Chinese soldiers and athletes."

STARTERS FOR FORD CARS
Guaranteed to start any Ford car while sitting in seat, without having to get out, perhaps in mud or slush, to crank it. Also does away with the danger of getting arm hurt by engine backfiring. Price only $18 on receipt of which Starter will be shipped, with express charges prepaid, with full directions for installing. Representatives wanted all over Canada. Address
THE MILLS SALES CO., Box 344, TORONTO, ONT.

Source of Future Iron.

That iron is the very basis of our industrial civilization will be admitted by the thoughtful, and many of our greater supplies of iron ore are being rapidly depleted because of the increased per capita consumption of iron the world over, an increase which is destined to be greater in the future when the races in Asia and Africa increase their consumption and decreasing reserves have often in the past, particularly about the beginning of this century, been used to create a scare, on the ground that our supplies of usable ore were being so rapidly depleted that their exhaustion would occur within two or three generations.

This is a preposterous point of view, because as we lower the percentage of iron in the rock, which we call "ore," the quantity of such ore increases at a rate out of all proportion to the decrease in iron content, and as we use leaner and leaner ores technical improvements will be made which will minimize any tendency to increased [illegible] of production. The same thing [illegible] happened in gold, silver, copper and other ores, and to-day copper ores are being worked with only 1.5 per cent. of copper in them.—Metallurgical Engineering.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

BELIEF IN SORCERY.

Spirits Thought to Haunt Trees, Mountains and Streams.

To the natives of Korea the world is populous with active and malevolent beings who are ready at any moment to fall upon them in wrath, according to a statement made by Dr. I. M. Casanowicz, assistant curator of Old World archaeology of the United States National Museum at Washington concerning the paraphernalia of a Korean sorceress now deposited in the museum collections.

Dr. Casanowicz says the Koreans believe that these beings or spirits haunt every tree, mountain and watercourse; are on every roof, fireplace and beam and infest even their chimneys, living rooms and kitchens; that they beset them at home and waylay them when abroad. They seem to be everywhere at all times and make their lives miserable.

To their influence the Koreans attribute every ill, all bad luck, official malevolence, loss of power or position and especially sickness. The natives divide these countless legions of spirits into two main classes: Demons consisting of self-existent malicious spirits of departed impoverished persons who died in distress, and spirits whose natures are partly kindly, which include the ghosts of prosperous and good people, but even the latter appear to be easily offended and extraordinary capricious.

To cope with these two forms of spirits and be assured of a little peace and quiet the Koreans have two classes of sorcerers, or as they call them, "shamans;" the Pansu and the Mutang. Both classes are mediators between the people and the spirits, but they bear little relation to each other. The former are "fortune-tellers" and the latter are the "deceiving crowd," or "bad lot." In this connection Dr. Casanowicz said:

The office of the Pansu is restricted to blind men, perhaps owing to the common belief among primitive peoples that those who have been deprived of physical sight have been given an inner spiritual vision. The Mutang is always a woman, generally from the lower classes and of bad repute, and her calling is considered the very lowest in the social scale. While the Pansu is, as it were, born or made by dint of his loss of eyesight, the Mutang enters upon her office in consequence of a "supernatural call," consisting in the assurance of demoniacal possession, the demon being supposed to have become her double and to have superimposed his personality upon hers. The "possession" is often accompanied by hysterical and pathological symptoms.

"The spirit may seize any woman, maid or wife, rich or poor, plebeian or patrician, and compel her to serve him, and on receiving the "call of the spirit" a woman will break every tie of custom and relationship, leave home and family to become henceforth a social outcast, so that she is not even allowed to live within the city walls. But notwithstanding her low social status her services are in constant demand.

"In traveling through the country the Mutang or sorceress is constantly to be seen going through the various musical and dancing performances in the midst of a crowd in front of a house where there is sickness. And at the close of the nineteenth century the fees annually paid in Korea to the sorcerers were estimated at $750,000.

"The Pansu acts as master of the spirits, having gained by his potent formulae and ritual an ascendancy over them. By his spells he can direct them, drive them out and even bury them. The Mutang is supposed to be able to influence them with her friendship with them. She has to play to them, and coax them to go. By her performances she puts herself en rapport with the spirits and is able to ascertain their will and to name the ransom for which they will release the victim who is under torment.

"More varied than the functions of the Pansu are the pacifications and propitiations, called kauts or kuts, performed by the Mutang. The kaut may be carried out either at the house of the patient or at the home of the Mutang, or at some shrine or temple, called tang, dedicated to some spirits, which are seen on the hillside in Korea. If, as is occasionally the case, the Mutang belongs to a noble family, she is allowed by her family to ply her trade only in her own house. Those who require her services send the required fee and the necessary offerings and the ceremony is performed by the Mutang in her own house or at the tang.

"Her equipment consists of a number of dresses, some of them very costly; a drum, shaped like an hourglass, about four feet high, copper cymbals, a copper gong, a copper rod with small bells or tinklers suspended from it by copper chains, a pair of telescoping baskets, strips of silk and paper banners which float around her as she dances; fans, umbrellas, wands and images of men and animals."

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

MOTHER GOOSE ON FOOD CONTROL.

Jack Sprat would eat no fat;
His wife would eat no lean,
So rather than have any argument over it the Food Controller put them both on a diet of bran muffins.

Sing, sing, what shall I sing?
The cat ran away with the pudding bag string.
"I haven't the heart to ask for any meat these days," said he.

Hickety, pickety, my black hen,
She lay good eggs for gentlemen.
Gentlemen come every day
And make a careful, detailed record of her output for the national food census.

To market, to market
To buy a fat pig!
Home again, home again
With some much less expensive but equally nourishing cereals.

When I was a little boy I lived by myself,
And all the bread and cheese I got I put upon the shelf
Until suddenly I realized that I might be prosecuted for food hoarding.

Old Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard
To get her poor dog a bone;
But when she got there
She found that the bone had been used by Miss Hubbard, her daughter, in making a tasty dish from yesterday's left overs.

—New York Sun.

"Do you think your father will object to my marrying you?" "I don't think so. He has just received the bills of my new spring outfit."—Detroit Free Press.

Make All Your Preserves with

PRESERVING LABELS FREE
Send red ball trade-mark cut from a bag or carton to Atlantic Sugar Refineries Limited
MONTREAL

Lantic Sugar
"Pure and Uncolored"
Pure Cane. Fine Granulation. Order by name from your grocer.
10, 20 & 100-lb. sacks—2 & 5-lb. cartons

SUNLIGHT AND SOIL.

Causes of the Difference of Color in Foliage and Flowers.

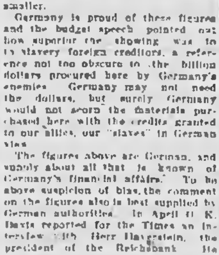
It is sunlight that chiefly causes the difference in the color of the foliage and flowers of plants. The foliage and flowers of plants absorb sun rays of certain colors and reject others, and this it is that makes the flowers take on their proper colors.

We know that the character of the soil and possibly a difference in climate may cause flowers to change their colors. Some wild flowers of New Jersey are of quite a different shade of color from the same flowers in Illinois, the character of the soil causing the flowers to change their selection of the sun's rays, and thus the color of the flower is changed.

To prove that the character of the soil may change the color of flowers take any of the pink flowering varieties of Hydrangea hortensis, repot the plant, carefully washing away the old soil, and replace it in soil in which alum has been incorporated. The proper proportion is half a pound of alum broken into pieces the size of a hickory nut to each bushel of soil. In this soil the plants, instead of producing pink flowers, as formerly, will produce flowers of blue.

New shades of flowers are produced by crossing one color with another, somewhat as an artist mixes paints to obtain desired shades and colors, but with far more trouble and far less accuracy. Sometimes on the same stem flowers of different colors are found due to the hybridization or to freak of nature, the tendency to break away from the established type. In nature nothing stands still. It is either progression or retrogression.

The range of color for each species seems to be confined within certain limits, through the hybridizer is gradually extending these limits. Yellow, white and purple are the commonest colors in wild flowers in the order named. Yellow is the simplest and most primitive color and blue the latest and most highly evolved.—Exchange.



German Finance

(New York Times.)

Saturday's cablegrams brought the result of the sixth German loan and the announcement of the ninth German credit. The latest loan produced $13,120,000,000 marks. The previous credits voted were around 50,000,000,000 marks and the credit at present asked is for 15,000,000,000 marks. To appreciate that burden it is necessary to recall the budget statement for 1917. There was a deficit requiring 3,566,000,000 marks to balance the extraordinary expenses, and 1,250,000,000 to balance the ordinary budget. New taxes were announced, and the margin upon bank loans to facilitate subscriptions to the new imperial loans was reduced from 25 to 15 per cent. Even in ordinary times the German budget was customarily balanced by borrowing. Now Germany is borrowing to pay interest. Of each new loan something like a fifth is now absorbed on interest account, and that fraction will not grow smaller.

Germany is proud of these figures and the budget speech pointed out how superior the showing was to its slavery foreign creditors, a reference not too obscure to the billion dollars procured here by Germany's enemies. Germany may not need the dollars, but surely Germany would not scorn the materials purchased here with the credits granted to our allies, our "slaves" in German view.

The figures above are German, and supply about all that is known of Germany's financial affairs. To be above suspicion of bias, the comment on the figures also is best supplied by German authorities. In April H. K. Davis reported for the Times an interview with Herr Havenstein, the president of the Reichsbank. He thought that the limit of Germany's financial capacity would be reached when its interest charge absorbed its total annual increase of wealth. He believed that a debt of one hundred billion marks would bring Germany to the point of collapse. As the interest Germany already pays exceeds the limit which Herr Havenstein set as impossible to be reached because victory would be won previously, the present stage of hostilities must be included as a part of the financial picture.

On the surface German complacency is justified. No war boom surpasses hers. Her industries are prosperous, and her savings bank deposits increase. But all German accounts are in paper, and the paper is not good outside Germany. The mark is at a discount of over 40 per cent. in neighboring neutral countries, and soon may not pass at all. As Germany prints her own marks, there is no reason why the supply should not equal the demand. But [illegible] beginning to spend gold abroad. That is the official report. All through the war Germany has been as miserly with gold as generous with paper. In the speech announcing the new credit Count Roden said: "Gold in the form of jewelry and coins must be handed to the Reichsbank." The reason for the order is that the Reichsbank within a fortnight reported the first loss of gold since the war. It was only 76,000,000 marks, less than $20,000,000. But why was it parted with? The customary explanation is that it was desirable to support the bank's ratio of exchange. But what does Germany care for exchange if it can buy with printed money? And how far would that trifling sum go in supporting billions of marks afloat? It is equally easy to imagine that Germany needed something which paper marks would not buy, and had no option but to part with gold.

So long as Germany held her gold she published her iron and steel statistics. She was as proud of them as of her swelling debt. They furnished proof of the German will to conquer, and bounded up faster than the prices of her industrials in the illicit market for them. But for recent months the figures have not been available. It is as disturbing almost as would be the suppression of the bank statement. Perhaps labor power is failing. Perhaps the gold went for some indispensable alloy. Be the reason what it may, the world will watch the German gold stock even more closely than it watches the bank reports.

Ambassador Gerard shrewdly remarked in this city that the Reichsbank and the war loan banks do not make their reports on the same day. The Reichsbank notes are secured by gold, but the provincial banks state their accounts simply in marks. There is no means of knowing whether the currency of Germany is Reichsbank notes or war loan notes. When the Reichsbank wishes to make a good statement it calls in its notes from the provincial banks and issues to them war loan notes. A few days later the process is reversed and the ratio of the Reichsbank suffers, with nobody the wiser.

It staggers credulity to believe that Germany can buy the materials it needs with paper marks, or that it would dare to part with gold enough to buy them. If the war loan banks' operations are intelligible at all, all Germany is enslaved to the government financially as well as politically. If the war loans are repudiated, every German will be beggared. If the war loan interest is paid—the principal cannot be paid in hundreds of years—it will absorb the labor of every able-bodied German to support the others in Government institutions as wards of the State.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Welland Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

WANTED—A GENERAL SERVANT for only two in family. Apply, 24 St. Mathew's Ave., Hamilton, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

THE SAFE WAY TO SEND MONEY by mail is by Dominion Express Money Order.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia

SOME GOOD SALADS.

BANANA AND APPLE SALAD.

Three bananas, 4 apples, ½ cupful of peanut butter, ½ cupful of French dressing, 4 cupfuls of shredded lettuce.

Line a bowl with lettuce. Slice bananas and apples, mix and put on lettuce. Mix peanut butter with the dressing and pour over.

SPINACH AND EGG SALAD.

Two cupfuls of cold boiled spinach, 3 hard-boiled eggs, 4 cupfuls of lettuce, 2 teaspoonfuls of salt, 4 tablespoonfuls of chopped peppers or parsley, ½ cupful of mayonnaise.

Add the salt and half the mayonnaise to the chopped spinach. Mix well and take a spoonful and cover the yolks. Then roll in finely-chopped whites of eggs. Sprinkle with peppers or parsley. Serve on the shredded lettuce with mayonnaise between balls.

BEAN SALAD.

Mix cold baked beans with shredded lettuce and hard-boiled eggs chopped separately. Serve with French dressing. The whites may be omitted and served as a garnish.

BEET SALAD.

Mix diced cooked beets with shredded red cabbage and cold cooked flaked fish which has been marinated in beet vinegar. Serve on lettuce with French dressing, seasoned highly with cayenne, and garnish with sliced hard-boiled eggs.

Rosy Cheeks.

To have them.
Drink rivers of water.
Learn to breathe deeply.
Walk often and joyously.
Wearing sensible heels.
Keep the body free of waste.
Think cheerful, clean, healthful thoughts.

Not by flattering our appetites, no, by awakening the heroic that slumbers in every heart can any religion find followers.—Carlyle.

They tell us that women are as big a puzzle as ever, but nowadays it is getting so you can see through them.—Pensacola News.

Hot Weather is a Joy to the man or woman who is properly nourished with a light, easily digested food. The food problem in Summer time, war time, or any old time, is a simple one for the housewife who knows Shredded Wheat Biscuit and the many delicious, nutritious dishes that can be made with it. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is 100 per cent. whole wheat fully complying with all government requirements in purity and cleanliness. Two or three Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk will fully nourish and satisfy the average person in hot weather, and the cost is only a few cents.

Made in Canada.

WILL SHOOT THE MALCONTENTS WHO CAUSED RUSSIAN REVERSE

Premier and Gen. Korniloff Adopt Drastic Rules to Punish the Traitors.

Petrograd Cable—One of the first results of the Russian insurrection has been a general agitation for a restoration of the death penalty for insubordination in the army, and for treasonable conduct on the part of agitators. General Korniloff, commander on the southwest front, has issued orders to fire on deserters and troops refusing to obey orders. Premier Kerensky has sanctioned the effort to restore discipline. Many Maximalists, to whose agitation the demoralization of the troops is directly attributed, have been arrested.

RETREAT NEAR A RIOT.

Copenhagen Cable—A semi-official German report describes as a striking panorama the retreat of the Russian armies in Galicia. Retiring columns, stretching to the horizon, can plainly be observed from numerous vantage points. The retreat occasionally degenerates into a full rout, particularly under the influence of the Austro-German field guns, which are abreast of the infantry vanguards and dash forward to a hilltop, from which they pour a demoralizing fire into the masses crowded in the roads. Additional quantities of munitions, provisions and six heavy guns were captured. Another report says that airplanes heavily bombarded the station at Monasterzyska and the new road for the Russian troops south of the point from which regular communication has been severed.

NEW BALTIC CHIEF.

Petrograd Cable—Rear Admiral Razvozoff has been appointed commander-in-chief of all the Russian naval forces in the Baltic.

The newspapers Monday announced that Rear-Admiral Verdervski, commander of the Baltic fleet, had been arrested for communicating a secret Government telegram to soldiers' committees.

HUGE CREDIT FOR WAR AIMS WAS CARRIED

Chancellor Law's Statement On Finances of Great Britain.

LOOKS FOR U.S. AID

Sees Resources of New Ally as Big Force for Entente.

(Reuter Despatch.)

London Cable—In moving a vote of credit of £650,000,000 sterling, Right Hon. A. Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that it was larger by £150,000,000 than any previous vote. The average daily expenditure out of the last vote of credit exceeded the estimate by £1,400,000 daily. The estimate was £5,411,000 daily, whereas for 112 days of the financial year the daily expenditure was £6,795,000.

The increases were under the following heads: Army, navy and munitions, half million pounds daily; advances to Allies and Dominions, half million daily; miscellaneous, three hundred thousand daily.

Mr. Bonar Law said that he was somewhat disappointed that despite the entry of America our advances to the allies had increased.

"We have held throughout," he said, "that the allies were one, and that the money spent on them was spent on ourselves. The burden we assumed was great and evidenced the unselfishness, and that we are not fighting for ourselves alone."

He was satisfied that the United States would deal with this question in the same spirit, realizing that the cause of the Allies was one, and that we relied upon receiving in the United States resources necessary to pay for supplies of all kinds for the Allies.

The total advances to the Allies and dominions were £1,025,000,000, but the total advances to the dominions were only £146,000,000.

Part of the increased army expenditure, Mr. Law said, was due to the fact that we had made greater payment towards India for services connected with the war, because a larger force had been got from India than expected when the budget estimate was framed. The expenditure on aeroplanes had also increased.

Mr. Law explained that the daily increase in expenditure, apart from loans to the Allies and allowing for expenditure which will subsequently be repaid, was £300,000. Evidently the budget estimate would be largely exceeded, mainly owing to our advances to the Allies.

The total votes of credit since the war was £5,292,000,000. Now that the country with the greatest resources in the world was thrown into the scale on our side, it was truer than ever that it would not be the want of money which would prevent us winning. (Cheers.)

CRITICISM OF GOVERNMENT

After Reginald McKenna, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, spoke, warning the Government of the absolute necessity of curtailing all unnecessary expenditure to prevent the dangerous inflation of prices, the general debate had no great interest, the main feature being strong criticism by John Dillon and others of the Saloniki expedition. Mr. Dillon, referring to rumors that Serbia was intending to make a separate peace with Austria, and demanding that the Government say whether Serbia was to be deserted, declared that the British army in Saloniki had been demoralized by 18 months of inaction in pestilent surroundings.

Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, replying, characterized Mr. Dillon's charge as absolutely untrue. He said there was no intention whatever of receding from the pledges for the full restoration of and reparation for Serbia. While declining to reveal the Government's plans he said he would restate its war aims:

"Austria is not our chief enemy. Germany is, and must be, our chief enemy. The broad principles we are fighting for are these: First, that we should stand by our Allies; second, we are fighting for a stable settlement for a sound and satisfactory peace, not a conquest or mere domination, but on some national principle as far as might be which would secure that settlement. When arrived at it should be free from change and alteration in the future.

"Personally, I wish to see how far President Wilson's proposals can be made practicable for barriers against future wars. The Government's desire for the destruction of German militarism is only part of its general purpose to secure a lasting peace. It desires it only because it is the greatest danger to the future peace of Europe."

TO CURB LENINE.

If Convicted as Hun Spy, Will be Shot.

New York, report—Information that the Russian Provisional Government has decided to terminate the apparent pro-German activities of Nikolai Lenine, the Radical Socialist leader, by arresting him and many of his followers, has reached the Russian information bureau here. These advices indicate Lenine probably will be shot if he is convicted as a spy working in the interests of Germany, but that if not convicted he will be isolated for the duration of the war. This last measure, it is explained here, would be adopted as a precaution against the presence of "a crazy man in politics at this crisis."

So far as information received by the bureau shows, no evidence has been uncovered in Petrograd to confirm the statements implicating Lenine as an agent of the German general staff, although the Provisional Government's present determination to take Lenine into custody leads Russians here to suspect that the Government may know that he has been guilty of taking German gold.

BRITISH LOSS ON THE WEST

Hun Flame Attack Gains at Monchy-le-Preux.

Heavy Artillery Duels On the French Front.

London Cable—The War Office statement to-night reads:

"Following a heavy bombardment of our trenches east of Monchy-le-Preux, the enemy early this morning again attacked our positions on Infantry hill, and with the assistance of flammenwerfer succeeded in driving in a few of our advanced posts on a front of about 20 yards.

"A German raiding party was driven off by our rifle-fire this afternoon north of Bullecourt. Our troops raided the enemy's trenches north of Ypres this morning at a number of points and captured several prisoners.

"Yesterday a thick haze interfered greatly with operations in the air. Bombing raids, nevertheless, were carried out by our aeroplanes during the day, as well as the previous night. Fighting took place in the evening. Four German machines were driven down out of control. Three of our machines are missing."

FRENCH REPORT.

Paris Cable — The official communication issued by the War Office to-night reads:

"The activity of the two artilleries was very spirited, particularly on the Casemates and Californie plateaux in Champagne, in the region of Moronvilliers, and on the left bank of the Meuse. Everywhere our batteries very vigorously took to task the enemy artillery. There is no infantry action.

"Shells to the number of [illegible] were fired into Rheims."

How Spiders Walk.

The way a spider moves its eight legs in walking is interestingly described by Theodore Savory in Science Progress. In order to observe this movement at his leisure—for it is usually too rapid to be observed by the human eye—he tired the spiders by making them swim and then let them walk slowly over a smooth surface. And this is what he discovered:

The longest legs, those of the first and fourth pairs, move along lines of their own directions by vertical bending of the joints; the shorter legs of the second and third pairs move forward by rotation from the [illegible]—at right angles to their own directions.

RUSSO-ROUMANIANS SMASH FOE IN THE CARPATHIANS

Broke the Heavily Fortified Teuton Line on a Wide Front There.

Elsewhere Russ Troops Still Retreat, Not Putting Up a Fight.

London Cable—From the Baltic to the Black Sea only at one point along the long line—in the Southern Carpathians—have the Russians risen to the occasion and shown some of their old fighting spirit. Here, fighting shoulder to shoulder with their Roumanian allies, they have attacked and captured several villages from the Germans and broken the heavily fortified Teuton line on a wide front.

In Galicia the precipitate retreat of the Russians continues almost everywhere from the Carpathian foothills to the region around Tarnopol, the Government apparently not yet having had time to put in force its strong repressive measures, which M. Kerensky, the head of the Government, has promised to apply in order to stay the debacle.

Nadverna, in the fringe of the foothills, Stanislau and Tarnopol and numerous smaller towns have been taken by the Teutons, who are now approaching the important railroad junction of Buczacz, which lies some [illegible] miles east of Halicz.

Since the penetration of the German lines on a wide front near Krevo, in which the "Command of Death," composed of women, took a notable part, despite which large numbers of the Russians ignominously retreated to their old positions without even the [illegible] of harrassment by the enemy, the Russians have not stirred from their trenches again to face the foe.

RUSSIANS ASSUME OFFENSIVE.

A report of the general staff of the Roumanian army, received at Petrograd to-day, says:

"In the South Carpathians troops under General Kofora Averesco assumed the offensive and occupied the villages of Meresci and Volochany and captured several hundred prisoners and 10 guns, including some heavy ones. We owe this success to the skillful manoeuvring and close co-operation of the Roumanian and Russian forces, and also to the vigorous activity of our allied artillery.

"The powerfully-organized enemy line has been broken on an extensive front. The bravery and devotion of the troops was incomparable. Among other incidents one battery lost its entire personnel except seven men who continued firing without cessation and continued firing without cessation and enemy's fire. Lieut.-Gen. Shcherbatcheff (commander of the Russian forces in Roumania) decorated all these with the St. George's Cross."

"Between the Sereth and Stripa Rivers the Germans continued their offensive concentrating their chief efforts along the western bank of the Sereth. Three infantry divisions in the region northwest of Romanovki left their positions and moved to the rear. On Tuesday, towards evening, our detachments halted on the Romanovki-Paaskovze-Geildovce line. West of the Stripa the Germans penetrated our positions in the region of Olesha, and towards Tuesday evening our troops retired to the Prjevlok-Egirjany-Bazyl front.

"Particularly noteworthy was the gallant work of two cyclist battalions, which fought furiously against superior enemy forces. According to the testimony of a German officer, the 143rd German Regiment was almost completely destroyed by the 5th Cyclist Battalion.

"South of the Dniester, as far as the Carpathians our troops continued to retire eastward. On the Brystritza at Solotvina, in the Stanilau region, our rearguard engaged in action with enemy advanced patrols. Great support was given to our infantry by Polish Uhlans, who delivered six mounted attacks against the German infantry.

"In the streets of Stanislau stubborn engagements with the bayonet were fought with enemy forces which had broken into the town. The inhabitants of the city threw hand grenades from their balconies and windows on our departing troops."

The official statement from Petrograd says:

"The Russian Guard Corps, defending Tarnapol, retreated, unpressed by the enemy. But the Probrajensky and Semonsky Regiments remained faithful to duty and are fighting southeast of Tarnapol. In the streets of Stanislau there were stubborn bayonet engagements. The populace threw grenades on the retiring Russian troops."

BAR JAVA TEAS.

Suggestion for Canada in British Commons.

London, cable—(Via Reuter's Ottawa agency.)—Sir J. D. Rees made the suggestion in the House of Commons to-day that, as Australia had prohibited the importation of teas from China and Java, in order to help the Indian and Ceylon growers, who are at present to a large extent deprived of the home market, the Colonial Secretary might suggest to the Government of Canada the propriety of taking similar action, in view of the fact that the Dominion is now importing quantities of Java teas.

Mr. Steel Maitland, Under-Secretary of Colonies, replied:

"I do not think that representations could usefully be made to the Canadian Government, and if facts are as stated in the question, the Canadian Government will doubtless duly consider the matter." He added that during the year ended 31st of March last, which was the latest period for which statistics are available, the imports of Java tea into Canada did not exceed one per cent. of the total imports of tea.

WILL SIGNALIZE FOURTH WAR YEAR

London Cable—The beginning of the fourth year of the war will be signalized in Great Britain by important events, notably a great religious intercession service in London, at which King George and Queen Mary will be present, and a big meeting in London, August 4, when Premier Lloyd George will inaugurate the work of the National War Aims Committee in an important speech.

The object of the War Aims Committee is to keep before the nation the causes of the war, and the necessity of continuing hostilities until the forces which brought about the conflict are destroyed. The committee has four Presidents, Premier Lloyd George, Herbert H. Asquith, Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Minister of Pensions Barnes.

According to information in Parliamentary lobby sources, the Premier's speech will outline as precisely as possible the war aims of Great Britain and her Allies.

"Hairpins," remarked the human encyclopedia, "were not invented until the middle of the sixteenth century." "How did women button their gloves and shoes before that?" demanded the mere man.

"What are you going to tell your constituents when you go home?" "Hadn't thought of that," replied the congressman who speaks impulsively. "I'm waiting to see whether it will be safe for me to go home."—Washington Star.

MORE THAN 60 PERISHED IN MINE BLOW-UP

Worst Explosion in History of Cape Breton Coal Mining.

HEROES GIVE LIVES

Rescuers Died at the Work of Trying to Save Some Victims.

Sydney, N. S., report—The worst explosion in the history of the Cape Breton coal fields occurred at 7.30 this morning in No. 2 colliery of the New Waterford district.

An official estimate places the number of dead at 62. These include 30 native miners, 22 Newfoundlanders and 10 foreigners. About 270 men were in the mine at the time, and colliery officials express surprise that the loss of life was not greater. Up to a late hour this afternoon only a small number of bodies had been taken up. The greater number will lie where they are until to-morrow. Great crowds of people, including weeping women and children, still surround the pit mouth.

General Superintendent Tonge and a group of officials, who were early on the spot went through the colliery this afternoon, and report that the workings and ventilations are in normal condition. There was no sign of fire, and it is inferred from the report the damage to the pit is small. Work is expected to be resumed within a short time.

The explosion occurred between Nos. 6 and 7 landings, about 2,100 feet down the slope, but as to how it happened officials are reticent or profess to be unable to say. Forty or fifty men were working at No. 6 landing when the explosion took place, and though there is fear that all have been killed either by the explosion itself or by the deadly gas fumes, rescue parties are making superhuman efforts to see if any can yet be saved.

A number of men working at No. 7 when the disaster occurred are among the badly injured, and some are believed to be among the killed. Some of the men from this landing, however, are known to be among the entombed, but with those believed dead at No. 6, and those killed or suffocated in other parts of the colliery, the death list is expected to run close to eighty. A number of the rescued miners were driven temporarily insane by the explosion and the gas which swept through the mine. In some cases they had to be put under restraint in order to protect them from their own violence.

St. Anthony's schoolroom and the parish hall have been fitted up as temporary emergency hospitals and scores of the injured and gassed men are being treated there by doctors from different points, and by nurses from Glace Bay, Dominion and other places.

A rescue party which reached No. 6 landing, where the explosion took place, found the bodies of twenty-two men, and another party reaching No. 7 found seven more.

It is believed now that the explosion was caused by the first shot fired when the men went into the pit this morning. A heavy fall of coal is reported to have taken place at No. 7 landing, blocking the way to the landing. Rescue parties going to the landing have had to approach it by another route than that usually taken. Heroic work is being done by scores of volunteers, and two of the young men who went down into the pit this morning on rescue work were suffocated and died, Jack McKenzie, of New Waterford, a son of Daniel McKenzie, and Philip Nicholson.

The rescue workers are using the Draeger apparatus, but they are finding their task one of the greatest difficulty owing to the gas which is still pouring through the mine everywhere.

BRITISH GAINS IN EAST AFRICA

Inflicted Heavy Losses in New Victories.

Main Body of Germans in Retreat.

London, cable—British troops in German East Africa have won new victories over the remaining German forces there, and the main body of the enemy is now in retreat toward the south after having suffered heavy losses, says an official announcement issued today. The text reads:

"An engagement on July 19, at Narcombe resulted in the enemy being driven from all positions. The main body is retreating southward. The enemy's losses were heavy.

"A small German column is at large on the north shore of Lake Manyara.

"We are in touch in Lubuka with the enemy retreating toward Mahenge (in the southeasterly section of the colony).

"In Portuguese East Africa we are pursuing the enemy from Mwlombe toward the Rovuma River."

NABBED AT LAST.

Man Long Wanted for Great B. C. Bank Robbery.

Chicago, report—Homer J. Minot, said by the police to be one of the men wanted for the robbery of the branch bank of the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster, B. C., several years ago in which more than $300,000 was taken, was arrested here last night. Minot was seen by three detective sergeants as he was passing in an automobile, and was recognized by a scar on his upper lip. Two other occupants of the car were taken into custody, but they refused to give their names or addresses, and the police are unable to identify them.

A world-wide search has been conducted for Minot since the bank robbery.

CHARGE GRAFT.

British Officials in Trouble, in London.

London Cable—William August Cannon, a retired civil servant, was remanded in Bow street police court this afternoon, charged with unlawfully conspiring with Wing Commander John C. Porte, R. N. A., and Lyman H. Seeley to contravene the provisions of the Prevention of Corruption Act of 1906.

The charge concerns large sums of money alleged to have been from time to time corruptly paid and received by Porte, as agent of the Crown, in respect to certain contracts between Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty and the Curtiss Aeroplane Company of New York.

LOST NOT A SHIP.

France Had Clear Week—Italian Loss Light.

Paris, cable—During the week ending midnight, July 22, not a single French vessel, either over or under 1,600 tons, was lost, according to an official statement issued yesterday. Six French merchantmen were attacked unsuccessfully during that time by submarines. Ships of all nationalities, numbering 1,[illegible], entered port, and 937 departed.

Rome, July 23.—Two Italian steamers were sunk and one small sailing vessel was damaged during the week ending midnight, July 22, says an official announcement issued yesterday. Five hundred and ninety-three vessels, with a gross tonnage of 389,615, arrived, and 560, of a tonnage of [illegible], left port.

When a man gets the reputation of being a good listener he's a cinch for the fellow with a hard-luck tale.

ALLIES' CONFERENCE IN PARIS WILL REPLY TO DR. MICHAELIS

Must Answer Hun Chancellor for Sake of Russia and to Influence Austro-Hungary.

Paris Cable—The labors of the allied conference will not be limited to the Balkans. For one thing, it is important to clear the air after the Reichstag action last week. Although Premier Lloyd George has already replied to a certain extent to the speech of Chancellor Michaelis, it is desirable, says the Matin, that the Allies should issue a joint statement on what happened at Berlin, so that Germany's peace manoeuvres may everywhere be checked, and reasons given, where they are needed, why the Allies cannot accept the Reichstag resolution as a basis for peace negotiations.

This explanation, adds the Matin, will be principally addressed to the peoples of Russia and Austro-Hungary. There must be no risk of Russian revolutionaries being duped by the Reichstag, and the Allies must demonstrate to them what would be the result in Europe if Germany's crimes were allowed to go unpunished.

At the same time, the Austro-Hungarian press, evidently acting under orders from the Foreign Office, is trying to create the impression that the Reichstag made concessions which the Allies are [illegible] to regard as dictated by a spirit of conciliation. It is necessary to remove all doubts on this subject, and show the peoples of Austro-Hungary how complete and final would be their subservience to Germano-Magyar domination if peace were now made on a basis of no annexations and no indemnities.

The French Premier, M. Ribot, Minister of War Painleve and Albert Thomas, Minister of Munitions, had a long conference yesterday afternoon with Premier Lloyd George, Foreign Minister Balfour, and Baron Sonnino, Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs. After the meeting M. Ribot went to the Elysee Palace and saw President Poincare.

SHORT ITEMS OF THE NEWS OF THE DAY

Earl Grey Undergoes Another Operation—His Condition Critical.

CRUISER OTWAY SUNK

Germans Allow 500 Out of 2,000 Belgian Slaves to Starve.

James Denne, a mason, died in Kingston as a result of sunstroke, [illegible] at work paving a road.

Mrs. Findlay, of Fort William, was fatally and four other persons badly hurt in a collision of the motor car and a street car at Port Arthur.

Roy Birmingham, aged seven, was drowned while bathing in the Thames at London, and the bowlers in the championship tournament at [illegible] broke up their game to help the [illegible] search for his body.

Frank M. Haines, manager of the Bank of Hamilton at Palmerston, will take charge of the branch in [illegible] Toronto.

Dr. Salluste Duval, professor at Laval, the Polytechnic School and the Normal School, is dead at his home in Montreal, after an illness of some weeks.

The British auxiliary cruiser Otway was torpedoed and sunk in northern waters on July 22. Ten men were killed. The remainder on board were saved.

The Copenhagen Politiken says that the German cattle buyer has reduced by 15 per cent. the prices he will pay next week for cattle to be sent to Germany.

Fire destroyed the grand stand and other buildings on the Exhibition grounds at Regina. The grand stand was packed to suffocation, but, so far as is known, all got out safely.

Gerald Green, [illegible] was arrested [illegible] injuries to William Ellis, who was stabbed on an early morning [illegible] City Hall Park.

Despite a strong objection by counsel, who argued that there was no evidence on which to base a charge of murder, Robert Knight, [illegible], William Kelly, and [illegible], accused of causing the death of Faky Naoum during a fight in Toronto, committed for trial.

The British submarine [illegible] sunk by a submarine, it was officially announced in Berlin, the sole survivor being taken prisoner.

The Echo Belge reports that the Germans have allowed 500 deported Belgians to die of hunger in a camp situated near Luebeck. The entire population of this camp is 2,000 men, so that 25 per cent. have already perished.

Roxanna E. Thompson, wife of Rev. Wm. Smythe, pastor of [illegible] Street Methodist Church, passed away at Brantford. In recent years her husband had been stationed at St. Catharines, Petrolea, Wiarton, Bridgeburg and Milton.

Fruit Wanted !

Bring us now any quantity of

Cherries
Black Currants
Gooseberries
and Raspberries

Please note that we will receive fruit

Every day after 5 o'clock

At our BRICK WAREHOUSE

North of the Library. Don't bring it to the store as the service is arranged for, as above.

NO BLIGHTED FRUIT WANTED
THERE IS A HEAVY PENALTY
FOR HANDLING SAME

Falconer Bros.

THE HOME OF GOOD GROCERIES

What About Your Shoe Requirements ?

We know that leather and cloths of all kind are soaring, and are likely to go a great deal higher, but we are selling the best stock of boots and shoes that has in this town for years at very reasonable prices.

Ladies! you dont have to pay $7 and $15 for pair of boots, unless you go into in for Criminal Extravagance. We are showing excellent values, 8 and 9 inch tops, in kid, patent, gun metal at from $4.50 to $5. Lower tops from $2.50 to $3.50 good enough for any lady to go anywhere.

Then we have the kind that our men and boys are wearing in the harvest fields and the trenches from $2.50 to $5.00

This is not a slaughter sale, but our prices are lower than so called sale prices. The decerning public is picking up these bargains every day. We invite you to share in these snaps.

Bring your butter and eggs
And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.

If you have a thing to sell let The Times tell the people about it.

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now, will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places, and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College

Owen Sound, Ontario

remains open all summer to help meet the demand for trained office help. Enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Dept. A., Owen Sound, Ont.

Paris Green !

Bug Death !

Look after those potatoes right away

Hay Forks
Binder Twine
Screen doors & Windows
All sizes

Thomson's
Hardware Store

TURNER'S

Mrs. D. McLennan, of Toronto, is visiting at the home of his brother, Mr. D. McRae.

Rev. Malcolm Campbell of the first Presbyterian church, Montreal, spent a few days with his mother, Mrs. Arch Campbell.

Last week Peter McKinnon and John Bell had the Bruce phone installed in their houses. If the lines were extended it is probable that a few more subscribers could be secured, but owing to the high cost of equipment neither Company seems anxious to take the step.

Mr. and Mrs. D. McLean and daughter of Durham, were visiting Miss Marion Bell.

Mr. Arch Bell was in Toronto for a few days last week.

Miss Sadie McCulloch is holidaying in Toronto.

Mrs. Wm. Karcher is spending a few weeks with friends in Chesley.

Miss Florence Kettles, of Port Elgin, is holidaying at the home of her uncle, Mr. Charlie Kettles.

G. S. McCulloch is visiting at Chesley.

GLAMMIS

R. Kennedy has purchased a Ford.

L. B. Tufford and family of Beamsville, are holidaying at Inverhuron.

Miss McCormick, Detroit, is home for a holiday.

Red Cross workers have received grants from Kincardine and Bruce Tps.

Mr and Mrs. H. Stevenson of Detroit, visited his parents here last week.

Anniversary services are being held at St Paul's Sunday.

McKerruans are at Inverhuron for the summer.

Miss McAfee, G. N., of Washington, is home.

Miss Gratth of Lorne, is visiting Mrs. John Kitchen.

Miss Ella Brown has returned to Paisley after visiting her grandparents.

Many friends were sorry to part with Rev and Mrs. DeMille. They attend the Free Methodist conference, after which they will know where they are to be stationed.

R. W. Burgess and party were at Goderich over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Matthews, (nee Miss

SLASHING PRICES

The hot weather responsible for this big cut in prices. We offer our big stock of

MIDDIES

Ladies' Misses', Children's also Children's Dresses to go at

20 per cent. Off

These goods are the best money can buy, and our offer is a big bargain.

36c for eggs
36c for butter

B. HILKER

M. McKay of Port Arthur, are renewing acquaintances here.

Mrs. R. J. Nesbitt and family are under the doctor's care. A nurse from Fergus is now in charge.

UNDERWOOD NEWS

Get your gasoline at The Hardware.

Save wood and coal, use an oil stove. We have some coal oil stoves which will save the women work, and save money too. Thede & Brill.

The death of Mary Colwell, announced in The Times a couple of weeks ago, removed an old and highly respected lady in her 81st year. Deceased was born at Cornwall, Eng. in 1837. When 15 years of age she came to Canada with her parents and located at Bowmanville, residing there for three years, moving to Hibbert Tp. Perth Co. where she resided for 28 years, moving to Lot 18, Con. 8, Bruce. After a residence of 17 years she moved to Underwood where she had lived for the past 17 years. To mourn the loss are James, Davidson Mich; Mrs Thos Venning of St Thomas; Mrs. Jno Northcott 8th of Bruce; and Lydia at home. Being a life long member of the Underwood Methodist Church, she was buried from the Methodist church.

Miss Ina MacNabb, resumed her duties this week at Guelph hospital.

A Patriotic Service is to be held next Sunday evening at 7.30 in the Methodist church, when the Honor Roll is to be unveiled.

Miss C. MacKay of Orono, is visiting at her home here.

Rev. McNabb, leaves for his vacation this week. The supplies for the next four Sundays are, Rev. Martin of Stratford, Rev. Padden of Milverton, and Rev. Linton of Pace, taking the last two Sundays. The evening services are to be discontinued during the month of August.

Mrs. Bert Pegg and son, of Guelph, are holidaying at Mr. Jno. Henderson's.

Mrs. Scott of Port Arthur, has been visiting at Mrs. Wm. Parkers 8th Con., and at Mrs. Tanner's, Paisley.

Advertise it in The Times

NORTH BRUCE

On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Blythe and Miss Winnie with other friends, motored down from Durham to spend the day with Messrs John and George Ribey. In the afternoon a number of car loads went to the lake.

Miss Stella Ball has returned to her home at Weston after spending the summer with her aunt, Mrs Hodge.

Rev E. H. Thamer, of Kitchener will preach in the U. B. Church next Sunday afternoon at 2.30.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Scott and Mr. and Mrs. J. Welch Sundayed at Mr. Thos. Wrightson's, 4th. Bruce.

Alarm Clocks

Why do most people go to Busby's for alarm clocks ?

Because we have the best stock, also when repairs are necessary you know our reputation.

We have in stock:—

Big Ben	Vigilant
Cyclone	Turnout
Vantite	Icallu
Giant Spasmodic
Suminous Sunrise

J. J. BUSBY,
The Quick Repair House

BURGOYNE AND DISTRICT

(Intended for last week)

With the change to hot drying weather, many fields of heavy alfalfa that were put in coils last week are being stored away in good shape and haying will be general this week. Although the grass is still soft and growing, the lateness of the season and scarcity of help must be considered and preparations are being made by farmers to have the crop harvested in the best and quickest way possible. Loaders and side rakes are taking the places of the older methods when hands were plentiful. Horse power and mechanical contrivances are made to do the great part of the heavy work both out and in, old wooden hay fork tracks are being replaced by steel. Mr. Alex McCanuel and Mr. A. Kerr, have had fine new steel outfits put up in their barns by Mr. Helm, of Port Elgin. With these new appliances a man and boy can put by a lot of hay in a short time.

The following articles were shipped to Red Cross headquarters on July 13th by Burgoyne Red Cross Society:—60 pairs socks, 13 shirts, 10 pairs pyjamas, 22 tetmin suits and 1 house-wife.

Mr and Mrs B. Smith of Rocklyn, Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith of Meaford, and Mrs. Malz of Orillia, motored over and spent the week end at S. F. Smith's.

Miss B. Paxton of Chippewa Hill, is visiting with Mrs. A. McCanuel.

Miss Coral McIvor is spending a couple of weeks visiting friends, during her absence Miss Kesselring presides at the organ in the Sunday service.

Miss Egan, from Toronto, is visiting her sister, Mrs. R. Cunningham.

Miss Ziegler, from Guelph, is holidaying with relatives here. Miss Ziegler's assistance in the church choir and beautiful solo singing was much appreciated Sunday morning and evening.

Burgoyne beef ring No. 2, has meatless days this week on account of some mistake in bringing in the animal. To abstain from meat these hot days is no great hardship, but when compulsion is put in force meat will taste much sweeter, just because one must deny himself.

Bruce County School Fairs

Arran & Elderslie, at S. S. No. 4 Arran (Monkman's) Sept. 17th.

Brant & Elderslie at S. S. 11 Brant, (Vesta) Sept. 24th.

Brant & Carrick, at Walkerton (Fair Grounds) Sept. 25th.

Culross, at Teeswater, (Fair Grounds) Sept. 26th.

Bruce, at S. S. No. 9 Bruce, Sept. 27th.

Saugeen, at Port Elgin (Fair Grounds) Sept. 28th.

Advertise it in The Times.

PERSONAL

Mrs. Miller and daughters of Chicago, are visiting at Irwin's cottage.

Miss Elya George, of Regina, is the guest of her aunt Mrs. W. E. Dell.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Becker of Toronto, are holidaying here.

Mr. Kellum, of Elmwood visited here over the week end.

The Mennonites will hold baptismal service at the lake 3 p. m. sunday.

The Misses Craig, of Owen Sound, are visiting friends here.

Miss Lily Allan has returned from Walkerton hospital, and is much improved.

Miss Prendergast, of Chicago, and Miss Dorothy Connery, of Toronto, are holidaying at H. Brigden's.

The W. M. A. of North Bruce are being entertained at Rev. Hallman's cottage at Paradise Grove this afternoon.

The Public School board has requisitioned the council for $4.000 for school purposes for the coming year, an increase of $600 over last year.

Congratulations will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Elliott, who are today celebrating the 63rd anniversary of their wedding. A number of friends are to gather with them this evening.

Patriotic Garden Party

The garden party held at Mr. John Cook's last night was under the auspices of White School Patriotic society. This society has done a great deal for patriotic purposes, and their social was a fine success. The members and their friends went to a deal of labor to have the grounds nicely decorated, and in making everyone who attended feel at home. Mr. Cook and family gave all a hearty welcome, and a splendid time was the result.

After the supper which was a hearty one and splendidly served, there was a good program, Mr. Fred Elliott making a very genial chairman. There was plenty of good music rendered by the Burgoyne orchestra and the Indian silver band. Those taking part in the program were:

Rev. Mr. Soules, Rev. Mr. Mintz, Southampton, male quartett, Mr. Bowman M. P. P., Mr. Green, Mr. McAuley, Reeve Christie, E. R. Sayles, Mrs. Crowe, representing the Food Conservation Commission.

Inspector Christie of Sudbury is visiting his brother, Reeve Christie.

Wholesale Banning of Banns.

Dean Pigou was once due to preach at St. Clement Dane's. Just before the service an excited old lady pounced into the vestry to forbid the banns of her son's marriage because he had "neither money nor brains." Being told that the church did not recognize either objection, she sat beneath the reading desk until the curate began, "I publish the banns." Then she sprang up, waved an umbrella, and shouted, "I forbid them all!" much to the consternation of several couples hoping to be married next day.—London Standard.

More People Every Day

Are hearing about the splendid advantages of trading at this store.

The unusual values we are offering in ready-to-wear apparel, for men and boys' makes this store the ideal place to trade.

We invite everybody to come and see our goods and compare with what you can get elsewhere. We expect no one to buy of us unless he is fully satisfied that it is to his own best interests to do so, but you won't know where the best values come from unless you compare.

Men's heavy solid leather work shoes $3 to 5.	Boys' shoes, solid leather sizes 1 to 5, $2.25 to $4
Men's fine shoes $3 to $7	Sizes 11 to 13, $2 to $3

Positively the best values in

Men,s suits, Raincoats, Odd pants, Fine shirts Work shirts, Underwear, Hats and Caps

Agent for Peabody's Overalls and Smocks
Leather Label Overalls and smocks
Brotherhood Overalls and Smocks

New styles, New ideas, Big values, Little Prices

Make it worth your while to look here before you buy.

F. R. BARBER

MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

PATTISON'S FOR FURNITURE

July and August is the time to save money by buying your Furniture at Pattison's.

We are sole agents in this vicinity for the Famous Singer Sewing Machine, also the White, Beaver and Raymond Models.

Sewing Machine Oil, Needles, and Repairs always in stock.

We are also agents for the Columbia Grafonola and Records

J. W. Pattison

Furniture Dealer and Undertaker

Fall Fair Dates

The fall fairs in the towns in this district will be held as follows:—

Chatsworth	Sept. 13—14
Chesley	Sept. 18—19
Hanover	Sept. 20—21
Hepworth	Sept. 27—28
Kincardine	Sept. 20—21
Owen Sound	Sept. 11—13
Paisley	Sept. [illegible]
Port Elgin	Sept. 19—20
Tara	Oct. 2—3
Wiarton	Sept. 25—26

Advertise it in The Times.

All Done

Our last and final call to the people

Sat'y. Aug. 4 at 10.30 p.m

We positively close our store. Therefore, this is your last opportunity.

If you owe us an account please settle it.

Tables and other store fixtures for sale

H. KATZ

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION

Aug. 25 - TORONTO - Sept. 10

On a More Than Ordinarily Progressive Scale

MOBILIZATION OF NATIONAL RESOURCES

Constructive and Destructive Needs for War

CONFEDERATION SPECTACLE

1200—PERFORMERS—1200

Canada's Story from Birth to Nationhood Dramatically Told

The very Apex of Spectacular Achievement

GIANT LIVE-STOCK AND AGRICULTURAL DISPLAY

Judging Competitions for Young Farmers - - New Farm Crop Competitions - - Extended Classifications and Innovations in All Departments

IMMENSE EXHIBITS OF TRACTORS AND FARM LABOR SAVING DEVICES

ART—Italian, French, Persian, American and Canadian Masterpieces.

MUSIC—Innes' Famous Band and a score of other leading organizations.

ENTIRE NEW MIDWAY

NATIONAL MOTOR SHOW
FIRST SHOWING OF 1918 MODELS

Greatly enlarged Government and other Exhibits - - - War in all its phases - - Model Camp - - Artillery Drive - - Aeroplane Flights - - Scores of surprises in store for old friends and a thousand thrills for new ones.

REDUCED FARES ON ALL LINES OF TRAVEL

Subscribe for The Times and get all the local news.

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 32 PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 8, 1917 $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

COMING EVENTS

10c. per line
No notice less than 25c

THE W. C. T. U.—Will meet on Tuesday August 14th, at Mrs. J. D. Smith's for Red Cross sewing. Come early.

MUSICALE—A delightful musical program to be given by the pupils of Mrs. Donald M. Lamont, A. L. C. M., at the home of Mr. J. H. Webster, River Road, on Friday evening August 10th at 8 p. m. Ice cream and cake will be served, and and a silver collection is asked in aid of Dunblane Red Cross society.

A SPECIAL MEETING—Of the Women's Institute, will be held Saturday, August 11th., beginning at 2 o'clock promptly, when Miss Pritchard, teacher of Domestic Science, in Owen Sound Collegiate, will give a demonstration on canning vegetables, and canning and preserving fruits. All are invited.

SPECIAL SERVICE—All are invited to the services at the Methodist church Sunday August 12th, morning and evening. A Patriotic service on the third anniversary of the war. Patriotic songs, and a bright and interesting hour at each service. All come.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES—Burgoyne Presbyterian church on Sunday, August 19th. Rev. Mr. Hills, of Chesley, will preach morning and evening. On Monday night a lecture will be given by Rev. Mr. Hills on "Florence Nightingale and the Development of the Red Cross" illustrated by limelight views, many of which deal directly with the war. Admission 25 and 15c. All come.

Baptisms at the Lake

The Mennonites held baptism in the lake, near the power house, on Sunday afternoon.

There was a large gathering of the congregation and spectators present. Rev. Mr. Brubacher performed the baptismal rites to three candidates.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

FOUND—Spare automobile tire. Apply Times office.

LOST—Either at the lake, or coming from the lake, on July 24, gold locket and chain, valued as keepsake. Finder please leave at Times and receive reward.

FOR SALE—2000 cement blocks, smooth faced, for sale. Apply L. M. Sees.

STRAYED—To premises of Mrs. Salesman, a black and white spotted hound. Owner may have same by paying for this advt.

FOR SALE—The Andrew Sutherland property at the South End. Fine brick house, 7 rooms and shed. Good basement, also stable. Possession given immediately. Apply to Geo. S. Webb and James McEwing, executors. 28-tf.

WANTED—We are paying the highest prices for beefring hides. H. Zolkind, Port Elgin.

PHONOGRAPHS!

How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.

Louis Bloch's Music Store
Owen Sound

DENTAL

W. P. POWER, D. D. S., Dentist, office over South End Store. Hours 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

MEDICAL

DR. F. H. WELLS, Office and residence on Green street, one door west of Bank of Hamilton.

W. J. CHAMBERS, M. D., L. R. C. P., L. M., Edinburgh. Office and residence "Lakeview Hall" opposite South End park Port Elgin.

DR. W. S. LAIRD, Oculist, Specialty in Nose and Throat diseases. Guarantees all his fitting of glasses. Office hours Wednesday afternoons. Next to Metropolitan Bank

LEGAL

W. BURGESS, LL.B., Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public &c., &c. Office, Hutton's Block. Private and other funds to loan.

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. 429 G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communications in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at 8 p. m. Visiting brethern cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Guthsmith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE, No. 170, I. O. O. F., of Ontario, meets at 8 o'clock, p.m., every Monday in their hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N. G.; T. Rankin, Rec.-Sec.; D. Geddes, Perm Sec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer of Marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office in Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin

UNDERTAKING

J. W. PATTISON, Funeral director and embalmer. Residence on premises. Rural phone No. 22.

Advertise it in The Times.

Council Meeting

Reeve Izzard and Councillors, Eidt, Cottrill, Pattison and McCallum, were at their places at the council meeting Friday night. The budget of business was a light one.

The coal situation was discussed. The reeve said he had ordered two cars, that one was on the way, but that the price was a good deal higher. A suggestion was made that the day was not far distant when a motor for electric power would be the better means for pumping, and would save money.

The question of striking the rate of taxation was discussed briefly, and it is likely a special meeting will be held.

Following were the accounts :

Stevens Hepner Co	$1.70
Wing and Co	40 90
Geo. Fisher	112 00
Electric Light	55 70
W. Brown	18.00
W. J. McCollough	35 00
The Times	7 50

Prizes for Boys and Girls

The Canadian Bankers' Association, acting in co-operation with the Dominion Department of Agriculture have undertaken to make it interesting for boys and girls of the country to exhibit pigs and calves at the local fair. All those who enter must be under 17 years of age and calves or pigs shown must be the property of the boys and girls themselves or of their parents or guardians. The prizes offered are liberal, ranging from $5 down to $1. This ought to interest many young people up this way. The managers of the banks, Mr. Ranney of the Bank of Hamilton, and Mr Wyant of the Bank of Nova Scotia, will give the boys and girls any information they may require.

Voter's List

The town voters' list is in the hands of Clerk Geddes, and ratepayers are invited to secure a copy of it.

It will be noted that there is no part three in the list this year, the women owners of property appearing in the part one list and are therefore entitled to vote at both municipal elections and elections to the Legislative Assembly.

Copies of the list are at the Times office. Errors or omissions discovered should be at once reported to the clerk.

Blight on Cherries

What with the blight and the birds the cherry crop here is doomed.

The birds were never so plentiful, and many of The Times readers report the crop on fine large trees utterly destroyed by robins, blackbirds, flickers, etc., some of them even reporting crows in the trees.

Added to this, and worse, is the blight. It comes in some cases in the falling of leaves from the trees, and in others by the fruit being spotted with a light brown spot, which rots the cherries in a night. It is reported that this blight will eventually kill the tree. Spraying is supposed to remedy this blight, but in some cases spraying has not had an effect. The College authorities are working on the disease to have a successful spraying mixture for use before another season.

Port Elgin High School Pupils

The school has been, as usual, very successful at the Departmental exams. Recently, reports show that two candidates wrote for part 1 of the first class certificates and were successful, May Jamieson and Nellie MacDuff.

Four wrote for second class certificate, three being successful. Irma Stephenson Nellie Avis and Harold Upshall, the latter winning honors. Over 60 per. cent were successful at the lower school exams, the names appearing in a previous issue.

A number of candidates earned their certificates under a special farmers' service regulations.

Owing to the fact that the school was short of a teacher for some time, through illness, the showing made by Principal Cameron and his staff is excellent.

Printing at Reasonable Prices

The Times has unexcelled equipment for producing fine printed matter of all kinds. Business Stationery and Office Forms, Advertising Booklets, Circulars, bills tickets, envelopes, etc. Prices are always reasonable.

Be Particular

The particular housewife wants only the best in meats during the very hot weather, and that's the reason Eaton's butcher shop serves so many patrons with dainties in cold meats, lamb, beef, pork etc., We have also package soups vegetables, etc. Phone your order to the Shop of Quality. A. E. Eaton, Prop

LADIES DEPARTMENT

See the splendid display in the Ladies' department in the following lines,

Women's Bathing Suits
Misses' Bathing Suits
Ladies Underwear
Fine Hosiery
Corsets

Falconer Bros.

TOWN TOPICS

Albert Osborne has purchased a Chevrolet.

Miss Annie Wismer has returned from a holiday at Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wismer motored to Toronto this week.

Miss Craig, of Owen Sound, has been visiting at R. Hanbidge's.

Wild raspberries are reported as very plentiful and of excellent flavor.

Mrs. Ranney and Dorothy were holidaying in Milverton.

Rev. Mr. Paddon and family, of Milverton, are spending a vacation here.

Mr. Wyant, of Goderich, visited his son here last week.

Lloyd Veitch has returned to Toronto after a vacation.

Herb Ranney is holidaying at Milverton.

Mrs. Huck and children, of Walkerton, are the guests of Mrs. Edward Keip.

Mrs. Tocher and daughter, of Montana are visiting Mrs. John Henderson's.

Mr. Iden Leeder is expected home from Cuba this week.

Miss McGowan of Toronto, is a guest of her sister, Mrs. Munro.

Stanley Hessenauer, of Blenheim, spent the week end here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernst of Kitchener, motored here for the week end.

Rev. Mr. Hamilton and family visited at T. Swalwell's on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Schilling entertained visitors from Chesley Sunday.

Mrs. Norman Switzer, of Lethbridge, is a guest of Mrs. George Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald of London, spent last week at Robert Lamont's.

Miss M. Hart, of Toronto, is the guest of Miss Shier.

Miss Vogan, of Walkerton, is visiting Miss L. Northgrave.

Miss Myrtle McLaren is visiting in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Campbell of Palmerston, are holidaying here.

Miss Leslie Northgrave is holidaying at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Niblett and Billy, of Owen Sound, spent Sunday here.

Mr. Stafford, of Owen Sound, spent the week-end here.

Mr. John Rock, of Mitchell, a former resident of Port Elgin, has gone on a trip west.

Mr. and Mrs. D. McKerracher, of Walkerton, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Coulter last week.

The Women's Institute and Red Cross members have given the library building a thorough cleansing.

Robert Cunningham, of Tara formerly of Port Elgin, was a visitor here last Saturday.

Mr. Henry Wipp and Mr. Sol Schrank are spending a holiday fishing at Stokes Bay.

Morris Hendry returned last week from Guelph hospital, and is recovering rapidly.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Emery Wismer, Toronto, on Tuesday, July 31st, a daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Kennedy of New York, are spending a vacation with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kennedy.

Several of our townsmen took advantage of Civic holiday to attend the races at Teeswater. The program is reported as fair.

Civic holiday was spent very quietly. Most of the town residents spent it in their gardens, while some went into the country to assist their friends with the hay.

On Friday last a number of the Methodist congregation gave a party in honor of the 13th wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. Christie, who are holidaying at the Grove.

The quilting at the library on Friday afternoon by the ladies of the Red Cross was a great success. Many women gave assistance. Supper was served in the library, and altogether an enjoyable time was spent, and incidentally a good deal of work done.

The town was given a little sensation on Friday afternoon, when a couple of Southampton young lads attempted to get away with some goods in front of Mr. A. F. George's store. It is reported the boys put some eatables in their pockets and "beat it." The eagle eye of Constable Henry got a glimpse of the operations, and he immediately commandeered, Eaton's fine new car, and the butcher was commanded to drive full speed after the boys. The lads were soon overhauled and Constable Henry proceeded to lay down the law and punish the boys by frightening them out of several years' growth.

Ladies of the town and district are given the privilege of a practical talk and demonstration in the conservation of foodstuffs on Saturday afternoon in the library. The meeting will begin promptly at 2 p. m., and will be addressed by Miss Pritchard, teacher of domestic science in the Owen Sound Collegiate. She is a graduate of McDonald Hall, and sent by the government, as many others are, throughout the province. The Food Controller is using this means of public meetings to get in touch with housewives. The meeting is entirely free, and it is hoped our women, both in the country and town, will turn out in large numbers.

Public School Board Meeting

The school board met at the Library on Friday evening, as a special meeting. Chairman Mitchell presided, and there were present Trustees Shierholtz, Swalwell, McFadden, Kennedy, Black and the secretary, J. A. Chapman.

The secretary presented the report of the number of children attending school who were out of the town limits. There were eight in all, and the families were billed for $16 for each pupil.

Accounts were passed as follows: Telephoning, advertising for teachers, $7.70; secretary's acc, $2.94, Times acc. 90c.

Requests for increases in salaries on the part of the teachers and also the janitor gave the board some work. Miss Currie and Miss Cassidy each asked for an increase and were granted $25 each, making Miss Currie's salary $601 and Miss Cassidy's $525. Miss Toft receives $500 and Miss Barnett $550. The Principal's salary is $1000.

In the matter of the caretaker, Mr Gray has been receiving $225. The board added $15 to this, and drafted rules and regulations defining certain additional duties.

The coal situation was discussed. There was no coal in sight at present. The board used thirty tons of coal and 20 cords of wood last year, and the same amount will have to be laid in for this winter, although it is hoped the winter will not be so severe.

Some repairs to the school building were discussed, and the board adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

More Like Coney Island Every Day

We're getting in the class of the seaside resorts these days, and with a few touches almost like Coney Island.

Since the new cement road has been made to the lake hundreds of people are enjoying the excellent beach and bathing.

Sundays bring great crowds, and they come quite a distance. Last Sunday people from Kitchener, Walkerton Hanover, Chesley, Paisley and Tara, as well as the people from the immediate district. Altogether there were close to 200 persons along the shore. Many went in bathing, while others sat along the beach and enjoyed the breezes.

One thing leads to another. Since the road was built no one expected such a rush of visitors, but the result of this is that there must be a house that people may don their bathing clothes. There are not enough trees for bathers to get behind, and besides, what trees there are, are not large enough to obstruct the view, while the disrobing is going on, or the donning either, and no less proper houses are erected our beach will have the movies faded to a frazzle, and people will be coming here in thousands instead of hundreds.

Bigger and Better Than Ever

The prize lists are now in the hands of Secretary Elliott and will be mailed to any address. Port Elgin Fair is bigger and better than ever. The Canadian Bankers' Association is giving prizes amounting to $30 for beef type calves and bacon type hogs exhibited by boys or girls at our fair. There are large prizes for stock, Agricultural Products, ladies work and many other departments which should encourage farmers and those who live in town and villages to get their exhibits ready early. The dates of the big fall fair are Sept 19th and 20th. Secure a prize list and encourage the directors by showing the best you have on the farm, in the garden or that can be made by deft hands.

New Road For Cottagers

More progress is being made toward a good road for those at the beach. Roads have been partly constructed the past summer to help out those with autos who have cottages along the lake shore.

During the past week Mr Max Singer was here from Toronto, and along with the council went over the ground of a proposed new piece of road to connect up the Mitchell and Singer roads recently made. This new piece will make a curve connecting the two present roads. Mr. Singer consented to give the portion of his land required, while Mr. Mitchell also stated to the council, that he was willing to give land for the project. The cottagers, for their part, will make a contribution sufficient to pay for the survey.

The new road, therefore, will be a properly dedicated one for the use of the public.

Shingles For Sale

A carload of B. C. Shingles, xxx and xx just arrived. Get prices at Miller Bros., Port Elgin. 31-2tp

Southampton beat Port Elgin in baseball here Monday night the score being 7-3.

Miss Berta Gilbert is home after a vacation in Chicago.

CARD OF THANKS

The White School Patriotic Society desire, through The Times, to thank many friends for their assistance in providing so liberally for their garden party.

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for 50 lines or over in a year 5c a line; regular weekly users of liners, 8c per line casual users of liners, 10c per line Black type, count two lines for one.

McMurray's for pure ice cream.

Oats for sale. North End Store.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

White tennis trousers, $1.75 a pair at North End.

The South End is showing a big range of crepe, silk and voile blouses.

Fresh oranges, lemons, and bananas always on hand. North End Store.

If you want a pint of good cream try McMurray's.

Another shipment of feed wheat. North End Store.

We have added two new lines of Colleen corsets, prices are lower than regular lines. South End store.

McMurray keeps good milk for sale.

Congoleum border, 36 inches wide, 60c per yard at North End.

Cheap shoes, Misses, Ladies' and Men's, not up to date in style, from 85c up. South End Store.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

In teas we are giving absolutely the best value in town. South End store.

Fleet foot running shoes, all sizes, white, tan, navy. North End store.

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koebke's

Sugars are advancing in price. Get your supply from the South End.

Try Koebke for your next grocery or fruit order

Koebke sells Neilson's soldier chocolate. Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front

Gunner McMurray Urges Passing Of Conscription

I am well and happy under the circumstances. This is not exactly a pleasant spot, but it's a historical one, made so by the gallant Canadian lads a couple of months ago. The effect of our artillery is visible all round this part of France. We have put it all over friend Fritz in this sector. If his aircraft comes our airmen get him. If he opens up something our artillery gets him. Our battery has only had six casualties since I came here.

All of the boys here are looking to Canada to pass the Conscription Bill. It is the only way.

Why should the boys in France dodge shrapnel and wade in mud while those at home go canoeing and motoring and taking in theatres and dances?

Gunner Cecil McMurray.

Learning Every Day

More people are learning every day that trading at Barbor's store affords splendid advantages in goods and styles, and most important of all, in paying less money. Making wise selections, means saving these days, and any selections made here always result in satisfaction. This week special bargains are being offered in shoes for Men and Boys. Take time to enquire at Barbor's store for special shoe values.

NOTICE

Messrs. J. J. George and H. Crowe, having rented the American Hotel stables, intend to keep them open for the public for use for rigs and autos. They are free to church goers on Sundays. Parties wanting yearly lease of stalls may apply to above.

Cream Separators to go Cheap

Now for a bargain in cream separators. I have seven Standard Cream Separators left, 1917 models. While they last they will be sold for $72 each. Guaranteed to skim 520 lbs of milk per hour. Latest patent interchangeable capacity. The Standard holds the skimming record for America for the past nine years. I hereby offer to give a machine free to any farmer who can induce any agent to test against the Standard and beat it.

J. J. George, Agent.

Rev. Mr. Schwartz of Kitchener, preaches in the U. B. churches Sunday.

Mrs. J. A. Chapman, Mrs. Bert Jackson and Master Rupert, visited at Dobbinton last week.

Saugeen Council meets Saturday. The rate of taxation will be decided upon then.

Mrs. F. Scholtz, of Woodstock, and Mrs. G. W. Johnson, and children, are visiting at the Baptist parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland Thamer, of Kitchener, are spending a few weeks with Rev. and Mrs. Hallman, at Saints Rest Cottage.

Mr. Bert Jackson and his mother, Mrs William Jackson, of Maple, motored up and spent the week end with Mrs. J. A. Chapman.

Mr. George Willoughby, the treasurer of the Nyal Company, of Detroit, and a former Port Elgin young man, joined his wife here for the week end, at the home of his parents. Mr. Willoughby notes there is a splendid feeling of kinship between the people of the United States and of Canada, and the Canadian people are lauded for their part in the great war by the Americans.

Showing the Side We are On

A visitor in town is Mr. D. W. Kennedy, and many old friends are glad to see him. He is on the news staff of The New York Times, and one of the many young men who have gone from country print shops and made good in the newspaper offices of the big places. "One would scarcely know there was a war on up this way," said Mr. Kennedy. "You people don't seem very enthusiastic. Perhaps it's because you have been in the war for three years. One thing I expected to see was a flag in every house, but I confess while travelling through Canada, especially in the small towns, it looked to me as if the Canadians were frightened to let people know what side they are on in this great fight. You may have plenty of German descent people in this part of the country, but you haven't got the type of German we have."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that a man apparently can express a mild liking for the German idea of kultur in Canada, and not be molested, while in the United States we are doing this thing thoroughly, and a man or woman who in any way shows any liking, by word or deed, for the Germans methods, is jugged at once. Let me give you a little story illustrating the way the authorities are dealing with pro Germans, and how quickly the pro Allies report any misdemeanors. A short time ago a woman went to a butcher in New York, which was near my home, and asked for some steak, requesting the butcher to cut it up real fine. The big German butcher replied: "You bet I'll cut it up fine. I'll cut it up as fine as the Germans will cut up the allies before this war is through."

"The woman went from the shop at once, brought a policeman and the butcher was arrested. The butcher is now in an internment camp, and his shop is closed up."

"Yes, we were slow in coming into war, and we stood an awful lot, but we want to say that now that we are in it, we are in it thoroughly, and we're cleaning up the enemy right at our homes, as well as in the field of battle.'

Joseph Sieffert Dies In Kitchener

After an illness of a few weeks' duration brought on by old age Joseph Sieffert died at the home of his daughter in Kitchener, Friday in his 81st year.

The remains were brought to Southampton on Monday and laid to rest in the cemetery, services being in charge of the Roman Catholic church.

Deceased was well-known here, for he was one of the early settlers, coming to Saugeen Tp. nearly 60 years ago. He was born in Germany, coming to Canada first settling in Waterloo. He was a Liberal in politics and in religion of the Roman Catholic faith. His wife predeceased him 16 years ago, and for past 13 years he has made his home with his daughter in Kitchener.

There are five sons and two daughters left, John, 12th of Bruce; Jos. S., North Bruce; Clem. Michigan; George, on the homestead; William; Mrs. Ohlheiser, Kitchener; Mrs. Haus, Formosa.

Rain Needed or Else Small Potatoes

A light shower passed around here on Sunday night, but only served to lay the dust.

Rain is badly needed if the potato crop is to amount to anything. Scores of town people went into potato growing as their share of the production campaign, and as a result every available lot and corner was worked on. Many farmers in the townships also planted big fields.

The crop is good to look at, and results promise fine if rain comes. A sample hill dug up by a Saugeen farmer produced 20 potatoes, but they were small. Enquiry of a number of others has proved the same. Rain is needed if the potatoes and roots are to come to anything.

Wheat is being cut now, and there are some beautiful fields of it in this section. Hay is well stored.

Voter's List 1917

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE

Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address

LOUIS BLOCH,
22-41c Owen Sound, Ont.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson VII. August 12, 1917.

Josiah's Good Reign.—2 Chronicles 34: 1-13.

Commentary.—I. A godly king (vs. 1, 2.) 1. Josiah—The name means "Jehovah supports." We know that Amon, the father of Josiah, was a wicked man, but we may infer from the name given to the boy that Jedidah, his mother, was devoted to the true God. Eight years old—During the early years of his reign he must have been under the guidance of others, and these, no doubt, were loyal to Jehovah. We may reasonably suppose that his mother exerted a salutary influence over him. 2. Did....right—"He did that which was right," not because the tendency of the nation was in that direction, for it was not, but in spite of the prevailing idolatry. Although he had the disadvantage of the evil influence of a wicked father and had to face deplorable conditions in his kingdom, he ranks as one of the most excellent kings in the history of the nation. He was the last good king of Judah. In the sight of the Lord—His goodness was not simply external; it passed the scrutiny of him who sees motives as well as acts. Josiah was right at heart. In the ways of David—David was looked upon as the model king of Israel.

II. Idolatry destroyed (vs. 3-7.) 3. Eighth year—Josiah was then sixteen years old. Yet young—He was still young although youths mature at an earlier age in the East than in the western world. At the age of fourteen to sixteen choices are generally made that determine moral and spiritual character. Began to seek after the God of David—Beginning early he could devote an unwasted life and unimpaired powers to the service of God. This date marks his entrance upon the divine life, a life that was to be abundantly fruitful in the moral reformation of the nation. In the twelfth year—Another of the important dates in Josiah's reign. Began to purge Judah—His own righteous heart and life would not admit of his stopping short of the reformation which was greatly needed. He saw that it was necessary to tear down the structure of heathenism that had been raised up, before he could successfully re-establish the worship of Jehovah. He began the work of reform at the capital of his realm. High places—Shrines were placed by idolatrous nations upon hills and mountains, and the Jews had adopted their religious practises. Groves—Asherim, symbols of degrading heathen worship. 4. Altars of Baalim—Baalim is the plural of Baal, who was worshipped in a variety of forms. In his presence—In the presence of Josiah, so that he might see that the work was proceeding in a thorough manner. Images—"Sun-images."—R. V.

5. Burnt the bones of the priests — The burning of human bones upon the altars would forever render them polluted. "Idolatry was so widespread and deep-seated that it must be violently torn from the life of the people." The prophecy of which this is the fulfilment is found in 1 Kings 13: 1, 2, 6. Manasses, and Ephraim, etc.—The northern kingdom had been taken into captivity by the Asyrians nearly a century before this, yet there were few of the people of Israel in the land. Josiah probably purposed to carry his reforms to these tribes, as far as to Naphtali on the north and to Simeon on the south, to rid them of idolatry and to incorporate them in his kingdom. Assyria was in conflict with the Medes and was tottering to her fall, and hence was paying little attention to conditions in Israel. With their mattocks—"In their ruins."—R. V. 7. He returned to Jerusalem—Josiah was satisfied that the work which he had undertaken had been thoroughly accomplished.

III. The temple repaired (vs. 8-13). 8. Eighteenth year—Josiah was now in the twenty-sixth year of his life. Ten years before this he had sought the Lord. He had been for years engaged in his great task of destroying idolatry from the land and this he had accomplished. Had purged.... the house—The years of idolatry had left the temple neglected and polluted. Josiah followed the illustrious example of Hezekiah in cleansing the house of the Lord. It was not enough to destroy idolatry; the service and worship of the true God must be restored. Shaphan—He was the scribe, an officer of high rank. To repair the house of the Lord—The three men to whom was entrusted this work were among the principal men of the city and nation. It may be readily seen that the temple would need repairs, as it ha

years
nah, w kiah—
son of livere
the e money money but a other descen secula
ple.
"Of t
R. V.
the ov repair work
Timbe
how g repairs must b other hundre buildin make

There were either the chambers which were built about the temple or buildings connected with it. Which the kings of Judah had destroyed—Manasseh and Amon are probably meant. The kings had neglected the house of the Lord and allowed it to fall into decay, if they had not actually defaced it. 12. Did the work faithfully—The men had their hearts in the work, as the work, as was the case when the temple was repaired during the reign of Joash. Where there is genuine love for God's house and its services, earnest efforts will be made to keep it in good repair. Could skill of instruments of musick—"Were skillful with instruments of music."—R. V. 13. Scribes, and officers and porters—The scribes were clerks, copyists and translators, the officers were magistrates and the porters were those who kept the temple doors. These were of the tribe of Levi.

Questions.—What did Manasseh do after he was restored to his kingdom? Who was Amon? What was his character and the length of his reign? How did he die? How old was Josiah when he began to reign? What was the character of his reign? When was he converted? What did he do in the twelfth year of his reign? How was it possible for Josiah to carry his reforms into the land of Israel?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Reformation in Judah.

I. Idolatry overthrown.

II. True worship resumed.

I. Idolatry overthrown. The history of Josiah furnishes one of the most remarkable instances contained in scripture of real goodness springing up and attaining high development under extraordinarily unfavorable circumstances. His father, Amon, "did evil in the sight of the Lord" to an extent scarcely equaled by any other king of Judah. Manasseh may be counted worse because he set at naught all the restraints of good training, the example of a godly father and the instructions of the prophet Isaiah. He was worse because of his introduction of many of the most corrupting forms of idolatry. In the midst of that period of decline Josiah came to the throne to redeem for a time the history of his nation, and for a time to save it from impending doom. Regardless of all God's merciful dealings, of all the judgments and warnings which he had sent or of the influence and example of good kings or prophets, the people of Judah had continued to grow worse and worse. Vice had taken deep root among the people and national faults had become stereotyped in the Jewish character. A century previous the northern kingdom of the ten tribes was carried into captivity. For its great idolatry the destruction of the kingdom of Judah was close at hand. In Josiah was reproduced the piety of the best sovereigns who had preceded him. His career was singularly straightforward and consistent. His early piety may have been due in part to the quiet but powerful influence of a good mother. Other influences which surrounded him seemed unfavorable to the growth of true religion and the fear of God. Unusual godlessness and corruption had sunk the nation in the depths of degradation. At such a time as this Josiah began to seek the Lord. He determined that he would worship God only. When twenty years old he began to purge Judah from idolatry. When twenty-six years old he began to repair the house of the Lord which had been long unused and neglected. God gave him strength and crowned his efforts with blessing and success. He boldly denounced and destroyed idol-worship. As soon as Josiah was free from the trammels which confined a Jewish prince during his minority, when he could show what his inclinations were, he courageously set himself to undo the evil that his father and grandfather had done. The reformation was earnest, thorough and comprehensive.

II. True worship resumed. Josiah was a man whose activity was inspired by true religious feeling. The disadvantages of his extreme youth, the degeneracy of the times and the bad effects of his father's reign were overcome because he fixed his faith upon God. The recorded actions of Josiah which marked his imitation of King David were his attachment to God's house, his devotion to his service, his love for God's law and his reverence for godly men. It was becoming in Josiah to do everything that was required for the strength and beauty of the temple. In that sacred edifice centred the religious life of the nation. There God manifested himself as he did in no other place. The work of the destruction of idols was well done before the work of construction began. In the work of repairing the temple Josiah honored the people by encouraging them to co-operate with him in the noble work. They were weary of the policy and extreme doings of paganism. They were ready to rally to the support of the young king. Previous to the eighteenth year of his reign, Josiah's work was mostly the result of his individual action. At that period the movement entered on a new plane and reached national dimensions. The immediate occasion of that change was the finding of the law in the temple, and that was owing to the repairs which the king had ordered to be made on the sacred edifice. Josiah's methods were observed in the collecting of the money, in the placing of the workmen and in the trust reposed in ...erseers. There was liberality on

...rt of the people.

T. R. A.

...gent Treatment for Burns

...pain is bad.
...keep your head.
...ns are of two kinds.
... is from dry and the other moist

...t thing to do in cases which ad-
...f home treatment is to exclude

...listers form, pick with sterilized
... and apply solution of water and
...g soda.
...eline or white of an egg after the
...an alkali burn should be drench-
...th water and vinegar before ap-
...g oil.
...w what to do before you have a
... in the family. Keep absorbent
..., olive oil and a bottle of linseed
...nd lime water, equal parts, for
...rgencies.

Better cut the clothes from the body in case of serious burn. Apply olive oil to the flesh and cover with cotton batting until physician arrives.

"Waist Wear."

Japanese obi bows,
Turkish hip sashes,
English leather belts,
Ecclesiastical cinctures,
Crush girdles of Chinese brocade.

Constitutional government is, par excellence, a government of law.—Woodrow Wilson.

Paris Green!
Bug Death!
Look after those potatoes right away.
Hay Forks
Binder Twine
Screen doors

SELLING EGGS BY THE POUND

Weight Instead of Number the Most Economic Method

(By Lawrence Irwell.

Until eggs are sold by weight, neither the poultry keeper nor the consumer will receive what he or she is entitled to. The latter, as matters now stand, pays a different price every time eggs are bought, because eggs vary greatly in size and weight. The consumer has the advantage to-day and loses to-morrow. When the price of eggs is based on weight; the buyer will always know what to expect.

The poultry raiser is, in reality, more interested in selling his eggs by weight than the consumer is in buying them in that manner, for it takes more food to produce large eggs than small ones, consequently large eggs cost the producer more than small ones. The existing plan of selling eggs by the dozen leads to sending them to market without regard to uniformity and bantam eggs assist in making up a dozen. When eggs are sold by weight, the large ones will be selected, all eggs will be sorted, and as quotations will be given for large, medium and small eggs, by the pound, all eggs will be sent to market in a more attractive condition than they now are.

Oranges are always sold by the dozen, it is true, but they are sorted, and big oranges are never sold at the same price as little ones.

To sell eggs by the dozen is an injustice to hens. Some hens produce eggs and weigh eight to the pound; other hens lay lighter eggs, consequently ten are required to make a pound. On an average, a hen's egg weighs about two ounces, or eight to the pound, a dozen eggs weighing one and a half pounds.

AIDS COST OF PRODUCTION.

A hen that lays ten eggs to the pound is sure to be regarded as an excellent layer on account of the number of eggs which she produces, and she will be selected as a producer in preference to the hen that lays only eight eggs to the pound, because the latter lays fewer eggs. Nevertheless, the hen laying the smaller number of eggs may have produced a heavier weight of eggs than the apparently more prolific hen. But she gets no credit for it because eggs are sold by the dozen, and not by weight.

Black and white Leghorns, Houdans, Light Brahmas and Minorcas are excellent layers of large eggs, and they would probably be greatly in demand if eggs were sold on a rational plan—by weight. Indeed, when this plan is adopted, something approaching a revolution in the raising of hens for eggs production will occur. Eggs have been exhibited which were so heavy that six weighed a pound. When a hen produces such eggs as these, she does much more work than the average hen.

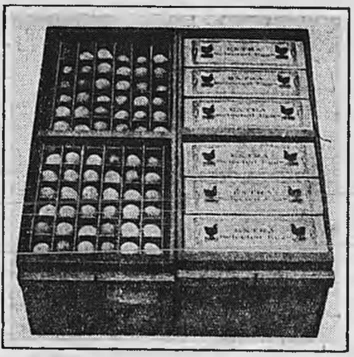
If eggs are sold by weight, hens that produce light eggs would be killed, thus gradually increasing the size of eggs, and bringing them to a greater degree of uniformity. There may be some hens in a flock which lay more eggs than others, and without trap nests the difficulty of distinguishing such hens may be considerable, but as a general rule large and vigorous hens lay large eggs.

When eggs are sold according to weight, better male birds will be raised. Only large eggs will be used for hatching chicks with a view to improvement. This will extend to roosters in the same way that bulls from well-known milk producing cows are used as sires in preference to those from ordinary cows. Moreover, expenses would be equalized, and a more complete record of the actual cost would be kept. The poultry farmer could then learn how many pounds of food are required to produce the greatest weight of eggs, with the least expenditure of money.

So long as eggs are sold by the dozen, farmers and poultry raisers will not be able to arrive at any definite facts in regard to the true cost of producing eggs, and the amount of profit cannot correctly be estimated, for to-day's calculation will not apply to-morrow.

Both producers and consumers would do well, in their own interest, to agitate this question. There is no good reason for continuing the present custom of buying and selling eggs by the dozen, and there are many reasons for discarding it. Justice to consumers as well as to producers demands that a change be made. Only by weight can fair sales of eggs be ensured and only by selling eggs by weight can poultry raisers properly breed chickens and improve them as they should be improved to obtain the best results.

—The Canadian Countryman.



The question of selling eggs by weight istead of by number is a contentious one, but worthy of serious consideration. There cannot be any doubt that the consumer would benefit.

Sunlight Treatment of Wounds, Gas Gangrene

One of the most vivid medical documents of the war is the report of Dr. Vidal, in charge of the sunlight treatment of wounds, and especially of gas gangrene, at the military hospitals of Nice. Though described with a physician's use of scientific terms, it is a popular study, very clear and very practical. It begins with a criticism of previous methods of heliotherapy, as the sunlight treatment is called. It is not new, except in its scientific aspects, but these were not understood until the war taught men its lessons. It is certainly curious that the old sun worshippers were right, at least, in one article of their creed, and physicians who came later made a just forecast of the part to be played hereafter by the sun's rays in medicine. Before the publication of the effects of sunlight on wounds and gas gangrene the power of this agent has been crudely grasped by physicians of to-day, who prematurely and not very wisely focussed the rays on the wound, believing that the heat of the sun had both healing and antiseptic properties.

Dr. Vidal says this is a mistake. The curative effect lies in rays of light whose characteristic quality is to affect the photographic plate. These are the actinic rays, which every photographer knows. They do their work in summer and winter, at the top of the highest mountain as well as in the lowest valley, and in the high light of the north pole; so that heat is not the secret of their power. So important did this question appear to the French authorities that a special congress met at Cannes, where the most eminent chemists and men of science, D'Arsonval, Berthelot and Vallot, read a report that these rays were in reality ultra-violet rays, and that the quantity of them in sunlight varied within the most narrow limits. They consist of extremely rapid vibrations of the atmosphere, causing an infinite number of waves of short lengths. Clouds and rain interfere with them, but on clear days they exert their power in all seasons and in all climates.

Hence Dr. Vidal writes that heliotherapy does not mean to warm ourselves in the sun. The cure is not a thing of accident or luck, but is secured by following certain rules. The rays of the sun must fall directly on the wound; that is, without the interposition of glass or lenses or gauze. It is progressive, with intervals of repose. The first exposure lasts five minutes. On the next day there are two periods of treatment or insolation of five minutes each, with intervals of five minutes in the shade. This leads on gradually to exposures totalling three or four hours a day, the insolation being interrupted by short periods of rest. A fine set of illustrations shows the progress of the cure. Rows of soldiers bask in the sun in the courtyards and on the verandas of the hospitals at Nice. It is not the least pleasant way of passing days of war in convalescence. The climate is hot in summer, but the beds of the troops are so placed that the glare and heat are tempered by fountains and fans. Every kind of wound is treated, but the application of heliotherapy seems most effectual in ulcers, poisoned wounds and those that heal slowly. Dr. Vidal takes a most sanguine view of its benefits in gas gangrene. His description is literally translated as follows: "The results of this method touch the marvellous. In a few minutes, under the eyes of witnesses, the wounds undergo improvement; at first they redden, distilling a clear, abundant liquid, then they dry and granulate. In a few weeks the scars of healing are completely formed, which under ordinary methods of treatment would have required long months." One of the most striking things in the cure is the aid it gives to other processes. The initial healing set up by the Carrel-Dakin irrigation is carried on to completion. Likewise heliotherapy has proven a vigorous prop of the serums in use among French surgeons.

Another study of sunlight cures has just appeared from the pen of Dr. O. Leo of the military hospitals of Algiers. His report, which is remarkable for its completeness and the ocular proofs given by a series of excellent photographs, containing some features that are not found in the Nice account.

Thus a frequent complication of wounds of the chest and legs in modern warfare is tuberculosis. The disease may attack the lungs and glands and skin after a shell wound. Consumption sometimes follows, with ulcers and sloughing. Tuberculosis of wounds does not seem to be very fatal, but it heals slowly owing to the bodily inertia of the victims, and here the effects of sunlight are brilliant and lasting. The insolation revives the tissues and galvanizes a wasted limb into a real semblance of life, which is just what is needed to restore vital tissues and end in cure. The pictures of these wounds are deprived of all the horrors by the result. Nothing is more convincing than these cases, for it is possible to see the wound in all its natural stages and follow the daily progress of the sunlight cure. At Algiers it is carried out in the open air or in the pavilions of the hospitals. The ultra-violet rays of the sun are shown to be the curative element. They are allowed to fall on the wound unchecked or weakened by bandage or screen. The Algerian sun is hotter than that of Nice, but fortunately it is found that the higher temperature of the rays, if not artificially increased by glass or lenses, is not a drawback.

Owing to the comparatively blunted sensation in gas gangrene and tuberculosis, the heat of the sun is scarcely noticed by the men. If it becomes oppressive they are moved into the coolness of shade. The usual effect of heliotherapy on the tuberculous flesh is to make it scar quickly; it is said that it becomes brown, and over this the healthy skin begins to grow until it covers the whole surface of the wound. In the cases of gangrene there is something especially arresting about heliotherapy. The sunlight virtually expels the gas and thus reduces the swelling. The editor of the official French military organ Le Caducee, says that these results should have wider publicity. They are usually definite, clear and practical.
York Sun.

MARKET REPORTS

TORONTO MARKETS.

FARMERS' MARKET.

Eggs, new, per doz.	$0 45	$0 50
Bulk going at	0 45	0 46
Butter, farmers' dairy	0 35	0 40
Spring chickens, lb.	0 30	0 40
Roasters	[illegible]	0 25
Boiling fowl, lb.	0 23	0 25
Live hens, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Spring ducks, lb.	[illegible]	0 30

MEATS—WHOLESALE.

Beef, forequarters, cwt.	$12 00	$14 00
Do., hindquarters	18 00	20 00
Carcases, choice	15 50	16 50
Do., common	12 00	12 50
Do., medium	12 50	14 50
Do., prime	19 00	21 00
Heavy hogs	21 50	18 50
Shop hogs	21 50	22 50
Mutton, heavy	10 00	12 00
Do., light	17 00	19 00
Abattoir hogs	23 50	22 50
Lambs, lb.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., Spring, lb.	0 24	0 25

SUGAR MARKET.

Royal Acadia sugar has temporarily been withdrawn from the wholesale sugar market, and yesterday Redpath sugar advanced 20 cents on all grades. Redpath's granulated is now selling at $8.54 per 100 lbs.

Local wholesale quotations on Canadian refined sugar, Toronto delivery, in effect July 28th:—

St. Lawrence granulated	100 lbs.	8.64
Lantic granulated	100 lbs.	8.61
Royal Acadia granulated	100 lbs.	8.64
Redpath granulated	100 lbs.	8.54
[illegible] crystal	100 lbs.	8.84
No. 1 yellow, all refiners	100 lbs.	7.94
No. 2 yellow	100 lbs.	7.84
No. 3 yellow	100 lbs.	7.74

TORONTO CATTLE MARKETS.

Trade in cattle was steady. Other [illegible] were higher.

Cattle, choice	11 00	11 50
Butcher cattle, choice	11 00	12 00
Butcher cattle, medium	10 40	10 75
Butcher cattle, common	7 75	9 75
Butcher, cows, choice	8 00	9 50
Butcher cows, medium	6 75	7 50
Butcher cows, canners	5 25	5 75
Butcher bulls	6 50	9 00
Feeding steers	7 75	9 25
Stockers, choice	7 00	8 25
Stockers, light	6 00	7 00
Milkers, choice	80 00	120 00
Springers, choice	60 00	120 00
Sheep, ewes	4 00	9 50
Bucks and culls	3 00	6 50
Lambs	13 00	14 25
Hogs, fed and watered	16 25
Calves	9 00	14 25

OTHER MARKETS.

WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE.

Fluctuations yesterday on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange were as follows:—

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
Wheat—
Oct.	2 30	2 30	2 27¾	2 28⅝
Oats—
July	0 78¼	0 79¼	0 78¼	0 78⅝
Oct.	0 66¼	0 66¼	0 65¾	0 65⅝
Dec.	0 65¼	0 65¼	0 64¾	0 65⅜
Flax—
July	3 16½	3 18	3 16½	3 21
Oct.	3 17	3 20	3 17	3 20
Dec.	3 25

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

Minneapolis.—Wheat—July closed $2.56; Sept., $2.20; cash, No. 1 hard, $3; No. 1 Northern, $2.90; cash, No. 1 hard, $3; No. 1 Northern, $2.90 to $2.95; No. 2, do., $2.90 to $2.95. Corn—No. 3 yellow, $2.22 to $2.23. $1.25 to $1.32. Flour unchanged. Bran, $32.50 to $33.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

Duluth.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $2.90 1-2; No. 1 Northern, $2.88 1-2; No. 2 do., $2.83 1-2. Linseed, $3.36; July, $3.25; September, $3.20; Oct., $3.20.

THE CHEESE MARKETS.

Utica, N. Y.—The cheese market today showed a 1-2c increase over last week. Sales, 2,800, all kinds, at 20c.

BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

East Buffalo, Report.—Cattle, receipts, 700; slow and easier.

Veals, receipts 200; slow; $5 to $15.

Hogs, receipts 1,500; slow, mixed and yorkers $15.75 to $16.25; light yorkers $15.75 to $15.50; pigs $15 to $15.25; roughs $14.15 to $14.25; stags $12 to $13.

Sheep and lambs, receipts 400; slow; lambs $10 to $15; others unchanged.

SUNDAY AT HOME

A MIND CONTENT.

Sweet are the thoughts that savor of content;
The quiet mind is richer than a crown.
Sweet are the nights in careless slumber spent;
The poor estate scorns fortune's angry frown
Such sweet content, such minds, such sleep, such bliss,
Beggars enjoy, when princes oft do miss.

The homely house that harbors quiet rest;
The cottage that affords no pride nor care;
The mien that 'grees with country music best;
The sweet consort of mirth and modest fare;
Obscured life sets down a type of bliss;
A mind content both crown and kingdom is.

—Robert Greene.

I AM WITH THEE TO SAVE THEE.

Shall the prey be taken from the mighty, or the lawful captive delivered? But thus saith the Lord, Even the captives of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered: for I will contend with him that contendeth with thee. And all flesh shall know that I the Lord am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob.—Fear thou not; for I am with thee; be not dismayed; for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of My righteousness.

We have not a high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.—In that He Himself hath suffered being tempted, He is able to succor them that are tempted.

The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord; and he delighteth in his way. Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand.

THE TWO ADAMS.

(By the late Rev. H. T. Miller.)

We were travelling in the West of Ireland, in view of the Conemara mountains. Said a woman: "There, yer honor, is the same unchangable beauty since Adam was a boy." My dear woman, Adam never was a boy, he was made a full grown man. The first Adam became a living soul, the second Adam a life-giving spirit. The first Adam never was a boy, the second Adam never was an infant. There is no infancy in spirit, no immaturity. There is no milk in the breast for the spirit. No swaddling bands for the soul. No possibility for the spirit tadpole to lose its tail. Did you ever read in history of a spirit weaned from its mother. Is there a mother spirit? Take care neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God." Marriage is only for this lower region; it is temporary, expensive and sometimes disastrous. Who shall draw and set forth in fullness the wreck chart of the race? They say that God makes saints out of sinners, and this is very poor material to work upon; but they forget that while Adam came fresh from the hand of God in Paradise, the second man is the Lord from heaven (I. Cor. 1-4), and that both are complete men, and no babyhood about it. Here are no parts, but a whole, (holy), and a whole at the beginning, not at the finishing. Before the ship is launched she must be seaworthy, water tight; she will receive masts and sails and cargo and commander and crew—but she is able to float before she is put into the water. Away, then, with the fiction that it takes half a lifetime to get fully equipped for service. Remember, You start as men, can you have a higher type than the Lord from heaven coming into the human heart and making all things new; turning out the devil and the darkness and the dread, and bringing light and healing and strength and joy? God appeals to us as men, not half men or three-quarters—but men without subtraction or addition. We are speaking of the personality. Nelson lost an eye in one battle, his right arm in another, but he was Nelson, all the same. The soul of man is entire, the whole man walks on two feet—expresses itself through two eyes. "Go," said God to the prophet, "search the streets of Jerusalem and see if you can find a man." I must have a man with a conscience and a memory, and a heart. I must have a little dignity, ambition, and imagination and more, if I can get it, before I can see the marks of the Lord from heaven.

Roumanian Superstitions.

It is considered lucky to arrive in Roumania accompanied by rain. It means abundance, fertility, the hope of a fine harvest—wealth. Sometimes the peasant women put large wooden buckets of water before their threshold: a full vessel is a sign of good luck. They will even sprinkle water before one's feet, because water means abundance. "I have seen," says the queen of Roumania in an article about the people of her country, "tall, handsome girls step out to meet me with overflowing water jars on their heads; on my approach they stood quite still, the drops splashing over their faces so as to prove that their pitchers were full. It is lucky to meet a cart full of corn or straw coming toward one, but an empty cart is a sure sign of bad luck."

Diplomatic Excuse.

Twin boys who were great fighters moved into the neighborhood. A little boy living next to me had been attacked several times and always came out second-best. One day he was walking with me, and he suddenly stopped across the street from where the twins lived. Letting go my hand he said: "I won't take you any farther, because those twins are scared of me."—Chicago Tribune.

Give the hustler half a chance, and he will take all of it.

Redpath
SUGAR

If better sugar is ever produced than the present REDPATH Extra Granulated, you may be sure it will be made in the same Refinery that has led for over half a century—and sold under the same name—REDPATH.

"Let Redpath Sweeten it." 15

2 and 5 lb. Cartons—10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.

Canada Sugar Refining Co., Limited, Montreal.

Through Many Trials

"Indeed!" Mrs. Lilly says, sternly, with a smile of scorn on her cold, thin lips. And it is on that same word and honor of thine that I am to rely for a surety to thy blameless conduct here, in the position of thy own master, for Sir Philip is a broken man, —broken in health, spirits and fortune; he cannot hold his own against treachery. Thou art thy own master, in sole charge of the poor, afflicted youth, and, moreover, the daily companion of his sister, Imogene Trefusis."

The color mounts again through Dick Dumaresq's sun-browned skin to his fair brow, and his eyes glitter ominously, as he asks, in a low, suppressed voice:

"What has Imogene Trefusis to do in the matter, that you bring her name in?"

For the first time Miriam Lilly shrinks a little from the blaze of wrath and reproach in Dick Dumaresq's eyes; but she answers, sternly and composedly:

"Because, as I say, thou are in daily companionship with her, and Imogene is an innocent maid, but sixteen years of age, and——"

"And my presence under the same roof is contamination," Dumaresq interposes.

"I do not say so; thee knows best as to the truth of that thyself," Mrs. Lilly retorts, firmly. "But I do say to thee plainly that, as the dear child is committed to my charge, I will guard her strictly from any danger that might approach her; ay, Richard, though thou wert my sister's son twice over!"

"Guard her from what? What danger have you to guard Imogene Trefusis from?" Dick Dumaresq asks, in an uncertain voice, and, in spite of the scornful smile on his lips, there is a curious light in his eyes as he looks away through the open window at the blue sky, the hot, bright sunlight, and the deepening shadow of the wall of the courtyard.

Miriam Lilly does not answer for a moment; in fact, she would willingly recall her last words were it possible, but it is not possible, and Dick Dumaresq repeats his question in a quiet, but ominous tone, and his golden-brown eyes flash dangerously as he rivets his gaze on her; she has no choice but to reply, but in her agitation she speaks more harshly than she means to do.

"If occasion should arise, as I trust and believe it never will—but if it should, and that innocent girl should be tempted to forget her station, I warn thee, Richard, thou wilt find an enemy in me," she says, sternly. "Thou mayst have the gift of winning the liking and love of such pure, simple-hearted girls as she—thou hast personal beauty and a lawless nature; thou art in a position where thou never shouldst have been; but I warn thee plainly that if thou break thy trust and take advantage of thy privileges, I will make thee repent it! Now thou art warned, and I care not for thy anger," she adds, for the young man's face is livid with wrath and mortification—"if thou dost not incur mine all will be well."

A moment Dick Dumaresq stands silent, fighting a fiercer battle within his breast than the cold, stern woman could imagine in the least degree. His face is pale, and the veins on his temple stand out darkly defined; but the menaces and suggestions of his baseness and treachery have stung too deeply, and the wounds rankle too bitterly to be borne in patience.

"You have done more harm with your well-meant warning this afternoon than I can undo while I remain here," he says, bitterly. "You have roused an evil spirit, and I will have to exercise him. But leave things alone for the future, I warn you! Leave Imogene Trefusis, my master's daughter, in her high-bred position above me—though my birth is as good as hers. Leave me to my honor and good faith to guard me, and you will do well."

"If thou will assure me so," Miriam Lilly says, deprecatingly; "if thou wilt be guided by the dictates of honor and honesty in all thy dealings."

"I will give you no assurances and make you no promises," he retorts, coldly; "you did not solicit them without menaces and warnings. I will act as a man ought to act in the light of Heaven and his fellow creatures; I vowed that to myself before you uttered your menaces and warnings; in the hour of temptation I shall remember that vow made to Heaven and my own soul. I can keep that vow, if you will abstain from ever reminding me of it or the necessity for it."

His talk with Miriam Lilly does not prevent Dumaresq accepting Imogene's invitation later in the day, to go with her and Lionel to Carnluland Cover. He goes, but every word Imogene speaks goes straight to his own heart and makes it throb so loudly he fancies she must hear it.

But Imogene prattles on, all unconscious, and leads the two young men over the slippery rocks in search for fresh supplies for the home aquarium. They lose sight of her for a moment, while she strays to the edge of a cliff, then a shriek splits the air, and Dumaresq, rushing to the spot, sees Imogene has fallen over the cliff, and is only saved from certain death by grasping a tuft of the great, broad-ribbed algae. Dumaresq has to risk his life to reach her, but he does it without a moment's hesitation, and with the help of Lionel she is carried home, with no bones broken, but sustaining a fright that would cling to her forever after.

Somehow the story of the rescue comes out at tea. Miriam Lilly affects to sneer at the accident, but Sir Philip expresses to Dumaresq his gratitude in pompous, but sincere words for saving his daughter's life.

"And I hope—I hope, Mr. Dumaresq," the old baronet adds, gravely, "that the day may come when I can give you a fitting acknowledgment of the debt of gratitude I owe you."

"Such an assurance, Sir Philip, from you," Dumaresq says, gravely, "is an ample acknowledgment of the slight service I was so happy as to render your daughter."

But there is a strange light in his eyes as he looks across at Imogene, who is resting pale and silent, her head resting wearily on her hand; the ruffled locks of soft brown hair clinging around her fingers, the same ruffled silken locks which had lain on his breast this afternoon.

And the light in his eyes grows brighter, and his heart beats high with a wild, passionate resolve for a few moments; then he remembers his oath and sees his temptation.

CHAPTER VIII.

And seeing his temptation before him, and fearing that it may become stronger than him and overcome him in the end, he resolves to avoid being led into temptation, and prays that night, earnestly prays—he, the man who has earned among his former messmates the sobriquet of "Dare-devil Dumaresq!"—that he may be saved from going astray after his inclinations and the yearning of his heart, and so make shipwreck of trust and faith and honor. And his prayer is answered, inasmuch as he is kept out of the way of temptation, kept out of the danger of leisure time, and vain thoughts, or the chance of perilously pleasant meetings—out of the sight of the fair face, the sweet, appealing eyes, the loving, innocent trustfulness of the girl who is his master's daughter."

And this state of things has come about in a way surely dreamed not of, for that evening's walk to the dark Cove of Carnluland has had fateful issues—for the excitement of witnessing his sister's accident has overstrained poor Lionel's diseased nervous system, and all that night, and for two days and nights afterward, the quiet, dusky old rooms behind the baize-covered doors resound with terrible cries, sobs, shrieks and maniacal laughter. He grows quieter after the third day has passed, but the disturbed brain remains subject to violent seizures of excitement. He is alternately moody and hysterically cheerful; and Dumaresq, who acts alone as his guardian and nurse, has a weary time of it; for faithfully and patiently, by day and night, he watches Lionel, never leaving him alone for five minutes.

The June roses are blossoming before the boy is well enough to be allowed to resume all his old ways, to go out fishing with Dumaresq, and riding with him and Sir Philip, who has grown familiar with Dumaresq, and talks to him at time as if he were almost his equal—confides in him mournfully respecting the future he dreads for his poor son, and seems in this hour of the ceaseless sorrow that crushes the old baronet's proud heart to be thankful for Dumaresq's presence and to rely on his advice.

"It is not as if I were a young man or a rich man, Dumaresq," he said, sadly, on one occasion. "I am sixty-five, and my health is far from good. The action of the heart, the doctor says"—Sir Philip says, speaking as if of a distant piece of machinery—"is very weak. And I think sometimes—very often—of—of his future. He will have sufficient income, of course, ample for his simple requirements; but he will be defenseless, friendless; a prey for designing, cruel people, who, for the sake of his title and his small fortune, will surround him when he is left to himself."

"But there are his sisters and his brother, Sir Philip," Dumaresq urges; but the stern shadow on the baronet's thin-lined face does not pass away.

"They will have their own separate interests," he says, coldly. "Vivian will be abroad, most likely, and, of course, his only interest will be his own success in his profession, and the amount of amusement and excitement he can get out of it." Sir Philip says, with cold disparagement of his younger son. "Vivian is very self-seeking; a strong animal selfishness which, with a flow of high spirits, helps him to make his way anywhere. I have no fear for Vivian, nor for my daughter, either; on different premises, of course," he adds, with a faint little scornful smile. "My elder daughter Evelyn is sure to marry well; she would grace any station, and I have no doubt she will obtain one worthy of her. And, of course, when she is married, her younger sister's welfare will be her care," he says, and so dismisses Imogene's future, the life, honor and happiness of his best and fairest child with his briefest sentence.

A gleam of suppressed wrath shines in Dumaresq's eyes.

"But I should have thought your daughters possessed such different natures, and such different tastes and ideas," he says, deliberately, as a man would do who was trying unsuccessfully to reason himself out of a belief.

"Yes, I believe they differ a good deal," Sir Philip says, carelessly; and then in a tone of indulgence he adds: "But Imogene is a good, amiable girl, and deeply attached to her sister, so that Evelyn's influence will always have great power over her."

"Heaven forbid!" Dumaresq says, mentally, and grinding his teeth in the endeavor to restrain himself from any startling speech. "Poor, foolish old man! Like many another, your belief is all in the evil angel of your house, while you shut your heart against the good angel."

And almost as he speaks she enters the room, bright and fair as the good spirit of the home he has likened her to, in her pretty summer dress of soft, bluish-gray material, and a great cluster of dewy red roses at her breast.

"The post! the post, papa!" she cries, springing about on tiptoes of eagerness until she suddenly catches sight of Dumaresq, when she instantly subsides, blushing a little and composing herself into gravest demeanor.

But that slight flush and that sudden maner of avoidance, of lowered eyelids and grave, unsmiling lips, have come to be somewhat familiar to Dumaresq during the past two weeks as the type of Imogene's invariable bearing toward him.

"None for you, Imogene," Sir Philip says, calmly, unheeding the sudden look of disapointment clouding her bright face.

"Not from Evelyn—not one?" Imogene ejaculates, "and she has not writen for a fortnight past!"

"There is one from your Aunt Althea," Sir Philip says, as if that makes all amends, "a letter to me, and yes—here is one for you, Dumaresq."

It is a thick, vellum-tinted envelope, but perfectly plain, without crest or monogram, and it is addressed in refined, clear masculine calligraphy. It looks like a gentleman's letter, and Imogene notices it with a secret satisfaction in the evidence it affords of Dumaresq's correspondents, but the next moment she is startled to see, that, reddened and excited at the sight of the letter, Dumaresq almost snatches it from Sir Philip's hand and thrusts it into his pocket.

He makes an excuse for his absence as soon as he can, and hurries away to read his letter, and fearing that he may encounter poor Lionel, who is in a most restless and tiresome mood this morning, if he goes to their suite of rooms, Dumaresq leaves the house altogether and goes out into the garden, where it slopes away to the southwest in three terraces, gay with flowerbeds and standard roses, and below all these is a steep, grassy slope, ending in a knoll of blossoming pink hawthorn, raised above the broad graveled walk that runs inside the high stone wall that incloses the grounds from the narrow by-road, the strip of meadow land, the wide, shingly beach, and beyond the blue ocean underneath the summer sky. And on the little shady knoll, lying on his breast on the soft mossy sod, far away from the chance of watching eyes or listening ears, Dumaresq opens his letter—his cousin's letter—a letter signed with initials almost the same as his own, "R. H. D."

"So good of him to write to me at last, and such a long letter, too, for him, who detests letter writing, poor old fellow," Dumaresq mutters, with a pleased smile and a throb of feeling that dims his eyes as he begins at the affectionate address.

"Dearest old boy——" But only a few lines lower down the smile fades from his lips and the light from his eyes, his hands clinch themselves upon the paper; but he reads on steadily to the end, which, but for the initials after the words, "Ever the same to you as you are to me, friends till death."

And then Dick Dumaresq drops the letter on the mossy sod, and drops his face on it, and he lies there prone on the grass, beneath the spreading boughs with their rosy bloom, so long, so silently, that the bright-eyed birds, twittering in the shade, hop fearlessly nigh as if he were a man stabbed to the heart and stone dead.

"Heaven help me!" he mutters, wiping his damp brow; "has my only friend on earth proved a traitor to me, or have I gone mad in so suspecting him of evil designs against me—of being guilty of cold-blooded selfishness and treachery—when we have been boys and brothers together, sworn friends and allies these fourteen years—when I can remember him, with his golden hair and his blue eyes, in his fresh morning clothes, weeping for his dead mother—a poor little sorrowful boy when he was brought to the court, and I took him by the arm and brought him upstairs to my own room, and gave him my new cricket bat, I remember, and told him I would teach him to swim, and he was comforted?

"And now in this letter, disguise it as he may, Richard Dumaresq, my cousin—my brother, as I have always regarded him," Dick Dumaresq, moistening his dry lips and staring at the paper with aching eyes, as if he fain would read another meaning to the words he gazes on—"asks me if I will not sell him my birthright—asks it as surely as ever Jacob asked it of Esau, and without even Esau's reward of the mess of pottage. He wants to know if I have 'made up my mind' about going to South America, to enroll myself as a volunteer for the next revolutionary skirmish, as I once in a wild mood said I should do some day. He is 'anxious to know' if I have decided for a lawless life in a faraway land, where the chances are ten to one I shall be blotted out in some way!

"For he wants my place, or at least the place that can never be his but with my death. He wants the empty title, and the prestige that goes with it, as well as the old man's gold. He wants all, so that I shall have nothing left. He wants to hedge himself around with honors, wealth and happiness, and leave me bereft as if I had forfeited all right. As if"—Dick Dumaresq says, his face hidden once more on his clasped hands, and his words whispered down among the daisy roots and the million fronds of the soft, green mosses—"as if I carried no heart within my breast to wake up and cry aloud for the sustenance of love and happiness, as if there never could be yearnings in my soul for the possession lacking which the whole world is a blank. He tells me he has fallen 'madly in love,' to use his own words; and he wants to marry this girl whoever she may be—he does not honor me thus far with his confidence—who 'is as ambitious as she is high-bred and beautiful.'

"He wants even my birthright," Dumaresq repeats, mournfully. "Even the empty title which, though I care nothing for in itself, yet I value as my heritage in the land which I have done nothing to forfeit. He wants my name, and home, and birthright just when they had grown dearer than ever to me. He reminds me of the oath—the foolish oath taken in boyish madness to relinquish them forever—just as I was going to pray to him to help me to rescind it—to help me to undo that boyish madness so far as it concerned myself."

(To Be Continued).

Is Breakfast Ready? The answer is easy in the home where Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the regular every day breakfast cereal. Being ready-cooked and ready-to-eat, Shredded Wheat Biscuit is the joy of the housekeeper in Summer. Served with sliced bananas, berries, or other fruit, they make a nourishing, satisfying meal at a cost of a few cents.

Made in Canada.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER
READ THE LABEL
NO ALUM

Baked Potatoes.

Wash them.
And oil them.
You may use lard.
Or butter or olive oil.
Simply rub the fat over the potato.
In this way the skin will be as thin as paper.
Without this oiling much of the potato is wasted in the thick skin.
If there's not a baking fire in the kitchen the potatoes may be put in the ledge of the furnace.

Exhausted Soil.

Where there is "exhausted soil" usually it is the loss of humus that causes the condition. Get sufficient vegetable matter back into the soil, and usually apply manure is the quickest way to accomplish this. Give a dressing of lime to neutralize it in case the soil is sour, and the fertility will be restored. Proper cultivation and handling thereafter, working in vegetable matter every year, will keep it in condition.—New York Sun.

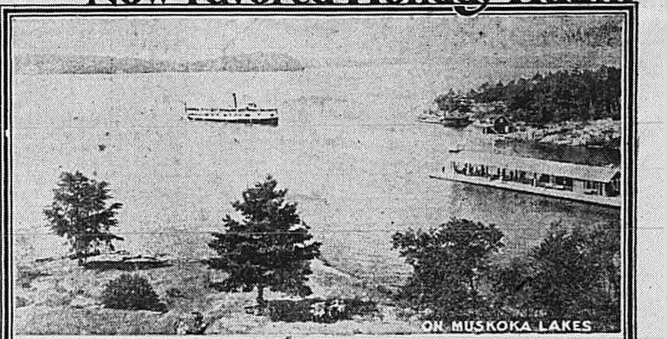
MAKE YOURSELF STRONG

People with strong constitutions escape most of the minor ills that make life miserable for others. Don't you envy the friend who does not know what a headache is, whose digestion is perfect and who sleeps soundly at night? Hw far do you come from this description? Have you ever made an earnest effort to strengthen your constitution, to build up your system to ward off discomfort and disease? Unless you have an organic disease it is generally possible to so improve your physical condition that perfect health will be yours. The first thing to be done is to build up your blood as poor blood is the source of physical weakness. To build up the blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is just the medicine you need. Every dose helps to make new blood, which reaches every nerve and every part of the body, bringing color to the cheeks, brightness to the eyes, a steadiness to the hands, a good appetite and splendid energy. Thousands throughout the country whose condition once made them despair, owe their present good health to this medicine. If you are one of the weak and ailing give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and note the daily gain in new health and abounding vitality.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The hardest work some fellows do is looking for an easy place.

Hunting Ground of Hurons Now Favored Holiday Haunt



ON MUSKOKA LAKES

The regions pictured here are in the Highlands of Ontario, and were the hunting grounds of the Hurons before the ships of Spain turned to the westward from Palos. The Hurons selected in these Highlands of Ontario some of the loveliest districts in Canada. The scenic beauties, the health giving atmosphere and the excellent fishing are now attracting a steadily growing army of visitors. One day's journey from most of the large centres places the traveller in Muskoka, Lake of Bays or Algonquin Park, and the Grand Trunk lines thread the territory in such a manner that every point is made easy of access. From the train you may visit the outfitting stores and then launch out into the deep woods by canoe. Whole families now spend their vacations camping in Algonquin Park. Fleets of steamers give service over the Muskoka Lakes and the Lake of Bays. While these districts have lost none of their primitive loveliness every form of recreation has been provided, including golf links for the devotees of the royal and ancient game. There are modern hotels for the lover of social life and quiet spots for those who wish to be near the heart of nature, while in Algonquin Park log cabin camp hotels have been constructed back from the beaten paths of travel, which combine primitive surroundings with the comforts found in hotels in large cities.

GOLF AT LAKE OF BAYS

IN ALGONQUIN PARK

THAT

Holiday Trip !

Hot Weather is here, and with it comes the thought of a holiday trip, and with the holiday trip comes the thought of a suitable

Suit Case or

Club Bag

We are ready to supply you. A splendid variety here. Just what you want at the price you wish to pay.

Call and see our stock. You will find it easy choosing from our large assortment.

Eggs 36 cts doz. Butter 36 cts lb.
Either cash or trade.

N. McGillivray
North End Store

BANK OF HAMILTON

Established 1872.
Capital Authorized, $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up, - $3,000,000
Surplus, - - - - - $3,500,000

In the Beginning

THE primary object of the Bank was to encourage the habit of saving, especially amongst the small wage earners. The Bank of Hamilton has never lost sight of this object. The small depositor is always assured of courteous treatment. One dollar will open a savings account.

R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
PORT ELGIN BRANCH
46-C

Can you afford to be without The Times ?

Clearing Lines At Cost

The following lines of Seasonable goods will be sold at or less than cost price. . . . .

All canvas shoes, leather or rubber soled many lines in practically all sizes, men's ladies' and children's.

Your chance to Save Money

Ladies' and Misses' colored parasols below cost price.

Straw hats for every day or better wear clearing below cost.

Let us supply your wants.

Produce Wanted—Highest Price paid.

South End Store
N. McGillivray & Co.

The Port Elgin Times
MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

ADVERTISING RATES

Farms or Real Estate for Sale 50c each insertion; Miscellaneous articles, To Rent, Wanted, Lost, Found, etc., each insertion 25c. Local Readers, Notices, etc., 10c per line per insertion, 5c each subsequent insertion. Cards of thanks 50c. Legal advertising 10 and 5c a line. Black-faced type, count 2 lines for 1. Display rates, yearly contracts, 12c per inch, 6 mos. 15c per inch. In memoriam poetry 5c per line. Professional cards $6 per year in advance.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Fuel Controller Magrath announces that the gasoline supply may have to be cut off from those who use it to run cars for pleasure. This ought to help the railways quite a bit. For instance a farmer with an auto may have business in Toronto. He can with his car make the trip and take his family along. But the new regulation may cancel that as a pleasure trip, and he will be compelled to pay to the railway a fare, and leave his family at home, unless he happens to have a fortune. A regulation such as intended will affect the people in the country much more than the city-folk, who can resort to the street cars, jitneys, or regular running of trains and radial cars.

* * *

If The Toronto Globe wants to be considered the leader of Democratic thought and opinion in Ontario it should cut out sycophancy. In connection with the convention of women held in Toronto the other day The Globe in its report of the meeting admitted that Mrs. Buchanan, of Ravenna, Sask., delivered the most sensible and practical address of the evening. We did not notice that Lady Hendrie or Lady Hearst played any very prominent or helpful part in the proceedings, yet Globe readers were treated to a picture of Lady Hendrie and Lady Hearst taken together. We wonder if these two ladies had neither title nor money would The Globe consider them the two outstanding personalities at the convention mentioned. Friday, again. The Globe gives us a picture of "The Millionaire Astor Baby," and tells us that he is worth $5,000,000 Poor kid. He can't help it. But is there any other reason why he should be featured except that he is rich in worldly goods? If The Globe wants to lead the democratic thought and opinion in this Province it wants to quit worshipping titles and money and realize that service and sacrifice in the interests of humanity are the only true standards by which men and women can be measured — Thamesville Herald.

* * *

The automobile to-day is part of the equipment of every farm. The Controller of fuel says he must conserve the gasoline. Therefore our farmers who use their cars to take themselves and neighbors to threshings; and so on will be counted as joyriding, and they must hook up old Dobbin, or hoof it. Conservation has come with a vengeance to the people who can get 20 to 25 miles out of a gallon of gas, but to the big chaps who use up a gallon for every eight or ten miles — well, they're important fellows, they must be toted round at all costs. One way to conserve the supply would be not to allow on the roads anything that can't produce twenty miles of travel to the gallon.

Have We Forgotten So Soon?

Has our memory proven so short in so short a time, as to forget to honor the men who have been at the front, have proven themselves heroes, and have come home for a little rest? It does look like it. One evening last week a Port Elgin man, who enlisted as a private, and for bravery on the field was promoted to be lieutenant, came home to recover from wounds, and but for the reeve of the town and a couple of interested gentlemen, the townspeople were not represented in any way.

The Times has on several occasions urged that an active organization should be formed here for the purpose of watching for just such contingencies as men returning from the front. It makes no difference what rank these men may have, whether they have served in the trenches or in the support or transport These things make no difference. The thing is, they enlisted to give their lives, if need be, for their country, and they are worthy of our best respect.

We have room for business, room for pleasure, but for the men who have offered their lives in our defence—well, indifference and thoughtlessness

As citizens we cannot excuse ourselves. Proper organization would have provided against the excuse that some will make that they do not know when men are returning. We have many more men to return and the least that can be done is to see that organization is perfected that not one more hero will return without a proper welcome on the part of the people of Port Elgin.

It costs little to extend the hand of fellowship and thankfulness.

Any little thing that we can do to make the home-coming an impressive one should be done.

Are There Too Many Churches?

During the year past the editor has taken a great deal of pleasure out of his visits to country churches and Sunday schools. We found our readers interested and appreciative. We have our reward in the joy of work and in the satisfaction of knowing that our readers have appreciated that work.

We have frequently been asked if we did not think there were too many churches. We have said little about this side of the subject, because we are certain that of the churches visited in the country they are all needed and doing good work

We made six visits, but they took in fourteen churches, for in all the cases there are two appointments, and sometimes three. After visiting some Sunday schools, we are also quite sure there are not too many Sunday schools. We are also very certain that more of these schools might profitably operate the year round, instead of closing down in winter.

We are, therefore, satisfied, that there are not too many churches or schools in the country districts which we have covered. There is room, however, for more activity on the part of the church members, but just how this is to be brought about we are not able to outline

A few issues ago we asked our readers if they could tell us why men did not take more interest in church affairs. One person, who by the way, does some wide general reading and some thinking, too, said: "You ask why men are not more interested in church. Well, be because there is not business enough in it."

But can this be said to be the real reason? Can it be that in the past denominationalism has been emphasized so persistently that Christianity has been lost in churchianity?

Within the corporation of the town of Port Elgin with a population of 1340 we have eight churches, taking in the Protestant denominations of Presbyterian, Methodist, Evangelical, Baptist, Episcopalian, Mennonite, United Brethren and Lutheran. There are six resident ministers.

When a man asks: Are there too many churches? The first thought which presents itself is, would there be any more christianity if there were fewer? If not, then it can hardly be said that any church, no matter how small, is a hindrance.

Reading an article in The Continent (Chicago) the editor of which is a Presbyterian, there are some reasons set forth which will account, in a measure for there being so many churches in some small towns.

His contention is: "It is sheerly denominational pride set on having the reputation of being strong. Over-churching is the result of denominational ambition. This wider denominational pride is reinforced by a local spirit of similar quality. Residents who have enlisted in a congregation of a certain name feel that they would be forever shamed among their neighbors if they gave up their independent church-life and joined another people more successful than they. What all would gain in the respect of the world by renouncing selfish denominational considerations and by putting the interest of the whole church ahead of the interest of any branch, would be available capitalization of public good-will."

Speaking of advertising, here is what some of the publishers charge for space: Ladies' Home Journal $8 a line or $104 per inch, and $6,000 for a full page each issue; the back cover sells for $10,000. A full page advertisement in The Saturday Evening Post sells for $5,000 and the back cover sells for $7,000; the centre page in colors is $12,000. As this advertising space is always filled, it is evident that advertising pays even at these prices

The Food Controller has succeeded in getting the price of fish away down for the people of Toronto. But just why the people of any one place should be singled out for these benefits is a fair question?

* * *

A union government is shortly to be established at Ottawa, so we are told by Premier Borden. The opinions of those who have espoused this cause have finally prevailed. It will compose all classes, irrespective of party, race or creed, and will represent a truly independent thought and action during the war. It is difficult to see how a conscription measure could be equitably dealt out unless by some such war cabinet. Political parties have their friends, and making selective drafts for conscription would be a dangerous thing in the hands of any politician.

NORTH BRUCE

The preaching service in the Methodist church was withdrawn Sunday morning, as communion was held in Tiverton.

Next Sunday will be communion in the U. B. church,

Miss Ora Rawn, Toronto, is holidaying at Mr. Geo. McIntosh's, also Miss Elva George of Regina.

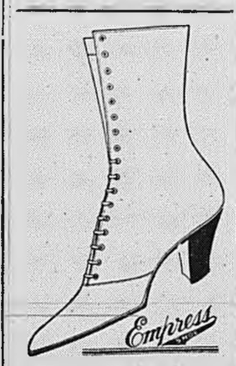
Mrs. Thos. Brownlee, Woodbridge, is visiting with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Shantz and Mr. and Mrs. L. Shantz of Kitchener, visited at Mr. E. Holtzman's on Sunday.

Miss Mary Cameron, of Tiverton, is holidaying with Miss Laura Agar,

The Ladies Aid will meet to-day at the home of Mrs. W. Howe jr.

John McCallum is haying at C. Nicholson's.



This shoe will be advertised from Coast to Coast in Canada as "Empress" Shoes have been for years, and each season adds newer lines and greater beauty to this well-known shoe for women. Always above the others. We are agents.

James George & Son

LUX

Clean Without Rubbing

Here is the modern soap and the modern way of using it—LUX—tiny flakes of the purest essence of soap, making the creamiest of lathers in which even your very finest things are safely washed because they are not rubbed—just cleansed by gently stirring about. Try LUX and see for yourself.

British made, by
Lever Brothers Limited
Toronto

All grocers 10c.

BLACKSMITHING

N. KIDT, blacksmithing, horse-shoeing and general repairs. Tire-setting a specialty

Just the Thing

for

Summer Wear

Boy's khaki bloomers, in good quality denim two special lines at 90 cents and $1.25

Boy's wash suits, in tan or blue linen and striped percale, in sizes 2 to 8 years, reg. up $1.50 to clear at 98 cents.

To save those good leather boots, buy a pair of harvest shoes. We have them in all sizes.

Youth's at $1.35 per pair
Boy's at $1.65
Men's at $2.65

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon.

Roppel Bros.
Rural phone, Underwood

Advertise it in The Times.

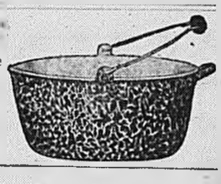
SPECIAL

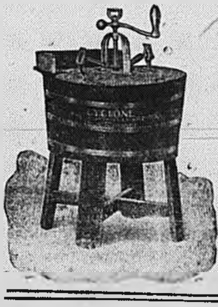
We have a few of Dr. Pierce's Family Medical Advisors. Good cloth binding which we offer at

50 cents each

while they last.

R. C. Crawford
Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent





PRESERVING KETTLES

Old English granitware at reduced prices. Extra large size

75 cents

Don't miss this snap.

Washers

Why not try a

Cyclone Washer

and make wash day a gladder day.

Sold on approval

McLAREN'S HARDWARE

Five Large Phonographs Given as First District Prizes in

Bread-Making Contests

At Rural School Fairs in Ontario

More than $2,000 worth of prizes for bread making will be offered at the Rural School Fairs this fall. Among the prizes are five large cabinet phonographs, fifteen Canuck bread mixers, and many attractive books. These splendid prizes will make the contest the most stirring ever held at rural school fairs. Every girl between the ages of 12 and 18 should read all about this fine opportunity, and should begin now to prepare for it. The prizes, under the conditions explained below, will be awarded for the best loaves baked with

Cream of the West Flour

the hard wheat flour that is guaranteed for bread

—the flour that you will want to use always, once you have given it a good trial. We want you to know for yourself that it makes splendid big loaves of the lightest, most wholesome bread that good flour can bake. That is why we make it well worth your while to try it, by offering these attractive and costly prizes.

For this contest we have divided the Province into five districts, each with several counties. In each district we will give a large cabinet phonograph, a set of Dickens' Works and three bread mixers. These are called the District prizes and they are to be given in addition to the prizes offered at the local rural school fairs. (See list of districts below.) Be sure to compete at your local rural school fair. If you win first prize there, you will then automatically become a competitor for the phonograph and other district prizes.

The Prizes, remember, are offered for the best loaf of bread baked with Cream of the West Flour. No other flour will do. For local prizes we offer a number of valuable books. By local prizes we mean those given at the fair.

1st Local Prize.—"Girl's Own Annual," a great big beautifully bound, illustrated book with 800 pages of stories and articles about [illegible]—everything that particularly interests young girls, older girls and their mothers. This is a wonderful book that you can treasure for years.

2nd Local Prize.—"[illegible] Men and Women," heavily cloth bound with gold titles, many beautiful pictures in colors, containing life stories of Florence Nightingale, Grace Darling, Flora MacDonald, Jenny Lind, the late Queen Victoria and others.

3rd Local Prize.—"[illegible]," a big handsomely bound book with many colored pictures, interesting stories and descriptions of the countries and the peoples of Britain's world-wide Empire.

4th Local Prize.—"The Queen's Gift Book," a book of stories, pictures and special articles by Britain's best writers; the proceeds from the sale of this book are for the benefit of disabled soldiers in England.

Note.—Unless the entries number six or more only first and second prizes will be awarded. Unless the entries number ten or more no fourth prize will be awarded.

The District Prizes.—The winner of the first prize at each local fair automatically becomes a competitor for the following District prizes. One-half of the first prize loaf will be sent to the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, to compete in the District Contests. (See conditions below.)

1st District Prize.—The "Pathephone" is the name given to the fine big mahogany phonograph we offer as first prize. It will give you endless pleasure and entertainment for a lifetime. It has special [illegible] attachments and needles, enabling you to play all kinds of disc records of no matter what make. The Pathephone reproduces band music, orchestra, [illegible] and fancy pieces perfectly; with it goes a dozen of the famous Pathe records. Total value, [illegible].

2nd District Prize.—Set of Dickens' Works, [illegible] bound volumes with many illustrations. Among the books in the set are "Oliver Twist" and "Old Curiosity Shop." These are two of the most entrancing stories ever written.

3rd, 4th and 5th Prizes.—"Canuck" Bread Mixers. This simple, yet well-made, machine takes the hard work out of bread making. Instead of laborious kneading of the old method, you just put in the ingredients, turn the handle and the dough is thoroughly and more evenly mixed.

FIRST PRIZE AT LOCAL RURAL SCHOOL FAIRS

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST

Every girl may compete at the rural school fair in her district, whether or not she attends school, providing that her 12th birthday occurs before November 1st, 1917, or her 19th birthday does not occur before Nov. 1st, 1917. One loaf of bread must be submitted baked in pan about 7 x 5 inches and 3 inches deep, and divided into twin loaves so that they may be separated at the fair. The loaf must be baked with Cream of the West Flour. One-half will be judged at the fair. The other half of the prize loaf will be sent to Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, to compete in the District Contests. The judging will be done by Miss M. A. Purdy, of the Department of Breadmaking and Flour Testing. The local contest at the fair will be conducted under the same rules as all the other regular contests at your fairs.

The Standard by which bread will be judged will be as follows:

1. Appearance of Loaf		15 marks
(a) Color	5 marks
(b) Texture of crust	5 marks
(c) Shape of loaf	5 marks
2. Texture of Crumb		40 marks
(a) Evenness	15 marks
(b) Silkiness	20 marks
(c) Color	5 marks
3. Flavor of Bread		45 marks
(a) Taste	25 marks
(b) Odor	20 marks

Important.—Each loaf must be accompanied by the part of the flour bag containing the face of the Old Miller, and an entry form must be signed by the girl and parents or guardian stating date of birth, P.O. address, and giving name of dealer from whom Cream of the West Flour was purchased. The form will state that the girl actually baked the loaf entered in the competition. The forms will be provided at the time of the fair. The decision of the judges is final. Not more than one entry may be made by each girl and not more than one local prize will be awarded to the same family.

Which District is yours? This list shows you which counties you compete in until you become a competitor for the District prizes:

District No. 1—Counties of Glengarry, Stormont, Dundas, Grenville, Leeds, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Carleton, Lanark, Renfrew.

District No. 2—Counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Peterboro, Northumberland, Victoria, Durham.

District No. 3—Counties of York, Ontario, Peel, Halton, Wentworth, Oxford, Brant, Waterloo.

District No. 4—Counties of Welland, Haldimand, Norfolk, Elgin, Kent, Essex, Lambton, Middlesex.

District No. 5—Counties of Bruce, Grey, Dufferin, Simcoe, Districts of Muskoka, Parry Sound, Timiskaming, Algoma, Sudbury, Manitoulin.

THE RESULTS of the contests at the fair will be made known in the usual way as in the case of all the other regular contests. The District results will be announced as soon as possible after the conclusion of the Rural School Fairs in the Province.

DO NOT MISS THIS GREAT OPPORTUNITY: Every girl between 12 and 18 years should compete. What a splendid way to stir up local interest in breadmaking! Get a supply of Cream of the West Flour at your dealers and practise using it as often as possible to increase the chances of winning. If your dealer cannot sell it to you, write to the Campbell Flour Mills Co., Ltd., Toronto, and we will promptly tell you the nearest place to get it.

NO COMPETITIONS IN COUNTIES NAMED BELOW: The competition is open to all parts of the Province where Rural School Fairs are held, except the Districts of Rainy River, Kenora and Thunder Bay. These districts are the only parts of the Province where rural school fairs are held by the Department of Agriculture in which this competition will not be a feature. There are no district representatives of the Department of Agriculture in the Counties of Huron, Perth, Wellington, Haliburton, Prescott, Russell or Lincoln, and no rural school fairs are held in these Counties by the Department of Agriculture. There are, however, a few fairs [illegible] held in these seven counties, and we are opening the competition to those fairs. We will announce later the districts in which each of these Counties will be included.

The Campbell Flour Mills Co., Limited
(West) Toronto, Ontario

(Keep this announcement for reference) 128

Cream of the West is sold by N. McGillivray, Port Elgin.

The Southampton fishermen seem to be getting out of their latitude and are coming down on the grounds allotted to the Kincardine men.—Kincardine Reporter.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS
To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Kawartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourists tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares, with liberal stop overs.

GET YOUR TICKET IN ADVANCE

J. S. Cameron, Agent, Port Elgin, Both telephones.

Formosa's Camphor.

The camphor production of the island of Formosa is one of Japan's monopolies. The present area of camphor afforestation is 10,650 acres, and some of the trees are from 500 to 1,000 years old. During the next few years the area will probably be greatly extended.

His Comeback.

Mrs. Jawback—I suppose you consider your judgment far superior to mine. Mr. Jawback—No, my dear. We proved the contrary when we chose to marry each other.

Cheering Him Up.

De Broke—So the tailor called again with his bill? Did you say I was out? His Man—Yes, sir, and I told him that I thought he was too.

The most sublime psalm that can be heard on this earth is the lisping of a human soul from the lips of childhood.

Advertise it in The Times.

Reeve Gilbert Christie sold to J. B. Lyness last week some extra fine cattle. A pair of steers weighed 3350 pounds, while a pair of 2-year-old heifers went 2440 pounds. The price was 11 cents a pound live weight.

January 1st, was the birthday of Bruce as a separate organized municipality, and on January 22nd, 1867, the first Bruce County Council sat at Walkerton under the Wardenship of James Brocklebank, then Reeve of Brant. The County had been provisionally organized in 1857 but the question of where the County Town should be, raised the famous dispute which was no less than ten years in settling. We can trace the birthday of Bruce back further still to Jan. 1st 1850, when Bruce was formed into a county but not a separate municipality. On that day by virtue of a Dominion Act of Parliament, what was then known as the Huron District, was formed into the three united counties of Huron, Perth and Bruce. This County takes its name from James Bruce, Lord of Elgin, at that time Governor of Canada.

CLIMATE AND COMPLEXION.

Are Americans Destined to Become a Race of Brunettes?

That the coming American race is destined to be a brunette type—and not because of the immigration of dark races, but in obedience to a natural law—was a prediction made in one of his recent Gresham lectures in London by Dr. Harry Campbell. He pointed out that each race and subrace tends to adapt itself to the particular region of the earth which it inhabits through numerous generations. Dark skinned peoples thrive in warm climates and die out in cold.

The blond race had its origin in the cold northwest of Europe, where a plentiful supply of pigment in the skin is not necessary to protect the body from the actinic rays of the sun, and where a white skin favors retention of body heat. This blond race has dominated the world, successive swarms migrating southward and eastward and taking a large part in founding the civilizations of Greece and Rome, India and Egypt. But owing to their inability to survive in a latitude far south of their natural zone they have gradually died out and left no descendants.

Even after so short a period as thirteen generations the inhabitants of the southern states of America are darker than those of the northern states. In process of time the blond type will die out in the United States.

What Each Would Take.

Two officers on board a vessel the crew of which were part English and part Irish had a dispute respecting their capacities. The officer who favored the latter country asserted that the lower class of the English did not inherit that quickness of intellect which the Irish possessed. A bet having taken place on the subject, it was to be decided by the answer which each countryman gave to a certain question. First the English sailor was asked what he would take to go aloft blindfolded in a hard gale.

"I would take a month's pay," replied he.

"And you, Paddy," asked the questioner, "what would you take?"

"Begorra," said Paddy, "I would take fast hold, to be sure."

Liquid Fire.

The Greek or liquid fire used in ancient times was made principally from naphtha or liquid bitumen, mixed with some sulphur and pitch extracted from green firs. Water, instead of extinguishing, quickened this powerful agent of destruction, which nothing but sand, wine or vinegar could check. For 400 years the Greeks kept the secret of its composition, but the Mohammedans at length discovered and used it. This fire is not in use today.

A Satisfactory Range

"Pandora" Ranges never disappoint the cook. Also they last longer, maintain a more even temperature, use less fuel and require less attention than any other range you can buy. Write for free illustrated booklet.

McClary's
PANDORA RANGE

LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER
ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY 7
SASKATOON EDMONTON

Sold by J. H. Kennedy, Port Elgin

Genius That Perished Before It Had a Chance to Mature.

The waste of war is not entirely to be figured in dollars and cents, ruined churches and barren crops, if we may accept the opinion of the New York Tribune. Its greatest losses may be those things which never were allowed to live because their authors to-be got no further than the first line of enemy's trenches.

America at times points with pride to the following notables. They were all at some time during the war between the states of enlisting age and yet for some reason or another, perhaps ill health or service of other kinds, they never were actively engaged at the front. Had they gone into battle our literature and public life might have been poorer, certainly by some of them, perhaps by all, for fifteen men are not many in a Gettysburg.

Mark Twain, with the exception of a short term of service within the borders of his home town, was in the far west during most of the war. Among others for whose presence we have since had opportunity to be more or less thankful were Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Grover Cleveland, Bret Harte, John Hay, Bayard Taylor, S. Weir Mitchell, Artemus Ward, Phillips Brooks, William Winter and William Dean Howells. Thomas A. Edison, although a train boy of thirteen when the war broke out, might well have been among the thousands of sixteen-year-old boys who were in nameless graves before the war ended.

Had these men gone to the front the law of averages would have been no kinder to them than to others. How many Mark Twains, Bret Hartes and Edisons were there who did go and who did not come back?

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati authority tells how to dry up a corn or callus so it lifts off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

A small bottle of freezone costs very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be tried, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. It is fine stuff and acts like a charm every time.

CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE

Stratford, Ontario

Ontario's Best Business College
FALL TERM FROM SEPT. 4TH

Commercial, Shorthand and Telegraphy departments.

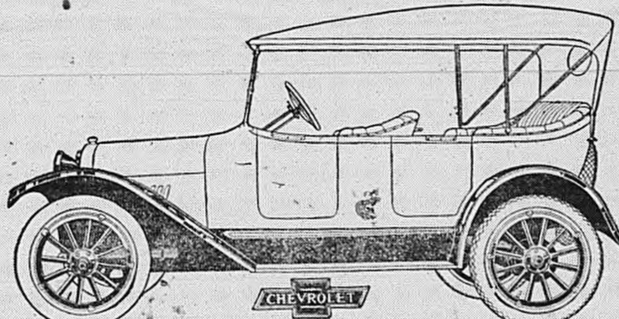
We have thorough courses, experienced instructors, and we place graduates in positions. The Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalog.

D. A. McLACHLAN, PRINCIPAL

Try The Times Job Dept. for your next printing.

The Car De Luxe

Of the small car class



Series 490A CHEVROLET $750.00

A really beautiful small car, equipped with every desirable appointment for comfort and convenience.

Note these exclusive feature

Yacht line body
Finished in rich Chevrolet green.
Demountable rims
Sloping windshield
One-man mohair tailored top.
New design front and rear fender skirts
Non-Skid tires on the rear wheels.
Electric Lighting and starting system
Three speeds
Oil indicator
Robe Rail Foot Rail
Large, handy pockets in all doors
Hand pads on doors
Tire carrier designed with tail lamp and a license bracket attachment.

—SOLD BY—

POWER & COULTER, Port Elgin

Suffered Three Weeks With Chapped Hands. Sore and Unsightly. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

Above are extracts from a signed statement recently received from Miss Gladys Hambleton, Roxton Falls, Que., Nov. 29, 1916.

How much better to prevent such suffering by using Cuticura for every-day toilet purposes, the Soap to cleanse and purify the pores, with touches of Ointment now and then as needed to soothe and heal the first signs of eczemas, rashes, dandruff and pimples. You will use no other once you try these super-creamy emollients.

For Free Sample Each by Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

GUIDE YOUR BOY NOW.

Keep Him On Road That Leads to Highest Citizenship.

This is a good time to think of your boy. If you do not look after him in the right way some one will do it in the wrong way. Begin now.

Teach your boy to follow in the foot steps of his father, to respect the law, to obey his parents, to regard the rights of all men, to honor virtue, to respect womanhood and to depend upon no one but himself for his advancement.

Teach him that the golden rule of life will be found in the Ten Commandments. They are short. They have survived the ages. They stand to-day unchanged and unchallenged. [illegible] comprise the first great written [illegible] by God to man. Before [illegible] commandments all man [illegible] fade into insignificance. [illegible] to your boy. There is [illegible] ahead if you do not. [illegible] versal drift of mankind is toward decadence. Heredity pays its premium and also exacts its discount. The son of a good father and an affectionate mother, brought up in an atmosphere of parental regard, never will disgrace the family.

The boys of to-day are to be the men of to-morrow. The destinies of the American people are to be in the hands of their sons. If the boys are taught respect for the law (both human and divine), obedience to authority, manly independence and the fear of God this great nation will be a noble monument to man's capacity for self government and self control at a time when all the world is a seething cauldron of unrest, unreason and disbelief.

Teach your boy to rule, but first to rule himself.—John A. Sleicher in Leslie's Weekly.

Minard's Liniment for sale everywhere.

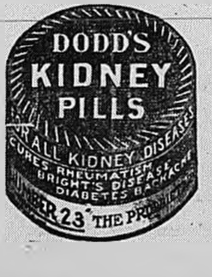
TOKIO IS YOUNG.

Only in '60's That It Assumed Place in Life of Japan.

In a way almost unique, Tokio represents an epoch in the history of the country of which it is the capital. When, in the middle '60s, the Japanese made their momentous decision definitely to throw in their lot with the West in the matter of civilization, they set about achieving their purpose with all that thoroughness so characteristic of them as possible. If there was to be a change, then they would make it whole-heartedly. Kyoto, the ancient capital of the country, was irretrievably bound up with the ancient regime, and the ablest men in Japan saw clearly enough that, if the court was to take its proper place in the country, and the emperor was to become a real ruler, and not the mere mouthpiece he had been, for many centuries, under the rule of the Shoguns, a clean sweep would have to be made of the past. It was, therefore, in this spirit that Okubo Toshimichi of Satsuma, one of the greatest statesmen of the new era, made, in 1868, a novel and startling proposition. He proposed nothing less than that the emperor should abandon the traditions which had grown up respecting his person and his court, and rule his empire not merely in theory but in practice. To do this successfully, he recommended that the capital be transferred "from the place of its degrading superstitions," namely Kyoto, to a new home.

A few years before, such a proposition would have been regarded as something very like a sacrilege; but those few years had made all the difference. The proposal was received with favor by the emperor, and the place ultimately chosen for the new capital was Yedo, where for 250 years the family of Tokugawa, the last of the Shogun dynasties, had lived and guided the destinies of the empire. And so, on November 29, 1869, the emperor arrived at Yedo, and took up his residence at the famous castle, built there centuries before by Tokugawa Iyeyasu, the hero of Sekigahara. He left behind him in Kyoto something very like consternation. To many people, the removal of the emperor from the ancient capital was the end of all things. For a thousand years and more Kyoto had been the capital Dai Nippon, and, for over twenty-five centuries, according to tradition, the emperors had ruled from spot near the sacred city. All the powers of religious fanaticism were drawn upon it to prevent the emperor form carrying out his purpose, but in vain. Yedo was not only chosen the capital, but, to make assurance doubly sure, its name was changed to Tokio, which interpreted, means "eastern capital." And some compensation to the disappointed and much-distressed citizens of Kyoto, their city was called Saikyo the "western capital." The severance, however, was definite and final, and marked for Japan, perhaps in the most forcible way possible, the final break with the past.

Thus Tokio is far and away the youngest amongst the world's capital cities. Its history, however, stretches back far beyond 1869. Two hundred and fifty years before that date the Shogun Ieyasu had built there a great city, and not many years after that time Yedo had attained the position of first city of the empire in point of population. As to the modern Tokio it finds a full expression in the imperial palace, which stands on the ancient castle of Yedo, formerly the residence of the Shoguns. It is half European and half Japanese in its style of architecture. So Tokio, itself, is a mixture of the two. The numerous houses of the daimos, or vassals, the chief characteristic of the old town, have been largely swept away, and government offices and new houses, lining new streets, have taken their places. Tokio, in short, like the imperial palace, like all Japan, is a strange mixture of east and west.—Christian Science Monitor.



BABY'S GREAT DANGER DURING HOT WEATHER

More little ones die during the hot weather than at any other time of the year. Diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum and stomach troubles come without warning, and when a medicine is not at hand to give promptly the short delay too frequently means that the child has passed beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept in homes where there are young children. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will cure the baby. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or my mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Odds and Ends.

The British army consumes 20,000 tons of potatoes every month.

Germany did not become a shipbuilding nation until within the last generation.

The torpedo as fired from surface vessels is effective up to 10,000 yards range.

The bread of the Balkans is made in the form of chains, and sold according to length.

The crying of weasels at the baying of dogs are considered evil omens by the Japanese.

The Montenegrin soldier wears his medals for valor on his cap instead of across his left breast.

Within a radius of 100 miles of New York city lives one-eighth the population of all the United States.

Germany has 40,000 miles of railway, or about one-sixth of the total railroad mileage in the United States.

The founder of the Rothschild riches was born in a Frankfort ghetto, the sons of a poverty-stricken dealer in curios.

Under the English law no clergyman can be arrested within the walls of his church, or while he is going to or from his duty.

In the United States there are no fewer than 21,000 motion picture theatres, representing a total investment of over $2,000,000,000.

The biggest gun of the United States navy is 60 feet in length, weighs about 30 tons, and fires projective weighing 2,100 pounds.

The ordinary Chinese printing office uses about 6,000 characters, while a fairly complete Chinese dictionary contains as many as 60,000.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

The Starvation Point.

To the question, "If there were a siege, how long do you think the soldiers and civilians could live after the food supplies gave out?" an English paper answers: Science tells us that if he can get drinking water an ordinary man can exist for thirty days without food. At the end of that time the machinery of the body will not be spoiled and can be brought back to its former strength by careful feeding.

About a quarter of our body weight is fat, and it is mostly this fat that is absorbed as food during the period of starvation. We can absorb and burn up our muscles until 60 per cent. of their weight is gone. We can do the same with from 30 to 40 per cent. of our livers and digestive organs and 20 per cent. of our lungs. Our hearts can lose 10 per cent. and our brains and nervous systems can lose 5 per cent.

It will be seen that the more vital organs—brain and heart—yield least of their valuable substance for the life of the body, while the less essential substances—fat, muscle, fiber, etc., are consumed first.

What is a Hawaiian?

A correspondent inquires whether it is proper to speak of a Hawaiian as "Kanaka." The term is masculine. A "Kanaka" is a male Hawaiian. A "wahine" is an unmarried Hawaiian woman. A "wahinemare" is a married Hawaiian woman. These definitions are from the Hawaiian dictionary.—Bellingham American Review.

"SALADA"

Every Leaf is of Virgin Quality

Sealed Packets Only. Never in Bulk.

Black, Mixed or Green. B217

The Two Mountains

"Ours is Royal, But Only Yours is Crowned"

A MONTREALER ON HIS VISIT TO THE MOUNTAIN SANATORIUM.

"We are proud of our Mount Royal," a Montrealer writes, after a visit to Hamilton, "but yours has one royal distinction that ours has not achieved—a crown.

"We send our own people up to the mountain when they are dead, and bury them in the crater of a burnt-out volcano. You send your people up the mountain to find new life, and to come back and enjoy it. Climb our mountain, and you find a cemetery. Climb yours, and you find a Sanatorium. That is your mountain's crown of glory.

"What I noticed up there first, after the charming scenery and magnificent air, was the spirit of cheerfulness and hope among the patients.

"Of course, it is well known that tuberculosis often has a deceiving effect on its victims, making them feel better than they really are. And that is a great danger.

"Take the soldiers, particularly. They naturally want to get back to their families, and to work, as soon as possible. So they are tempted to quit the sanatorium before they ought, and to undertake more strenuous work than is safe for them. Even when a man is cured—that is, when the germs of the disease have been conquered and apparently paralyzed—the lungs are not so powerful as before they were attacked. If the body is overtaxed, the germs may awake from their torpor and make another attack.

FORTIFYING AGAINST A COUNTER-ATTACK.

"The Military Hospitals Commission evidently realizes this, and does all it possibly can to see that every one of the tuberculous soldiers under its care takes the full treatment required by his particular case, and also to fortify him by knowledge against the very grave, though unseen, dangers that will surround him on his return to civil life.

"Just as the soldiers after enlistment not only have their bodies trained by exercise for the hardships of a campaign, but also have their minds instructed in the arts of modern war—so these men attacked by the 'white plague' not only have their bodies freed from its fatal grip, but their minds instructed and fore-armed, with all the knowledge requisite to prevent another attack, as well as to avoid the possible infection of others by their unconscious acts.

"And the cheerfulness evident in your Mountain Sanatorium is based on solid grounds of hope, not on any delusion.

MUST COMBINE REST AND WORK.

"One of the most hopeful signs I notice is that the men have got something to do. Rest is essential, but it must be rest of mind as well as body. In fact, except in cases of extreme weakness, lying still in bed for long periods without any occupation creates unrest of mind, and largely destroys the good effect of rest of body.

"We smile at the idea of embroidery as an occupation for men—as we smiled at the idea of plowing as an occupation for women. But the war has cleared our mental vision and upset many of our old ideas. I have just seen a moving picture of English women engaged in a plowing competition—with walking plows, too. Women who have exchanged the needle for the plow are all the better for it; and these men in your Mountain Sanatorium, forced to give up the plow and other weighty implements, are all the better for taking to the needle.

GIVE CIVILIANS THE SAME CHANCE.

"More than 800 men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, in a total of 7,000 invalids now being cared for by the Military Hospitals Commission, are being treated for tuberculosis. This doubtless got a first lodgment in them during childhood. It has been stimulated to activity by the unaccustomed conditions of military life; but it would very likely have become active in any case, sooner or later, in civilian life. In such a case, it would have had less chance of prompt discovery, and certainly much less chance of thorough and successful treatment.

"With this effective organization of treatment for military consumptives before our eyes, it will be absolutely inexcusable if the country fails to organize an equally efficient campaign against the 'white plague' among our people as a whole.

"'The gain in health and wealth to the country would be simply enormous,' as Lord Shaughnessy was quoted as saying a few weeks ago. 'As many Canadians have been killed at home by tuberculosis since the war began as have been killed by the war itself. Yet it is an entirely preventable disease. If we stop its ravages, we shall more than make up for the ravages of the war.'

"We must never forget that these soldier patients at the Mountain Sanatorium, and in the eighteen other Sanatoria used by the Military Hospitals Commission, will themselves be civilians again in a few weeks or months. Instead of being a source of infection and danger, as they would have been without the treatment they are now receiving, their return to civil life will be an actual gain to the community; for, by preaching what they have practised, they can do much to rouse us from our lethargy and start a vigorous offensive against this ravaging foe."

FAMOUS NOVELISTS.

And How They Started On Their Careers.

William Dean Howells was a printer and reporter in a country newspaper office in Ohio during his boyhood.

Joseph Conrad, a native of Poland, was for years a cabin boy, sailor before the mast, and captain in the merchant service.

Sir Rider Haggard gained the material for his first tales while acting as an official in South Africa.

Maxime Gorky, in his youth, was successively a painter of ikons, scullery boy, soldier, gardener, and baker's apprentice.

Jack London was a "hobo" sailor, gold miner in Alaska, oyster pirate, fisherman, longshoremen and seal hunter.

Thomas Harding was articled to an ecclesiastical architect, and spent several years of his young manhood as a church architect.

Eden Philpotts was born in India, the son of an army officer, and was a clerk in an insurance office and studied for the stage.

H. G. Wells is the son of a professional cricket player, and in his youth was chiefly interested in the study of science.

Brand Whitlock was a newspaper reporter in Toledo and Chicago and a clerk in the office of the Illinois secretary of state.

Owen Johnson made his literary debut as the founder and first editor of the Lawrenceville, N. J., Literary Magazine.

Myra Kelly, a native of Dublin, was for some time a public school teacher in the East Side of New York.

Charles G. D. Roberts was a school teacher and college professor in Canada before taking up literature.

Ralph Connor (the Rev. Charles W. Gordon), was missionary among the miners and lumbermen of Western Canada.

Amelie Troubetzkoy, nee Rives, began writing stories as a child, and published her first novel, "The Quick for the Dead," in 1888.

Irvin S. Cobb started as a reporter in his native Paducah, and at nineteen became editor of the Paducah Daily News.

Thomas Dixon started his career as a lawyer and politician in North Carolina, entering the Baptist ministry in 1886.

Hall Caine was educated as an architect, but deserted that profession to enter journalism as leading writer on the Liverpool Mercury.

Thomas Nelson Page was a lawyer in Richmond for many years before he thought of writing novels.

Anatole France, the son of a bookseller, was a librarian in the French Senate, and a Paris journalist.

William Allen White got his literary start as a writer on the Emporia Gazette, of which he is still editor.

The Three, FREE

¶ The Lantic Library of "goody secrets" sent free if you mail us a Red Ball Trademark, cut from carton or sack of Lantic Pure Cane Sugar.

In 2 and 5-lb. Cartons 10, 20 and 100-lb. Sacks

ATLANTIC SUGAR REFINERIES Limited, Montreal

173

Like Scene From Middle Ages.

The oldest and largest university in the world is El-Azhar at Cairo. Founded in 975, it has been from the start a national institution, the khedive being the rector. The minimum age of entrance is fifteen, and the applicant must know half the Koran by heart—if blind, the whole Koran—and be able to read and write. The curriculum consists of virtually nothing but theology and canon law, the final examination fifteen years after matriculation being upon these, together with traditions of the prophet: Grammar, etymology, rhetoric and logic. It is the same instruction which has prevailed for centuries, and one who goes into the great court where the circles of students are sitting at the feet of their Gamaliels looks upon a scene preserved from the middle ages, "a perfect specimen, living, breathing and entire."

RELIEF AT LAST

I want to help you if you are suffering from bleeding, itching, blind or protruding Piles. I can tell you how, in your own home and without anyone's assistance, you can apply the best of all treatments.

PILES TREATED AT HOME

I promise to send you a FREE trial of the new absorption treatment, and references from your own locality if you will but write and ask. I assure you of immediate relief. Send no money, but tell others of this offer. Address

MRS. M. SUMMERS, Box 8,
Windsor, Ont.

AN ADVENTURE IN SPELLING.

I once went a-riding, although
My friends told me not to do sough;
As a matter of course
I fell off my hourse,
Who left me in tatters and wough.

A man passing by in a sleigh
Saw my sorrowful plight as I leigh,
And said, "You're a cuff!
But it is rather tuff.
So I'll just lift you out of the weigh."

He fitted me into a seat—
I was bruised from my head to my feat,
I had ruined my clothes,
I had broken my nothes,
And truly the cushions were sweat!

Then he hustled me over the snow
As fast as his horses could gow,
And drove me up straight
To a doctor's front gaight
"Hi, Doc! Here's a vision of wow!"

The doctor was drinking his tea,
But he came and considered of mea;
"He can't use his tongue,
And he's spoiled his right lungue,
And his ribs were not where they should bea.

"There's unusual puffiness here,
And his shoulder-blades seem out of gere;
This ear's coming off,
And that singular coff
Is rather less pleasant than quere."

But he settled my various aches,
And he splintered by numberous breaches;
And the lesson I learned
When my powers returned
Prevents any future mistaches.
—Christian Endeavor World.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

A Story of Longfellow.

In Longfellow's journal, in which he chronicled daily things that came under his observation, he notes that upon a certain occasion he attended a church where the minister took as his subject "Progress." He was very flattered when the latter quoted about half of the "Psalm of Life." After repeating the verses the minister said, "I could never read that poem without feeling the inspiration with which it was written." To this incident Longfellow adds: "But I had the conceit taken out of me on the evening of the same day, when I happened to meet a lady at Prescott's and in our conversation she referred to the sermon in the morning and added, 'He quoted some beautiful verses, but nobody knew whence came the quotations.'"

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gents,—A customer of ours cured a very bad case of distemper in a valuable horse by the use of MINARD'S LINIMENT.

Yours truly,
VILANDIE FRERES.

Using the Scrub Palmetto.

Only a prolific and troublesome waste product throughout Florida, the scrub palmetto is now being developed into an asset of great possibilities. Not only has it been discovered that paper of good quality can be made from it, but the manufacture of carpets, mattings, twines, rope and burlap from the plant is already an industry of high standing in the state. Only the green leaf or fan, is used. Claim is made that the palmetto leaves, when shredded and spun are very much tougher than the grass now used for mattings. The green leaves are fed just as they are cut into the shredding and spinning machines, and in three minutes they come out in twine. This avoids the discolorations and losses occasioned in drying, storing and handling grasses commonly used for matting. Palmetto can be cut every day in the year and immediately made into twine. The skeins of twine when hung up dry rapidly and uniformly. The twine is used as soon afterward as necessary.—Argonaut.

It is hard for a man to forget the past if it effects his own future.

ISSUE NO. 32. 1917

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Welland Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

WANTED—A GENERAL SERVANT for only two in family. Apply, 14 St. Mathew's Ave., Hamilton, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

REMIT BY DOMINION EXPRESS money order. If lost or stolen, you get your money back.

ALGERIA A NEW FRANCE.

Result of a Century of Work Against African Savagery.

After a vast expenditure in lives and treasure France is beginning to reap its reward from the conquest of Algeria. A hundred years ago the northern African county was the abode of barbarism, and piracy was the principal occupation of its people. The United States was the first nation to revolt against the payment of tribute to the day of Algeria for "protection" to commerce and after a brief but thrilling conflict the buccaneer chieftain was brought to his knees.

In 1827 the French took up the white man's burden in Algeria and after a struggle of thirty years subdued the country. Under the monarchy and the second empire the government of Algeria was based solely on force, but the republic won the allegiance of the Algerians by withdrawing the military government from all the settled portions of the country, which have since been treated very much as if they were a part of France, each department sending one senator and two deputies to the French chambers. Algerians, save for a few of the tribesmen in the remote interior, are now loyal Frenchmen, regardless of color, race or religion. Algeria also supplies vast quantities of foodstuffs and meals to France.—New York World.

Don't Be Afraid of Work.

Charles M. Schwab, the well-known master of Bethlehem steel works, has no more patience with the man who works with the time clock than has Adam Bede with his fellow workmen who dropped their tools at the sound of the whistle. In his book, "Succeeding With What You Have," he writes: "I have yet to hear of one instance where misfortune hit a man because he worked overtime. Not long ago a man was promoted in our works. 'How did you happen to advance this fellow?' I asked his boss. 'Well,' he explained, 'I noticed that when the day shift went off duty this man stayed on the job until he had talked over the day's problems with his successor. That's why.' The man who fails to give fair service during the hours for which he is paid is dishonest. The man who is not willing to give more than this is foolish."

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia

Briefest Mention.

Pendulum clocks were first used about 1660.

The so-called briar of which pipes are made is laurel root.

There are 800 varieties of pears grown in America and 100 kinds of grapes.

The income of electric traction service as a whole in 1916 can be safely put at $750,000,000.

The agricultural produce of the United States is valued for 1916 at not quite $6,800,000,444, which puts it easily next to railroads.

Copper production in the United States in 1916 is estimated at 1,941,900-556 pounds. Zinc output is put at 672,300 net tons; nickel at 61,675,438 pounds, and lead at 583,498 net tons.

Thrift Maxims.

Nothing waste, nothing want.

Thrift is an antidote against anxiety for the future.

Thrift deals with the present day and plans for the future days.

Thrift acquaints itself with true values and keeps tab on expenditures.

Neither minute gains nor even small losses are underrated by the thrifty.

To postpone to afternoon what should be done in the morning is thriftlessness of management.

Squabs.

A squab grows enormously the first twelve hours and still more rapidly after the third day. Squabs are at first sparsely covered with long filaments of down, the root of each filament implicating the point from which each future feather is to start. The down for awhile still hangs on to the tips of some of the feathers during their growth and it is thought by some to be finally absorbed into the shaft of the growing feather.

WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES.

"I see you have a new man looking up the classified-ad page," said the visitor to the composing-room. "Yes," answered the foreman. "What became of Jones, who had the job?" asked the visitor. "Oh," replied the foreman, "we had to let him go. Jones was a good man, but he got rattled in the rush the other night and put the ad of an undertaker under 'Amusements.'"

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

BRITAIN AND FRANCE COULD WIN WAR ALONE

Able to See It Through Without Russia, Declares Lloyd George.

J. L. GARVIN'S VIEW

Entrance of United States Means the Finish of German Hopes.

London Cable says—Addressing the press representatives in the gallery of the House of Commons to-day, Premier Lloyd George referred to the buoyancy of the French nation after three years of war and said:

"I found during my visit to Paris that the spirit of the French people was better than I had ever known it. There was a sense of discouragement at the collapse of the Russian armies, but in spite of all, the French were as resolute as ever.

"It depends very largely upon the French whether we shall get through to the end. If the French and ourselves hang together we shall get through to the end in spite of our Russian troubles. The Russians are an incalculable quantity; they fought when we least expected them and they hung back at times when it seemed they ought to go on. My latest information is that Russia will recover and become as formidable as she ever has been."

London, July 30.—J. L. Garvin, in The Observer, publishes an interesting discussion of the military situation on the East and West front, as well as a consideration of what America has brought to the allied fighting strength.

As to the Russian debacle, he says: "We have but one question to put plainly to ourselves. Since the worst may happen in Eastern Europe—suppose it does happen—what then?

"The answer is staggering, but it is sound. The other allies would still control, directly or indirectly, the human and economic resources of two-thirds of the world. They would still have vaster forces in action and reserve than the Central League can ever muster. With concentration and determination the other allies could win without Russia. They could win at last if they had no other weapons left but the maritime veto and a complete economic boycott."

POWER OF U. S. IN ALLIANCE.

Garvin considers that America already has given evidence of her assistance which more than offsets the loss of Russian strength. He thinks America and England must build at least 4,000,000 tons of shipping each next year if the Allies are to overcome the submarine campaign. Besides ships, he says, America must have 1,000,000 men in France by next spring and make a huge contribution in airplanes.

Of the situation on the west front, he writes:

"The main, military problem is in the West. We never believed that a frontal attack on what is Germany's strongest flank would be other than the longest, slowest and most costly method. We held that the only possible way of shortening the war within a three-year period—and we ought to have shortened that period instead of accepting it—was by resolute action in the East. But though the chances there are still important, the decisive possibilities that were open to us in the first two years no longer exist. We are committed to the West.

"It is there that the military problem must be solved. That it can be solved the experience of the last twelve months has proved. Upon the meaning of the colossal cannonades and unprecedented air fighting along the Yser we have deliberately preferred to make no comment. The enemy's alarm and the nature of his expectations have sufficiently appeared. Whether he is right or wrong the future will disclose. He has tried by various challenges, including one hard blow near the sea, to force our hand. It has failed to disturb whatever views Haig and his colleagues may have as to place and times.

"Our business is to have faith in the British army and its chiefs. They have earned it."

CANADIANS DECORATED

Many Awarded Military Cross for Bravery.

D.S.O., D.C.M. and Bars Also.

London Cable says—The following Canadians have been honored:

Capt. G. H. Hay, Royal Scots, formerly militia, receives Distinguished Service Order for leading a battalion through each successive stage of an attack with such ability that all objectives were gained at small cost. He has been twice wounded.

The Military Cross was awarded to Capt. George Tyson, Liverpools, formerly of the Canadians, for leading a raiding party with conspicuous gallantry; to Lieut. C. E. Hedge, Staffordshires, formerly corporal with the Canadian cavalry, for leading bombing parties for seventeen hours. He was severely wounded. To Lieut. G. W. Devitt Royal Artillery, formerly of the Eaton Battery, Toronto. He took forward a gun despite being wounded, and brought it into action.

Military Cross—Lieut. Percival McKinnon, led men through heavy hostile barrage to reinforce assault, and showed great courage in getting through badly-needed ammunition; Major William Norman Maclean, although isolated with company, attacked and captured 250 yards of trench, holding it four days; Lieut. John Dalhousie Matheson, after capture of position, pushed forward, often single handed, severely wounded, but continued to carry on; Lieut. Thomas William McConkey, attacked by several hostile machines, wounded in three places, continued to work machine-gun; Lieut. Alva Elmer Metcalfe, crossed 300 yards of open ground in broad daylight, under heavy fire; Lieut. Albert Edward Pickering (Flying Corps), attacked hostile infantry transport and destroyed several enemy aeroplanes; Rev. Robt. Weston Ridgeway, showed great courage and determination tending wounded under heavy fire; Lieut. John Trevor Shum, severely wounded, captured five prisoners; Capt. Donald George Turnbull, Medicals, no undertaking seemed too perilous for him, constantly dressed wounded in front line, his example at all times beyond praise; Lieut. William James White, rallied platoon and repelled three distinct attacks, till all but surrounded, his example was such that not one man left his post; Lieuts. Samuel Kenyon Lount, John Turner Lownsbrough, Donald Alexander MacIntosh, Capt. William Stewart Mactier, Lieuts. William Gerald Martin, Morton Joseph Mason, Alfred James Matthews, Herbert Tru May, Benjamin Bertram McConkey, Captains William Charles McDonell, Eris Michelson, Lieuts. Howard James Morgan, Capt. Hugh Roy Mustard, Lieuts. Andrew McCormack Naismith, William Alfred Newman, Melbourne O'Halloran, Capt. Harry O'Leary, Lieuts. Charles Edward Otton, Gordon Cummings Patterson, Claude Martin Purchase, George S. Robertson, Harry Edwin Salsbury, Capt. Alex. Saunders, Lieut. Leonard Geo. Smith, Benson Steel, Charles Stevenson, Cyril Henry, Henry Stevenson, Capt. Charles Russell Stinson, Lieuts. William Allen Townsley, Geo. Patrick Weir, Wm. Richard Welch, Capt. Benjamin Williams, Lieuts. Wm. Willis, Garnet Winterbottom. Sergt.-Majors William Laidlaw, John Sydie.

Bar to Distinguished Conduct Medal—Sergt. D. G. Bell, cleared telephone dugout, killed several of the enemy.

Distinguished Conduct Medal—Pte. A. E. Abbey, B. G. Beach, L. J. Blowers, Sergt.-Major F. J. Bradley, Ptes. H. L. Brooks, F. Hurley, R. McQuarrie, R. E. Smith, G. P. Tinker, W. Ward, R. Wyldman, Sergts. H. Caminer, E. A. Fyfe, J. Macgregor, J. G. Pinson, E. Slattery, Corpls. L. Macdonald, P. C. Simmonds, H. Snape, G. E. Wells, Ptes. C. A. Collver, G. E. Harrison, M. Williams, L. F. Wismer.

A NEW CRISIS.

Trouble Brewing in the Russian Cabinet.

Petrograd Cable says—The negotiations for strengthening the Cabinet with Constitutional Democratic Ministers are threatened with a breakdown, owing to differences with the Socialists as to the future role they will play in the Council of Deputies and also on the question of Premier Kerensky's programme of reforms.

A letter addressed to Premier Kerensky by three Constitutional-Democratic candidates for Ministerial posts declares categorically that the Cabinet must not be interfered with by outside organizations, to which the newspaper Isbestiya Clenstiya, the organ of the Councils, has replied declaring that M. Kerensky will not consent to any diminution in the importance of the Councils as otherwise no representative of the revolutionary democracy could remain in the Cabinet.

This newspaper repeats that it is impossible to sacrifice the Socialist Ministers, MM. Tchernoff and Skobeleff.

The Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Deputies and the Council of Peasants' Deputies, sitting together, have passed a resolution, proposed by M. Tseretelli, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, that the Government must adhere to its programme of reforms, and that no agreement with the bourgeois members is possible on other conditions.

The Rech, the organ of the Constitutional Democrats, retorts in sharp criticism of M. Tseretelli, declaring that honest collaboration of Socialists in the Cabinet and any genuine representatives of the non-Socialist parties is impossible unless the programme is changed.

NO CANADIANS YET.

Will Not Be Freed by Germany at Present.

London Cable says—The Canadian Associated Press understands that the new arrangements between the British and German Governments concerning the return of prisoners is unlikely to affect Canadian prisoners for some time at least. There will be many prisoners from English sources, such as those taken at Mons, who will receive consideration first, therefore, although many Canadians have been in captivity almost a couple of years, they cannot be dealt with for some time.

Not His Language.

Lord Robson, at one of the dinners of the Glamorgan society, told the story of a Welsh witness in a Glamorganshire case who, having been sworn to speak the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, was asked if he could speak English or if he would like an interpreter. "No," he replied; "I can speak some English, but I cannot speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."—St. James' Gazette.

RUSS TROOPS ARE TRYING TO STEM THE TEUTON TIDE

Romiloff's Loyal Forces on Several Sectors Are Making a Stand.

Enemy Still Superior in Force---Roumanians Shoot 50 Hun Spies.

London Cable says—Apparently the turn in the tide of retreat by the Russians in East Galicia is beginning. On several sectors the loyal troops have halted and now are facing the Austro-Germans and offering resistance as best they can with their badly-depleted forces.

Although the stands they have made have as yet been unsuccessful in holding back to any great extent the numerically superior Austro-German armies, they serve to show that the spirit of loyalty is still alive in many of the men of Gen. Korniloff's contingents, and that it is not their purpose to surrender further terrain without a contest.

One of the main attempts of the Russians to hold back the enemy has been on the heights east of the River Zbrocz, which flows along the border between Galicia and Russia, but despite the resistance offered, they have been compelled by overwhelming numbers to cede ground to the Austro Germans who crossed the stream.

The Teutons also have crossed the Galician frontier, and now are invading Bukowina by way of the Suchawa valley, their immediate objective being the town of Stietyn, while the force that recently was successful in its operations against the Russians in the region of Kirlibaba has reached the territory lying to the east of the Upper Moldava valley.

Despite the activity of German spies, who are trying to create disaffection in the Roumanian army, the Roumanians and Russians fighting near the northwestern border of Roumania continue to press forward in the Casin and Putna valleys, having captured six additional villages and added materially to the aggregate of men made prisoner and guns captured. Fifty of the German spies, disguised as Russian soldiers, are reported to have been caught and shot.

THE RUSSIAN STATEMENT.

To-day's War Office report from Petrograd reads:

"In the region of Zbaraj there were artillery actions and the enemy bombarded the town. South of Goussiatin the enemy infantry attempted to cross the Zbrocz River, but was repulsed.

"On the Dniester the enemy attacked our bridgehead near Zaleshchyk (Zale Szczky), but after obstinate fighting was repulsed. Southwest of Zaleshchyk, in the region of Celapistche, Kisglile and Stetzoff, after a series of obstinate attacks, the enemy succeeded in thrusting back our troops slightly.

"In the Carpathians east of the towns of Stonnatik and Capul, our troops under enemy pressure retired to the region of Sipot, Kaneral and Moldava. On the remainder of the front there was rifle firing.

"Roumanian front: On Saturday the enemy delivered attacks north of the Jakobeny-Kimpolung road, which were repulsed during the day, but towards evening the enemy pressed our troops back on the heights west of Foundaul and Moldava. Enemy attacks on Durpel and Saroul were repulsed, as well as attacks on both sides of the Fokshani-Ajoud railway.

"Caucasus front: Unchanged.

"Baltic Sea: On Friday an enemy Zeppelin, flying over the Alan Islands, dropped 20 large bombs on the town of Tornby, near Mariehamm. The Zeppelin was fired at by our guns of the fleet and shore batteries. In the Gulf of Riga squadrons of enemy hydro-aeroplanes raided the neighborhood of the Zerel and Arensburg Islands. They were fired at by the fleet and shore batteries. The machines disappeared after dropping about 20 bombs without result.

"Our fire brought down a German aeroplane in flames in the neighborhood of Steklnikovce, west of Zbaraj."

The Roumanian War Office statement says:

"On the 27th, between the Valleys of Casin and Putna, we again advanced some kilometres and occupied the villages of Sovela, Dragoslav, Negrilesti, Topesti, Valeasarea and Colacul. We again took prisoners and some motor batteries and war material."

THE GERMAN STATEMENT.

"Army group of Gen. von Boehm-Ermolli: The Russian forces are holding the heights east of the River Zbrocz, which has been crossed at several points despite fierce resistance, and been reached by our divisions also to the south of Skala. Also on the northern bank of the Dniester we have gained ground beyond Korolowka.

"Between the Dniester and the Pruth the enemy again offered bitter resistance, but nevertheless was pressed back by our attack to the southwest of Zale-Szczyky.

"Front of Archduke Joseph: Along the Cheremosh the enemy is defending himself on the eastern bank of the river. Our attack continues between Zalucze and Wiznitz. In the Suchawa Valley our troops are penetrating toward Seletyn.

"Also to the east of the upper Moldova Valley we fought our way forward. Field Marshal von Mackensen's successful advances to the north of Fokshani and at the mouth of the Rimnicul brought us several hundred prisoners.

"Macedonian front: There is nothing of importance to report."

"Considerable portions of our troops are now standing on Russian territory after the battle east of Zbrocz. The enemy's rear guards were driven toward the east from the Dniester and the Pruth. In the Meste-Canesce sector (Roumanian front) the Russians are retreating towards the north."

ALLIES ADVANCE TWO MILES ALONG TWENTY-MILE FRONT

Berlin Cable—The German official communication issued to-night states that only a crater position was taken in the first day's assault on both sides of the Ypres. The text of the communication follows:

"The first assault of the English army, delivered in Flanders on a 25-kilometre front, on both sides of Ypres, has been repulsed.

"After changeable bitter fighting on a large scale, the enemy, who attacked with superior forces many ranks deep, had to content himself with the possession of a crater position in our defensive zone."

British Front in France and Belgium, July 31.—An epoch-making offensive, launched by the British and French against the German lines between the River Lys and Boesinghe at daybreak, has, with few exceptions, accomplished all that had been planned for the first day of this battle, which in its early stages, gives promise of being the greatest conflict of the war.

Roughly speaking, the British penetrated positions held by Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, between Boesinghe and Warneton, and at the time of filing this despatch, were in possession of the first three lines of the German trenches at most points throughout this front.

Reports received from the French troops, which are attacking on the difficult territory between Dixmude and a point near Boesinghe, say that they have forced their way across this marsh-studded and partly inundated region and captured the first two lines of German trenches.

Late to-day it was reported that the Germans had begun a heavy counter-attack at the point where the Allied forces join.

The German front line trenches, which had been torn to pieces by the preliminary bombardment, offered little resistance, but once the Allied forces had penetrated beyond them they met with fierce resistance at many points. Directly east of Zillebeke and again a little to the north the British were temporarily held up by a heavy machine gun fire, but only temporarily, for the troops charged through the rain of lead and forced the Germans from their positions in hand-to-hand fighting.

"Again at a redoubt which was strongly held in the German line and defended by concrete fortifications, the British were brought to a stand by machine gun fire. But they charged with bayonets and dislodged the Germans.

CHARGED THROUGH OWN BARRAGE.

One of the most striking and spectacular events of the day's fighting occurred at the so-called Menin Tunnel, a great underground fortification constructed by the Germans on the Menin road opposite Hooge. The British preliminary bombardment had forced the Germans to hold the French line thinly here, and the British division, which was to attack at dawn lay out all night in shell holes within 25 yards of the German line, waiting for the signal to advance. When the time arrived for the charge, and the British gunners had dropped a protecting barrage on the German front trench ahead of the British troops, it was seen that the Germans had taken to their heels and were fleeing.

The British, seeing their prey escaping, went mad and charged directly through their own barrage, fortunately without heavy casualties. The Menin Tunnel, which was expected to be occupied by several hundred Germans, was found to be held by only 11, the rest having retreated.

It was only at the second line that the British met resistance, and here after sharp hand-to-hand fighting, they forced the Germans to withdraw.

No check has yet been made on the number of German prisoners captured, but they are flowing in a steady stream back of the British lines. Many of those captured at the Menin Tunnel and other points are mere boys.

PART PLAYED BY TANKS.

The tanks again played a prominent part in the opening battle and reports from all sections of the British front say that their work has been most satisfactory. Large numbers of these monsters were employed, and in many cases pursued their destruction and uncheckable way to a distance far within the German lines.

Further information obtained from German prisoners concerning the effects of the British preliminary bombardment indicate that the effect of this unparalleled expenditure of ammunition were disastrous in the extreme, both in damage and to the morale of the German troops. Within the past few days six Bavarian divisions were withdrawn from the line and replaced by fresh troops, because they were so thoroughly demoralized by the inferno of fire which they had undergone. Photographs taken by aviators back of the German lines show that there was scarcely a square yard of territory along their front which was not devastated by the high explosives. It is small wonder.

THE OFFICIAL REPORTS.

London Cable—The official statement from British headquarters in France to-night reports the capture by the allies of the following villages: La Basseeville, Steenstraete, Bixschoote, Verlorenhoek, Frezenberg, Saint Julien, Pilkem, Hooge, Westhoek and Hollebeke, and more than 3,500 prisoners. The reports from Sir Douglas Haig read:

Evening.—"The operations of the allied troops begun this morning in the neighborhood of Ypres have been continued with success during the day despite unfavorable weather. The enemy's positions have been entered and our line has been advanced on a front of over 15 miles, from La Basseeville, on the River Lys, to Steenstraete, on the River Yser. Both of these villages are now in the hands of the Allies.

"On the extreme left the French troops, acting in close co-operation with and protecting the left flank of the British forces, captured the village of Steenstraete and rapidly penetrated the German defences to a depth of nearly two miles. Having gained their objectives for the day at an early hour, they continued their attack with the greatest gallantry beyond their original objectives and captured Bixschoote and the enemy's positions to the southeast and west of the village on a front of nearly two and a half miles, including the Kortekerrt Inn.

"During the afternoon a hostile counter-attack was successfully repulsed.

"In the centre and on the left centre British divisions penetrated the enemy's positions to a depth of two miles and secured crossings on the River Steenbeek, which constituted their final objectives.

"In the course of their attack our troops stormed two powerful defensive systems and carried by assault the villages of Verlorenhoek, Frezenberg Saint Julien and Pilkem, and many strongly-defended farms, woods and organized localities.

"Further south, in the right centre of our attack, after gaining the whole of their first objectives, which included the village of Hooge and Sanctuary Wood, our troops fought their way forward against very obstinate resistance from the enemy in a difficult country in the neighborhood of the Ypres open road, and carried the village of Westhoek. In this neighborhood, where heavy fighting has taken place throughout the day, and still continues, we have penetrated the enemy's defences to a depth of about a mile. A number of powerful counter-attacks have been successfully repulsed.

"On the extreme right, south of the Zillebeke-Zandvoord Road, our troops gained the whole of their objectives early in the day, capturing the villages of La Basse Ville and Hollebeke.

"In addition to heavy casualties inflicted on the enemy, over 3,500 prisoners have already been brought in, but no accurate estimate of our captures can yet be made."

THE FRENCH REPORT.

Paris Cable—The French attack to-day, in conjunction with the British, was highly successful, according to the official statement issued by the War Office to-night. At small loss the French troops carried important German positions and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. The text of the statement reads:

"Having crossed the Yser Canal during the night our troops attacked at 4 o'clock this morning in conjunction with the British armies on their right. The formidable artillery preparation had completely leveled the German organizations and inflicted heavy losses on the defenders.

"At the end of the morning our troops had carried two enemy positions, and in their dash had spontaneously gone beyond the objective which had been assigned to them. They advanced on the road between Lizerne and Dixmude and captured the village of Bixschoote and Kortekeer Inn.

"Our losses were exceedingly small, we captured important material and took prisoners not yet counted. The battlefield is covered with German dead, showing the magnitude of the enemy losses."

FIGHTING ON THE AISNE.

"On the Aisne front the artillery fighting was particularly violent. Reports up to the present, concerning the operation carried out south of La Royere, emphasize the splendid attitude of our troops. On the entire front of the attacks the objectives assigned having been exceeded, we have been able to clear out the advance trenches, which we found filled with enemy dead. The number of prisoners taken exceed up to the present 210. Our losses were slight.

"About eleven o'clock in the morning the enemy made a counter-attack against our trenches west of l'Epine de Chevregny, which was repulsed.

"The Germans, after an intense bombardment of our lines at Cerny and Hurtebise, attacked our positions about 1,500 metres with three regiments. Our counter-attacks immediately carried out, drove them back, and permitted us to advance along the whole front.

"The day was relatively calm on both banks of the Meuse."

HUGE FORCES OF BRITISH IN THE NEW DRIVE

Germans Fought Furiously, but the Allies Would Not Be Denied.

FIERCE FIGHT AHEAD

Foe Has Brought Up Fresh Troops, and Will Not Quit Readily.

British Front in France and Belgium Cable—A vast British force, augmented by French troops, at dawn to-day launched against the army of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, between Dixmude, on the north, and Gapaard, near Warneton, on the south, a terrific offensive, which according to the earlier reports, had carried the onrushing allies well beyond the shell-shattered front line trenches of the Germans throughout this approximately 20-mile front, and in many places had reached the second-line defences.

Both the French and British had achieved all the first objectives, and the artillery was moving forward with succeeding precision, and the whole situation was satisfactory in every particular.

In numerous places the Entente Allies encountered strong resistance and counter-attacks from the desperate Teutons.

Between Dixmude and Boesinghe the attacking forces are reported to have secured the first two lines of the German trenches after having fought over the most difficult terrain imaginable, due to marshes and inundated areas with which the section is blocked.

ENEMY FOUGHT STUBBORNLY.

The German front line about the Ypres salient, which had been held unquestioned by the enemy since the early days of the war, offered little resistance to-day to the British advance, but beyond these trenches the Germans made a firm stand in an endeavor to stem the onslaught.

The British again captured La Basseeville, on the Franco-Belgian frontier, which a few days ago they had occupied and then relinquished. The Germans made a hasty counter-attack here in an attempt to regain the position, but the British flung them off and began consolidating the ground won.

Many prisoners already are finding their way back to the allied lines. These men report that the unprecedented artillery preparations which prefaced the Entente allied attack worked havoc in the German lines and undoubtedly caused a heavy loss of life.

TRENCHES SMASHED TO PIECES.

The German front-line trenches were entirely smashed to pieces and the wire entanglements before them were torn away. The British and French went into battle under cover of what was perhaps the greatest barrage fire seen during the war.

The great guns of the allies opened up at the appointed time, and for hours hurled an avalanche of shells into the enemy territory with drumfire intensity. A large number of tanks which were in the attack are reported to have done invaluable work during these trying stages of the battle.

The Entente allies are facing a large concentration of German artillery and fresh groups of men, which were rushed up as soon as it became apparent some time ago that an offensive was contemplated in this region. In the last few days Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria has replaced many of his old divisions with fresh troops, and others are being held in reserve.

DESPERATE BATTLE AHEAD

The Entente Allies, however, have a great preponderance in artillery, which is the vital factor. Another thing most important to the British and French is that they recently have established complete superiority in aerial service, upon which the artillery work is dependent.

The British naturally have made great concentrations of guns and men for this offensive, and the French troops are co-operating with them with their usual valor. It is known that the morale of the German troops along this front is not up to the old standard, but they are still strong and a desperate battle is expected.

BRITISH AIR RAIDS.

R.N.A.S. Fliers Do Effective Work.

London Cable—Effective raids have been carried out by British naval airmen in various sectors behind the German lines in Belgium, according to an official announcement to-day. The statement reads:

"During the night of Saturday bombing raids were made by the naval air service on works at Bruges and in areas throughout Middelkerke and Ghistelles. Several tons of bombs were dropped with [illegible]. All the machines and pilots returned safely."

RAMMED TRANSPORT.

Saratoga, With U. S. Soldiers, Hit at Atlantic Port.

An Atlantic Port Cable—The American transport Saratoga, at anchor waiting sailing orders, was rammed by the outbound American steamship Panama here to-day. The ship headed toward the beach in a sinking condition.

Meanwhile those on board were safely taken off in lifeboats or by tugs and other craft in the harbor which responded to distress signals. So far as is known no one was injured.

A deep hole in the transport's port quarter extending from below the waterline to the rail resulted from the collision.

The Saratoga is a former Ward Line steamer. The Panama belongs to the Panama Railroad Steamship Line.

Fruit Wanted!

Bring us now any quantity of

Cherries
Black Currants
Gooseberries
and Raspberries

Please note that we will receive fruit

Every day after 5 o'clock

At our BRICK WAREHOUSE

North of the Library. Don't bring it to the store as the service is arranged for, as above.

NO BLIGHTED FRUIT WANTED
THERE IS A HEAVY PENALTY
FOR HANDLING SAME

Falconer Bros.
THE HOME OF GOOD GROCERIES

What About Your Shoe Requirements?

We know that leather and cloth of all kinds are soaring, and are likely to go a great deal higher, but we are selling the best stock of boots and shoes that has been in this town for years at very reasonable prices.

Ladies' you don't have to pay $7 and $15 for a pair of boots, unless you go in for Criminal Extravagance. We are showing excellent values, 8 and 9 inch tops, in kid, patent, gun metal at from $4.50 to $5. Lower tops from $2.50 to $3.50 good enough for any lady to go anywhere.

Then we have the kind that our men and boys are wearing in the harvest fields and the trenches from $2.50 to $5.00

This is not a slaughter sale, but our prices are lower than so called sale prices. The discerning public is picking up these bargains every day. We invite you to share in these snaps.

Bring your butter and eggs
And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.

If you have a thing to sell let The Times tell the people about it.

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now, will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places, and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College

Owen Sound, Ontario

remains open all summer to help meet the demand for trained office help. Enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Dept. A., Owen Sound, Ont.

Paris Green!
Bug Death!

Look after those potatoes right away.

Hay Forks
Binder Twine
Screen doors & Windows
All sizes

Thomson's
Hardware Store

GRESHAM

George Brown has received word that his son James, who is in the Cyclists Corps, had been accidentally burned while using disinfectants, the liquid exploding.

W. J. Nelson is engaged with J. D. McGillivray.

Mrs. S. Babcock, of Paisley, is visiting Mrs. R. McGregor.

Miss Bessie McGillivray spent Sunday with her friend, Miss Lily Brown.

James McKinnon and wife motored to Chatham last week.

Mr. McLean Young, spent the week end in Southampton.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex McDougal, of Hamilton, are holidaying here.

Mrs. M. Sturgeon, of Kincardine, is visiting her father, John McKinnon.

A Handy Thing

The handiest thing in the world is a wrist watch, and especially so in the summer weather. You'll be interested in looking at them.

Let us show you one of our fine line of clocks

Rowlands
The Jeweller

SLASHING PRICES

The hot weather responsible for this big cut in prices. We offer our big stock of

MIDDIES

Ladies' Misses', Children's also Children's Dresses to go at

20 per cent. Off

These goods are the best money can buy, and our offer is a big bargain.

36c for eggs
36c for butter

B. HILKER

UNDERWOOD NEWS

Get your gasoline at The Hardware.

Save wood and coal, use an oil stove. We have some coal oil stoves which will save the women work, and save money too. Thede & Brill.

Mr. Stafford, of Bruce Tp., has purchased a Ford.

These are the busy days. The farmers are hunting around trying to get help to handle the crops. Hay around these parts is very heavy. Most of the fields will run two tons per acre. The weather is just splendid for haying. Wheat will be ready in a few days and is filling up good and promises to be a good sample. Spring crops are excellent and are on the heavy side. Geo Orford has some barley 5 feet in length. Given good weather, there should be lots of feed this winter. Root crops are a little light owing to the ground being so hard and dry.

Minister Breaks Leg While Loading Hay

Rev. W. D. McIntosh, of Nairn, while helping his brother-in-law, Mr. John Kirkconnel, of Tiverton, in the haying yesterday, had the misfortune to break his right leg.

He was driving the load, when the wheels ran into a rut upsetting the hay, throwing Mr. McIntosh off, breaking his leg, and otherwise bruising him.

Mr. Charles L. Johnston, of Guelph, was the guest of Miss Reta Kelcher over the holiday.

Successful Pupils

Following is the Bruce County list of pupils who have passed the Middle School examination for entrance into the Normal Schools:

The certificates of the successful candidates and the statements of the marks of those who failed will be mailed to the Principals or Inspectors in the course of a few days:

B. Anderson (with L. S. arithmetic), M. E. Alexander, A. B. Anderson M. L. Anderson, N. Avis, I. F. Bridge, R. M. Brown, R. G. Campbell (honors), J. A. Connoly, H. V. Corbett (L. S. art), P. Clements, E. K. Convey (honors), M. Convey, A. A. Cook, W. N. Geddes, J. M. Haugh (honors), E. C. Harrison, E. E. Harrison (honors), T.C. Hewitt, F Krug, (with L. S. art), C. Kinmond, W. A. McCannel, W. G. MacGregor, M. J. MacLennan, M. K. McLennan, M. M. Hasey, A. C. McCool, D. B. McCool, (with L. S. art) L. G. Nelson, A. M. Nicholson, K. B. Patterson, A. Patterson, E. P. Patterson, J.C. Quandt, (honors) H. M. Ross, E. Stevens, J. P. Sexsmith, I. Stevenson E. W. Stanley, W. H. Upshall (honors) W. S. Woods, W. I. Wilson (with L. S. arithmetic).

Alarm Clocks

Why do most people go to Busby's for alarm clocks? Because we have the best stock, also when repairs are necessary you know our reputation.

We have in stock.

Big Ben	Vigilant
Cyclone	Turnout
Vantite	Icallu
Giant Spasmodic
Suminous Sunrise

J. J. BUSBY,
The Quick Repair House

News of the Vicinity

Lloyd Datling is home for a holiday.

Haying is about finished and wheat will be general this week.

Mr. Stone, of London, is at Mr. J. W. McKinsey's.

Mrs. Asetline, of Regina, has been visiting at Mr. R. McKechnie's.

BORN—On Monday, July 30, to Mr. and Mrs. George Leslie, Con. 11, Bruce, a son.

Mrs. G. A. McKay of Port Elgin, is visiting at the home of her son, Mr. Angus McKay.—Tiverton Watchman.

The wife of a butcher in Quebec city gave birth to triplets, last year twins were born.

BORN—At Sweetgrass, Mont., on Wednesday, July 17 to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Holtz, a daughter.

Mr. Gilmour, principal of Tara continuation school, has been appointed principal of Chesley High school.

While Mr. Bastendorff, jeweler, of Milverton, was enjoying a day at the lake with local friends here, he had the misfortune to lose a solid gold watch.

Messrs Nelson and George Shantz and their families, and E. H. Thomas, of Kitchener, motored to town and spent the week end with Rev. and Mrs. Hallman.

The funeral of the late Mrs. James Rose, of the 8th of Bruce, on Sunday, August 5th, was largely attended. A number of Port Elgin friends attended. Rev. Buckberrough conducted the services

Col. Hugh Clark, M. P., and Mr. Stewart of Kincardine were in town looking up friends last Saturday. They visited the bowling green, and stated that the Kincardine club expected to reap a good crop of hay from their green.—Beacon.

A blind pig has been running loose in Saugeen township, and a certain farmer has been under our observation for some time, but last week he killed the thing. You see, this one was different than the usual "blind pig." This pig was born without eyes and was the property of a sober and industrious Saugeener.

J. A. Chapman, J. P., was in Southampton on Saturday last hearing two liquor cases, the first one was ordering the confiscation of whiskey, which was being brought in under an assumed name, the party for whom it was intended left town. The liquor was sent to the Department at Toronto. The other case was against M. C. Johnston, who was getting liquor through the Paisley express office and bringing it to Southampton and distributing it to other persons, in contravention of the Temperance act. Johnston was fined $200.00 and costs, or four months in gaol. He went down, but his friends paid the fine and he was liberated. Inspector White prosecuted in both cases.

John Young Dies Suddenly

John Young, a well-known and highly-respected farmer on the 6th of Bruce, died suddenly yesterday.

Deceased was well up in years, but was around his farm as usual in the morning. He complained of a slight illness and came to the house, where he passed away in a few hours.

The funeral will be held on Thursday at 2 p.m.

An obituary will appear next week.

Giving Us The Patronage

We have been getting good business. Our trade has increased a third. The right price, and good meat will always get the business. Our stock of fresh and cured meats is large. Here are our prices: Pork, 25 to 28c; lamb, 25 to 30c; beef, 16 to 28c. Fowl at all times, and a full line of cooked, salted and smoked meats. Send the children to our store. They get the same attention as grown-ups. We buy only the best grade of stock for our store, and at the market price, therefore, our prices are set with the market from week to week. We send meat to Paisley and Southampton wholesale, and our customers are assured of the best. Top price paid for hogs. Telephone me at shop or house. Lambert Hamilton.

George Brown's Party Brings a Record Crowd

The garden party at Mr. George Brown's for Centre Bruce Presbyterian church was well attended last night, and a jolly time spent by all. The party is a celebrated one in this district and this year kept up its reputation as a big affair.

Over a thousand people were present, $200 being taken in at the gate.

The usual hearty supper was provided, after which Mr. J. J. Hunter presided over an excellent program in his happy fashion. The order was good and everybody remained to the end. Mr. Brown spared no effort to have his grounds in good shape, and the big torch fires in hollow logs kept the place well lighted.

Those taking part were: Paisley quartet, Miss Cole; Miss Fullerton, Mrs. Brown, Miss McKenzie, Kincardine pipe band, Messrs. Wat. Mackay, T. Brown, Well. Avis, Mr. Pfaff, C. M. Bowman, M.P.P., E. R. Sayles, Arch. McLean.

Sergt. McNabb, of the 160th battalion, died in England last week. He was 20 years of age.

THE MARKETS

	Aug 8 1917	Aug. 8 1916
Butter, per lb	36	28
Eggs, per doz	36	24
Hogs, per cwt	16 00	11 25

More People Every Day

Are hearing about the splendid advantages of trading at this store.

The unusual values we are offering in ready-to-wear apparel, for men and boys' makes this store the ideal place to trade.

We invite everybody to come and see our goods and compare with what you can get elsewhere. We expect no one to buy of us unless he is fully satisfied that it is to his own best interests to do so, but you won't know where the best values come from unless you compare.

Men's heavy solid leather work shoes $3 to 5.	Boys' shoes, solid leather sizes 1 to 5, $2.25 to $4
Men's fine shoes $3 to $7	Sizes 11 to 13, $2 to $3

Positively the best values in
Men's suits, Raincoats, Odd pants, Fine shirts
Work shirts, Underwear, Hats and Caps

Agent for Peabody's Overalls and Smocks
Leather Label Overalls and smocks
Brotherhood Overalls and Smocks

New styles, New ideas, Big values, Little Prices

Make it worth your while to look here before you buy.

F. R. BARBER
MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

PATTISON'S FOR FURNITURE

July and August is the time to save money by buying your Furniture at Pattison's.

We are sole agents in this vicinity for the Famous Singer Sewing Machine, also the White, Beaver and Raymond Models. Sewing Machine Oil, Needles, and Repairs always in stock.

We are also agents for the Columbia Grafonola and Records

: : J. W. Pattison : :
Furniture Dealer and Undertaker

Advertise it in The Times.

BURGOYNE AND DISTRICT

At the garden party held at the home of Mr. John Cook last week, $210 was taken in.

Mr. W. McTaggart sold his prize taking horse to Mr. Geo. Craig, of Paisley. The price, we understand, was a handsome one.

Mr. Peter Cameron and family from Toronto are visiting friends here and in Owen Sound district. Mr. Cameron drove up from Toronto, in his motor car twice in the last couple of weeks with different members of his family.

Miss Beulah Stewart, who has been in Toronto for several months, returned home last week.

Mrs. Ingles from Atwood, spent the week end visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Grieve.

Fall wheat is being harvested this week. The sample is good, but the acreage is rather small.

Mr. John Kesselring got his wrist severely hurt with a colt and now can use only one hand. Rather a bad fix to be in at the begining of harvest, and no help to be got.

Burgoyne people had the pleasure of hearing Rev. Mr. Paddon, of Milverton, on Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Hills of Chesley, is expected to preach on the 19th, and give an illustrated lecture on the Monday following.

Times Subscription Rates

One year	$1.50
Eight months	$1.00
Six months	75
Four months	60
Three months	40

To United States $2.00 per year strictly in advance.

Special Envelopes for Soldiers

The Times has printed for use of those corresponding with soldiers in England or at the front addressed envelopes making it very easy to send letters. These sell at 10 cents a parcel. Get a package and insure your letters reaching the boys.

Advertise it in The Times..

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body; and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from any harmful drugs. Try it.

Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.

Good Times

In spite of the high cost of living, these are prosperous times. Wage earners have steady employment and good wages. Those who are wise will save a part of their weekly earnings and deposit it in our Savings Department, for no one can tell just what labor conditions will be two or three years hence.

Enquiries are solicited.

The Bank of Nova Scotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 110,000,000

PORT ELGIN BRANCH.
A. L. Wyant, Manager

Subscribe for The Times and get all the local news.

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 33 PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 15, 1917 $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

Mr. D. A. Campbell is Collector For Saugeen

D. A. Campbell had no opposition for the position of taxes collector for Saugeen township, and the Saugeen council very gladly appointed him as their representative this year.

Dan has held the job for many years and he has the happy knack of getting all the taxes in good time.

COMING EVENTS

10c. per line
No notice less than 25c

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES—Burgoyne Presbyterian church on Sunday, August 19th. Rev. Mr. Hilts, of Chesley, will preach morning and evening. On Monday night a lecture will be given by Rev. Mr. Hilts on "Florence Nightingale and the Development of the Red Cross" illustrated by limelight views, many of which deal directly with the war. Admission 25 and 15c. All come.

REOPENING Services—Baptist church Port Elgin, Sunday, August 26. Services at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. See further notice.

THAT FAMOUS PARTY—The Underwood Presbyterians are to hold their usual big garden party on Thursday, August 23rd. There will be an extra fine supper and entertainment provided, and the price is 35 and 25c. Among those taking part are C. M. Bowman, M. P. P., John McAulay, J. J. Hunter, E. R. Sayles. Rev. Mr. Robinson will occupy the chair. Tea from 6 to 8.

Patriotic money at Times office from 2 to 3 p.m. Saturday. Be on time please.

Mrs Higbee and children have returned home.

Mr. H. H. Stevens and party have returned from a holiday at Tamarac Island.

I. E. Haug, near Durham, and well-known here, had his barn burned Monday night.

Red Cross ladies will ship old iron, papers, magazines rags, etc. on Monday next, send these things to the station, or will send for them if you will notify Mrs. F. R. Barber, president Red Cross.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

LOST—A Kodak on the beach on Saturday. Finder please return to Times office. A reward will be given here.

STRAYED—To Queen's hotel, spotted fox hound. Owner apply to A. Willoughby.

FOR SALE—The Andrew Sutherland property at the South End. Fine brick house, 7 rooms and shed. Good basement, also stable Possession given immediately. Apply to Geo. S. Webb and James McEwing, executors. 24 tf.

WANTED—We are paying the highest prices for beefring hides. B. Zelkind, Port Elgin.

PHONOGRAPHS!

"How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.

Louis Bloch's Music Store
Owen Sound

DENTAL

W. P. POWER, D. D. S., Dentist, office over South End Store. Hours 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

MEDICAL

DR. F. H. WELLS, Office and residence on Green street, one door west of Bank of Hamilton.

W. J. CHAMBERS, M. D., L. R. C. P., L. M., Edinburgh. Office and residence "Lakeview Hall" opposite South End park Port Elgin.

DR. W. S. LAIRD, Oculist, Specialty in Nose and Throat diseases. Guarantees all his fitting of Glasses. Office hours Wednesday afternoons. Next to Metropolitan Bank

LEGAL

W. BURGESS, LL.B., Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public &c., &c. Office, Hulton's Block. Private and other funds to loan.

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. 429 G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communications in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at 8 p. m. Visiting brethern cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Gus. Smith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE, No. 179, I.O.O.F., of Ontario, meets at 8 o'clock, p.m., every Monday in their hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N. G.; T. Rankin, Rec. Sec.; D. Geddes, Perm Sec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer, of marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin

UNDERTAKING

J. W. PATTISON, Funeral director and embalmer. Residence on premises. Rural phone No. 22.

Saugeen Township Council Strikes the Rate

Reeve Christie, and Councillors, Webster, Atkinson, Chappel, and Greathead were in session on Saturday transacting general business for the township.

The chief item was the striking of the rate. It will be good news to the township men that the rate is practically the same. The County rate is a shade higher The rates are:

County—3.71.
Provincial wartax—1.1
Township rate—8mills
General school—2.05
School section rates range from 2 to 12 mills.

Board of Agriculture Gets Grant of Ten Dollars.

The Board of Agriculture of West Bruce which is the Ontario Government's idea to take the place of the Farmers' Institute, sought aid from the Saugeen Tp. Council to help out its finances to the extent of $10. John Scott made the appeal to the Council and the latter made the grant to help out matters.

Holiday Week

It is customary in newspaper offices to have a week in which no paper is issued, and as it is necessary for us to catch up with accumulated job work The Times will skip a week and the next date of publication will be August 29th. The office will be open as usual, every day for subscriptions and job work.

How to Get Streets Oiled

Watering the streets has not proven as successful as the oiling adopted by other small towns.

It is noted that many of the smaller towns, in other parts of the province, have stringent rules regarding automobile traffic, and they also have a watchful man on the job. As a result of the fines from speeding motorists they find it easy to oil the streets.

How long will Port Elgin put up with its main streets being made a race track? The dust nuisance has become something abominable to the merchants and business men this summer, and the speeding motorist is making life miserable for all.

Allenford Wins Baseball Game

There was a good crowd at the South end park on Saturday evening to witness the baseball game between Port Elgin and Allenford The game was put on hurriedly, and little notice given, otherwise there would have been a larger crowd.

Allenford had a lively lot of players, and they put up a good brand of ball.

The score of 5 2 for five innings shows snappy playing on both sides. Mr. Porter of Allenford gave splendid satisfaction as referee.

The players were:

Allenford—H. Nelson, McIlrath, Moore, Baker, Hewitson, Brent, McCullough, Craig, Nelson.

Port Elgin—Morton, Holt, Scammell, Bell, Thomas, J. Fleming, T. Fleming, Rooney, Rideout.

Miss Freda Thomson has returned to Owen Sound.

Mr. John Morrison of Sault Ste Marie U. S. is visiting at Hugh McLaren's.

Mr. Hugh McLaren will be in Owen Sound this week.

Mrs. E. Miller, Toronto, and Mrs. D. McVittie Southampton, visited Mrs. J. A. Chapman Wednesday.

Mr. Shuttleworth and family of London have taken a cottage at Paradise Grove.

Mr. George McArthur left Tuesday for Dunblane Sask., to take charge of his school there.

Rev. Dr. A. J. MacGillivray, Mrs. MacGillivray and Jean and James are holidaying here.

McLaren's received a car of coal last week which was distributed to their customers.

Mr. George Gray asks us to say that the amount of coal used at the public school last winter was 26 tons, 400 pounds not 30 tons as reported to have been discussed by the school trustees.

Miss Lila Hessenauer is holidaying with her mother here.

Be Particular

The particular housewife wants only the best in meats during the very hot weather, and that's the reason Eaton's butcher shop serves so many patrons with dainties in cold meats, lamb, beef, pork etc., We have also package soups, vegetables, etc. Phone your order to the Shop of Quality. A. E. Eaton, Prop

LADIES' DEPARTMENT

See the splendid display in the Ladies' department in the following lines.

Women's Bathing Suits
Misses' Bathing Suits
Ladies Underwear
Fine Hosiery
Corsets

Falconer Bros.

The Spirit of The British Soldier

The Times editor had the privilege of an interview with Lieut. William Northgrave, who is home on furlough, recovering from wounds, received in the winding up battles of Vimy Ridge.

Mr. Northgrave was twice wounded, in the hand and arm at St. Eloi, and through both legs at Vimy. He went over to France with a machine gun co, serving as a private until the big battles at the Somme, on September 15th, when for conspicuous bravery, and wisdom in handling men when his officers were wounded or killed, he was made lieutenant on the field, and praised for his work by the commanding officer, Questioned as to the method of his work which brought the promotion, Lieut. Northgrave preferred not to talk. He said it was only what thousands of brave lads were doing every day for the defence of liberty against a vicious foe.

Questioned as to his opinion of what further help Canada should send, Lieut, Northgrave said :

"Well, now, you are touching a political question, and I do not care to say much on that either, except that Canada cannot do too much. We do need reinforcements badly. Just think of this. Out of the 400,000 men enlisting from Canada there are not more than 80,000 at the front. You remember Mr. Churchill questioned in the British house that the ratio of men behind the lines and in England was that only one man in five soldiers got to the trenches, and you remember Mr. Asquith said it was mainly true, but that the matter would be enquired into. This ratio still exists, and our people should remember there are numerous other jobs in war time as well as that of actual fighting. It takes men to make an army medical corps, to make a transport, and to do the many odd jobs in any army. Do you know that the towns in France behind the lines contain a huge army all the time receiving instruction in just the very things that our armies did not know in the beginning of the war. Our officers, our non-coms. and privates are are being instructed daily in all the new and improved methods. This is how the British army is gaining superiority. Another thing which uses up a lot of men is that every casualty must report at once. The slightest wound the man must go to the dressing station and report. It is a crime, according to our rules, not to do so, You see, the army takes no chances on blood poisoning. Everything for the care and protection of the soldier is provided now."

"What about the Red Cross. Have they lots of supplies ?"

"Now, the army medical corps gives first aid The Red Cross gives its aid farther back. But let me say this, all soldiers are filled with praise for the good work of the Red Cross. The socks, the gifts of all kinds, and the assistance to wounded and sick is appreciated beyond the power of words. No man need worry of being neglected. He will have every attention in this great British army. Good food, good clothes, the best surgeons and nurses, and best of all the splendid fellowship of the British soldier, which is most cheering and encouraging."

"Do you know that one of the things which is beating the Germans is the absolute reliance and fearlessness of the British soldier, and this takes in all the colonial troops. His spirit is unbeatable. The Germans attack en masse. That's only way he fights, and only then when he knows he has supports and artillery. If he thinks he has not these supports, up goes his hands.

"Yes, the thing that barred the road to Calais and the thing that has saved the Allies many times in the first years of this war, has been the unbroken spirit of a few men. The German has no idea of a few men holding an impossible position, and fighting to the death This is the spirit which has saved Canada to the Canadians, and we can only say that the more men that are sent will convince Germans that they are putting up a hopeless fight, and the sooner they will see defeat."

"St. Eloi proved this, the Ypres salient, the Somme, and the recent battles. Vimy Ridge showed the superiority of the British in the most complete fashion. We have taken many important positions but none so complete as the Vimy Ridge fight In all these battles there was a splendid co-operation with the English Tommy. We used to laugh at our little English cockney, but believe me he is some fighter, Every British soldier believes himself a better soldier than the German, and every Englishman believes he is as good as any twelve Germans, that's why very small parties of these old country soldiers will stave off quite an army, or die in the attempt. There is splendid harmony between the Canadians and other troops. The Frenchmen are superb and so are their families behind the lines They will do anything for the allied soldier."

"How is it there are so many raids made, and little advance in bigger efforts ?"

"Well you have asked an important question. The raids are more important than your readers think. True, we do lose a few men in these affairs, but they are most important in finding out what the enemy intends to do, or what they think we intend to do. So by these raids we have, after all, saved many lives and beaten the German in many ways. Now supposing we wanted to advance on the German positions, we would test out their lines by raids here and there. If we found Bavarians or Prussians in front of us we would know that they either expected us, or were going to attack us So you see these raids by night keep us informed. On the other hand if we found Silesians, German Poles or Saxons we would know that the situation was easy. They are not good fighters

"Is the German soldier as well-kept to-day as he was ?"

"Yes, he is. He is just as well fed, clothed and booted as he ever was. Do not believe all the reports in newspapers about the German soldier being ill-fed. The last German trenches we raided had plenty of black bread, canned stuff, etc. And the last prisoners we saw were well clothed. He is as good a shot as the Britisher, but he is not as good with the bayonet. The use of the bayonet is bred in the bone, so far as the British are concerned, and they can put it over the Germans when it comes to close quarters. The German soldier is husky fellow, but strength is not all in this war. Force is getting a beating in this contest. The British authorities are appealing to the intelligence of our soldiers. As I said before we have a whole army at the back being trained by men who are just out of the trenches, and these men go up as seasoned troops, with new ideas developed to a nicety. Yes, Germany started this war with a fine organisation. They will not finish it, though. British organization is now supreme. We remember when our guns put a shell over Fritz would probably give us 20 in return. Not so now. We lead in the artillery department."

'Some people ask why the advances are so small. Why can't the Germans be kept on the run? Let me remind our people that no human being can advance in this war without the aid of artillery, and he can go no farther than the distance the artillery has prepared for him. The ground is always churned and there are great shell holes. If the season is wet, so much the worse, and it takes time to move these great guns, so advances are slow, but the main thing is that the allies are always making advances. Germany started out to win. She has not done it, and cannot do it, but Canadians should do all in their power to help the allies.

"Perhaps it would be interesting to tell you that the German prisoner is a very humble fellow. But he does this for a reason. Just as soon as he gets to our lines he wants to give us something for souvenirs, he wants to do something: work for us; carry our wounded. But he don't do this because he likes us. He's got an idea that we won't hurt him if he does these things. He wants to carry our wounded because he knows our fellows won't touch him if he is doing that. But all this is because of fear. His officers tell him we are torturing and killing prisoners. Of course every prisoner captured is treated decently by us. The German prisoners talk a great deal. They will tell you the war will soon be over, and that they don't want to fight, and all that sort of stuff, but you can't get them to say one word against the Kaiser."

Lieut. Northgrave has been through all the big engagements for the past year and a half. He says his wounds will permit him to go back and fight again shortly. He is happy to be back to his old home and friends. Like most men who have been through the fighting he does not say how long the war will last. He only knows the foe is mighty powerful and stubborn, and that the Allies need every support that it is possible for our people to give them.

Lieut. Northgrave showed us a piece of shrapnel taken from his left leg. The surgeons extract the iron and then tie the piece to the patient's clothes. That is how they endeavor to keep the "souvenirs" for the boys. "We note there are not so many German helmets coming over as souvenirs. What's the matter?" "Well, that's so, and it's funny, too. The boys are a little superstitious about those black helmets with the big spike, and gold eagle in front. Do you know, some of them started a story that if a soldier puts one of them on his head it is sure death. And the thing has caught on. Perhaps that's why I haven't got one" said Mr. Northgrave.

A committee of the Fair board will be around the business section shortly seeking specials, for the fair will soon be on hand, and specials will need to be thought about.

TO THE GOD OF HARVEST

Father of all nations and all peoples, if we have forgotten that Thou art the the "Giver of every good and every perfect gift," forgive us. If we have relied upon our overflowing granaries, instead of upon Thy daily care, teach us that our dependence for all that we have and our, is in Thee. "Give us this day our daily bread," for there are anxious fathers and mothers with hungry brood to feed "Give us this day our daily bread," for there are cruel destroyers abroad, burning and sinking the children's food. "Give us this day our daily bread," for brave men fighting for the freedom of the world must have bread or they will perish, and freedom will perish with them Lord of Harvests, who through thy son, Jesus Christ, didst break and multiply the loaves by Galilee till the five thousand were fed, break and multiply thy loaves in the earth this season till there shall be enough for all earth's millions, and to spare.

We would not eat the bread of idleness, O God, nor waste the substance which Thou hast given. Teach us to work as well as to pray. Teach us to give liberally and to receive thankfully. Multiply thy love in our lives unto a rich harvest of The Bread of Life. Amen.

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for 50 lines or over in a year 5c a line; regular weekly users of liners, 5c per line casual users of liners, 10c per line Black type, count two lines for one.

McMurray's for pure ice cream.

Oats for sale. North End Store.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

White tennis trousers, $1.75 a pair at North End.

The South End is showing a big range of crepe, silk and voile blouses.

Fresh oranges, lemons, and bananas always on hand. North End Store.

If you want a pint of good cream try McMurray's.

Another shipment of feed wheat. North End Store.

We have added two new lines of Coffene corsets, prices are lower than regular lines. South End store.

McMurray keeps good milk for sale.

Congoleum border, 36 inches wide, 80c per yard at North End.

Cheap shoes, Misses' Ladies' and Men's, not up to date in style, from 35c up. South End Store.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

In teas we are giving absolutely the best value in town. South End store.

Fleet foot running shoes, all sizes, white, tan, navy. North End store.

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koebke's

Sugars are advancing in price, Get your supply from the South End.

Try Koebke for your next grocery or fruit order

Koebke sells Neilson's soldier chocolate Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front

Bad Accident

Douglas Cottrill and three young friends on Wednesday evening had the misfortune to overturn their car in the ditch near C. Smith's on the town line.

The car was badly smashed, while Douglas Cottrill had his shoulder broken and was otherwise badly bruised. The other members of the party Miss Grant, Miss Laidlaw and Mr. McCartney also had face wounds and cuts.

After overturning, the car slide for thirty feet and striking a telephone pole stood up against the pole. The marvel is how the occupants escaped being killed.

The accident happened about 11 o'clock, Mr. John McGillivray got out his car and took the injured party to their homes.

The cause of the accident is not accounted for. The road is good at this point.

Sells Fine Farm

"Bachelor" John D. McArthur, townline, has sold his farm, consisting of 100 acres of the finest land in the township, to Mr. James Vennard. The price is said to be around $6,000. D. C. Cavin, real estate agent, negotiated the deal.

Mr. Vennard will take possession at once. Many friends will be pleased that Mr. Vennard is to remain in the community. Mr. McArthur will likely move to Port Elgin.

News of the Vicinity

Fine showers Sunday night and Monday have done great good in this section.

BORN—On Monday Aug. 13th to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cobean, a daughter.

BORN—In Saugeen, to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Eby, a son.

Paisley Sunday Schools have adopted the morning session for their classes.

Kincardine tax rate is higher, being 35 and 6-10 mills.

Leamington has reduced its rate of taxation from 26 to 23 mills.

Wiarton is holding a bowling tournament to-day. Some Port Elgin bowlers are attending.

The big rainstorm on July 1st will cost Kincardine town $17,000 to rebuild bridges and culverts.

Rev. Wm Krauth of Owen Sound, formerly of Port Elgin, has been called to the Presbyterin church at Austin, Man.

Mr. and Mrs. Ballantyne of Stratford, Lester Davey of Listowel; Mr. and Mrs. Schmalz and Mr. and Mrs. Boehmer of Kitchener are guests at the Arlington.

Paisley magistrates take the word of their constable in preference to autoists when it comes to speeding, and they fine the motorist. Their constable is provided with a stop watch, and he has a certain distance measured off. Anyone exceeding the speed allotted is fined $5 and costs.

Mr. Robt. Agnew had a peculiar experience on Monday night and one which he will long remember. He was returning to Tara from a motor trip to Fergus and was accompanied by Mrs. Thomas Ellis, Mrs. J. Hall and Messrs. Jas. and Wesley Tindale, and when near Arthur noticed a cow coming towards him on the gallop, chased by a dog. Mr. Agnew stopped his car but the enraged cow did not halt and smashed into his car, breaking the bumper and fender and bending the front axle. Mr. Agnew managed to get to Durham, where he had his car repaired sufficiently to proceed home.—Tara Leader.

The Crops are Fair in Western Canada

Messrs. Simon and George Roppel, of Underwood, have just returned from a month's trip through the Canadian West and North Dakota.

The Times in conversation with the senior partner of the firm of Roppel Bros. asked what the Western crops were like.

"The crops in the central and western part of Saskatchewan were only fair while in the other sections of the province they are good," said Mr. Roppel.

"Alberta has good crops. In Northern Dakota and especially in the extreme northern parts the wheat is splendid. We had a fine trip. We met many old Bruce friends and were glad to see them doing well. Business generally is booming. We stopped at a number of the smaller towns and the merchants were very much pleased with the way business is increasing."

TOWN TOPICS

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Neil A. Currie, Detroit, on August 4th, a son.

Mrs. G. Spanzel, of New Dundee, has been visiting Mrs. Sam Schwass,

Mrs. Strachan, of Glencoe, is visiting here.

Mr. and Mrs. Hussem, of Guelph, were week-end visitors at H. Crowe's.

Mr. S. Hessenauer and Mr. Hume, of London, were visitors here last week.

Miss Smith, of Ottawa, is the guest of her sister in Saugeen.

Miss Maggie Witting is home for a holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Lippert were at Mr. E. Vaupel's over Sunday.

Mrs. W. A. Lee has returned from spending a couple of weeks at Chesley.

Mr. Wiegand and family of Kitchener, have been spending a couple of weeks at the Grove.

Mr. Milton Kauffman of Kitchener, was a visitor at Rev. Gischler's last week.

Mr. Alex. Smith, of Ottawa, has been spending a week with his brother Dugald in Saugeen.

Engineer McDowell of Owen Sound, was here last week, making surveys for the new road at the beach.

The schools will open on Tuesday September 4th, according to the decision of the Department of Education.

Rev Mr. Mann is on two weeks' holiday at Toronto and Cobourg. Rev Mr. Paddon will preach on the 19th.

Mrs. John Coulter has been presented with a life membership pin in the Red Cross, Mrs. Coulter having given the society the fee of $25.

Auctioneer Cavin would like to get hold of the fellow who threw a whiskey flask through a large window pane in his office He was a mean man, as the bottle was empty.

Dr. Lane and family have returned after a couple of weeks' motor trip thro' Western Ontario. The Doctor reports the roads as fair, and none comparing with the strip from Tiverton to Port Elgin.

The tire found by Eddie Smith and returned to The Times was owned by Mr. V. Domm, of Ayton. The lost advertise was read by Mr. Damm, and the lost goods indentified by him. The finder received a reward of $2.

The officers of the Red Cross wish it known that the Red Cross tea rooms will be given to any of the surrounding organizations one Saturday in each month. Arrangements for the day may be made with the president, Mrs. F. R. Barber.

Mr. G. M. Scott skipped a rink of Port Elgin bowlers to victory in the Hanover tournament last week. The rink composed Messrs. Curtis, McPherson, Roy, Scott. They were runners up in the trophy and captured second prize, four fine jardiniere stands.

Residents of the cottages along the lake report that young lads are molesting their residences when they happen to leave them for a day or two. It would be well for the boys to accept this as a warning, as the cottagers do not propose to tolerate trespassing.

The services in the Methodist church on Sunday were especially bright and interesting. Dr. Scanlan paid particular attention to the fact that this was the anniversary of the third year of the war, urging all Canadians to do their utmost toward re-inforcing and helping the boys at the front The singing was of a patriotic nature.

Mrs. D. McTavish, who has just finished her 48th pair of socks for the soldier boys, for the last four of the pair has been putting her address in the toe of the socks. Last week she received the following note from a soldier in France: "Dear Madam—I am the receiver and am wearing a pair of socks in which you put your address. Believe me, they are the best I have worn for a long time, and I wish you good luck. From your unknown friend. Pte Joe Johannsen."

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE

Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address

LOUIS BLOCH,
22-tfc Owen Sound, Ont.

ITCHING BURNING PIMPLES ON BABY

Head and Face Covered. Came Off In Scales. Would Cry Most All Night. Cuticura Healed.

"When my baby was two weeks old her head and face became covered with little water pimples. They later broke and dried, and came off in scales. They itched and burned terribly and she could not sleep but would cry most all night. She was so cross and fretful I could not leave her to do my work.

"Then I got Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In three weeks there was not a trace of the trouble left. She was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Alex. Foster, R. R. 2, Proton Sta., Ont., June 9, 1916.

Prevent further trouble by using Cuticura Soap for the toilet.

For Free Sample Each by Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

FORGER BIGAMIST.

Bad Man Draws Four-Year Term at Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, Aug. 1.—Four years on each of four charges of forgery was the sentence given William John Leseur, alias John Dalton, alias John Langton, alias John Bailey, by Police Magistrate Creasor this morning, while he was also sent up for trial on the charge of bigamy. Leseur, who has a criminal record, was born near Peterboro, and as John Dalton served a sentence in Kingston Penitentiary. On his release he married at the rectory of the Church of the Sacred Heart at Peterboro in May, 1914. In 1915 he and his wife came to Sullivan Township, and he was employed as farm help under the name of John Langton, and his wife was housekeeper for a farmer named Telford. The second day after his engagement he disappeared, taking with him one of his employer's horses. He was traced, and on his arrest was being taken to Walkerton for trial when he crawled through the lavatory window and jumped while the train was going at a high speed. He was again apprehended, and on his arrest was sent to the Ontario Reformatory for a year. He escaped when he had served ten months, and was lost sight of until eight weeks ago, when he came to Owen Sound and secured employment in a local factory. He was around town for some few weeks, making himself quite popular. He finally eloped with a young woman belonging to a reputable family. They went through the form of marriage at Meaford, and had reached London on an attempt to go over the border into the United States. His arrest followed the receipt of a letter from the young woman to her relative here. In the meantime it was found that he had passed cheques on four local firms on which he had forged signatures, and charges were laid in each case as well as for jumping his board bill. It was then that the police began looking up his career during a remand for sentence on the forgery charges, to which he pleaded guilty. The evidence, consisting of a copy of the original marriage register at Peterboro, was secured, and Leseur faces the other charges in a higher court. To-day's sentence runs concurrently.

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

EVILS OF ADENOIDS.

These Growths Are a Real Menace to the Health of a Child.

Not every child that is backward at school, that breathes through his mouth, has dull eyes, a short upper lip, prominent upper teeth or has a drawn, tired expression about the face has adenoids, says health bulletin. But this condition should lead a parent to suspect adenoid growth, and it should not be dismissed till a thorough examination has proved that such is not the case.

Adenoids are a small, soft, reddish growth which comes in the back part of throat where the nose and throat join. A child who has adenoids breathes with his mouth open, has frequent colds and may have earache often or become deaf. It is not infrequent that adenoids dull the expression of the eye, destroy the resonance of the voice and distort a blank, idiotic stare. They hinder mental development. For that reason "repeaters" at school are frequently said to be afflicted with adenoids.

The best time to remove adenoids is when they are first recognizable to a physician. If they remain longer they do harm. They cause a child to have "colds" often and make him more susceptible to diptheria, scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough. Furthermore, if he gets any of these diseases they are likely to be severe with him and leave him even worse afflicted.

Cold, fresh air breathed through the nose is needed to prevent adenoid growth. It is needed also to prevent adenoids returning after an operation. Fresh air taken in through the nose prevents as well as cures adenoids.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

Odd and Interesting Facts.

A gold coin loses 5 per cent. of its value during sixteen years of constant use.

In spite of the length of the giraffe's neck there are only seven joints in it.

A new plane is provided with a shield for the hand to prevent it being bruised.

A sparrow for a short distance can spurt by wing up to eighty miles an hour.

The Thames carries to the sea an average of 1,865,903 cubic feet of sediment a year.

The Greek railroad system has been finally linked up to that of the rest of Europe.

Forty-one women out of every hundred marry between the ages of twenty and twenty-five.

The manufacture of artificial pearls at Barcelona, Spain, has developed into a great industry.

An inclosed car that is heated by electricity is used as an ambulance in a large Wyoming coal mine.

From mines in Japan and South Manchuria the Japanese are mining 20,000,000 tons of coal annually.

In character, in manners, in style, in all things, true supreme excellence is simplicity.

The comparative mortality of different occupations shows that clergy and farm laborers have the lowest death rate.

Some estimates place the quantity of timber that will be required by the countries not at war at 50,000,000 cubic feet.

The Spanish government has reserved for two years the right of exploitation of potash deposits that have been discovered in two provinces.

For the first time in the history of the Hong-Kong rice trade, a shipment of polished rice has been made to the United States.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

Death of a Pearl.

Pearls are almost the only precious gems which are subject to decay, and this happens very rarely. When disease attacks a pearl it turns color and after a time crumbles away. The most valuable pearl ever known is supposed to have become diseased. It belonged to a Russian millionaire who kept it carefully locked in a casket and refused to show it even to his most intimate friends. One day some jewel experts prevailed upon him to let them see the precious gem. When he opened the casket he was dismayed to find the pearl had been attacked by disease and was already changing color. Soon afterward a heap of white powder was all that was left of the jewel.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—Last winter I received great benefit from the use of MINARD'S LINIMENT in a severe attack of La Grippe, and I have frequently proved it to be very effective in cases of inflammation. Yours,

W. A. HUTCHINSON.

MEDALS AND RIBBONS.

Some of the Decorations Worn by Returned Men.

By the medal ribbons they wear one may know what campaigns our soldiers and sailors have seen, and what special distinctions they have won. Such medal ribbons are always worn on the left breast. Any ribbons worn on the right are representative of medals awarded outside the army or navy, and are usually those given with life-saving awards.

The medal ribbon of the Victoria Cross has first place of all decorations on the tunic of a soldier or the jacket of a sailor. The army V. C. winner is entitled to wear the rich dark red ribbon, the sailor a blue ribbon.

Other medal ribbons worn by soldiers akin in color to that of the V. C. are those that go with the Order of the Bath, the French Legion of Honor, the Long Service or Good Conduct medals. Each of the above-named ribbons is a plain red or crimson.

The blue riband of the naval V. C. might easily be mistaken for the ribbon of the Khedive's Bronze Star, the Meritorious Service, or the Royal Humane Society medal for saving life. All are plain blue, of slightly different shades.

Other medal ribbons sometimes seen in Canada are those worn by the winner of the D.S.O. (red centre, blue edge), the D.S.O. Cross (blue, white, blue), or the Distinguished Service medal (two white stripes on blue).

The Military Cross is easily known by the white edge and purple centre of the ribbon. The D.C.M. ribbon is red on each edge and blue in the centre, and the Military Medal owner wears a blue, white, red ribbon.

Some members of the C. E. F. wear the medal ribbons that go with the special medals awarded for bravery in the field, but no authorized medal ribbon has been issued for this war. The "Allied" ribbon worn by some men is not an official award, and may be worn by anyone without challenge.

What marks the warrior who has been wounded is a strip of gold braid sewn on the tunic sleeve for each time wounded, or a strip of silver braid if sickness caused him to be invalided home.

Original members of the First Canadian Division may be recognized by the color of their shoulder straps, blue for the infantry, red for the artillery, A.S.C., A.M.C., and yellow for the cavalry.

Members of the C.E.F. who have been at the front are given a button centred with a shield bearing the Union Jack, and inscribed, "For Service at the Front."

Men invalided home from England get a button with the Union Jack square in the centre, and the lettering, "For Service Overseas."

The various colored and shaped patches worn on the sleeve by returned soldiers were first issued to the Canadian troops at the Somme, to enable the officers and men of various divisions, brigades, and battalions to be recognized readily.

The First Division men wear one large red patch on the upper part of the arm, and the Second Division a blue patch. The brigades and battalions are also indicated by smaller colored patches below the large ones, green being the mark of the First Brigade, red for the Second, and blue for the Third, and the shape of the patch indicates the battalions bearing them, circular for the First, half circle for the Second, triangular for the Third, and a small square for the Fourth.

DON'T you realize how important it is that you use only a hygienic cleanser—particularly for your cooking utensils? Old Dutch is hygienic—pure and safe.

Gen. Maude's Despatch

Lieut.-General Sir Stanley Maude's despatch dealing with the operations carried out against Kut and Bagdad by the Mesopotamian Expeditionary Force has just been issued.

It deals with the work done between Aug. 25th, 1916, and March 31st, 1917; a period of seven months, of which the first three and a half were devoted to preparation.

Upon assuming Command, General Maude, continued the work of re-organization begun by his predecessor, Lieut.-General Sir Percy Lake. The health and training of the troops, who had suffered severely from the intense summer heat, was improved. Means of communication by rail, road and river over a country difficult at any time, and made difficult by both floods and droughts, were perfected; and the lines of communications themselves secured against attack. Reinforcements were accumulated, resources were developed, and reserves of supplies, ammunition and stores were amassed.

By the beginning of December, 1916, movement was begun against the enemy about Kut. The Turk still occupied the same positions on the Tigris front which he had occupied during the summer. On the left bank they held the hitherto unconquerable Sannaiyat position, which they had strengthened and elaborated. Kut was protected on the right bank by a system of trenches running from a point on the river 2 miles to the northwest and circling beneath it across the Khadairi Bend, until cut by the River Hai, two miles below the exit from the Tigris. This system was continued to the northwest. The position gave the attack a good chance of success, and it was decided to secure possession of the Hai, clear all the enemy trenches on the right of the Tigris, while at the same time so sapping his strength by constant battle at Sannaiyat that he must either give up that position or so weaken his line that a crossing of the Tigris might be easily accomplished further west.

The first movement was successfully accomplished on December 13th. Lieutenant-General Cobbe distracted the attention of the enemy by a bombardment of the Sannaiyat lines, while during the night of the 13th, 14th the cavalry and Lieutenant-General Marshall's force struck westward to the Hai, surprised the enemy, and cleared both banks of the river up to the Hai bridge-head, which was strongly held. By the 18th, Lieutenant-General Marshall had fought his way forward until we had won command of the river upstream of the Khadairi Bend. The operation gave us direct control of the Hai, and enabled us to threaten the enemy's communications west of Shumran, while it safeguarded our own communications and opened out prosperous districts for our own supply.

The enemy still clung to his positions on the right of the Tigris in the Khadairi Bend. Here he menaced our communications on the Hai, and he also had it in his power to inundate portions of our line. The enemy held a strong line in flat, bare country, difficult for attack. Lieutenant-General Cobbe was given the time between January 5th and 19th clearing the Bend. The preliminary stage involved digging some 5,000 yards of trench under trying conditions—constant rain and exposed to enemy fire, but it was duly carried out, and on the 9th the Yorkshires and Mahrattas had fought their way to the river bank on the left after severe hand-to-hand fighting. On the right our troops made steady progress, and a heavy counter-attack, got forward under cover of a mist, was broken by the resolute resistance of the Manchester, a frontier Rifle Regiment, and a detachment of Sikh pioneers. Lieutenant-General Marshall's cavalry west of the Hai carried out successful diversions, and, though they were hampered by the mist, they forced their way into Hai town, and occupied it for several days. By the 17th our troops were pressing the enemy hard, and by the 19th his position had become so difficult that he voluntarily retired across the Tigris. During these operations the fighting had been severe, mainly hand to hand, but the enemy, in spite of his tenacity, has more than met his match in the dash and resolution of our troops.

While this fighting was in progress Lieutenant-General Marshall began his preparations for the reduction of the Hai salient, and the extensive trench system which the Turks held astride the Hai River, near its junction with the Tigris. On the 25th the enemy's front line on a frontage of about 1,000 yards was captured. There was heavy bombing fighting, and the Turks made good use of skilfully concealed guns and machine guns. In a series of counter-attacks the enemy was able to recapture his line, but a gallant charge across the open by the Royal Warwicks restored the situation. On the 28th the assault of two Punjabi battalions was a complete success, and in stubborn fighting our hold on both banks of the river was increased. Our cavalry attempted to strike against the enemy's rear via Bedrah and Serann, but the waterlogged ground held them up. On February 1st the Cheshires led an attack which gave us further ground, and on the 3rd, the Devons and a Gurkha Battalion carried two lines of works, and held them in spite of counter attack and artillery fire. That evening the enemy began to retire, and by the morning of the 5th had fallen back to the liquorice factory, and a line East and West across the Dahra Bend.

The liquorice factory was dealt with by howitzer fire, and on the 9th the King's Own effected a valuable lodgment in the centre of the enemy's line, which enabled us to extend rapidly on both flanks. By the night of the 10th, 11th it became known that the enemy had given up his forward positions, and had retired to an inner line across the Dahra Bend. On the 15th the final battle for the position was opened by the Loyal North Lancashires, and after some dashing fighting by the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, the South Wales Borderers, the Buffs and the Dogras, the enemy was pushed bodily to the Tigris, and by night only held about a mile of works. Two companies of a Gurkha battalion, acting on their own initiative, took these trenches, and on the 16th the Dahra Bend was clear of the enemy.

The final action for the capture of Kut now came. Lieutenant-General Cobbe, who had kept the enemy constantly on the alert at Sannaiyat, began a threatening attack on the 22nd. He captured some of the works before him, and was at once subjected to heavy counter-attacks, which the Seaforths brilliantly repulsed. On the night of the 22nd, 23rd feints were being made against the river, opposite Kut, and opposite the liquor factory, and the Turks were misled into thinking bridging operations were to take place at this point. The point chosen was actually at the South end of the Shumran Bend, West of Kut. The Norfolks effected a surprise lodgment with the first trip, but the other ferries carrying Gurkhas were met with a staggering fire, and only with difficulty effected a landing. The Norfolks and Gurkhas held on tenaciously and pushed up stream as bridging operations were commenced. By nightfall, as a result of the day's operations, our troops had, by their unconquerable valour and determination, forced a passage across a river in flood, 340 yards wide, in face of strong opposition, and had secured a position 2,000 yards in depth, covering the bridge head. While this crossing was proceeding Lieutenant-General Cobbe had secured the third and fourth lines of Sannaiyat, and was working his way with bombs deep into the maze of trenches. On the 24th the fight was resumed, the enemy fighting tenaciously, but the end was certain. General Cobbe carried the Sannaiyat position, and the enemy was now in complete retirement.

Lieutenant-General Marshall took up the pursuit of the enemy with dash, broke the enemy 3 miles from Shumran, and followed vigorously. On the 26th the retreat was rapid, with the cavalry and infantry following on either bank and the river craft of the Royal Navy pushing up stream in hot pursuit. Much booty and many enemy vessels, including those captured from us, fell into our hands. [illegible] The pursuit was stopped at Aziziyeh, 50 miles from Kut, and halfway to Bagdad, and a pause for reorganization was made, while Lieutenant-General Cobbe's force closed to this point. On the 5th movement began again [illegible] the Turkish rear-guard was found well entrenched [illegible] and retired during the night. On the 7th we were in touch with the enemy's line on the Dialah, a river joining the Tigris, 8 miles below Bagdad. On the 8th a crossing was attempted in the face of a withering fire, and as this manoeuvre was felt to be impracticable, a force under Lieutenant-General Marshall was ferried across the Tigris to enfilade the enemy position with guns from the right bank of the river. During the night of the 8th, 9th further attempts were made to ferry the river. Only one succeeded, and landed a party of 70 of the Loyal North Lancashires on the farther bank. For the next 22 hours, until the passage of the river was completely forced, the detachment held on gallantly in its isolated position, under constant close fire from the surrounding buildings, trenches and gardens. On the 9th the cavalry and a portion of General Cobbe's force crossed the Tigris, worked up to Shawa Khan, and, well served by aeroplane scouts, pushed on towards Bagdad. On the morning of the 10th our cavalry fought the way to a point 2 miles west of Bagdad railway station and, in a blinding dust storm, followed the Decauville railway up to the station, on the left bank of the Tigris. General Marshall had forced the Dialah at two points early on the 10th, had linked up with the devoted Loyal North Lancashires, and had advanced against the strong position of Tel Muhammed, which covered Bagdad. During the night the Turks retired, and General Marshall entered Bagdad amid manifestations of satisfaction on the part of the inhabitants. The gunboat flotilla, proceeding up stream in line ahead formation, anchored off the British Residency, and the two forces under Lieutenant-Generals Marshall and Cobbe provided for the security of the approaches to the city. An immense booty which the enemy had been unable to destroy was taken, including all the guns, (rendered useless by General Townshend) taken by the enemy at Kut.

After the fall of Bagdad precautions were made to secure the safety of the British army. A brilliant operation carried our force upward on the railway line to the Mushardie Station, which the Black Watch and the Gurkhas rushed on the night of March 14. The enemy's flight was so rapid that touch was not obtained again. By the 18th our front was extended north-east by the capture of Baqubah, on the Dialah, and the line thus moved out towards the Russians approaching from Persia. To the west the front was also consolidated by the occupation of Feluja, on the Euphrates, on March 19th. Co-operating with the movement of the Russians from Khanikin, our forces moved up the Dialah to hold the retreating Turks, and Shahraban was occupied on March 23rd. The enemy endeavored to bar our progress, but during the night of 24, 25th and the day following we forced our way up over the hills of the Jebel Hamrin range and beat him, though we were forced to withdraw because of the difficulties of the country. On the 28th the enemy began a converging movement down the Dialah from Deli Abbas, and along the left bank of the Tigris from Shatt el Adhaim, apparently to assist the withdrawal of the Turkish forces before the Russians. Both these columns were brilliantly beaten back.

The report is brought to a close by the statement that the total number of prisoners taken in the period under review was 7,921. General Maude praises the conduct of the officers and men who worked so well under such difficult and arduous conditions. "British and Indian troops, working side by side, have vied with each other in their efforts to close with the enemy, and all ranks have been imbued throughout with that offensive spirit which is the soldier's finest jewel."

for Men's, Women's and Children's Shoes

Looks Better Lasts Longer Easy to use Best for Shoes

White Cake 10c. White Liquid 10c.

2 IN 1 WHITE SHOE DRESSING

F. F. DALLEY CO. OF CANADA LTD. HAMILTON, CAN.

FIGHTING FOR HAPPINESS

When we get into a frame of mind that makes life seem one tiresome duty after another, with no pleasure in it; when ill-health seems to take all the joy out of life and you worry over things that are really not worth worrying about, then your nervous system is becoming exhausted, and you are on the way to a general breakdown in health. In this condition your health and happiness is worth fighting for, and good, rich, red blood is what your system needs. It is a hopeless task to try to restore your health while your blood is deficient either in quantity or quality. And remember that no medicine can be of of any use to you that does not build up your weak, watery blood.

To build up the blood and strengthen the nerves there is one remedy that has been a household word for more than a generation—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. It is the actual mission of these pills to make new, rich, red blood, which strengthens the nerves and tones the entire system. They give you a new appetite, make sleep refreshing, put color in the lips and cheeks, and drive away that unnatural, tired feeling that oppresses so many people. If you want to experience new health and happiness give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THEFT UNHEARD OF.

In South American Territory Just Explored.

The explorers sent by the University of Pennsylvania, Curator William Curtis Farabee and Dr. Franklin H. Church, went up the Amazon in June, 1913, to study the tribes in the region of Northern Brazil and the Guiana colonies. Their story is now being told by Dr. Farabee in the university's Museum Journal. They crossed Lake Amucu at the headwaters of the Rio Branco, and visited the ElDorado of the Spaniards and Raleigh. Alas! for romance; the curator says that the city whose houses were reputed to be shingled with gold plates was probably then, as now, mud walled and unimportant. The Macusi Indians, who live thereabout, practice the curious custom of the couvade. When a child is born the father goes to bed for a month and eats only the most delicate food. They believe that otherwise the child would be injured. A man must marry a woman of another village and live in that village; descent, therefore, is in the female line. Among their neighbors the Wapisianas, a man must marry his cousin of another village and take her to live in his own village. These Indians usually have two wives. They will not eat anything shot with a gun or an arrow. They recognize a Creator, but do not petition Him because they say He knows what they need.

In the untravelled forests of Brazilian Guiana the explorers found that the native guides feared the stingray and the electric eel far more than the alligator and the constrictor. In the villages of the Tarumas, on the Essiquibo, the natives announce a death by hanging a bunch of leaves on a tree as we hang crape on a door. They believe that the world began with two brothers. The younger went fishing and caught a woman. She was the mother of the race. Also, she was the daughter of a great snake, neither boa nor yet an anaconda.

In trading the natives are simple and honest, but it is hard to get two things for one. You might get a live monkey for a ten-cent knife, but you could not get ten, or even two, for a dollar knife. A man will paddle for eight days for one knife as uncomplainingly as he would paddle for five days. Time means little to the natives.

Every one is polite; the children respect their parents; the parents respect their chief. "These people have no punishments for crime because no one ever does wrong. Theft has never been heard of.

The explorers believe that in the Mapidians, who live up the Bonawau River, they found the last tribe of the Atarois. The Mapidians had never seen a white man, but they were not nervous.

ISSUE NO. 33, 1917

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Welland Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

LADIES WANTED TO DO PLAIN light sewing at home; whole or spare time; good pay; work sent any distance; charges prepaid. Send stamp for particulars. National Manufacturing Co., Montreal, Que.

WANTED—LOOM FIXER ON CROMPTON and Knowles' Looms. Good opportunity to right man. Apply, stating age and experience, to the Slingsby Mfg. Co., Ltd., Brantford, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

SEND A DOMINION EXPRESS Money Order. They are payable everywhere.

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, etc.

Animals Carry Disease Germs.

Epidemics of diphtheria, which arise without apparent cause, have been traced to animals, and generally to birds, and especially to domestic fowls. The diphtheria bacillus can be found in the throat mucus of many domestic animals, as well as in the cloacal mucus of birds or fowls, according to Dr. Gourrin, to the salivary secretion of domestic fowls we must add those of animals, such as rabbits, dogs, horses, cattle and other domestic animals. While these germs are not virulent in the animals, they quickly become so when they enter the human system, and the fact that healthy animals can possess such germs will amply suffice to explain the mysterious appearance of certain human epidemics.

The remedy is not far to seek, and this is to prevent children from having undue contact with domestic animals, such as kissing them or having contact with the animal's tongue, such as licking or by feeding out of the hand. While this may be a privation, due attention must be paid to the importance of the question.

Also avoid the dissemination of manure in which fowls peck or dogs and cats may rummage, and keep manure of all kinds coming from domestic animals well out of the way in separate places so that the animals cannot seek their food in it.

These precautions are to be especially observed during periods of epidemics, but hold good, of course, at all times. When epidemics prevail among fowls, the healthy ones should be separated at once, and the other incinerated if in limited number, or at least treated with the proper serum.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

Strength of the Condor.

The enormous strength of the condor is equaled by his voracity and boldness. This immense bird often pounces upon small animals, but from the shape and bluntness of his claws it is unable to carry anything very heavy, so he contents himself with fixing it against the ground with one of his claws, while with the other and his powerful beak he rends it to pieces. Gorged with food, the bird then becomes incapable of flight and may be apprehended, but any attempt at capture is furiously resisted. An American traveler in the Andes encountered a large condor just after it had finished a hearty banquet on a young sheep and foolishly attempted to seize the bird, with the result that he received a gash from its claw. Then he called up his two guides, and the three men manoeuvred to take the bird alive. But every attempt was frustrated, and in the end one of the men killed it by a blow with a hatchet.

The smell of cooking may be removed by taking a basin of boiling water and pouring into it about five drops of oil of lavender. In a few minutes all smell of cooking will have disappeared.

Why Wait for War to learn real food values? It is what you digest, not what you eat, that furnishes strength for the day's work. Many foods tax the digestive powers to the utmost without supplying much real nutriment. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is all food and in a form that is easily digested. It is 100 per cent. whole wheat. For breakfast, dinner or supper it takes the place of meat, eggs and potatoes. You don't know how easily you can do without meat or potatoes until you try it. Delicious with sliced bananas, berries, or other fruits, and milk.

Made in Canada.

TEUTONS TRY TO CUT OFF RUSS FORCES

Plan to Seize Those Remaining in Roumania and Carpathians.

FOUGHT WITH ROCKS

When Russ Ammunition Was Gone—Story of the Ending of a Panic.

Headquarters Seventh Russian Army Cable—The immediate objective of the enemy would seem to be a bold attempt to cut off the troops remaining in the Carpathians and Roumania. For this purpose a blow is being directed between Kamienets-Podolsk and Czernowitz. At this crucial point we are unfortunately unable to contain the Austro-German tide.

On July 27 we still held the line, Koltmeza-Leszczyski. Four days later we were 15 to 20 miles back of the line Kutyania-Tyamitsinico. The last-named place is southwest of Kamienets, near the confluence of the Zbrucz and Dniester. Moreover, it is an unstable line. The situation suggests that it would have been well had Korniloff's insistence on the abandonment of all offensive movements or an immediate regrouping of all armies been promptly heeded.

The boldness of the enemy's movement was based on the assumption of our inability to deliver a counter-blow from the Carpathians against their right flank. On the other hand, thanks to the passing of the initiative into their hands, the enemy were able at one blow to imperil our left and secure themselves from interference from the Carpathian and Roumanian fronts in carrying out their plans for the conquest of Southern Russia.

FOUGHT WITH ROCKS.

Petrograd Cable — Russian troops are on the offensive in the Cholin region, near the southeastern frontier of Galicia and northeast of Czernowitz. Yesterday they drove the Austro-German forces from two villages, captured a height and took more than 300 prisoners and four machine guns, the War Office announced to-day. Certain regiments fought with bayonets and stones between the Kimpolung road and Mount Lamuntelu, when they ran short of ammunition. These regiments exhausted their cartridges, the statement said, but fought down the mountain sides with such weapons as they could get hold of.

A Teutonic attack in the region of Brody, where the Russians are still on Galician soil, was only temporarily successful. A counter-attack restored the Russian positions that had been penetrated.

The text of the Russian communication follows:

"In the direction of Vladimir Volynski, after artillery activity and mine throwing, the enemy attacked our positions in the region of the village of Semerinki and penetrated part of our trenches. He was driven out, however, by newly arrived reserves and the situation was restored.

"In the direction of Brody, in the region of Baldury, an enemy scouting party showered hand grenades upon the trenches of our barrier guards and occupied them, but a counter-attack restored the situation.

"To the west of the city of Zbaraj, in the region of the village of Ivacinw the enemy pressed back our advance post a trifle. In the region of the confluence of the River Zbrucz our troops, developing an energetic offensive, drove out the enemy after severe fighting from the villages of Baryshkovcy and Wygoda and from the heights to the west of the last named village. We took prisoner seven officers and 300 of the rank and file, and also captured four machine guns.

"North-west of the town of Sereth (Bukowina), on the front of the villages of Vaskovez and Gorichent our troops repulsed several persistent enemy attacks. To the southwest of the town of Sereth the enemy succeeded in penetrating our trenches, but the situation was restored through our counter-attacks. There have been fusillades and scouting operations on the rest of the front.

FOUGHT WITH ROCKS.

"Roumanian front: Between the Kimpolung road and Mount Lamuntelu the enemy made a number of attacks, most of which were repulsed. Certain of our gallant regiments, having used up all their cartridges, fought at the point of the bayonet and with stones, which they threw down the mountainside. The enemy succeeded in taking only two of the heights to the west of Dezemkni and to the southwest of Sotchi. On Tuesday night our troops, occupying both sides of the Kimpolung road, retired somewhat to the east.

"During the course of Tuesday the enemy continued his persistent attacks between the Fokshani-Marasechti railroad and the River Sereth (Moldavia) and pressed back our troops to the north of Bialgeschi. There have been fusillades on the remainder of the front.

"Caucasus front: In the region of Iloshaha, forty versts southeast of Van, our troops scattered a band of Kurds. In the region of Dizy, eighty versts to the west of Urui, our detachments of volunteers put to flight bands of Kurds, killing sixty-four of them and taking ten men prisoner.

"There have been fusillades on the rest of the front."

VITAL FORCE IN RETREAT.

Petrograd Cable — The vital force of the Russian army, even in full retreat, is shown by an eye-witness of the Galician debacle, an officer of an allied country. His judgment is that there still is hope of further activities by the army.

"I went to the front line," he said, "which was assigned to the Seventh army, accompanying a Russian captain who had been sent to investigate the report that the trenches had been deserted while a soldier council debated whether the order called for enough men to fill them. I learned that Austrians had come into the trenches searching for the Russians which shows the state of disorganization there was before the panic among the soldiers.

"Suddenly we heard rumors that German cavalry had broken through and was surrounding us. Immediately a panic began in the soldiers' council. It was impossible to prevent a rush to the rear. The men, knowing that the death penalty had been abolished, had no fear of punishment for desertion. Almost before we realized it, the Russian captain and I were left entirely alone in the trenches. Seeking our automobile we found that the tavarish had seized it and gone."

The allied officer repeatedly referred to the soldiers as tavarish, which is Russian for comrade, which the soldier Socialists use in addressing one another.

"We ran for the main road, where we could see that a full retreat was on. The tavarish, leaving their materials and supplies, were crowding into the motor trucks and heading to the rear. The Russian captain with me, who was one of the bravest men I ever met, seized an automobile and raced ahead to cut off the masses mad with fear. It was awful to see an army throwing away its arms, coats and boots.

"The roads were jammed, so we circled the plains and got ahead of the rush. We jumped in front of the first motor truck, which was loaded with fully a hundred tavarish. The captain commanded them to halt, and when the tavarish tried to make the driver continue, despite the order, the captain leaped into the motor, jerked the driver from his seat and flung him into a ditch.

"Immediately the tavarish tumbled off in bunches. Others arriving were forced to descend, and with ringing orders the captain formed them into lines at the point of his revolver. Now the masses rushing forward on foot were halted by the newly reforming army, the tavarish yielding to the superior will of the captain, and they began entrenching on both sides of the road. Enemy aeroplanes were flying low overhead.

DEATH'S HEADS HALT DESERTERS.

"Leaving the captain in command there I continued with a detachment of the Death's Head Battalions, which had been sent with machine guns in motor trucks to help check the panic. These were all brave, devoted men and they inspired new hope. We turned toward Tarnpol, where the panic was the worst, and soon encountered thousands of tavarish trucks going to the rear.

"The lieutenant commanding the handful of Death's Heads ordered the soldiers to halt and descend. Then he formed them into lines and said he would shoot each fifteenth man until they told who was the agitator that started the retreat. Before he had counted ten the fifteenth man called out the agitator's name.

"The lieutenant, insisting upon receiving general confirmation, to his act from the men themselves, ordered the agitator taken to the cross road nearby and commanded the firing squad to shoot. He laid the body beside the road with a paper pinned on the breast, reading: 'Shot as a traitor to Russia!' Then the lieutenant ordered the tavarish to turn back toward the battle front and they obeyed.

"There were similar scenes everywhere, the Death's Heads with Cossacks forming a thin, determined line behind the panicky tavarish.

"The Austro-German advance in Galicia was one of the easiest ever made, the distance between the retreating Russians and the advancing Teutons often being only five to ten miles. The retreat taught the futility of letting the soldiers have councils to discuss orders of their officers, but with all its disgraceful scenes, the retreat was needed to prove the absurdity of these councils.

"Under the power of the Death's Heads and the Cossacks such meetings are now forbidden, these [illegible] men controlling the masses of the army who do not know why they ran."

IRISH CONVENTION.

Procedure to Sift Governing Schemes Decided On.

London Cable — The official report of yesterday's meeting of the Irish convention says:

"Sir Horace Plunkett, the chairman addressed the gathering on the task before it, and on various schemes for governing Ireland already in existence. He then suggested the procedure by which these might be thoroughly sifted and subsequently brought before the convention for discussion.

"This suggestion was considered at some length, and finally it was proposed by the chairman and seconded by the Bishop of Raphoe, and unanimously resolved that a standing committee, not exceeding twenty persons, five to form a quorum, be appointed to consult with the chairman on general procedure and the exercise of other powers delegated by the convention.

"It was further resolved to reappoint the committee which had to do with the selecting of the chairman to advise the chairman on the composition of the standing committee. The convention then adjourned until to-morrow."

Miss Gotrox—Nearly all my admirers think I should be able to get tips from you on the market. Gotrox—Encourage them in the idea, my dear. It won't be long before I'll be ready to unload the stock I'm carrying.—Boston Transcript.

NO CHANCE, SAYS KORNILOFF, OF RUSSIANS SURRENDERING

Supreme Commander Declares Such Would Make Russia a Hun Colony Forever.

Calls for Ally Officers to Train Country's Ten Million Fighting Men.

London Cable.—The correspondent of the 'Times' at the headquarters of the seventh Russian army talked with General Korniloff on the eve of his departure to take supreme command. General Korniloff said.

"The first stage of the war is over. The second phase begins to-day".

The correspondent says the Russian commander repudiates the possibility of the Russians surrendering. He holds that if Russia concludes a dishonorable peace to which traitors have been driving her she will become a German colony forever. The Germans would seize her foodstuffs, enroll her men, and treat her as a conquered country. There could be no choice between the evil of war and the evil of surrender.

The new Government must realize the necessity of inviting the Allies to help in reorganizing the railway service for warfare. If Germany decided, as all signs indicate, to transfer the main pressure to the Russian front, it would be hopeless to rely on methods that availed against the inferior Austrian troops.

Russia is full of splendid fighting men. Ten millions have already been enrolled, but they are scarcely trained. They are too busy attending meetings, instead of drill. These millions must be helped by British and French officers, as Serbians, Roumanians, Greeks and Americans have been.

NEW CABINET MEETS.

Petrograd Cable.—The first meeting of the new Government was held to-day. Premier Kerensky presided, and said the Cabinet must concentrate all its attention on national defence and organization of the country, principally in connection with financial and economic affairs.

He appealed to the members of the Cabinet to redouble their efforts toward organizing and consolidating the Government. Foreign Minister Terestchenko, who left after for general headquarters, accompanied by M. Diamandi, the Roumanian Minister, explained the object of his journey. He said the Government had decided to abolish the post of Procurator-General of the Holy Synod, and create a Ministry of Public Worship.

HEROIC BURGOMASTER MAX IS HONORED BY BRUSSELS LAWY

Man Whose Daring Won Prison in Germany is Elected Their President.

Havre Cable. Lawyers of Brussels have unanimously elected Adolphe Max, the heroic Burgomaster of Brussels, imprisoned by Germans, as President of the Bar Association, according to news received here. The announcement of the election was received with rousing cheers, regardless of the fact that German sentries were posted at the Palace of Justice, where the election took place.

Burgomaster Max was arrested at Brussels Sept. 28, 1914, for his "irreconcilable attitude," according to an announcement of the German military governor. After being imprisoned at various places in Germany he was finally interned at Glatz.

IS SERIOUSLY ILL.

London Cable. The Central News Agency quotes the newspaper Belgisch Dagblad to the effect that Burgomaster Max, of Brussels is seriously ill in prison at Celle, a Prussian town [illegible] of Hanover. King Alfonso of Spain is said to have interceded fruitlessly in behalf of the imprisoned burgomaster.

UNITED STATES CORN CROP HUGE

Forecast is for Greatest Ever Harvested.

Record Crops in Other Foodstuffs Also

Washington Report—A corn crop surpassing any ever grown before, a reduction in wheat prospects, due to damage to the spring wheat crop, and record crops of barley, rye, white and sweet potatoes, tobacco and hay were forecasted to-day in the August 1 crop report of the Department of Agriculture.

Corn production was placed at 3,191,000,000 bushels, an increase of 67,000,000 bushels over the July forecast, and 65,000,000 bushels over the record crop of 1912. The showing is due to vast improvement in the growing corn in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Missouri. Spring wheat production forecast in July at 270,000,000 bushels, shows the results of adverse weather conditions. The prospects are put at 236,649,000 bushels from the July 1 report. Winter wheat, however, is turning out better than previously forecasted, with a forecast total of 417,000,000 bushels, or 15,000,000 bushels more than indicated from July conditions.

The combined yield of winter and spring wheat forecast from August 1st conditions will be 653,000,000 bushels or 13,000,000 bushels more than harvested last year.

White potatoes are expected to yield 467,000,000 bushels, 47,000,000 bushels more than the record crop of 1912. Sweet potatoes also will be a record, with 86,400,000 bushels.

There will be an enormous crop of tobacco, almost 120,000,000 pounds larger than the record production of last year. The buckwheat crop will be the largest in many years, and oats will come close to equaling the record made in 1915.

Never use a dustcloth on gilt frames. Use a clean paint brush kept for the purpose.

FREE SERBIA FROM HUNS

Lloyd George Voices Entente Debt to Small Ally

Whose Troops Are Still Guarding the Gate.

London Cable— —At a luncheon given to-day, in the Savoy Hotel, in honor of the Premier of Serbia, M. Pasitch, Mr. Lloyd George said that we owe more to M. Pasitch and Premier Venizelos of Greece than he could possibly reveal at present. Serbia, he said, which had been trampled by the dirt of the Turkish barbarism, was about to be cleansed and would yet appear fresh and wonderful. The first condition of peace was complete restoration without reservation. However long the war may last, added Mr. Lloyd George, British honor was involved in seeing Serbia freed. Serbia and Belgium are the guardians of the gates, and bravely have they defended them. The Serbian troops although overwhelmed were never disheartened and are still guarding the gate. We extend again the hand of friendship to Serbia. We will go through the war together to the end."

In the course of his speech Lord Robert Cecil declared that he was convinced there was no inconsistency between the aims of Italy and those of Serbia.

Premier Pasitch, whom Lord Cecil described as the Grand Old Man of Serbia, after expressing his deepest thanks for what Britain has done for the small nations, said that Germany now spoke of an honorable peace. Such a peace could only be secured if the peoples under Austro-German rule were set free.

"If," he said, "France gets back Alsace-Lorraine; if the Balkans accomplish unity with their still unredeemed brethren; if the unity of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes is achieved; if the Czechs and Slovaks are united and independent, and if the Polish and Ruthenian questions are solved, then only will an honorable peace be secured."

U. S. NAVY PLANS HUGE AERO PLANT

Factory Will Be Building Planes in Three Months.

Army Wants 25,000 Machines First Year.

Washington Report—In line with the War Department's plan of concentrating work on a large aeroplane building programme Secretary Daniels announced to-day that the navy would begin immediate construction of an aircraft factory at the Philadelphia Navy Yard on League Island.

The factory will begin operations within 100 days, and will have a capacity of 1,000 planes a year. It will cost $1,000,000. The army programme contemplates 25,000 aeroplanes the first year.

In taking this step to equip the navy with aircraft Secretary Daniels has guarded against interfering with the army's plans. He points out that the establishment of the factory at League Island will leave industrial facilities throughout the country free to develop approved types to their maximum capacity. The navy's work will be centralized in this Government plant, where experimental hydro-aeroplanes, as well as the most approved types, will be constructed.

Although comparatively little had been said about the navy's aeroplane plans, it is known that many of the craft turned out by the navy may be used in European waters in conjunction with British and French sea planes.

The projected attacks on German sea bases imply the use of seaplanes, and there is reason to believe the United States will have a fair proportion of these craft in operation by next year.

HAVE NEWLINE ON LENS FRONT

Canadians Within a Few Yards of Enemy Line.

Foe Regains One of Craters Lately Taken.

(By Stewart Lyon, Corespondent With the Canadian Forces).

Canadian Army Headquarters—The Canadian outposts around Lens have established a new line in a group of houses which is within a few yards of the enemy's front line at that point.

The Lens-Bethune road is now safely within our lines almost up to the city of Lens.

The enemy does not intend to submit to the loss of Lens a little bit at a time, as in the recent advances, without making a fight for it. While our outposts were establishing their new posts this morning, the Germans turned loose a heavy artillery and machine-gun barrage upon the crater recently captured, and buildings nearby. Sheltered by this barrage, his infantry advanced upon the crater, which was only lightly held as an outpost. Our men in the crater withdrew without suffering any casualties and the Germans reoccupied it.

Destructive artillery shooting was continued yesterday by our artillery at an accelerated rate because of the better light, but dull weather has again come and the gunners are disconsolate.

IN U. S. UNIFORM.

American Red Cross Gets Recognition.

Washington Report—Officials of Red Cross serving with the American army in Europe will wear the American uniform. William H. Taft, chairman of the Central Committee, and Henry P. Davison, chairman of the Red Cross War Council, will be recognized as major-generals, should they cross the Atlantic. Lesser rank will be conferred upon lesser official.

Operations of the Red Cross are being hampered because its officials in Europe do not receive the recognition accorded to wearers of uniforms. Their commissions will be signed by the Secretary of War, but will confer no military authority, obligations or rights.

FEARS FOR LIFE OF KERENSKY

Russ Patriot Shows Signs of a Collapse.

Strain Too Great for Semi-Invalid.

London Cable — The health of Alexander F. Kerensky, Russia's man of the hour, is a matter of grave concern to his friends and associates, according to members of an English delegation which has just returned from Petrograd. Premier Kerensky's health was none too good when he took office and the strain since has been not only constant, but probably heavier than any other statesman in the world today.

Illustrative of his weakness, it is stated that even during the first week of the revolution every public speech he made was followed by a period of faintness. His friends say that only his tremendous will power and nerve energy have kept him going so long.

Those who have seen the brilliant Russian leader in the past few weeks describe his face as being haggard and drawn, his figure emaciated, his voice still strong and vibrant, but his speech marred by frequent coughing and his eyes brilliant, but not with the brilliance of ruddy health. The Premier's whole appearance unmistakably shows the effect of the enormous work required of him every 24 hours and the heavy responsibility and constant drain on his slender physical resources.

"If Kerensky can only hold out," is the phrase more and more frequently heard among his friends and admirers, indicating their dread of his physical collapse and what that would mean to the destinies of free Russia.

Hubbubs—It is possible to cut some people by ignoring them completely. Subbubs—I wish I could cut my lawn that way.

DEMOCRACY IN GERMANY NOW SLIPPING BACK

So the Papers Interpret the Appointments in the Government.

A NEW BISMARCK

Dr. Michaelis Looked On as a Strong Man for the Empire.

Copenhagen Cable — The democratic movement in Germany which reformers were sure was getting such a splendid start in the recent Reichstage crisis seems now to be slipping backwards down grade. The Liberal and Radical newspapers in Germany generally interpret the selection by Dr. Michaelis, the Chancellor, of his colleagues as a distinct rejection of the principle of parliamentarism, or parliamentary influence upon administration.

The Socialist organ Vorwaerts announces that the Cabinet members Spahn, Krause and Mueller enter the Government as individuals, not as party representatives. Therefore the party assumes no responsibility, but retains completely a free hand toward the Government. Herr Mueller particularly has long had no active connection with the Socialist party, and has a purely administrative non-political post.

The Vorwaerts declares that the present Government must be the last of its kind, and must be supplanted by a Government of the people. Dr. Michaelis is also getting further away from the Reichstag peace resolution, even as he interprets it, as the days pass. The phrase in his speech Saturday on the necessity of "a powerful peace" was printed in black type.

Reports to the Associated Press from Germany say that Dr. Michaelis now has been hailed by the advocates of greater Germany as a new Bismarck, and an enthusiastic orator of a delegation from an independent committee for German peace, which saw Dr. Michaelis off at the Dresden railway station, made a wildly-applauded speech, greeting him as a worthy successor of the old blood and iron Chancellor. Dr. Michaelis, according to the published reply to the speech, was modestly silent regarding it.

SOCIALISTS OPPOSED.

Copenhagen Cable — German Socialists will oppose the new Government on the principle of Catholic Germania, according to the Socialist organ Vorwaerts. "Persons so foolish as to expect a great change in the direction of parliamentary regime will be normally disappointed," says the newspaper, which believes that the presence of Catholic representatives is a great improvement in the system. It appears that Dr. Spahn, leader of the Catholic Centre party in the Reichstag, will be forced to retire from parliamentary life on account of his appointment as Prussian Minister of Justice. He must resign his seat owing to the constitutonal proviso upon accepting the portfolio, but it is asserted there is nothing to prevent his standing for election. He will accordingly do this, though he cannot become a member of the Bundesrat.

August Worms, leader of the Flemish movement in Belgium, said in an interview in the Berlin Tageblatt the aim of the movement was the re-establishing in Belgium as a dual monarchy of Flanders and Walloonia, under the personal union of King Albert. Herr Worms took Austria-Hungary as an example of the movement for free Flanders in free Belgium.

DR. MUELLER'S EXPERIENCES.

Berlin, via London Cable — Dr. August Mueller, social Democrat, of Hamburg, who has been appointed Under-Secretary of the War Food Bureau, had in the course of his early career as Socialist editor two entertaining encounters with the police. In [illegible] he was sentenced to four years' imprisonment for lese majeste and served two and a half months when he obtained a new hearing, after which he was acquitted.

Again in 1906 he became involved in the publication of a suppressed pamphlet, whose manuscript was found in his house. Mueller on that occasion escaped conviction, while his printer and distributor went to jail for six weeks. Mueller subsequently explained his escape on the ground that the state attorney had credited him with having served a jail sentence on a previous charge, of which he was finally acquitted. He is the first Social Democrat to hold an important Government post, and has specialized in organizing and conducting consumers' leagues.

Worth Remembering.

A little ammonia in hard water makes a satisfactory and healthy bath.

For an ingrowing toenail cut a V in the centre of the nail, slip a little absorbent cotton or lint in hot mutton tallow and place it under the nail at the sides of the toe. The most frequent cause of chilblains is warming numb feet at a fire or even a register. Rub the chilblains once or twice a day with soap liniment.

A solution of [illegible], one-half ounce to the ounce of water, will clean the hair of dandruff and prevent it falling out.

Honey with a little borax added is good for [illegible] cankered throat.

The Nipa Tree.

The palm-like nipa tree of tropical Asia has a sap exceedingly rich in sugar, but so salty that its utilization has not been found profitable.

Like cures like, but bad habits won't cure bad luck.

"Dead men tell no tales," quoted the Wise Guy. "Except those who have written their own obituaries," retorted the Simple Mug.

THAT

Holiday Trip !

Hot Weather is here, and with it comes the thought of a holiday trip, and with the holiday trip comes the thought of a suitable

Suit Case or Club Bag

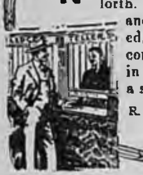
We are ready to supply you. A splendid variety here. Just what you want at the price you wish to pay.

Call and see our stock. You will find it easy choosing from our large assortment.

Eggs 38 cts doz. Butter 36 cts lb. Either cash or trade.

N. McGillivray

North End Store



BANK OF HAMILTON

Established 1872

Capital Authorized, $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up, - $3,000,000
Surplus, - - - - - $3,500,000

Uncertainly

NO one knows what the future may bring forth. Now while your health is good and your earning capacity unimpaired, is the time to accumulate a competence. One dollar deposited in the bank of Hamilton will start a savings account.

R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
PORT ELGIN BRANCH

41-C

Can you afford to be without The Times?

Clearing Lines At Cost

The following lines of Seasonable goods will be sold at or less than cost price. . . . .

All canvas shoes, leatner or rubber soled many lines in practically all sizes, men's ladies' and children's.

Your chance to Save Money

Ladies' and Misses' colored parasols below cost price.

Straw hats for every day or better wear clearing below cost.

Let us supply your wants.

Produce Wanted—Highest Price paid.

South End Store

N. McGillivray & Co.

The Port Elgin Times

MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

ADVERTISING RATES

Farms or Real Estate for Sale 50c each insertion; Miscellaneous articles, To Rent, Wanted, Lost, Found, etc., each insertion 25c. Local Readers, Notices, etc., 10c per line per insertion, 5c each subsequent insertion. Cards of thanks 50c. Legal advertising 10 and 5c a line. Black-faced type, count 2 lines for 1. Display rates, yearly contracts, 12c per inch, 6 mos. 15c per inch. In memoriam poetry 5c per line. Professional cards $6 per year in advance.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The editor of the Midland Free Press criticized the lady teachers of that town, and they called upon him in a body and gave him a tongue thrashing. Praise be to him who starts something.

* * *

An assistant fuel controller is appointed by the Dominion government at a salary of $25,000 per year. If the assistant manager gets that much, how much will the manager get?

* * *

Making shells at $8 per day and talking patriotism about it must sound rather hollow to the lads who take $1.10 per day and risk their lives in the trenches. Making shells as a business proposition is all right, but comparing that to enlisting is rather far-fetched.

* * *

The day has passed, it seems to us, when however much we may long and pray for peace we can do anything else than stand loyally and avowedly with our country in the gigantic struggle upon which it has entered. It can now only be peace after conflict.

* * *

Mr. Hanna, the food controller, is asking a pledge from each housewife to do her best to prevent food waste, and to practice economy and thrift in the home. He says he will give a card to put in the window of each one who pledges to "save food for the Canadian soldiers and her allies." Couldn't the food controller issue a medal for men to wear if they will cut out certain wastes they are addicted to?

* * *

An exchange says they are fiddling away with food restrictions in Great Britain, but they are not cutting down in the brewing of beer. In fact, instead of cutting down on this it is reported the brewing has increased a third. Canada's food controller is losing sleep about saving bread and meat, but still allows the booze to be manufatored. If foodstuffs necessary for life are actually in danger how silly it is for Canada to allow manufacturing of beer and whiskey.

* * *

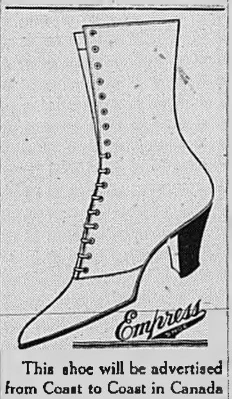
At the council meeting the other night the reeve reported that the coal for the pumping station was costing twice as much, and that the worst of all it was difficult to get. The pumping of water has become a rather expensive job with coal, and it will be good business for the council to consider the operating of the pump by electric power. Chesley, on account of the high price of coal, installed an electric pump, with the result that the water has been supplied to the town at a cost of $1 per day for the pumping. Of course Chesley has Hydro power. But even with the Saugeen Electric power we believe a more profitable arrangement could be made than the present method with coal

* * *

The Good Roads System

Bruce county roads are no longer under the old system of statute labor. They now belong to the county system, and the county council is responsible for the upkeep. For this reason a superintendent is necessary, and Mr. William Hunter of Kincardine, is the man to whom all requests should be addressed, if repairs and such like are needed.

The title to the roads in a county road system passes to the county, and the responsibility for their condition both before and after construction therefore rests with the county council and the superintendent. In order to encourage the counties in maintaining those roads, the maintenance grant of 20 per cent, covers such work as grading, dragging with the log drag, the cleaning of ditches and culverts, repairs to bridges and all work necessary to keep the roads in a passable condition. After construction all roads require attention. Neglect causes the expense of construction to be a loss instead of a valuable investment—an investment paying dividends in the form of increased land values, ease of communication with accompanying reduction of haulage costs, and greater facilities for marketing and shipping farm produce. The Government, therefore, shares the expense for maintaining the county roads by granting the subsidy of 20 per cent of the cost of such maintenance work.



This shoe will be advertised from Coast to Coast in Canada as "Empress" Shoes have been for years, and each season adds newer lines and greater beauty to this well-known shoe for women. Always above the others. We are agents.

James George & Son

The Toronto Globe remarks that "the word conscription has been kept out of convention resolutions, but it cannot be be kept out of the election. It will resound from thousands of platforms and the candidate who declines to pronounce it will be challenged whenever he speaks on the war.

Bruce Presbytery

A special meeting of Bruce Presbytery convened in the Presbyterian church, Port Elgin August 7th, to deal with the call from Burgoyne and Dunblane to Rev. C. C. Strachan. The action of the interim moderator, Mr. Mann in moderating in the call was sustained and the call received as a regular gospel call, and forwarded.

Provisional arrangements were made for induction on Sept. 4th, in the evening, moderator of Presbytery to preside. Rev. Mr. Soules to preach, Rev. Mr. Robinson to address the pastor and Mr. Mann to counsel the congregation

Mrs. Roscoe Temple, Greenock, has been visiting her sister at Pickering for a couple of weeks.

Rev. Malcolm A. Campbell, D D, of First Presbyterian Church, Montreal, visited his mother, Mrs. A. Campbell, 2nd Saugeen.

Thousands of Men Required

Thousands of men are required to help in the great work of harvesting the western crop. Arrangements for transporting to the West this great army of workers have been completed by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta will be run, and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours, without change or transfer.

Going trip West, $12.00 to Winnipeg.

Returning trip East, $18.00 from Winnipeg.

Consult C. P. R. Agents regarding transportation west of Winnipeg and the going dates

ALLENFORD

Miss Clara McRae spent the week end at her home before going to Holland Centre to accept a position.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair, of Toronto, are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. McLeod.

Misses Maggie and Eva Strang returned on Saturday from Wiarton where they have been visiting relatives.

Mr. J. A. E. Mallitt, of Toronto, spent the week-end with his father, Mr. P. C. Mallitt.

R. P. Haskett and family returned last week from London.

Miss M. E. Atcheson spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. E. W. McNiven in Wiarton

Mr. B. McGrath and family, of Owen Sound, are spending a few days with Mr. M. Crawford.

Rev. T. B. Edmonds returned Wednesday from Grimsby Beach where he has spent a month's vacation.

Mrs Adam Aiken returned Saturday after spending a week at points south.

Rev. T. W. Campbell leaves Tuesday morning for his home in Richmond Hill N. Y.

Several of the village "strongbacks" have been trying their hands at making hay. Farm help is scarce and the farmers are grateful for the timely help.

Miss Sarah Draper was home from Owen Sound for a short vacation.

MARRIED

Glidden-Brown

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Brown, at Meaford, Ontario on Thursday, July. 26th, 1917, when their only daughter, Nellie Laidlaw, was married to Mr. Earl K. Glidden of Vermillion, Alta. The wedding March was played by, Miss Mary Cooper. The Rev. R. Barbour conducted the marriage ceremony in the presence of a few relatives and intimate friends. During the signing of the register, Miss Retta Ferguson sang "One Happy Day."

The wedding supper was served on the beautiful lawn, under overlapping trees. The tables were noticeable with antique china and pieces of silver the latter being used in the home of the bride's relatives in 1788. The bride's cake was served on a rare china plate which has been a relic in the family for many years.

The happy couple left for their home in Vermillion, via Owen Sound, taking the great lakes trip on the steamer Manitoba to Fort William, the bride having been a teacher in Isabella public school, they were tendered a very hearty reception upon their arrival in that city; afterwards continuing their journey to Vermillion, where they will be at home after Aug. 1st.

Enjoyable Musicale

On Friday evening about two hundred people gathered at the home of Mr. J. H. Webster, River Road, where an enjoyable musicale was presented by the pupils of Mrs. Donald Lamont, A. L. C. M.

The program was carried out according to a printed card, and each number was thoroughly enjoyed. The pupils of Mrs Lamont showed splendid talent, and reflected credit not only on their teacher, but also on themselves.

After the program ice cream and cake were served, and an enjoyable half hour spent in a social way. A silver collection for Dunblane Red Cross brought in over $30.

Following was the program and those taking part:

1. O Canada...
2. La Chasse Aux Gazelles, Op. 11...... (Cabul
   Anna Bell and Ruby McIvor
3. La Fontaine, Op. 221.........C. Bohm
   Helen Hamilton
4. Traumeri and Romanze, Op. 15 No. 7 (R. Schumann
   Marjorie Clazie
5. Song—"Then You'll Remember Me"
   James Scott
6. Danse Gracieuse Op. 16 No. 2......C. (Dennee
   Anna Bell
7. Impromptu Op. 142, No. 2...Schubert
   Mary McKechnie
8. Song—"My Laddie"...........Thayer
   Elizabeth Lamont
9. Les Mystles.................Paul Wachs
   Mary McKechnie and Helen Hamilton
10. Valse Arabesque, Op. 62......T. Lach
    Coral McIvor
11. Song—"A Dream" .... Bartlett
    Daisy McIntosh
12. "Flower Song".........Gustave Lange
    Reta Stanton
13. (a) Morceau Characteristique Op. 32
    (b) Il Trovatore...............................
    Pearl Begg
14. Song—"Heroes and Gentlemen"....
    W. A. Miller
15. Allegratto .... Haydn
    Margaret Lamont
16. Southern Melody......Helen Howard
    Olive Kerr
17. Songs (a) At Dawning.......................
    (b) The Spring Has Come......
    Hazel Webb
18. Pride of the Ball ....Brainard
    Pearl Begg and Marjorie Clazie
19. "The Maple Leaf Forever"...........

While building a driving shed Adam McCartney, an Elderslie township farmer, was fatally injured by a timber crushing his stomach.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Katz and Mr. and Mrs. Rosenberg, of Toronto, are guests of Mr. and Mrs B. Zeisind.

BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA · ESTABLISHED 1832

A Good Ally

The man who saves nothing remains stationary, or goes behind. The man who saves progresses. Money makes money. Money out at interest works for a man and helps him along the road to success. It is his best ally next to his ability and integrity. 47

Open a savings account with

The Bank of NovaScotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 110,000,000

PORT ELGIN BRANCH.
A. L. Wyant, Manager

BLACKSMITHING

N. KIDT, Blacksmithing, horse-shoeing general repairs. Tire-setting a special

Just the Thing for Summer Wear

Boy's khaki bloomers, in good quality denim two special lines at 90 cents and $1.25

Boy's wash suits, in tan or blue linen and striped percale, in sizes 2 to 8 years, reg. up $1.50 to clear at 98 cents.

To save those good leather boots, buy a pair of harvest shoes. We have them in all sizes.

Youth's at $1.35 per pair

Boy's at $1 [illegible]

Men's at $2 65

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon.

Roppel Bros.

Rural phone, Underwood

Advertise it in The Times.

SPECIAL

We have a few of Dr. Pierce's Family Medical Advisors, Good cloth binding which we offer at

50 cents each

while they last.

R. C. Crawford

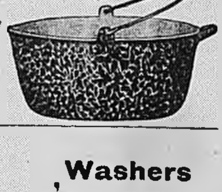
Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent

PRESERVING KETTLES

Old English granitware at reduced prices. Extra large size

75 cents

Don't miss this snap.



Washers

Why not try a

Cyclone Washer

and make wash day a gladder day.

Sold on approval

McLAREN'S HARDWARE

Five Large Phonographs
Given as First District
Prizes in

Bread-Making Contests

At Rural School Fairs in Ontario

More than $2,000 worth of prizes for bread making will be offered at the Rural School Fairs this fall. Among the prizes are five large cabinet phonographs, fifteen Canuck bread mixers, and many attractive books. These splendid prizes will make the contest the most stirring ever held at rural school fairs. Every girl between the ages of 12 and 18 should read all about this fine opportunity, and should begin now to prepare for it. The prizes, under the conditions explained below, will be awarded for the best loaves baked with

Cream of the West Flour

the hard wheat flour that is guaranteed for bread

—the flour that you will want to use always, once you have given it a good trial. We want you to know for yourself that it makes splendid big loaves of the lightest, most wholesome bread that good flour can bake. That is why we make it well worth your while to try it, by offering these attractive and costly prizes.

For this contest we have divided the Province into five districts, each with several counties. In each district we will give a large cabinet phonograph, a set of Dickens' Works and three bread mixers. These are called the District prizes and they are to be given in addition to the prizes offered at the local rural school fairs. (See list of districts below.) Be sure to compete at your local rural school fair. If you win first prize there, you will then automatically become a competitor for the phonograph and other district prizes.

The Prizes, remember, are offered for the best loaf of bread baked with Cream of the West Flour. No other flour will do. For local prizes we offer a number of valuable books. By local prizes we mean those given at the fair.

1st Local Prize.—"Girl's Own Annual," a great big beautifully bound, illustrated book with 800 pages of stories and articles about people, art, animals, gardens, sewing, crocheting—everything that particularly interests young girls, older girls and their mothers. This is a wonderful prize that you can treasure for years.

2nd Local Prize.—"Stories of Famous Men and Women," heavily cloth bound with gold titles, many beautiful pictures in colors, entrancing life stories of Florence Nightingale, Grace Darling, Flora MacDonald, Jenny Lind, the late Queen Victoria and others.

3rd Local Prize.—"Britain Overseas," a big handsomely bound book with many colored pictures, interesting stories and descriptions of the countries and the peoples of Britain's world-wide Empire.

4th Local Prize.—"The Queen's Gift Book," a book of stories, pictures and special articles by Britain's best writers; the proceeds from the sale of this book are for the benefit of disabled soldiers in England.

Note.—Unless the entries number six or more only first and second prizes will be awarded. Unless the entries number ten or more no fourth prize will be awarded.

The District Prizes.—The winner of the first prize at each local fair automatically becomes a competitor for the following District prizes. One-half of the first prize loaf will be sent to the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, to compete in the District Contests. (See conditions below.)

1st District Prize.—The "Pathephone" is the name given to the fine big mahogany phonograph we offer as first prize. It will give you endless pleasure and entertainment for a lifetime. It has special reproducer attachments and needles, enabling you to play all kinds of flat disc records of no matter what make. The Pathephone reproduces band music, orchestra music, songs and funny pieces perfectly; with it goes a dozen of the famous Pathe records. Total value, $150.00.

2nd District Prize.—Set of Dickens' Works, 18 splendidly bound volumes with many illustrations. Among the books in the set are "Oliver Twist" and "Old Curiosity Shop." These are two of the most entrancing stories ever written.

3rd, 4th and 5th Prizes.—"Canuck" Bread mixers. This simple, yet well-made, machine takes the hard work out of bread making. Instead of laborious kneading of the old method, you just put in the ingredients, turn the handle and the dough is thoroughly and more evenly mixed.

FIRST PRIZE AT LOCAL RURAL SCHOOL FAIRS

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST

Every girl may compete at the rural school fair in her district, whether or not she attends school, providing that her 12th birthday occurs before November 1st, 1917, or her 19th birthday does not occur before Nov. 1, 1917. One loaf of bread must be submitted baked in pan about 7 x 5 inches and 3 inches deep, and divided into twin loaves so that they may be separated at the fair. The loaf must be baked with Cream of the West Flour. One-half will be judged at the fair. The other half of the prize loaf will be sent to Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, to compete in the District Contests. The judging will be done by Miss M. A. Purdy, of the Department of Breadmaking and Flour Testing. The local contest at the fair will be conducted under the same rules as all the other regular contests at your fairs.

The Standard by which bread will be judged will be as follows:

1. Appearance of Loaf........15 marks
   - (a) Color........5 marks
   - (b) Texture of crust........5 marks
   - (c) Shape of loaf........5 marks
2. Texture of Crumb........40 marks
   - (a) Evenness........15 marks
   - (b) Silkiness........20 marks
   - (c) Color........5 marks
3. Flavor of Bread........45 marks
   - (a) Taste........25 marks
   - (b) Odor........20 marks

Important.—Each loaf must be accompanied by the part of the flour bag containing the face of the Old Miller, and an entry form must be signed by the girl and parents or guardian stating date of birth, P.O. address, and giving name of dealer from whom Cream of the West Flour was purchased. The form will state that the girl actually baked the loaf entered in the competition. The forms will be provided at the time of the fair. The decision of the judges is final. Not more than one entry may be made by each girl and not more than one local prize will be awarded to the same family.

Which District is yours? This list shows you which counties you compete against if you become a competitor for the District prizes:

District No. 1.—Counties of Glengarry, Stormont, Dundas, Grenville, Leeds, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Carleton, Lanark, Renfrew.

District No. 2.—Counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Peterboro, Northumberland, Victoria, Durham.

District No. 3.—Counties of York, Ontario, Peel, Halton, Wentworth, Oxford, Brant, Waterloo.

District No. 4.—Counties of Welland, Haldimand, Norfolk, Elgin, Kent, Essex, Lambton, Middlesex.

District No. 5.—Counties of Bruce, Grey, Dufferin, Simcoe, Districts of Muskoka, Parry Sound, Timiskaming, Algoma, Sudbury, Manitoulin.

THE RESULTS of the contests at the fair will be made known in the usual way as in the case of all the other regular contests. The District results will be announced as soon as possible after the conclusion of the Rural School Fairs in the Province.

DO NOT MISS THIS GREAT OPPORTUNITY: Every girl between 12 and 18 years should compete. What a splendid way to stir up increased interest in breadmaking! Get a supply of Cream of the West Flour at your dealers and practise using it as often as possible to increase the chances of winning. If your dealer cannot sell it to you, write to the Campbell Flour Mills Co., Ltd., Toronto, and we will promptly tell you the nearest place to get it.

NO COMPETITIONS IN COUNTIES NAMED BELOW: The competition is open to all parts of the Province where Rural School Fairs are held, except the Districts of Rainy River, Kenora and Thunder Bay. These districts are the only parts of the Province where school fairs are held by the Department of Agriculture in which this competition will not be a feature. There are no district representatives of the Department of Agriculture in the Counties of Huron, Perth, Wellington, Haliburton, Prescott, Russell or Lincoln, and no rural school fairs are held in those Counties by the Department of Agriculture. There are, however, a few local school fairs held in these seven counties, and we are opening the competition to these fairs. We will announce later the districts in which each of these Counties will be included.

The Campbell Flour Mills Co., Limited
(West) Toronto, Ontario

(Keep this announcement for reference)

128

☞—Cream of the West is sold by N. McGillivray, Port Elgin; E. Witter & Co., Mildmay; Geo. Lambert, Mildmay; Mrs. J. A. Wells, Southampton; A. Fisher & Son, Paisley; Wm. Irwin, Wiarton; D. Mallough, Lucknow.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

Many Thousand
Farm Laborers Wanted
for Harvesting in Western Canada

"Going Trip West"—$12.00 to WINNIPEG "Return Trip East"—$18.00 from WINNIPEG

GOING DATES

August 21st and August 30th — All stations in Ontario West of Smith's Falls up to and including Toronto on Lake Ontario Shore Line and Havelock-Peterboro' Line; also from stations between Kingston and Renfrew Junction, inclusive, and from stations on Toronto-Sudbury direct line. From stations on Sault Ste. Marie branch. From stations on Main Line, Beaucage to Franz, inclusive. From stations Bethany Junction to Port McNicoll and Burketon-Bobcaygeon.

August 23rd and August 30th — From stations West and South of Toronto up to and including Hamilton and Windsor, Ont., on Owen Sound, Walkerton, Teeswater, Wingham, Elora, Listowel, Goderich, St. Mary's, Port Burwell and St. Thomas branches, and stations Toronto and North to Bolton, inclusive.

SPECIAL THROUGH TRAINS

Further particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents, W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Freeland, of Palmerston, visited friends here last week.

Messrs. Hand of Toronto are visiting at Mrs. Hodge's, North Bruce.

BORN—July 29th to Mr and Mrs. Bert Nuttal, 10th of Bruce, twin girls (since dead).

Mrs. Doran and Miss Doran, of Seaforth, are guests of Mrs. Shannon at the Creamery.

A Dunblane farmer phones us that the letter "B" is very plain on the oat leaves this year.

Among those who spent a day at the beach were: Miss Dierlamm, of Ayton; Mr. Milton Dierlamm, of Ripley; Mr Domm and daughter Olivia; and Mr. and Mrs. Haufer and family.

The following have purchased property along the Ross Grove front for summer cottage sites: Mr. G. Krug, of Chesley; Mr. F. Lippert, of Walkerton; Mr. Durst, of Chesley; and some five or six more lots have been taken by local parties.

The following with their families spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lustig at their cottage at Ross' Grove: Mr. and Mrs. Stockfish, Mr. and Mrs. Durst, Mr. and Mrs. Heiseman, Mr. and Mrs. G. Krug, Mr. and Mrs. Krueger, Mr. and Mrs. Gillies, Dr. and Mrs. Foster, of Chesley; Mr. and Mrs. Shoenhals, of Hanover; and Mrs. H. Lustig, sen., and daughter Laura of Toronto.

Hanover Red Cross Lady Sells Goods Here

Last week a woman claiming to be from Hanover and a member of Red Cross of that town, and also claiming to be the Regent of the Hanover branch of Daughters of the Empire, called on Port Elgin homes selling face lotions, hair beautifiers, etc, in aid of Hanover Red Cross.

Of course the mention of Red Cross had the effect of urging the women to buy, and a lot of the goods were sold.

She was asked by one lady if she had credentials to show that she was representing the Red Cross.

The agent replied that she was surprised that she should be doubted. She knew that the "big guns" were making rake-offs, but, of course none of the ordinary folk, like herself were making anything out of the Red Cross."

The lady did good business here, so we are told, and no doubt, the Hanover Red Cross will have a neat sum coming to them.

OBITUARY

The late John Young, whose death was reported in last issue, was born in Perth, and was the fifth son of a large family, who moved to Kinloss township in the early fifties. As a young man he went into mercantile life with his brother Wm near Kincardine. At one time few men were better known in that district than Young Bros., grain and pork buyers in Kincardine. In the early fifties they purchased lot 14, con. 9, Bruce, where William still lives.

In 1884 the deceased was married to Tessie McLean, and they began married life on lot 21, con. 8, Bruce, which they still own. Seven years ago they purchased the Lawton farm, where they were living when Mr. McLean was suddenly stricken with heart failure on the evening of August 7, 1917.

The late Mr. Young was a member of the Presbyterian church, and in politics he was a Conservative. He was much esteemed in this section, and greatly liked for his good nature and friendliness.

Besides a sorrowing wife, who will have the deep sympathy of all, there are left to mourn the loss of a loving father, seven children: John H. Young, B. A., of Hafford, Sask; L. McLean and Hugh at home; Isabel and Lettie, public school teachers at Port Arthur; Bessie, nurse at Chicago, and Tessie at home. Also two brothers and one sister.

The funeral services at the house and grave were largely attended.

Interment was at Willow Creek cemetery. In the absence of Rev. Macnab, Rev. Little officiated. The two daughters were delayed at Guelph, thereby missing their father's funeral.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION
Aug. 25 - TORONTO - Sept. 10
On a More Than Ordinarily Progressive Scale

MOBILIZATION OF NATIONAL RESOURCES
Constructive and Destructive Needs for War

CONFEDERATION SPECTACLE
1200—PERFORMERS—1200
Canada's Story from Birth to Nationhood Dramatically Told
The very Apex of Spectacular Achievement

GIANT LIVE-STOCK AND AGRICULTURAL DISPLAY
Judging Competitions for Young Farmers - - New Farm Crop Competitions - - Extended Classifications and Innovations in All Departments

IMMENSE EXHIBITS OF TRACTORS AND FARM LABOR SAVING DEVICES

ART—Italian, French, Persian, American and Canadian Masterpieces.

MUSIC—Innes' Famous Soloists and a score of other leading organizations.

ENTIRE NEW MIDWAY
NATIONAL MOTOR SHOW
FIRST SHOWING OF 1918 MODELS

Greatly enlarged Government and other Exhibits - - - War in all its phases - - Model Camp - - Artillery Drive - - Aeroplane Flights - - Scores of surprises in store for old friends and a thousand thrills for new ones.

REDUCED FARES ON ALL LINES OF TRAVEL

This Up-to-Date Range

has a ventilated oven with walls of nickelled steel that roasts and bakes to a turn. The glass door enables you to watch the baking and the thermometer shows exact temperature. Our free booklet describes many other special features. Write for it.

McClary's
PANDORA RANGE
LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER
ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY
SASKATOON EDMONTON
8

Sold by J. H. Kennedy, Port Elgin

It Cleans and Safeguards

Lifebuoy Soap is always on guard against dirt and disease. In the home, at your work, for hands and face, for shampoo and bath it will be found always on the watch against germ and microbe. Withal, the rich, creamy Lifebuoy lather makes it a real pleasure to use this "super soap."

LIFEBUOY
HEALTH SOAP

The old proverb "prevention is better than cure" is another way of saying use Lifebuoy Soap. Start using it to-day and see that the children use it.

The mild antiseptic odor vanishes quickly after use.

At All Grocers—

Lever Brothers
Limited
Toronto

174

Plucky Rescue

Jack Anderson, a lad about 12 years of age, is a real hero. At Inverhuron the other day, Miss Daniels, a trained nurse from Durham, who was in bathing got into a deep hole, and was drowning. Young Anderson without hesitation went to her aid, and caught her by the hair and swam with her toward the dock.

Miss Lillie Drummond tried to assist the lad, but got into the hole. Her sister, Jennie, went to her assistance and in a few moments three girls, unable to swim, were struggling in water 30 ft. deep. Jack Anderson succeeded in getting Miss Daniels safely to the dock, and Delbert Splan plunged in and saved the Drummond sisters. It was a narrow call for all three. The affair occurred at a private picnic party.

Confederation Year fireworks at the Canadian National Exhibition will be on an unusually magnificent scale, in keeping with the elaborate nature of the remainder of the programme. Included in the brilliant display will be a representation of the great flares which are such a menace to the boys "Over There" on their night forays, war bombs, star shells and many other spectacular methods of lighting the battlefield, giving one a vivid idea of what night is along the war torn front in Europe.

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now, will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places, and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College
Owen Sound, Ontario

remains open all summer to help meet the demand for trained office help. Enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. Fleming, F. C. A., Principal
Dept. [illegible], Owen Sound, [illegible]

Western Fair
London, Canada
Sept. 7th to Sept. 15th, 1917

1867-"A half Century of Success"-1917

The Great Agricultural Exhibition of Western Ontario

$32,000.00 in Prizes and Attractions

A very interesting programme, including Military and other features.
TWICE DAILY

FIREWORKS EACH NIGHT
TWO SPEED EVENTS DAILY

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES

Prize Lists, Entry Forms and all information from the Secretary.

Lieut.-Col. W. M. Gartshore, President
A. M. Hunt, Secretary

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson VIII., August 19, 1917.

Finding the Book of the Law.—2 Chron. 34. 14-33.

Commentary.—I. God's word found (vs. 14-17). 14. Brought out the money—The directions of Josiah with respect to repairing the house of the Lord were being carefully obeyed. The money contributed had been stored in some room in the temple and was brought out to be used in prosecuting the work. Found the book of the law (R.V.)—This must have been the temple copy, which should have been deposited by the ark of the covenant (Deut. 31. 26). It is difficult to account for the loss of the book of the law. It is conjectured that during the time when Ahaz was profaning the temple some faithful priest hid the sacred roll lest it should be destroyed by the impious king. Even if it had remained in the ark of the covenant, where it properly belonged, it is by no means improbable that the ark itself may have been hidden away among rubbish in one of the chambers of the temple during the long years of the nation's neglect of the worship of Jehovah. Given by Moses—"By the hand of Moses," — R. V., margin. There is a difference of opinion as to how much was contained in the roll. It is thought that it was Deut. 5-26, 28, since those chapters evidently contain the passages read to the king. Others believe that the main part of the Pentateuch was included. It seems reasonable to conclude that the five books of Moses constituted the book of the law that was found. 15. Hilkiah—The high priest. Shaphan the scribe—The officer next to the king. 16. Carried the book to the king—Shaphan, bearing the book with him, comes and gives a calm account of the business on which he had been sent at first, namely, the inquiry and arrangement about the money which had been gathered. When that part of the business is despatched he tells the king concerning the book that has been discovered.—Cam. Bib. 17. Gathered together the money—"Emptied out the money."—R. V. The money had been collected, and carefully guarded until it was needed. Overseers...workmen— Those to whom had been committed the work of repairing the temple. There was manifested a true interest in the work of the Lord, and the efforts of his people were abundantly rewarded.

II. Effect on the King (vs. 18-21). 18. book, or portions of it (2Kings 22: book, or portions of it (2 Kings 22. 8), and understood its character, but he did not tell the king that it was the book of the law; he spoke of it as a book and allowed the king to form his own opinion as to its importance. Read it before the king — King Josiah gave Shaphan directions to read it to him, for he was eager to know the contents of the book. The scarcity of books gave great value to those that existed. The only way of producing copies was by the slow process of copying by hand. 19. He rent his clothes—The rending of his clothing was an Oriental expression of grief. Josiah rent his clothes because the grief over the sins of the nation and because of the calamities which the words read declared should follow such sins. There must have been copies of the book of the law in existence but the king had never before heard these momentous words. The king was honest and fully in earnest to serve the Lord personally and to bring his people to obey and worship him. When the law was read to him, new light came, and he accepted it as from the Lord. He did not shrink from any responsibility that it would bring upon him. 20, 21. A delegation of men of standing and authority was at once commissioned to learn more definitely the import of the words read from the book of the law. They understood that they were to seek from a prophet of the Lord an interpretation of these words. Josiah appears to have extended his interest in God's people, not to Judah only, but to all that remained of the twelve tribes of Israel. He realized that the condition of Judah and Israel was unfavorable and even distressing because of the past sins of the nations. In his words, "our fathers," he probably refers to Manasseh and Amon. In the light of the book of the law he believed that greater calamities were just ahead. It was important that the full facts should be known that steps might be undertaken to turn aside the calamities that were all but ready to fall upon Judah.

III. Huldah's prophecy (vs. 22-28.) The king's messengers went at once to the prophetess Huldah. We know nothing of her aside from what is recorded here and in the account given in 2 Kings 22: 14-20. It is clear that she was a true prophet of the Lord. "This short narrative has immortalized her name. Probably the two prophets, Jeremiah and Zephaniah, were absent from the city. But God is not straightened in his instruments. He can use a woman to speak for him as well as a man, a humble person as well as an exalted one. Huldah had the full prophetic gift, and spoke as boldly, confidently and promptly as would Isaiah or Jeremiah."—Whedon. The word given to the king by Huldah was not reassuring for the nation. Calamity was not far away, yet Josiah, because of his having fully turned to the Lord, would not see the desolation of the nation, but would die in peace.

IV. The word publicly read (vs. 29-33). 29. Gathered ...... all the elders—Josiah's work of personally serving the Lord, of removing idolatry and of repairing the temple prepared the way for finding the book of the law, but he could not stop there. He must publish to the nation the great truths which he had heard. 30. Went up into the house of the Lord—Thus honoring the long neglected temple. All the people—The words of the law were read to a great assembly of the Israelitish people. None were excluded because they were poor or lowly or rich or great. The princes, the priests and the prophets were there. The word which Josiah read to them was like a new revelation from God. Its discovery was most opportune, and, we may say, providential. It made a profound impression upon the people, as it had upon the king, who was devotedly and zealously working for a full reformation of the nation. 31. The king...... made a covenant— The integrity and devotion of Josiah are seen in his readiness to make a "covenant before the Lord" to obey his word "with all his heart." This act was in perfect harmony with his previous record. As he had seen the path of duty he had courageously and energetically followed it. 32. Caused all ......to stand to it—In II. Kings 23: 3 the words are, "And all the people stood to the covenant." The people of the assembly were moved by the words of the king. They could not fail to be impressed with his sincerity and earnestness, and as they saw him deeply moved by the words of the law and determined to observe them, they were ready to pledge obedience and devotion to God. 33. Took away all the abominations—He completed the work of purging the land of idolatry, begun six years previously.

Questions.—Who was king of Judah at this time? What was found while the temple was being repaired? Who was Shaphan? What did he do with the book? What effect did the reading of the book have upon the king? Why did he rend his clothes? Who composed the delegations that the king appointed? What did he command them to do? Who was Huldah? What did she say would come upon Jerusalem? What message did she send the king? What assembly did the king call and for what purpose? Into what covenant did Josiah and the people enter? What great work did the king complete?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—The law of God.

I. The measure of man's conduct.

II. The guide to righteousness.

I. The measure of man's conduct. In the lesson before us we have a striking instance of the preservation of God's word. His providence is seen in the care he exercised over it. At the most favorable juncture for the execution of his purpose it was found and recognized. Having ascertained the contents of the book for himself, Shaphan lost no time in bringing it under the notice of the king. He used care in doing so, not knowing how the king would receive the ancient message, which contained strong denunciations and terrible threatenings. The effect produced was profound. Josiah's honest efforts toward reformation were rewarded by a clearer knowledge of God's will. The book of the law was found just in time to give a new impetus to the reform movement. The young king was quick to see its importance. It enlarged his conception of duty. It revealed the intensity of the nation's sins. Josiah learned for the first time what direful woes were predicted on those who should commit such sins. He saw the enormity of the nation's evil as he had never before realized it. He included himself in the general condemnation. He sought to know what means should be adopted to remove the curse which the sins of generations had brought upon the nation. He recognized the necessity as well as the propriety of consulting God through his appointed means of communication. Though the temple and the land had been purged, Josiah was uncertain whether the curse pronounced against idolatry might not still overtake them. He did not dispute the justice of God's threatenings, but acknowledged that he was righteous and the people wicked. Huldah, the prophetess, had little to give in the way of comfort, but rather confirmed the threatenings. The book contained instructions and admonitions which, if duly heeded, would assure abiding peace and honor to the inhabitants of Judah. Concerning the city and temple there was a sentence of doom, concerning the king a message of peace.

II. The guide to righteousness. Josiah felt that a great act of national repentance and national profession of faith was called for. The assembling at the house of God and the solemn reading of God's word made a deep impression upon the people. The king, the court, the elders, the rulers and the people felt its power. The utmost possible honor was shown to it by having it read by the king to the people. That solemn assembly of all the people in the Lord's house was a national movement. They were entering upon their final covenant. Public life was affected. The power of God was felt. Men put away their idols and came back to the faith of their fathers. The ultimate standard of duty for king and people was to be the words of the book. They were publicly recited, proclaimed and declared to be the basis of the national life, the law of the community. The obedience required by Josiah and promised by the people was earnest and sincere. The king was the federal head of the nation and in pledging himself to keep the covenant he performed a representative act. He pledged the nation as a whole to the acceptance and performance of the covenant. He pledged the representatives of the nation to continue in the service of Jehovah. He took away the standing temptation from the path of the people. While making obedience easier, the sense of obligation was stronger. With the reappearance of the book of the law the religious spirit of the nation recovered itself. The people pledged themselves with a sincerity that was for the time unfeigned, thus renewing their relation with God and again becoming His people. Josiah undertook his work with new inspiration, for he felt the Lord was with him. He was supernaturally strengthened in his great task of reformation. The men who went to the temple treasury returned with greater treasure than gold. If Hilkiah had not been setting things right, he would not have found the book in its dark hiding-place. That law formed the basis of all true reforms. It led to repentance and reformation. The history of that age illustrates the difference between having God's word and living without it.—T. R. A.

Old Bread Like New.

Don't throw it away.

Stale bread may be revived.

Simply dip the loaf in cold water.

Then put it in the oven till it is crisp.

Many like it very much better than fresh bread.

Besides, stale bread is much more economical than fresh.

Four loaves of stale bread are equivalent in nutrition to five of new bread.

WHEY A DAIRY BY-PRODUCT RICH IN SUGAR AND MINERAL MATTER

Dairy By-Products as Feed for Live Stock—The Second of Three Articles—By H. H. Dean

The by-product in the manufacture of cheese is called whey. It contains some of all the constituents of whole milk and differs chiefly from the other two dairy by-products, skim-milk and buttermilk, in that it contains only a small proportion of protein or nitrogenous material and that chiefly in the form of albumen. The other protein compound of milk, casein, is largely removed by the action of rennet or pepsin, but the albumen is not acted upon by the coagulating agent in cheese manufacture, hence remains nearly altogether in the liquid residue, commonly known as whey.

In addition to the albumen, whey contains most of the milk sugar found in new milk, either in the form of sugar, or as lactic acid; most of the ash material or mineral matter, some milk fat and some casein. The largest constituent of whey, of course, is water, but it is probable that the water of milk and whey has a higher feeding value than has the water taken from wells, or other sources of supply. The chemist is inclined to say milk-water consists simply of H. O., but this is probably a case where in nature eludes the chemist, because we know that the addition of ordinary water to milk-solids fails to give that flavor and other desirable characteristics found in milk as it comes from the cow.

RETURNING MILK IN WHEY CARS

Formerly whey was whey and nothing more, but now we have several classes or kinds of whey—ordinary, pasteurized, separated, casein whey, etc. .. word on each of these.

Ordinary whey is the by-product commonly found at cheese factories throughout Canada. At a certain stage of the process of cheese manufacture known in the cheesemakers' language as "dipping," the solids of milk are separated from the liquid part, the former being retained for making the cheese, and the latter run into what is called a "whey tank" there to be fed to hogs at the factory, or to be returned to farmers who have supplied the milk for cheese manufacture, on the basis of about ninety pounds of whey for each one-hundred pounds of milk furnished.

This distribution of the whey is seldom satisfactorily accomplished, except where a whey-weighing machine is installed. The common plan is to allow each patron to fill his can or cans after delivering the milk to the factory, in which case those who come last are short in supply and the cheesemaker helps out by running floor-washings, etc., into the whey tank. In case the drivers return the whey to patrons on the return trip, they are not so apt to be over-generous with the supply of whey, as it means considerable extra labor in pumping, except where the tank is elevated, which allows the cans to be filled by gravity.

The practice of returning whey in the cans which are used for milk delivery, is not one to be recommended, yet it is about the only feasible plan yet evolved. The late Thos. Ballantyne used to say that he would close his factories rather than allow whey to be returned in patrons' milk cans. Yet, if he were alive to-day, he would probably modify his views on that point, as very few cheeseries can hold their patronage unless they allow the whey to be returned to the farms. In seasons of low prices for cheese, farmers claim that the only profit in the business of supplying milk to cheese factories comes from the feeding of whey to hogs.

PIGS DO WELL ON WHEY.

If the whey tank be kept clean by daily or weekly scrubbing, and where the whey is properly pasteurized at the factory, there is not the same objection as formerly to the return of whey in milk cans. In the old-fashioned, underground-whey tank that was practically impossible to clean, the germs held undisputed possession and the smell of it was an offence to the whole neighborhood, as well as a menace to the cheese industry of the locality. An elevated tank for whey is best, as it may be more easily cleaned and kept clean.

The best material out of which to make a whey tank is steel or iron, made on the plan of the shell for a steam boiler. Such a tank has been in use at the Dairy Department, O. A. C. for more than ten years, with very satisfactory results. Formerly wooden tanks were used, which are difficult to keep in repair; they are likewise short-lived and unsanitary, unless carefully looked after. Cement has been recommended for whey tanks, but the acid of the whey is likely to corrode a cement tank, making it difficult to keep clean. With a suitable whey tank properly located, and well looked after, there is no reason why whey may not be returned to dairy farms in good condition for feeding live stock.

However, this means, in addition, pasteurization of the whey. By pasteurization is meant the heating of whey to a temperature of between 145 and 160 degrees F. for a sufficient length of time (one to two hours) to destroy most of the bacterial life present, more especially the disease germs and those organisms which may cause bad flavors in milk, curd or cheese, or produce a gaseous condition or off-flavor in curd or cheese. Some districts are especially troubled with bacteria of this nature and the remedy is to pasteurize the whey before returning it to the farm, where conditions are not often favorable for proper cleansing of the milk-can after the whey has been emptied. When the new milk is poured into this improperly-washed can, the conditions are very favorable for the growth of low forms of life which give endless trouble to the cheesemaker. Also there is danger of spreading disease from one farm to another through the whey if it is not properly pasteurized so as to kill the germs which cause tuberculosis, anthrax and other contagious diseases among live stock.

The cost of heating whey at a cheese factory is estimated at fifty cents to one dollar per ton of cheese which is a comparatively small sum for insurance against the spread of contagion, and bad-flavored cheese. The feeding value of the whey is not injured, but rather improved, by pasteurization.

At a number of cheese factories in Canada and the United States it is becoming a common practice to run the whey through an ordinary or special whey cream separator, soon after the curds are dipped, then churn the cream so obtained, making what is known as whey butter. The revenue from this butter is often considerable, and helps to reduce the cost of manufacturing cheese. On the average, about three pounds of butter may be made from 1,000 pounds whey. A factory having an average of 10,000 lbs whey daily for a season of eight months could make between three and a half and four tons of whey butter, which means a revenue of between $2,000 and $3,000 from this product.

SHOULD BE PASTEURIZED.

It has been claimed that the separated whey is just as good for feeding pigs as is the ordinary whey, or the whey with the fat retained. Experiments at the O. A. C. indicate that "skimmed-whey" had about twenty-five per cent. less feeding value for hogs than has similar whey from which the fat was not removed for butermaking. One year, the relative values were 100 for separated and 125 for ordinary whey; the next year the relative values were 100 and 133 respectively.

At one time there were quite a number of plants in Canada manufacturing casein, but latterly these have been considerably reduced, as it was found to be not a profitable business at the price formerly paid for raw casein. We had no casein refining factories in Canada, and most of the profits of the business apparently went to American refiners.

Usually skim milk is used for casein making, and the whey by-product has feeding value, if it be not injured by chemicals. In one process, the casein is precipitated by means of sulphuric or hydrochloric acid, and it is claimed by some farmers that where this method is followed, the whey will kill pigs. It is difficult to believe that there would be sufficient of the acid in the dilute whey to cause injury to animals consuming it, though it is possible such might occur through carelessness.

Where rennet is used to precipitate the casein, there would be no danger of injurious effects on the animals to which the whey may be fed. Such whey would have nearly the same feeding value as ordinary factory whey, except there is less fat in the skim milk-casein-whey.

Some farmers claim to be able to rear good calves on pasteurized whey together with supplements. This may be true with thrifty calves after they get a good start on milk, but we should much prefer skim milk for calves and young pigs.

After pigs get a start and weigh from 50 pounds up, they do exceedingly well on whey, middlings, barley and corn meal, feeding flour, etc. The best results at the O. A. C. were got by using from two to two and a half pounds of whey for each pound of meal feed. It was found that 1000 pounds of whey were equal to from six to as much as fifteen pounds of meal. The average of five experiments with hogs, gave a feeding value of nearly twelve pounds of meal for one hundred pounds of sour whey. These tests indicate a feeding value of fifteen to twenty-five cents per 100 pounds of whey, at the present price of meal of all kinds. This, however, is doubtless much too high, though it is undoubtedly cheap food for hogs at five to ten cents per 100 pounds, under present conditions.

The practical hog feeder will utilize all the whey possible. There should be no waste of whey at cheese factories during 1917. Let it all be turned into pork, thus adding to the human food supply of the world and incidentally to the revenues of our dairy farms.

—The Canadian Countryman.

SUNDAY AT HOME

OUT THERE.

Somewhere, Out There, he is just a boy, that's all—
(Laughter sparkled in his eyes — he was always singing!)
Just a boy who answered when he heard his country call:
(Somewhere Out There he is—how my thoughts go winging!)
Ready to do or dare,
(Like sunlight was his hair!)
Just a boy, a smiling boy,
Somewhere, Out There.

Idle my wheel to-day, hushed is my spinning—
(Ah, but his eyes were blue—blue as the sea!)
Somewhere Out There he is—losing or winning?
(Boy with the carefree heart, come back to me!)
Blood red the cannons flare,
(God, can you hear my prayer?)
Keep him, my boy, from harm—
Somewhere, Out There.

—Margaret E. Sangster, Jun., in the Christian Herald.

BE OF GOOD COURAGE.

Be strong, and of good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them; for the Lord thy God, he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee. The Lord, he it is that doth go before thee; he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee; fear not, neither be dismayed.—Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed; for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.—In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths.

He hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee. So that we may boldly say, the Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me.—Our sufficiency is of God.

Lead us not into temptation.—O Lord, I know the way of man is not in himself; it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps.

My times are in thy hand.

THE COFFIN.

(By the late H. T. Miller.)

The word coffin occurs only once in the Bible. The idea of rest; coldness, darkedness and fixedness, cluster round the coffin. It is carried into the house, then out, then lowered into the grave. Rest for the weary. But here is a coffin that does not rest: it travels; travels far; travels long; it travels for years in the wilderness. Joseph gave commandment concerning his bones. Egypt was only a lodging place, a place of discipline, of preparation, of departure. The march of the Israelites was a grand funeral procession. The body that rode in the second chariot of Egypt, was now carried by devout hands through all the journeys. They were charged to take it to the Land of Promise.

Men are fond of building monuments; men must needs perpetuate their name. The pyramids were built for this purpose; statues, tablets, in the church buildings or out, illustrated the value and care of bones. The boy cuts his initials on the rail of the bridge, or bark of a tree. This gives satisfaction to he undying thirst of the human soul.

Oh: this care of the bones, "no man ever hated his own flesh"; he feeds, guards, adorns and protects from the weather, this wonderful body, and yet a pin prick can send it away; it is a vapor, a breath, a dream. Nay! it is more. It a temple for worship; it is an observatory for outlook; it is an organ of observation; with some it is a sty of uncleanness.

This coffin is associated with promise. Egypt was for life, but not forever. Trials, tortures, tears, all said; the promise waits, but it is coming, and it came to the very day!

This coffin speaks of relation. The body is related to the earth the spirit is related to God. The law was most dear to the Jew; it was a mark of separation, selection, distinction.

This coffin gives a definition of time. What is time? It is space to repent, to get ready, to cast off the works of darkness and put on the armour of light.

This coffin is associated with patience. "Four hundred years was a long pull. The Moor was eight hundred years in Spain; the Turk has said his prayers in St. Sophia for 450 years; it is an old Christian Church, but the plaster will be scraped off and the old Christian motto will blaze out again. "His name shall endure forever. His name shall continue as long as the sun, and men shall be blessed in Him. He must reign till all enemies are put under His feet."

This coffin is related to the Crown, the crown of the King and the crown of the saint. To each one belongs two bodies. "There is a natural body there is a spiritual body. "We could not be found unclothed, but clothed upon. When we have done our work in this natural body, a spiritual body awaits us at the gate as we go into the city, when the air will be deafening with the acclaim. There will be a jubilee of perpetual hallelujahs, but no egotism, as they cast their crowns before Him, lost in wonder, love and praise. As the lily and rose spring out of the dark, damp, earth so we shall rise from darkness to sunrise, a sunrise that knows no setting.

"Oh, if my mortal feet
Have almost gained the brink,
If it be I am nearer home
Even to-day than I think;
Father, perfecting trust
Let my spirit feel in death.
That her feet are firmly set
On the rock of a living faith."

H. T. MILLER.

NOTE THE SEVERE LINES, BUT IT'S SMART.

Severely plain in its effect is a tailored suit of peacock-blue duvetyn banded with skunk. Tailleurs built on the general lines of this model will be exceedingly smart for winter.

MARKET REPORTS

TORONTO MARKETS

FARMERS' MARKET.

Dairy Produce—
Butter, choice dairy	$0 31	$0 4[illegible]
Eggs, new-laid, doz.	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Cheese, lb.	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Do., fancy, lb.	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Dressed Poultry—
Turkeys, lb.	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Fowl, lb.	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Spring chickens	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Ducks, Spring, lb.	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Fruits—
Blueberries, 11-qt. bkt.	0 [illegible]	1 50
Currants, red, 11-qt. bkt.	0 [illegible]	1 [illegible]
Do., black, 11-qt. bkt.	[illegible]	[illegible]
Rhubarb, 3 bunches	0 00	0 [illegible]
Gooseberries, bkt.	1 00	1 [illegible]
Gooseberries, 2 boxes	0 00	0 [illegible]
Cherries, bkt., 6 qts.	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Do., 11-qt. bkt.	1 00	1 [illegible]
Raspberries, box	0 15	0 [illegible]
Vegetables—
Beans, small measure	0 00	0 [illegible]
Beets, doz. bch.	0 00	0 [illegible]
Cucumbers, each	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Cauliflower, each	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Carrots, doz. bchs.	0 00	0 [illegible]
Celery, per head	0 00	0 [illegible]
Cabbages, each	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Lettuce, doz. bchs.	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Do., head, doz.	0 00	0 [illegible]
Onions, bundle	0 00	0 10
Do., small bkt.	0 00	0 [illegible]
Do., Bermuda, box	0 00	1 [illegible]
Peas, Can., 6-qt. bkt.	0 00	0 [illegible]
Do., 11-qt. bkt.	0 00	0 [illegible]
Potatoes, bag	[illegible]	[illegible]
Do., peck	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Do., small measure	0 00	0 [illegible]
Radishes, 3 bunches	0 00	0 [illegible]
Sage, bunch	0 [illegible]	0 10
Savory, bunch	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Turnips, bunch	0 00	0 [illegible]
Tomatoes, 2 lbs.	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Do., 11-qt. bkt.	0 [illegible]	1 [illegible]

MEATS—WHOLESALE.

Beef, forequarters, cwt.	$12 00	$14 00
Do., hindquarters	18 00	20 00
Carcases, choice	15 50	16 50
Do., common	12 00	13 50
Veal, common, cwt.	9 50	11 50
Do., medium	12 50	14 50
Do., prime	19 00	21 00
Heavy hogs	18 50	19 50
Shop hogs	21 00	[illegible]
Mutton, [illegible]	10 00	12 00
Do., light	17 00	19 00
Abattoir hogs	21 50	[illegible]
Lambs, lb.	0 21	0 [illegible]
Do., Spring, lb.	0 25	0 30

SUGAR PRICES—WHOLESALE.

Local wholesale quotations on Canadian refined sugar, Toronto delivery, in effect August 7:—

Lantic granulated	100 lbs.	$9.04
Royal Acadia granulated	100 lbs.	[illegible]
Redpath granulated	100 lbs.	8.79
Dominion crystal	100 lbs.	8.34
No. 1 yellow, all refiners	100 lbs.	7.94
No. 2 yellow	100 lbs.	7.91
No. 3 yellow	100 lbs.	7.74

TORONTO CATTLE MARKETS.

Trade in cattle was slow, good calves and lambs were in demand; hogs were steady.

Cattle choice	11 00	12 00
Butcher cattle, choice	11 00	11 75
Butcher cattle, medium	9 75	10 25
Butcher cattle, common	8 00	8 50
Butcher cows, choice	8 25	8 75
Butcher cows, medium	7 25	7 75
Butcher bulls	6 50	9 25
Feeding steers	7 00	9 [illegible]
Stockers, choice	7 00	8 25
Stockers, light	6 00	6 50
Milkers, choice	65 00	120 00
Springers, choice	40 00	120 00
Sheep, ewes	6 00	10 00
Bucks and culls	5 00	7 50
Lambs	16 00
Hogs, fed and watered	17 00
Calves	8 00	14 75

OTHER MARKETS.

WINNIPEG GRAIN EXCHANGE

Fluctuations yesterday on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange were as follows:

	Open	High.	Low.	Close
Wheat—
Oct.	2 [illegible]	2 [illegible]	2 [illegible]	2 [illegible]
Oats—
Oct.	a0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Dec.	b0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]	0 [illegible]
Flax—
Oct.	3 [illegible]	3 [illegible]	3 [illegible]	3 [illegible]
Dec.	3 31

a—To 65 1-8c sold. b—To 61 1-4c sold.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKETS.

Minneapolis.—Wheat—September, $2.25; cash—No. 1 Northern, $2.90 to $3. Corn—No. 3 white, 63 to 70c. Flour—Unchanged. Bran—$35.50 to $38.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKETS.

Duluth.—Wheat—No. 1 Northern, $2.90, nominal; No. 2 do., $2.85, nominal; no futures. Linseed—$3.35; September, October and November, $3.35.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Cattle, receipts 10,000.

Market firm.

Beeves	7 60	14 15
Western	[illegible]	11 [illegible]
Stockers and feeders	5 90	9 [illegible]
Cows and heifers	4 80	11 50
Calves	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hogs, receipts 25,000.
Market steady.
Light	14 90	16 65
Mixed	15 05	16 40
Heavy	14 90	16 65
Rough	14 90	15 10
Pigs	11 25	14 25
Bulk of sales	15 60	16 25
Sheep, receipts 9,000.
Market steady.
Wethers	7 50	10 65
Lambs, native	[illegible]	[illegible]

BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

East Buffalo, Report.—Cattle, receipts 250; slow.

Veals, receipts 50; firm; $5 to $15.50.

Hogs, receipts 300; active and strong. Heavy and mixed $17 to $17.15; yorkers $16.25 to $17; light yorkers $15.25 to $15.50; pigs $15 to $15.25; roughs $14.75 to $15; stags $12.50 to $13.50.

Sheep and lambs, receipts light; steady and unchanged.

MONTREAL MARKETS

Montreal, Report.—The offerings at the Canadian Pacific stock yards this morning were 900 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs 400 hogs and 300 calves. Prices were very firmly maintained, in some instances higher figures prevailing than on Monday. There was an increased demand for sheep and lambs. The demand for calves, which had fallen off somewhat, was also improved. The market for hogs was strong.

Quotations: Choice steers $9.50; good steers $[illegible] to $9; choice butcher cows $[illegible] to $8; good cows $6.50 to $7; butcher bulls $6 to $7; cutter cattle $6 to $6.50. Canners cattle $5 to $5.50.

Sheep $8.00 to $9.00; lambs, spring, $14 to $14.50.

Milk fed calves $10 to $11; grass fed calves $5 to $[illegible].

Choice select hogs, off cars $17; heavy weights $[illegible] sows $14 to $15.

A Bird Joker.

A most surprising Australian bird is the kookooburra or laughing jackass. All at once in the quiet bush come loud peals of uproarious, mocking laughter. One is not inclined to join in the merriment—it all seems as foolish and weird as if an idiot boy were disturbing a congregation in church. When the source of the laughter is located it turns out to be a silly looking bird, with clumsy, square body and open mouth, sitting unconcernedly on a stump.—National Geographic Magazine.

A royal Halotgas. Emperor Hsun Tung—What time is it Nicholas, Constantine, Manuel, Abdul Hamid, the ex-khedive, the ex-shah, et al. Time to abdicate. Kaisers Wilhelm and Carl—Oh! What a line!—Milwaukee Journal.

Through Many Trials

"For I know, dear Dick," the letter reads, "that to you rank and title are mere tiresome appendages, when one desires, like you, above all things, liberty. Neither have you, like me, a supreme reason to desire them that you may lay them down along with yourself in humble devotion at the shrine of a goddess. This will, of course, seem ridiculous in your eyes, but it will not fail to touch your heart, which has always been kind to me—so kind that I trespass on it more freely than I would do on any other human creature's kindness—when I tell you, on my honor, I have placed all on this last throw of the dice. I am half mad with love and misery together. The loveliest girl in England and fortune and happiness might be mine in a brief month or two if I could get rid of my creditors—they are ravening wolves by this time, Dick—conciliate my stern relative for ever and ever; he could not resist my queen any more than I have done. In a word, it is life or death with me, Dick, and I am in a desperate strait; and if you and I together can achieve this last feat—if I could represent myself as the sole heir—you and I sharing alike, of course, the half of the kingdom by and by to reward you for surrendering what I know you do not prize—if—if all this could be done! Oh, Dick, help me, though you are neither maddened with debts nor tortured by an almost hopeless love.

"Ever the same to you as you are to me; friends till death,

"R. H. D."

"He wants me to efface myself—to change my name—to disappear as one dead and forgotten," Dumaresq says, slowly. "I see that. I did not think it of you, Richard, lad. Well, never mind—'Mad with love and misery!' Poor lad! poor lad! He cannot think of me. Perhaps, in a like case, if such could ever be mine, I might act as he is acting. He wants me to leave England—to disappear so utterly that the old man, my uncle, and every one may believe me dead. 'Mad with love and misery!'—well, Richard, lad, that is not so incomprehensible to me as the rest of your letter. Maybe I can comprehend what it means even better than you. It may be that I shall grant your request, and steep myself head and shoulders in a last piece of stupidity which will banish me from the sight of every living soul who knows me or cares for me, or—for whom I care. Yes, it may be that I will agree to your wishes and lend myself to the achievement of your ends, and, again, it may not be."

His dreary soliloquy ceases as he lifts his eyes and sees, at the further end of the broad sanded walk that runs by the wall and the close-clipped privet hedge, a tall, slender young figure in a soft gray gown.

She has come from behind an old-fashioned strip of shrubbery—lavender bushes, lilacs and laburnums, which screen the approach to the yard door—the gardener's entrance, and she has her garden hat on, and her little garden basket is hanging on her arm, but she walks on without gathering a flower, without raising her eyes, or noticing, by a smile, the frolics of her gray kitten, who has come out for an airing on his own account, and is dancing sidewise along the path before his mistress. She walks on until she is within a few yards' distance of the hawthorne knoll, which rises on a steep little bank above the path, and at whose further side, completely screened from her sight by the gnarled trunk of the old rose hawthorn trees, Dumaresq is lying watching her, unwilling to stay, and yet unwilling to betray his presence by rising or speaking. She seats herself on the pathside of the knoll, however, and remains there so long and so silently that Dumaresq at last feels constrained to creep up to the top of the bank and look over, and, seeing Imogene sitting there still, the absurdity of the situation almost makes him laugh aloud, and so incautiously, as he tries to rise and walk away unseen, he strikes one of the thickly blossomed boughs, and the "rosy snow" falls in showers on Imogene's hat and dress, and she starts up and sees Dumaresq coming round the further side of the knoll with the air of a man who had just been doing a long walk.

"What a lovely afternoon, Miss Trefusis," he begins, with conventional enthusiasm, "and the flowers are really—really—they—what is the matter?" he asks, hurriedly, in quick, low tones. "At least—I mean—I beg your pardon—I should say—I hope that nothing serious is the matter?"

For the fair, glad young face is clouded with trouble, and the sunny eyes are dimmed with the tears that have wetted their long, dark lashes.

"Nothing serious, I might say, nothing at all, with truth," Imogene replied, rather confusedly, and it goes to his heart like a knife to see again the sudden effort at proud composure, the slight, haughty flush and averted eyes as she meets his anxious gaze.

The anxious gaze changes instantly to one proud and composed as her own, and with a slight smile, raising his hat apologetically, Dumaresq is passing on, when Imogene speaks, with a swift, sweet smile of friendliness that makes him ashamed of his sensitiveness.

"Only what I ought to be glad of, I suppose," she says, with the tremulous smile that is akin to tears. "papa has had a letter from Aunt Althea, you know, and—Evelyn—my sister—is going to be married!"

"My prophetic soul!" mutters Dumaresq. Aloud, he says: "That is usually considered the best of good news, Miss Trefusis, is it not?"

"Yes," she says, wistfully, "and I suppose I ought to be pleased. Evelyn has been immensely admired, Aunt Althea says. Evelyn is very beautiful, Mr. Dumaresq, don't you think so? and she has had already 'more than one offer of marriage,'" Imogene says, stammering a little with shyness and girlish dignity commingled, "and so Aunt Althea says she has accepted one of her lovers, and will be married about the end of the season."

"Who is the gentleman?" Dumaresq asks, carelessly, with a feeling of scornful amusement at the correctness of his diagnosis of the beauty's character.

"A man of very good family, heir to a title and a large fortune, Aunt Althea says," Imogene answers, earnestly and simply, "but his name is to be a secret until he comes down in person to propose for Evelyn to papa. You know, Evelyn wishes to keep her engagement quite a secret, Aunt Althea says."

"It occurs to me," Dumaresq says, mentally, "that Aunt Althea has had more to say in the matter than anybody else. I wonder what is the true reason for keeping her engagement quite a secret? I wish your sister every happiness, Miss Trefusis," he says, gravely, "and I trust her future will be as bright as she can desire it to be. But this marriage will bring changes."

"Yes," Imogene says, slowly, and looks down, and he sees the color mounting up into her pale cheek, and sees again the dark pure eyes are full of tears. "Yes, it will bring changes, and I can't tell you how I dread them, and how miserable the thought of them makes me!"

"Makes you miserable? How?" he asks, and involuntarily he draws nearer; involuntarily there comes a ring of passion in his low, intense tones, a gleam of passion in his eyes.

"Because Aunt Althea says——" falters Imogene, and she had to wipe away the tears lest they fall.

"I should like to be a tyrannical king, and condemn 'Aunt Althea' to have a small piece cut off the end of her tongue!" thinks Dumaresq, savagely.

"Aunt Althea says," repeats Imogene, looking up more confidently and speaking more freely in relief at having found a listener to her tale of girlish woes, "that as soon as Evelyn is married and established, I shall have to go up to London to stay with Aunt Althea and with Evelyn——"

"Until you are married and established!" Dumaresq interrupts, and the accent of passion in his tones, the light and fire in his eyes, is not so well concealed now, but that she vaguely perceives it.

"No, no, not that!" she says confusedly, unable almost to think, in the tumult of feeling that oppresses her, as it did the memorable day when Dumaresq had saved her life—a mingling of pain and pleasure, shame and bewilderment, that is half terror, half delight. "Not that; but I do not care, do not like to have to go away from home for a long time and leave Lionel, and have to go into society; for, of course, Aunt Althea would make me do everything which Evelyn has done," Imogene says, in hopeless parenthesis, "and shut me up in London all the summer time, and make me be presented, and—and I dread and detest," the girl says, wildly, "being given over to Aunt Althea to make a fashionable woman of me. And now that Evelyn will be a great lady and a leader of society she will agree with Aunt Althea in everything, and she will be quite altered, and will not be like my sister any more. I shall dread Evelyn almost as much as Aunt Althea," Imogene says, shivering with excitement, "and when I told papa that I should not care to leave home, that I was far happier here than I could be anywhere, he was quite displeased, and said Aunt Althea had my interest at heart and was my best friend, and I must do as she wished. I wish Lionel was of age," Imogene says, fairly bursting into childish tears, "for then he would take me away, and we should go and live in some little house together. Papa would never insist on giving me up, I know."

"But, surely," Dumaresq says, quietly, and his face is white to the lips with the effort he is making to keep himself well in hand, to keep the curb steadily on the wild spirit that is striving for mastery within him, "surely, Miss Trefusis, if your future be as bright as your sister's, and there is no reason why it should not be, with a titled, wealthy lover and husband in the perspective—what more can the heart of woman desire?"

ROYAL YEAST
MAKES PERFECT BREAD

"I don't want a titled, wealthy husband," Imogene says, crimsoning. "I should hate him."

"It is an odd coincidence, Miss Trefusis," he says, changing the subject, not because there is danger in it, but from a wish to reciprocate confidence, it may be, "that my letter contained, not exactly matrimonial news, but what some foolish people think is a necessary precursor of matrimony, news of falling in love. My letter from my cousin tells me he has fallen in love, unhappily for him, I should say, as the lady is as ambitious as she is high-bred and beautiful, and naturally desires golden temptations before she commits the folly of falling in love. Women are far more sensible than men in this way."

"Ambitious and high-bred?" repeats Imogene, looking at him with wide-open eyes of amazement. "Who is she, then?"

And Dumaresq with a mingled thrill of recklessness and dismay, perceiving how he has committed himself, answers briefly and confusedly:

"She is, by what he says, I can judge, above him in position."

"Above him in position," echoes Imogene, with a faint little smile of good-natured humor and skepticism. "What is your cousin's position, then, may I ask?"

Faint and slight as the smile is, with the brightest glimmer of scorn in her face for what she supposes is the absurd ambition of some honest tradesman's or some poor professional man's daughter looking down contemptuously on a worthy man's humble standing, it stings Dumaresq into an expression of the recklessness and defiance that abides with him.

"He is a soldier, as I was; a gentleman, as I was once," he says, in a low, harsh voice.

"Indeed!" Imogene says, but though her face flushes and her eyes brighten as she looks away from him into the depths of the hawthorn branches, with their flakes of rosy blossom, her tone is very cold and skeptical yet. "Do you mean," she persists, and the cold tones, with their added touch of scorn, tremble oddly, as she speaks "that your cousin is a gentleman in conduct and character, or that he is a man of position and education, and of good family?"

"I mean that he is heir to a good name and a good fortune," Dumaresq retorts, rashly and quickly, and then, with this unconscious repetition of Imogene's words, a sort of electric flash of intelligence seems to reveal to him Evelyn Trefusis' unknown wooer, his cousin Richard's unknown inamorata.

But as his eyes nervously seek Imogene's face, the gladness and brightness, the sweet flush of sympathy which greets him there, makes him forget all else.

"I am so glad," she says, hurriedly, and in low, unsteady tones, as if her breath fails her. "But—but you ought to have told us. We knew from the first—Lionel and I—that you were much above the position you came to fill—that you were a gentleman, and as well-bred as any of our friends. We said so Lionel and I."

One moment his temptation assails him terribly, with wild, merciless urging.

"Tell her the truth!—break your mad, boyish oath. Tell her the blood in your veins is good enough to mingle with hers. Tell her the name you can give her is as high as her own; tell her you are no unmeet wooer for even her fair hand! Fling every other consideration aside—thrust all the world aside for the heaven of her sweet eyes and her lips of love!"

One moment he stands dizzily looking at her, forgetting that she can read his passion even in her swift, timid glances.

One license he does take, half unconsciously, as the spirit within him struggles madly for liberty.

He lays his hand on her arm, and the touch of the strong, shapely hand seems to burn into her soft, cool arm like fire.

"Does it matter to you what or who I am?" he asks in hoarse, suppressed tones.

He might have besought her there and then for a reply—he might have wooed her in spite of the half terrified emotion that makes her shrink from him, and the burning blushes and frowns of maidenly shyness and displeasure that change the pale, lily-like beauty of her delicate, spiritual face into sudden womanliness, full of glow and spirit of pride; he might have wooed her, rough soldier as he is—gentle, high-bred child as she is—wooed her successfully, won her with all her heart's first passionate, girlish love, ay, in a few words more, in another close handclasp or one touch of his lips. He knows it and feels it in spite of those haughty frowns and burning blushes. But in that one moment, while his fingers' magnetic pressure is thrilling through her veins, and her sweet face droops, and her eyes droop under the influence of his passionful gaze—in that moment there comes the slight crunch of a footstep on the gravel, the noiseless glimmer of a fawn-colored cashmere gown, and at their side, just beneath the boughs of the hawthorn, appears the tall, angular figure—the pale, grave face, with its bands of gray hair and close net cap—of Miriam Lilly!

CHAPTER IX.

"Thou must know, dear child, the great difference there is between his station in life and thine—as the world looks on such matters. So it is no real kindness to Richard Dumaresq that thou shouldst be so friendly with him as to make him forget it; and I am sure thy father would be displeased if he knew."

This is all that Miriam Lilly says in the way of reproof to Imogene concerning the scene under the boughs of the hawthorn upon which she had intruded. Perhaps because she knows Imogene so well, and knows that behind the sweet humility and patience there is a reserve of haughtiest pride and self-esteem against any trespass upon that delicate, sensitive womanly pride.

Even in that moment of embarrassment and agitation her patrician nature asserted itself; and it was with a composed face, from which the warm flushes had fled, that she haughtily asked Mrs. Lilly how it was she came there.

"I neither saw you nor heard you," Imogene says, sternly confronting her: "You have almost startled me."

Dumaresq's hand has instantly dropped from her arm, and, manlike, he cannot control or compose himself as she has done, but has fallen back a pace, drawing his breath hard, and his rapid series of fervent aspirations concerning Miriam Lilly (the very mildest of which would whirl her into space, or transmit her to the furthest coast of Kamscatka) exceedingly visible on his countenance, until Imogene, with almost her usual bright smile, says, quietly:

"To change the subject from what we were speaking of just now—about papa's letter, Mr. Dumaresq — come up on the terrace as we go in and I will show you the carnations I propagated myself. Old Mrs. Caerlyon gave the two cuttings. No, no, not this one"—touching the great, fragrant crimson one at her throat, and drawing it out from among the laces, she hands it to him carelessly, but a beautiful pale rose variety with some specks of crimson. I am very proud of my success in rearing them; Mrs. Caerlyon did not think I could. Have you seen them, Mrs. Lilly?"

And so she brings them to the flower border, and shows them her carnations; and after they talk about floriculture—all more or less vaguely, it is true—and walk toward the house, she parts from them sedately, and goes into the drawing-room to practice on the piano-forte, leaving Dumaresq with the carnation in his hand, and Miriam Lilly, her stern face deeply lined and flushed with troubled color, gazing anxiously at him.

"What dost thou mean by this, Richard?" she asks, almost entreatingly, though she strives to say it coldly and menacingly.

"Mean by what?" he asks, defiantly smiling.

"By that!" Miriam Lilly says, sharply, in her agitation, pointing indignantly at the spray of carnation.

"By this," he laughs, softly, and looking straight into her stern, displeased face, he raises the flower to his lips and kisses it passionately over and over again. "Nothing but what you saw yourself, that it was given to me by her own hands, and so—is as precious as my heart's best blood!"

(To Be Continued).

What Makes Business Success.

"There is always a premium in business on the man who does his work painstakingly," says J. O. Armour in the 'American Magazine, "with completeness and finality. He is the man who will be trusted with more and more responsibility, up to the limit of his capacity. The man who informs himself adequately about his firm, its methods, policies and its products, who does his work so well that no one needs follow him up to match the ragged edges, is on the safest, surest and shortest road to achievement."

Modiste Wisdom.

The heavier the fabric the plainer the garment's cut.

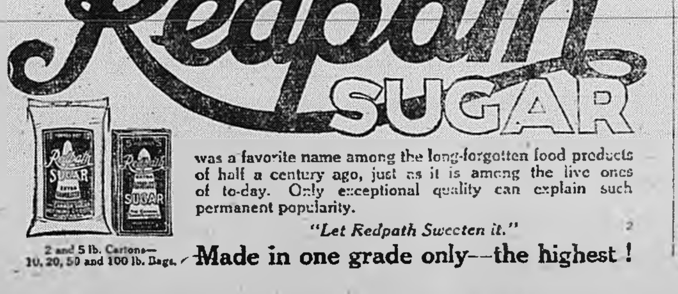
Tucks and Georgette just naturally go together.

Silks and pleats agree beautifully.

Filmy materials like to be draped.

Organdy runs to gathers

"That girl is certainly pretty," said Wigwag. "Yes, her lips are like cherries garnishing the cocktails of her kisses," rhapsodized Guzzler.



Redpath
SUGAR
was a favorite name among the long-forgotten food products of half a century ago, just as it is among the live ones of to-day. Only exceptional quality can explain such permanent popularity.
"Let Redpath Sweeten it."
2 and 5 lb. Cartons—
10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.
Made in one grade only—the highest !

"SALADA"
Tea is Delicious and Pure
Sealed Packets Only - Never in Bulk
E218
BLACK, MIXED or NATURAL GREEN

IN AN ANDEAN CAPITAL.

They Have Queer Ideas About Bathing Places in Colombia.

Ibague, capital of the Columbian province of Tolima, claims 2,300 souls, but the count takes much for granted. It is a square cornered town of almost wholly thatched one storey buildings, its wide streets atrociously cobbled and its few sidewalks worn perilously slippery and barely wide enough for two feet at once.

A stream of crystal clear water gurgling down every street through cobbled gutters, lulling the travel weary to sleep and furnishing a convenient means of washing photographic films. We drank less often, however, after we had strolled up to the end of the mountain and found three none too handsome ladies bathing in the reservoir.

It is a peaceful, roomy place where every one has unlimited space on the grassy, gentle slope to put up his little chalky, straw roofed cottage, yet all toe the street line as if fearful of missing anything that might unexpectedly pass. Foreigners seem to be a great novelty, and I could find no satisfactory reason why so many Ibaguenos were blind unless they had overindulged themselves in the national game of staring.—Harry A. Franck in Century Magazine.

Sick Room Decalogue.

1. Thou shalt not be noisy.
2. Thou shalt not remain long enough to tire the sick one.
3. Thou shalt not talk of the sickness or death of others.
4. Thou shalt not wear a long face, but smile.
6. Thou shalt not act in a quick, nervous manner.
7. Thou shalt not permit the patient to talk too much.
8. Thou shalt come and go quietly.
9. Thou shalt occasionally bring some little token of the outer world, if it be but a single flower, to cheer the hours when there are no visitors.
10. Thou shalt make thy visit so pleasant that the patient will want thee again.

SUMMER COMPLAINTS
KILL LITTLE ONES
At the first sign of illness during the hot weather give the little one Baby's Own Tablets, or in a few hours he may be beyond cure. These Tablets will prevent summer complaints if given occasionally to the well child and will promptly cure these troubles if they come on suddenly. Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept in every home where there are young children. There is no other medicine as good and the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that they are absolutely safe. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Chats With the Doctor

(By A PHYSICIAN)

ALBINISM.

Albinos are persons born with a partial or total absence of pigment in the skin, hair, and eyes. The condition is sometimes hereditary, but more commonly the albino is born of normal healthy parents. Of the cause little or nothing is known.

The skin of a complete albino is white, slightly pinkish, where the veins show through it. The hair is softer and silkier than is normal, and is either quite white or slightly tinged with yellow. The pupils of the eyes are red and the iris pink, and as the absence of pigment leaves the retina unprotected there is usually "photophobia" or unusual sensitiveness to light. The eyesight altogether is weak and abnormal.

SLEEP.

To get the full benefit from sleep three things are necessary. First, the amount of sleep should be sufficient; second, it should be undisturbed, and third, the conditions should be as perfect as possible. It is often difficult or impossible to have all these at once, but in such a case the mind and body will not be refreshed to the full.

The amount of sleep required varies with the age and with the individual habit. As a rough rule, the amount necessary diminishes as age increases, a baby requiring nearly its full twenty four hours, while the elderly sleep only a few short snatches in the day and night. The very old revert to the conditions of childhood, and dose away most of their time. Only personal experience can teach the exact amount of sleep required for each individual.

The conditions under which the hours of sleep are passed deserve a good deal of care and attention. They include such things as the amount and kind of food eaten, at the [illegible] meal and its time; the amount and kind of exercise taken; the room, bed and bedding, and perhaps [illegible] the ventilation of the bedroom. The windows of a bedroom should never be shut, night or day, [illegible]

The bed itself should not be too soft, but elastic enough for comfort and adequately to support the body while the muscles are inert. The bedclothes should be light but warm, a down quilt of some kind being the ideal top-covering, from its combination of these qualities. Linen sheets, though cool and luxurious in summer, are not really quite so healthy as those of cotton, and they easily become clammy.

The bed should not be placed so that the light from the window shines into the sleeper's eyes. Such a position can almost always be avoided. It should be out of the direct draught, but should have air passing freely round and over it.

METATARSALGIA.

War conditions and the various increased physical and mental strains incidental to them have brought into prominence several rare deformities and diseases hitherto largely confined to text-books. Amongst these is the abnormality of the foot which produces the painful symptom of metatarsalgia.

The deformity concerned is, as the name suggest, an improper placing of the metatarsal bones of the foot, the latter being in consequence flattened across the tread instead of being slightly arched from side to side. It must not be confused with ordinary "flat-foot," in which the arch affected is that from front to heel—the "instep." The flattening of the arch results in unnatural pressure being placed on the heads of the metatarsal bones. These, with the nerves which pass between them, become inflamed and intensely painful, so that wearing any kind of boot or shoe, or walking on the affected part becomes impossible. The pain is intense and burning, most like an acute toothache, and is first felt in the toe joint (usually that of third toe) thence spreading to the whole foot and up the leg. Usually the removal of the boot or shoe and rest to the foot will give immediate relief for the time, but a return is at once experienced when the boot is put on again.

Metatarsalgia is difficult to treat, and various appliances are still being tried for its relief. In some cases operation and the removal of part of the head of the metatarsal bone affected has been found successful, but this is the case only where the single toe is clearly affected. A simple remedy and one which often gives satisfactory results, is a rubber pad fixed in the inside of the boot sole, just behind the point where the metatarsal bones come into contact with the sole. This removes some of the pressure, and is often effectual. An arched support is also made, much like that worn for ordinary flat-foot, but running across the foot. This also suits some cases.

The condition itself was comparatively little known until long route-marches and days spent on foot brought out every weak place in the feet of the unaccustomed soldier. Thus its treatment is still rather in the experimental stage. Boots seem to aggravate the condition by pressure in the instep, forcing the heads of the affected bones even more firmly downwards.

THROWING BOOMERANG.

Easy to Learn and is More Knack Than Science.

The boomerang is thrown overhand. Grasping the small end in his right hand, the man moves his hand backward as far as he can over the shoulder; then he brings it forward with all the force possible, letting the boomerang slip from his grasp when his hand is well forward [illegible]

Throwing the boomerang is more of a knack than a science. It may be learned by any American or European who gives the time and patience for practice. However, only native Australians acquire marked ability in making the boomerang turn exactly where they wish. The natives are not averse to using the boomerang as an American policeman uses his night stick. The native has the advantage over the "cop." He can deal an effective blow without being near the victim.

[illegible] implements used by the native Australians [illegible] weapons [illegible] spear throwers. The spear thrower resembles a [illegible] with its sides turned up [illegible]. At the [illegible] there is a [illegible] against which the [illegible] of the butt of his spear. In this way he can get considerable additional [illegible] for throwing the spear because of the increased purchase.

"I amassed by industry the fortune which you squander in idleness," said the reproachful father. "Well," replied the gilded youth, "that's the rule. 'Business before pleasure.'"—Washington Star.

Fruit Wanted !

Bring us now any quantity of

Cherries
Black Currants
Gooseberries
and Raspberries

Please note that we will receive fruit

Every day after 5 o'clock

At our BRICK WAREHOUSE

North of the Library. Don't bring it to the store as the service is arranged for, as above.

NO BLIGHTED FRUIT WANTED THERE IS A HEAVY PENALTY FOR HANDLING SAME

Falconer Bros.

THE HOME OF GOOD GROCERIES

What About Your Shoe Requirements ?

We know that leather and cloth of all kinds are soaring, and are likely to go a great deal higher, but we are selling the best stock of boots and shoes that has been in this town for years at very reasonable prices.

Ladies! you don't have to pay $7 and $15 for a pair of boots, unless you go in for Criminal Extravagance. We are showing excellent values, 8 and 9 inch tops, in kid, patent, gun metal at from $4.50 to $5. Lower tops from $2.50 to $3.50 good enough for any lady to go anywhere.

Then we have the kind that our men and boys are wearing in the harvest fields and the trenches from $2.50 to $5.00

This is not a slaughter sale, but our prices are lower than so called sale prices. The discerning public is picking up those bargains every day. We invite you to share in these snaps.

Bring your butter and eggs
And get the great big prices

D. GEDDES & CO.

Sunlight Soap

There is pleasure at every stage in the use of Sunlight. In the washing—for the work is greatly lightened. In the ironing—for the clothes have such a fresh, sweet air of newness. In the wearing—for the clothes have inherited the exquisite purity of Sunlight itself — and are clean indeed.

A $5,000 guarantee attests the purity of Sunlight Soap. All grocers sell it.

SLASHING PRICES

The hot weather responsible for this big cut in prices. We offer our big stock of

MIDDIES

Ladies' Misses', Children's also Children's Dresses to go at

20 per cent. Off

These goods are the best money can buy, and our offer is a big bargain.

36c for eggs
36c for butter

B. HILKER

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

Tells how to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn or callus the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn or callus, root and all, lifts off with the fingers.

Freezone dries the moment it is applied, and simply shrivels the corn or callus without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but will positively rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or hardened callus. If your druggist hasn't any freezone he can get it at any wholesale drug house for you.

UNDERWOOD NEWS

Get your gasoline at The Hardware.

Save wood and coal, use an oil stove: We have some coal oil stoves which will save the women work, and save money too. Thede & Brill.

Miss Mary Drummond is holidaying in Toronto.

Mr. Bert Russell is spending a week in Hamilton.

Rev. C. McLean, wife and family are on a visit to his mother, Mrs. C. McLean 10th con.

Miss Christina Wittig and Miss Sadie MacKay, are spending holidays at Inverhuron the guests of Mrs. Oliver.

Mr. Geo. W. Roppel, had the misfortune to be badly kicked in the face by a horse last Thursday, but at latest reports is slowly recovering.

Mr. and Mrs Geo McIntyre Toronto, and Mr. Jno. L. McIntyre Guelph, are visiting their brothers on the 4th.

Mrs. P. A. MacKay, spent the past week with her sister in Port Elgin.

Mr. Hugh D. McLean had his hand crushed in the sling ropes last week which lays him off work for a while. His neighbours came and helped him last week at the haying.

Rev. H. Roppell is to conduct the service in the Methodist church next sabbath.

Miss M. Drummond and Miss Lois Blakely, went to Toronto Tuesday.

Mr. Will Drummond, of Toronto who spent a week or so with friends here, re- to that city Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs Alex McDougall of Hamilton are holidaying with friends in this locality.

Miss McKay, of Orono, is visiting at her home here.

Mr. Albert Coleman motored up from Clifford on Saturday to spend the week end at his home here.

Rev. Dr. Martin of Knox Church, Stratford, conducted service in the Presbyterian church here on Sunday morning week in the absence of Rev McNab, who will be away during August on his holidays. Rev. Mr. Paddon Milverton, occupied the pulpit last Sunday morning, and Rev. Mr. Linton, Pace, will preach the two following Sundays. The evening service has been discontinued for August.

Mrs. Lyman Keake arrived home last week after a motor trip to Springfield, London, Toronto and Hamilton.

BURGOYNE AND DISTRICT

There was a very large turn out at the church Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Strachan, the minister selected, conducted the services. His induction is to take place on the evening of September 4th.

Next Sunday is anniversary and rarer day Rev. Mr. Hilts, of Chesley will conduct the meeting and lecture on Monday evening following.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm Gowanlock from Bethune are visiting the Gowanlock families here.

The C. E. had an enjoyable picnic at Lake Huron Saturday afternoon.

Mr F. West, from Toronto, is visiting his sister Irene at Mr. Robert Esplen's.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Craig, of Paisley are visiting relatives in this district.

Interesting Demonstration

Ladies of the town and country to the number of fifty or sixty were at the library on Saturday afternoon to hear a practical demonstrator on canning and preserving

Miss Pritchard of Owen Sound proved a very capable and clever lecturer and demonstrator. With an oil stove and cooking utensils she gave one of the best demonstrations ever seen here. She canned beans, beets, tomatoes, raspberries and cherries in a most scientific manner, and what is best she made every women present take notes, and ask questions.

Altogether much good information was given out, and the government is making no mistake in Miss Pritchard.

There would have been more of the country ladies present, had the time not been so busy on the farms.

NORTH BRUCE

Hay was a fine crop and has been housed in good shape. Most of the fall wheat is in the stook.

The Ladies' Aid meeting was held at Mrs. Geo. Hawk's last Wednesday.

Misses Dora and Lulu Robinson of Hamilton, are holidaying with friends here.

Mrs. Robinson, Sr., has been in poor health the past week. Mrs. Chiley is staying with her.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Howe, spent Sunday with friends here.

Mrs. Willie Howe, has been on the sick list, but is recovering.

TURNER'S

Another year of the great world war gone, another year of yarning by our politicians, another year for politicians and the city man to tell the farmer how to raise twice the crop with half the help, and yet we go on hardly realizing the war is on, but for the boys who have left our homes. Harvesting would be a hard job indeed, but for the girls and women, who have heroically taken the places of the boys at war. We think the farms have produced well this year. Of course it is to the farmers' benefit as well as to the Empire's. It is quite common to see the women operating the binders and the mowers. They do it, though, because they believe it their duty, and not because it is a fad.

J. S. Schrank has purchased a Ford

The wheat is in the stook, and it is good.

Mrs. W. Cairns is visiting in Teeswater.

Mrs. R. Valear, Toronto, is visiting Mrs. Christie.

Mrs. John Gray of Sask., visited her uncle, A. Cairns.

$16 for hogs here on the 7th.

A. Dier has put in the Bell phone.

Dr. MacGillivray and family of Guelph, visited Alex Bell's.

Mr. Roppel, Elmira, and O. Schrank, Port Elgin, visited J. S. Schrank.

Many berry pickers have visited the patches. The crop was large.

Mr. and Mrs. McFarland and family motored from Toronto and visited Mr. and Mrs. Peter McKinnon.

Mrs. Anderson and little son, of Swift Current, Sask., are guests of Mrs. A. Rowand, Dunblane. Mrs. Anderson, who was formerly Miss Henderson, at one time taught the Dunblane school.

WILLOW CREEK

Last week three auto loads Y. P. A. members visited Chesley to be with ten other Alliances. A fine afternoon was spent. One of the features was a tug of war, in which the Bruce boys won. The champions were Milton Dahmer, W. Gottschalk, E. Kopas, F. Schnittker.

Haying is through, and it was a good crop Wheat is good, also oats and barley.

F. Schnittker reports potato stocks four feet two inches high.

Assignee's Notice to Creditors

In the matter of Albert Roy Knowles an insolvent; Notice is hereby given that Albert Roy Knowles of the Town of Southampton, in the County of Bruce, and Province of Ontario, Grocery man, has under R. S. O. Cap 134, made an assignment of all his estate, credits, and effects, to J. A. Chapman of Port Elgin, in the County of Bruce, Financial agent, for the general benefit of his creditors. A meeting of the creditors will be held at the Queen's Hotel in the village of Port Elgin, aforesaid, on Friday the 31st of August, 1917, at 3.30, P. M. to receive a statement of affairs, appoint inspectors and generally order the estate. Creditors are requested to file their claims with particulars and proofs as required by said act on or before the day of such meeting and notice is further given that after the 31st day of August, A. D. 1917, the assignee will proceed to distribute the estate among the persons entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which he then shall have notice and that he will not be liable for the estate to any person, of whose claim he shall not then have had notice.

J. A. Chapman, Assignee.

Port Elgin, August 11th 1917.

Paris Green ! Bug Death !

Look after those potatoes right away .

Hay Forks
Binder Twine
Screen doors & Windows
All sizes

Thomson's Hardware Store

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

HARVEST HELP EXCURSIONS

$12.00 to Winnipeg

August 21st and 30th. From stations Lyn, Ont. and west to Toronto inclusive.

August 24rd and 30th from stations Toronto and west in Ontario

For particulars as to tickets west of Winnipeg etc. apply to any Grand Trunk Ticket office.

J. S. Cameron, Agent, Port Elgin, Both telephones.

ANNUAL SUMMER SALE

Begins Saturday, August 18th, 1917
And Continues 'til Sat. Sept. 1st, 1917

A Great Two Weeks' Sale of Specials

THERE'S thousands of dollars worth of Up-to-date merchandise here that must be cleared out. A larger stock than ordinary, and in making prices for this Mighty Clearance Sale, we have not been afraid to cut all the profit off and then some more in many cases.

Young Men's Suit

Made of good wool tweed, medium and dark greys and browns. Sizes 33, 34 and 35.

Reg $13 lines, Sale price ...$9.75

Reg $15 lines, Sale price...$11.50

A few $19 and $20 suits, Sale price ...$15.50

Men's Tweed and Worsted Suits

Made of Foreign and domestic woollens in all the newest designs and patterns.

Reg $15 suits, sale price...$11.50

Reg $18 suits, sale price...$14.50

Reg $20 suits, sale price...$15.50

Special Savings on Boys' Suits

Liberal disco unt on all lines of boys' tweed and worsted suits. The boys will soon need new school suits, and it will pay you to buy them now

Men's Raincoats

Wool Paramatta coats good the year round. Splendid $14 value sale price...$10.00

Silk Ties

About 200 of this season's newest Half Dollar Ties, sale price 35c each, or 3 for $1.

Men's Trousers

At big reductions 50 pair. men's tweed pants at...$1.69

Men's Work Shirts

10 dozen men's blue chambray shirts, good $1.00 value, sale price ... 75 cents

Men's 75c shirts for ......55 cents

The Biggest Shoe Sale of the Season

Mens and Boys Fine and Work Shoes. It will pay you to Stock up now

Youth's solid leather shoe, sizes 11 to 13, splendid $2.25 values, sale price ...$1.65

Youth's gun metal calf, sizes 11 to 13, regular $3. sale price...$2.25

Boys' shoes, sizes 1 to 5,

Boys' box kip shoes, reg. $3.25, sale price ...$2.50

Boys' gun metal calf shoes, a splendid $4 line, sale price.. $3.35

These prices are less than manufacturer's present prices

Men's Work Shoes

Men's solid leather wax-split, worth now $4.25, special price...$3

Men's solid leather oiled, grain-tanned Ames-Holden's & Cotes make, worth now $5, sale price $4

Sterling Bros. Black Elk work shoes. This line is worth to-day $5.50 to $6. Sale price, ...$4.50.

Men's Fine Shoes

We have still some lines of Astoria shoes on hand which we are selling at $5 and $6 a pair. These shoes are worth to-day $8.50 and $9 a pair.

Other lines of men's fine shoes specially priced at big reductions, $2.50 up.

Men's Socks

At big savings

Men's cotton socks, sale price 10c a pair

Men's cotton and wool socks, sale price, 18c a pair

Men's fine black cotton socks. 15c a pair.

Men's black cashmere socks 25c a pair.

Men's light grey natural wool and worsted socks, 35c a pair.

Men's heavy gray wool socks, 25c a pair. Also 35c a pair

BUY YOUR WINTER SUPPLY OF HEAVY SOCKS NOW. IT WILL PAY YOU.

Dress Shirts for Men

94 cents for men's shirts of $1.25 value. These shirts are mostly light grounds with neat stripes of black, mauve or blue. Have attached stiff cuffs and neck band sizes 14 to 17.

Fleet Foot Canvass Outing Shoes At Cost

All $2 lines, sale price $1.50

$1.75 lines, sale price...$1.25

$1.25 lines, sale price...$1.00

$1.00 lines, Sale price......75c

Sale will end Saturday night, Sept. 1st

It matters not where you live, or what the weather conditions may be, it will pay you to be on hand in order to secure your full share of the goods.

Every purchase made during this sale is guaranteed as represented, or money cheerfully refunded.

F. R. BARBER

MEN'S AND BOYS' COMPLETE OUTFITTERS

A Dollar Will Buy More Than a 100 Cents' Worth at Pattison's

We have a large stock of furniture. A good deal of it was bought before the advance in prices, so NOW is your time to buy if you want to be a partaker in these extraordinary values.

Don't forget we are exclusive agents in this vicin- for the famous Singer Sewing machine also White and Raymond models for which we carry repairs oil and needles.

Call in and inspect our stock and be convinced that you get better values in furniture a Pattison's than any where else you can buy.

: : J. W. Pattison : :

Furniture Dealer and Undertaker

Why He Threw at Saul

Andrew Carnegie tells of an old Scotch lady who had no great liking for modern church music.

One day she was expressing her dislike of the singing of an anthem in her own church, when a friend said:

"Why, that anthem is an ancient one. David sang it to Saul."

"Weel, weel " said the old woman. "I now for the first time understan' why Saul threw his javelin at David when the lad sang for him."

CENTRAL BUSINESS COLLEGE

Stratford, Ontario

Ontario's Best Business College
FALL TERM FROM SEPT. 4TH

Commercial, Shorthand and Telegraphy departments.

We have thorough courses, experienced instructors, and we place graduates in positions. The Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalog.

D. A. McLACHLAN, PRINCIPAL

Subscribe for The Times and get all the local news.

The Port Elgin Times.

47th YEAR—NO. 35 PORT ELGIN, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 29, 1917 $1.50 PER YEAR $2.00 PER YEAR TO UNITED STATES

Gunner Angus McIntosh Killed in Action

Word was received last week that Gunner Angus McIntosh, well known here, had been killed in France.

He enlisted in the artillery at Kingston and had been in France over a year.

He was 23 years of age and was studying for the ministry at the time of enlistment having attended High School at Port Elgin as a young lad.

He is survived by two sisters Mrs. Geo. Black and Mrs. Doll, also four brothers, Andrew and William in Amabel township; John in Saugeen and Thomas in Arran.

Corporal Percy Nelson Seriously Wounded

Word has been received by Mr. H. Nelson, that his son, who is corporal in a western regiment in France, has been seriously wounded.

No further word has been received as yet, as to the nature of the wounds.

Miss Keillor, of Toronto, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. D. J. McLeod.

Miss Della Campion, of Owen Sound, visited Mrs. Charles Johnson this week.

Mr. Wm Lamont left Tuesday for a trip to Chinook Alberta.

Samples of Marquis Spring Wheat, grown by Mr. Tucker, Lake Range, show exceptionally well filled heads.

Many friends will be pleased to learn that Mr. James Keillor is making good progress toward recovery after his very serious illness.

Services in the Presbyterian church were cancelled on Sunday, Rev. Mr. Mann was on holiday, and the members also took a holiday.

Rev. H. B. Christie preached an eloquent sermon in the Methodist church on Sunday morning to a large gathering. The evening service was cancelled.

Mr. James Keillor, B.A., of Toronto, leaves this week for his home, after watching at the bedside of his uncle the past few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tait, of Galt, and Mrs. John H. Stewart of Galt, were guests at Mr. George Jamieson's last week.

Mr. B. Jackson, of Toronto, motored up on Saturday, Master Rupert and Mrs. Jackson returning with him on Monday after spending a few weeks with Mrs. J. A. Chapman, who accompanied them to attend the Exhibition.

CONDENSED ADVERTISING

FARM FOR SALE—Adjoining the village of Port Elgin, contains 194 acres, Good orchard and buildings, 19 acres of fall wheat in. If not sold will be to rent for a term of years. Apply to Mrs. John Forrester, Port Elgin, or Mr. Wm. Burgess, Solicitor. 35-t.f.

FOR SALE—The Andrew Sutherland property at the South End. Fine brick house, 7 rooms and shed. Good basement, also stable. Possession given immediately. Apply to Geo. S. Webb and James McEwing, executors. 26-tf.

WANTED—We are paying the highest prices for beefring hides. B. Zelkind, Port Elgin.

PHONOGRAPHS!

How nice it is to have music in your home. If you would like one just drop me a line. Very easy terms, from $21.00 up.

Louis Bloch's Music Store Owen Sound

DENTAL

W. F. POWER, D. D. S., Dentist, office over South End Store. Hours 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

MEDICAL

DR. F. H. WELLS, Office and residence on Green street, one door west of Bank of Hamilton.

W. J. CHAMBERS, M. D., L. R. C. P., L. M., Edinburgh. Office and residence "Lakeview Hall" opposite South End park Port Elgin.

DR. W. S. LAIRD, Oculist, Specialty in Nose and Throat diseases. Guaranteed all his fitting of glasses. Office hours Wednesday afternoons. Next to Metropolitan Bank

LEGAL

W. BURGESS, LL.B., Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public &c. &c. Office, Hutton's Block. Private and other funds to loan.

SOCIETIES

PORT ELGIN LODGE No. 429 G.R.C., A.F. & A.M. Regular communications in the Masonic Hall, Thursday on or before full moon, at 8 p. m. Visiting brethern cordially welcomed. George Chapman, W. M.; Jas. Smith, Sec'y.

DENOVO LODGE, No. 170, I.O.O.F., of Ontario, meets at 8 o'clock, p.m., every Monday in their hall in the Commercial Block. Art Harrison, N. G. T. Rankin, Rec.-Sec.; D. Geddes, Perm. Sec.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

J. A. CHAPMAN, Official Issuer of marriage licenses, Port Elgin, Ont. Office Muir Block.

R. C. CRAWFORD, Official Issuer of Marriage Licenses. Office at Drug Store, Port Elgin

UNDERTAKING

W. PATTISON, Funeral director and embalmer. Residence on premises. Rural Phone No. 23.

Gunner McMurray Well and Happy in the Fight

In a letter to his father here, Gunner Cecil McMurray says he is enjoying good health and that the mail comes to him in bunches sometimes, but always glad to get letters from home-folks. "The boxes are getting to me regularly, and I enjoy the contents very much. Do not worry if my letters are irregular, as we have lots of work to do here, and sometimes letter-writing is left off. "Well you see what I think of conscription, From my experience, in the army at the front (and it is not to much) I would never have it to say that I helped to force a man to take on the obligations a soldier's life presents, and it is my opinion that if the soldiers are given a vote Canada will not have conscription. Remember me to all the people at home.

160th in Quarantine

Reports are to hand from the boys of the 160th that many of the battalion are in quarantine again on account of an outbreak of diphtheria in the camp.

The epidemic is not serious, but the precautions of the army provide for strict quarantine in order that it may not spread

Pte. Stanley Harmon Wounded to Return Home

Mrs. Harmon has received word that her son Stanley, is coming home, and that his wounds are of such a nature that he will not be able to continue the fight.

Over a thousand soldiers arrived at Halifax Saturday, and Stanley is among them. He will be home very shortly, and word is expected daily. It is to be hoped that an organized effort will be made to fittingly honor the returned hero.

WILLIAM HUNTER
Appointed Good Roads superintendent for Bruce County.

Mr. Sutherland, of Sarnia, was visiting his parents here over the week end.

Mrs. Webb, of Greenock, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Albert Osborne.

Mrs. Chapman and son Jack, of London, are guests of Mrs. J. J. George.

D. C. Cavin, reports the following property changes this week. Mr. Lyman Kaake has sold his farm on the 8th to Mr. George Hood, the latter exchanging his property in Underwood for the farm. Mr. Kaake will move to Underwood, while Mr. Hood, who is teaching school at Welland at present, may take over the farm in the not distant future. Also Mr. John Falconer has sold his house on Goderich street to Mr. John B. McArthur. The latter will move here in December.

Exchange Sale Saturday Afternoon

D. C. Cavin will resume his monthly sales on Saturday Sept. 1st. Following are the articles to be offered: 2 year-old-heifer, 9 ewes and lambs, bedroom suite, single bed, spring and mattress, rockers, tables, sealers, churn, pictures, wash bench, bedsteads, hanging lamp, hall rack, coal heater, household furniture.

Fall term at the Northern Business College, Owen Sound, opens Sept. 3rd. Circulars free. C. A. Fleming, F.C.A., principal.

Be Particular

The particular housewife wants only the best in meats during the very hot weather, and that's the reason Eaton's butcher shop serves so many patrons with dainties in cold meats, lamb, beef, pork etc., We have also package soups, vegetables, etc. Phone your order to the Shop of Quality, A. E. Eaton, Prop

LADIES DEPARTMENT

See the splendid display in the Ladies' department in the following lines.

Ladies Underwear
Fine Hosiery
Corsets
Handkerchiefs

Falconer Bros.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

Monday is labor day and a holiday.

Ridgetown's tax rate is 40 4-10 mills this year.

Mr. Rowlands visited friends in Walkerton last week.

Miss Reba Veitch has been spending a holiday here.

Miss Mina Park has been spending a holiday in Paisley.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs Scanlan, are holidaying in Muskoka.

Mr. E. Vaupel is visiting his sons in the west.

Misses Mary and Clara Everitt have been visiting at Glamis.

Mr. H. Crowe was in Toronto on business last week.

Judge Klein spent the week-end with his brother here.

Misses Essie and Violet Themer of Kitchener, are holidaying with Mrs. Hallman.

Miss Galbraith and Mr. E. C. Goth, of Detroit, have been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Sayles.

Margaret Schwartz and Helen Dennis spent the week-end at Mr. Wismer's cottage.

Miss Flora McQuarrie, and little niece of Toronto are holidaying with Mrs. James McQuarrie.

At the present rate the cost of the war to every man, woman and child in Canada is $485 for the year.

Bailiff Briggs was in Southampton last Tuesday to sell the automobile at the Knechtel Bros. factory. A few bids were made on it but it was not sold.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kelp motored here from Port Elgin Sunday and spent the day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huck.—Walkerton Telescope

Mr. Gordon Salter of Windsor, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. L. Anderson is spending a few days with friends in Port Elgin—Walkerton Herald

The Brantford branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund has decided to enter action against all subscribers who though notified that they had not paid their subscription, have not yet done so.

Mrs. A. Lymburner, Owen Sound, and Mrs. McBride, Port Elgin, paid a visit to Caps. John and Mrs. McPherson last week.—Kincardine Reporter

Mr. and Mrs J. Hauser, Miss L. Dierlamm, Mr. M Dierlamm, spent Sunday last with Mr. and Mrs. D. Chappel, from Chesley.

Mr. J. S. Gordon, assistant general manager of the Bank of Hamilton, made a business call at the local branch here last week. He was formerly a manager of Port Elgin branch.

According to the Kincardine Reporter the letter "B" which appears on some oat leaves and to which reference was made in the Times last week, comes from an old Indian legend the Reporter says it was prevalent in the west during the Riel rebellion.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Mary E. Lyness formerly of Port Elgin, Ont. to Mr. Malcom McKinnon, of Moose Jaw, Sask. The marriage to take place quietly, early in September, in Central Methodist Church, Regina, Sask.

Mr. Atkinson, of Bruce Tp. while driving his car near Herman Schwass' on Sunday afternoon, had an upset, the car over turning. No one was seriously hurt, and with assistance the car was righted and the party proceeded. Some damage was done to the top.

When someone stops advertising someone stops buying. When someone stops buying, someone stops selling. When someone stops selling, someone stops making. When someone stops making someone stops earning. When everyone stops earning everybody stops buying. Keep going.

Myrtle Irene the three year old daughter of Hugh Graham, a well known Derby farmer residing near the village of Kilsythe, had one leg cut completely off below the knee and the main bone of the other cut through, when caught by the binder her father was operating in a wheat field. Mr. Graham had just made one round of the field and did not know that the child was in the grain, as it is taller than she, and he did not know of her presence until she screamed, when she received the injury.

Mr. Norman Robertson, County Treasure, received news of the fate of his son Capt. Eric Robertson, Royal Flying Corps, who is reported missing. A brief note from a fellow member of same air squadron says in part: "On the evening of July 12th; about 6.30 we left for the lines. About an hour later, when over the lines, an anti-air-craft gun struck your son's machine who was leading the formation. The machine was so damaged it went down out of control, falling over thirty thousand feet.

The Government traction engine is being introduced in Bruce County four of the machines having already arrived in different parts District Agricultural Representative N. C. McKay is giving demonstrations of their work in connection with ploughing. Coal oil is being used as fuel, but the engines of the type in use here are so constructed that gasoline can be used. At present prices the coal oil is the more economical. The department charges $4.80 per day which includes the engineer. On an average it will cost 75 to 90 cents per acre. The advantage to the farmer is not so much the price, which is a conservative one, but it saves help and the land can be ploughed in so much shorter time. Under present conditions time means money.

The schools open on Tuesday, September 4th,

Mr. J. J. George was in Toronto Saturday.

Miss Irma Stephenson leaves this week for Regina.

Eric McGillivray is on a trip to Vancouver.

Miss Margaret Lamont is visiting in Brucefield.

Mr. O. E. Klein and family have returned to Walkerton.

Mr. Frank Kidner, of The Hamilton Spectator, is a guest of Mr. D. Geddes.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Schoistker, Bruce Tp., on August 24th, a son.

Mrs. McNeill, of Paisley, visited Mrs. John Coulter last week.

Mr. Robert Ranney of Milverton, is visiting his son, here.

Miss Patricia Tuckett has been spending a holiday with Miss L. Northgrave.

Dr. Ferguson of Toronto, spent the week-end at R. D. Northgrave's.

Mrs. Jos. Spallon, of Cleveland, Ohio, is the guest of her father, H. Bolender.

Mrs. Wells of Cargill, spent a few days with Mrs. James Wells.

Mr. R. J. Ranney motored to Milverton last week.

Miss M. Swartz, and Miss E. Stackley, of Kitchener, were guests of Mrs. M. D. Hallman.

The Times will publish next week a letter from Ralph Geddes which will be of much interest to our subscribers.

Miss Edna Gordon, Toronto, who was the guest of Mrs. J. A. Chapman, returned home on Saturday,

Mr. and Mrs. D. Chappel attended the funeral of her father at Ayton on Wednesday.

Rev. Sawers, of Watford, Miss Jessie Cameron of Toronto, were visitors at Robt. Chalmers' last week.

If a fellow is on the job all the time he's more likely to get caught at it by the boss some day.

Miss McKinnon, of Tiverton, has returned home after spending a few days with Miss Sadie Martin.

Miss Violet Bean, of Listowel, is spending a few weeks with her grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. Berndt.

Pte. Harold Geddes, of Toronto, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Geddes.

Rev. Dr. McGillivray and family have returned to their home in Guelph after a vacation here.

Mrs Kennedy, of Edmonton, is spending a couple of months holiday with her mother, Mrs. Minto.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Eby and son Clifton, of Red Deer, Alta., are visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Eby.

Mr. and Mrs. George Black and Miss Rose McIntosh motored to Toronto Saturday.

Mrs. Robertson has returned to Vancouver, after a visit with her mother, Mrs. Archie McDonald.

Let The Times handle your subscription to other papers. We give prompt attention, and avoid mistakes.

Latest reports from Roy Thomson are that he is recovering slowly from his wounds, but is still unable to resume his work in the trenches.

Services will be held in the Anglican Church on next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Rural Dean Spence of Chatham will be the preacher.

Mrs. Folsom, Detroit, Mrs. Lockie of Kincardine, Miss Verna and Master Irwin Johnson, of Toronto, have been guests of Mrs. J. W. Pattison.

Publishers of a Montreal paper were unable to obtain newsprint to continue publication although they offered spot cash for it.

The Kincardine Fire Department are putting on a Demonstration on Labor Day, Sept. 3rd for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Miss Petty who, for the past few months has been the guest of Mrs. Ewald at the Huronic, Paradise Grove, returned home Saturday.

The membership contest between the President and Vice-president of the Fair board should begin in real earnest, Every citizen both town and country should be a member.

Hon. Duncan Marshall and wife were guests of Reeve and Mrs. Christie last week. While in this section the Minister purchased five young Shorthorns from Mr. Christie, and one from Gowanlock Bros.

A Red Cross tea is to be given Thursday afternoon August 30th at the summer home of Mrs. Hancock, Gobles Grove, All invited. Transportation is by auto, and all those going should be at the Red Cross tea rooms at 2.30 p. m. A charge of 25c will be made, which includes lunch and transportation. The ladies are requested to bring their knitting, or work of any kind for the soldiers.

Mr. Abraham, who is fieldman for the Indian department, was taken on his tour of his inspection of the Saugeen reserve by Supt. Stout last week. He expressed himself as greatly pleased with the fields of the Indian farmers, and was particularly delighted with the school gardens. Especial mention was made by Mr. Abraham of the splendid garden at French Bay school, as being one of the best he had ever seen. Great credit for this attaches to the teacher Mr. Wallace, and his pupils.

Tax Rate To Be 35 Mills

At a special meeting of the reeve and council last week Port Elgin's tax rate was raised from 32 to 35 mills. The increase is caused by additional demands for war tax, Red Cross, and the schools.

The three extra mills will get about $1000, and it can be readily seen that with the extra mills it will not provide the council with sufficient to meet all demands.

The public school requires $600 more this year, while the high school asks for $250 more. Added to this is the amount given to the British Red Cross, $1055. Fifteen mills of the rate go to paying off debenture debt. There is one less debenture this year of about $560. The council have on hand enough coal to last till March and this is provided for. The liabilities are a culvert or two which must be looked after at once, as well as some street repairing.

BUYERS' GUIDE

RATES—Contracts for 52 lines or over in a year 5c a line; regular weekly users of liners, 8c per line casual users of liners, 10c per line Black type, count two lines for one.

Cash for eggs. North End Store.

Barber's sale ends Saturday night September 1st.

Wanted—choice Dairy butter in "lb. prints" 40c cash. McMurray.

The South End is showing a big range of crepe, silk and voile blouses.

Try Koebke for your next grocery or fruit order

Bargains on men's and boys' fine and coarse shoes that make it very profitable for you to buy now. F. R. Barber.

We have added two new lines of Colleen corsets, prices are lower than regular lines. South End store.

Peach season is here. If you want fancy ones, leave your order at McMurray's grocery.

Get our prices on suit cases and club bags before buying. F. R. Barber.

Cheap shoes, Misses, Ladies' and Men's, not up to date in style, from 35c up. South End Store.

Bull Dog overalls and smocks, for good wear. North End Store.

In teas we are giving absolutely the best value in town. South End store.

We supply our grocery customers with choicest Dairy butter. McMurray.

Fleet foot running shoes, all sizes, white, tan, navy. North End store.

If we could make you fully realize what a saving it means to you to buy a suit now, you would come here right away to day. F. R. Barber

Neilson's chocolates—once used always used—you get them at Koebke's

Sugars are advancing in price. Get your supply from the South End.

Don't delay. Come at once—to day—and learn what you can save by buying your clothes, shoes, and furnishings at this sale. F. R. Barber.

Koebke sells Neilson's soldier chocolate Send a bar to your soldier boy at the front

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Livingstone and Hilker Livingstone of Hamilton; Mrs. Norswick, Mrs. Alfred Watson and Miss Virginia Watson, Guelph; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bunning, Miss Edith Bunning, Listowel, are guests at The Arlington hotel.

EXECUTOR'S NOTICE

Pursuant to Statute, all Creditors and others having claims against the estate of Andrew Sutherland, late of the Village of Port Elgin in the County of Bruce, Gentleman, deceased, who died on or about the sixteenth day of March A. D. 1917, are hereby notified to send by post, prepaid and registered, or to deliver, a duly verified statement of their claims to W. Burgess, Port Elgin, Solicitor for James McEwing and George S. Webb, Executors of the last Will and Testament of the said late Andrew Sutherland, on or before the 15th day of September 1917. After the said date the said Executors will proceed to distribute the assets of the said late deceased having regard only to claims of which they shall then have received notice.

Dated at Port Elgin this 25th day of August A. D. 1917.

W. Burgess
Solicitor for the Executors.
35-3tc

Assignee's Notice to Creditors

In the matter of Albert Roy Knowles an insolvent: Notice is hereby given that Albert Roy Knowles of the Town of Southampton, in the County of Bruce, and Province of Ontario, Grocery man, has under R. S. O. Cap 134, made an assignment of all his estate, credits, and effects, to J. A. Chapman of Port Elgin, in the County of Bruce, Financial agent, for the general benefit of his creditors. A meeting of the creditors will be held at the Queen's Hotel in the village of Port Elgin, aforesaid, on Friday the 31st of August, 1917, at 3.30 P. M. to receive a statement of affairs, appoint inspectors and generally order the estate. Creditors are requested to file their claims with particulars, and proofs as required by said act on or before the day of such meeting and notice is further given that after the 31st day of August, A. D. 1917, the assignee will proceed to distribute the estate among the persons entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which he then shall have notice and that he will not be liable for the estate to any person, of whose claim he shall not then have had notice.

J. A. Chapman, Assignee.

Port Elgin, August 18th, 1917.

Miss Melinda Ewald Passes Away in Buffalo

A great many friends were deeply moved on learning of the rather sudden death in Buffalo, of Miss Melinda Ewald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Ewald, on Sunday August 26th.

About two weeks ago her family here received word that she was not very well, but that she was recovering from pleurisy at the General hospital in Buffalo, Later, physicians operated for an abscess on the lungs, and in a few days death ensued. The remains were accompanied home by her sister Emily, who was with deceased for a few days before her death.

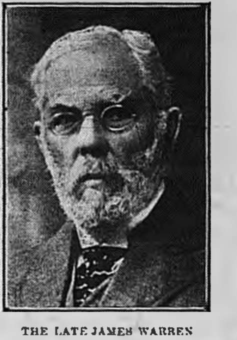
Melinda Ewald was born July 25th, 1877, on the 8th concession of Bruce later removing to Saugeen, where she spent her girlhood days and was educated in the schools here.

As a young woman she went to Buffalo and took up nursing, graduating from the German Deaconess hospital about 12 years ago, and had followed her profession up to the time of her illness. Deceased was an active member of the Evangelical church, and it was her delight to serve her Master in many ways. She made many friends through her cheerfulness and devotion to her chosen profession, and mankind generally is poorer to-day in the loss of one who lived not for herself but for others.

She was the eldest of six daughters who survive, as well as three brothers, one fighting in the trenches in France, all of whom will have the sympathy of many friends.

The funeral takes place this afternoon at 2.30 to Port Elgin cemetery, after which Rev. Glechler will conduct service in the church.

The Red Cross sent to Toronto last week, 12 quilts, 84 pairs sox, 42 pyjama suits, 9 hospital shirts, 2 flannel shirts, valued at $216.



THE LATE JAMES WARREN
In whose death Bruce County suffers a distinct loss.

OBITUARY

Death released a patient sufferer, on Monday, August 20th, when Mrs. George Gray passed away, after two years patient suffering from cancer. Deceased was born near Salisbury Plains, England, and came to this country with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dymer, 41 years ago. A year after arriving in this country she was united in marriage to George Gray who now survives, and who will have the sympathy of all. The late Mrs. Dymer was a member of the Methodist church, and was a woman greatly respected by all, being a kindly neighbour, and one who was willing to help those in need. She is mourned as well by two sons and three daughters, Albert and William J. and Mrs. A. Wipp, Mrs. John Longe and Lillian. Two sisters in England, and one brother, Harry Dymer, of Port Elgin, also survive. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Christie on Wednesday, August 22nd.

Golden Wedding

A quiet but happy event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Crowe's on Wednesday August 15th, 1917, the occasion being the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. Congratulations and gifts were received during the day by the happy couple, including checks from Mr. A. M. Ledingham and Mr H. H. Crowe of the West, who were unable to be present. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. McNeil and son of Southampton, Mr. and Mrs. Strachan and family of Glencoe, Mr. and Mrs. Husson, Mr and Mrs. Dorland and daughter of Guelph.

Matron Wanted

—To take full charge of C. A. Shelter at Walkerton. A Christian lady of some experience with children, willing to devote herself to their moral and spiritual welfare as well as their physical, keeping strict record of all business transactions claiming her attention. Apply to Rev D. McLennan Box 31 Walkerton, on or before the first of September stating salary expected.

UPRIGHT PIANO FOR SALE

Near Port Elgin. Will make price at a reduction and terms to suit. Address

LOUIS BLOCH,
22-4tc Owen Sound, Ont.

EVERY WIFE OR MOTHER

Having a husband or son at the front will want to send him a pair of the most wanted foot wearing article for wet weather. ABSOLUTELY WATERPROOF and has same neat appearance as cashmere.

RUBBERIZED STOCKINGS

Now offered for sale to the public for the first time. Order today from your local dry goods merchant or direct from the manufacturers. Circular and price list on application to

The Britannia Securities Corporation, Ltd.
(SPECIALTY MANUFACTURERS.)
3 SUN LIFE BUILDING. HAMILTON, ONT.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Dangers of Poisoning to Which Workers Are Exposed.

The making of modern munitions of war has brought into prominence several types of industrial diseases hitherto almost unknown.

One of the most troublesome of these is that commonly known as "T. N. T. poisoning," due to exposure to the fumes of tri-nitro-toluol or to the inhalation of dust generated in moving certain high explosives of which it forms a constituent.

Unusual drowsiness, frontal headache and eczema are the first symptoms of T. N. T. poisoning, and workers so affected are promptly given some other occupation, when the symptoms quickly disappear.

Less dangerous, but very troublesome, is tetryl poisoning. Manipulation of this explosive produces a light dust, which gets into the mouth, nose and eyes and sets up a painful soreness, accompanied by headache, nausea and almost an intolerable itching.

Curiously enough, individuals vary very considerably in their susceptibility to tetryl poisoning. Some workers are not at all affected by it, or only in a very slight degree, while others can hardly enter a room in which it is being handled without suffering se-danger life, nor are the symptoms in any case so severe as those due to T. N. T. poisoning. Tetryl possesses the annoying property, however, of staining the skin and hair yellow, but means have been found of largely counteracting this if the workers care to avail themselves of them.

Luckily tetryl poisoning does not enverely.

Other industrial diseases of a similar nature more or less prevalent in munition works are due to handling fulminate of mercury, to exposure to the fumes of a substance known as tetra-chlorethane, to inhalation of various other noxious fumes and dust generated in the workshops by the different processes carried on there and also from lead poisoning.

Yet another danger the munition worker is exposed to is acute poisoning due to the accidental escape of nitrous fumes into the work places. Many of these cases are apt to terminate fatally, for the gas is extremely deadly.—Pearson's Weekly.

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

HEALING OF WOUNDS.

Wound Cavity Must Be Free From Microbes.

In a recent issue of La Nature, Dr. A. C. Guillaume gives a description of average wounds occurring in battle and how they heal. It is known by all surgeons that when the flesh and bone of a man is injured the injury must be put in a condition of cleanliness, so that it can heal itself. The extent of the injury determines the time needed for the repair work to be done.

There are three types of bullet wounds: 'Those caused by bullets flying straight and at high speed; those caused by low-speed bullets, such as shrapnel, and those caused by fragments of shells or bullets that have richochetted or broken.

The first are clean and generally unaffected; they heal quickly, "by first intention," if no deep-seated bone or organ has been hit. The second may behave like them or like the third class, according to their gravity. The third class is the commonest and most important.'

Such a wound has a small, ragged entrance through the skin, the cellular tissue underlying it and the envelope of the muscles, all of which are elastic and may close immediately behind the ball. When this strikes the muscles it tears them and forms a cavity. Reaching the bone, the ball smashes it and stops.

The cellular tissue is infiltrated with blood and debris of garments and dirt. The cavity in the muscles is filled with a mixture of smashed muscular tissue, clots, serum, shreds of fibrous tissue, such foreign substance as may have been driven in by the ball and splinters of bone. The muscular walls of the cavity also are infiltrated with blood.

Up to about five hours after it has been received nothing happens within the wound; that is, nothing which even the microscope can reveal. But the microbes which have entered with the foreign substance are getting ready for an attack in a medium which is ideal for their operations. The cells of the body are also preparing their resistance.

About the eighth hour the microbes sally forth, and the great white corpuscles muster to receive the charge. By the fifteenth hour the microbes have spread throughout the contents of the wound cavity, and the muscle cells are rapidly degenerating. But the white corpuscles are now devouring the microbes, after which they, too, degenerate. This breaking down of the pus, which is now oozing from the wound.

All now depends on the virulence of the microbes and one the resistance of the army of white corpuscles is able to put up. There are many different kinds of microbes, some far more dangerous than others. The most dreaded of all is that to which Drs. Weinberg and Seguin have given the name of bacillus histolyticus, for it is ultra-poisonous and is the cause of gas gangrene and blood poisoning that spreads rapidly through the body. Always there those pus producers, the streptococci and the staphylococci, and generally pneumococci, colon bacilli and diplococci as well. These are all microscopic plants, which spread with the rapidity of yeast in warm dough until they are devoured by the white corpuscles.

The first steps taken by surgeons is to try to wash out all the foreign matter as early as possible, so as to make the wound cavity entirely free from microbes. If they can do this and keep it clean, the tissues proceed to repair the damage. The object of all antiseptics is to kill and wash away the microbes without injuring the body cells.

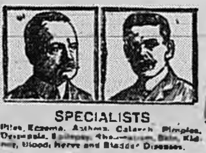
In healing the injured cells die and are cut off from the living cells by a barrier of white corpuscles and cast out from the wound. The white corpuscles act as an advance guard to prevent the entrance of more microbes; they also secrete ferments which dissolve the poisonous proteins which are the product of the disintegration of the tissues.

Behind this barrier a second layer of cells forms. These are sent by the surrounding tissues and their business is to repair the damage and gradually fill up the hole. They bud and divide like any other protoplasmic cells, commencing in the depths and gradually reaching the surface.

A wound is kept open in order that the skin may not heal over until the disintegrated cells have been cast out. For the same reason surgeons put drains into deep wounds.

The most effective treatment of wounds so far found is the continuous irrigation with normal salt solution and without any antiseptics as devised by the great English surgeon, Colonel Sir Almoth Wright. For slight wounds iodine has proven the most effective thing yet discovered. This kills the microbes or prevents their entrance into an injury and allows healing to take place from within and below.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE



SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. [illegible]

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

BABY'S GREAT DANGER DURING HOT WEATHER

More little ones die during the summer than at any other time of the year. Diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum and stomach disorders come without warning and when a medicine is not at hand to give promptly the short delay too frequently means that the child has passed beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept in the home where there are young children. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will cure the baby. Mrs. Chas. Anderson, Minda Alta., says: "Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine for little ones who are suffering from a weak stomach. They cured my baby when suffering from stomach complaint and have made her a fine healthy child." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MOST COMPLEX ART.

In the Key of "C" Alone There Are 382 Distinct Scales.

With 382 separate and distinct scales in the key of C alone, it is no more than natural that the realm of harmony should be considered as infinite. Yet few laymen are familiar with this, according to Carl W. Grimm, of Cincinnati, speaking on "The Realm of Scales." Mr. Grimm lamented the ignorance of the millions who persist in the contention that music is no longer susceptible of a single original note—that in a short time no new tunes will appear because every possible variation will have been made use of.

"No great composer"—Mr. Grimm paused a moment and then repeated by way of emphasis—"no really great composer, I say, has yet complained that the resources of music have been exhausted. The present day composer fails to realize that any scale may be turned into a monstrosity through improper treatment, which explains the great majority of our popular music. Scales are not the product of imaginative inspiration; each must be considered as a scientific achievement, and its pitch should be carefully and exactly determined through the application of certain fixed laws which form the backbone of all true music."

Mr. Grimm made it clear that music instead of being the most primitive has evolved into the most complex art known to twentieth century civilization.—New York Post.

MOVIE STREET CROWDS.

Strategy Used to Keep People From Spoiling the Effect.

Street crowds are notoriously difficult to handle for the movies. They will never do what you want, and even when you are sneaking them there is always some smart Aleck in the foreground who insists upon looking into the camera and cracking his foolish face.

On one occasion Donlon wished to get a close up picture of a crowd looking skyward. It was to be used as a cut-in for an aeroplane story. To hire a lot of extras would have cost a couple of thousand dollars, so he took a chance of getting what he wanted without paying for it. Knowing the psychology of crowds, Donlon took three cameras downtown, where he set one on the sidewalk for the purpose of taking a close-up profile of the crowd he was to assemble, one in a second storey window, shooting straight into the people's faces, and one on top of the building. The crowd assembled immediately and, seeing the camera, began, as usual, to rubber right into them. Then Donlon called out:

"Is Ben ready to jump?"

"And Ben called back: "Just a minute, Ed. I'm a bit nervous. Wait till that yellow car gets by. I think I'll try for the top of that big Pasadena car. It's wider."

Back and forth they called excited warnings and directions, and the crowd was right on tiptoes. They didn't know what was going to happen, but it promised excitement. All this time the camera men clicked that fool crowd into celluloid immortality.—Rob Wagner in Saturday Evening Post.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT on my vessel and in my family for years, and for the every day ills and accidents of life I consider it has no equal.

I would not start on a voyage without it if it cost a dollar a bottle.

CAPT. F. R. DESJARDIN.
Schr. "Storke," St. Andre, Kamouraska.

OLD PLYMOUTH.

Neutral Ships Barred from Harbor Used by Old Freebooters.

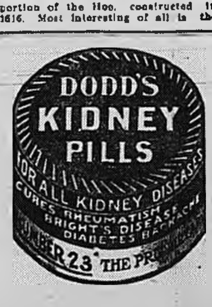
The recent notice served on the American consul general in London that for the remainder of the war only British and Entente allied ships will be permitted to enter the port of Plymouth, calls attention to one of the most historic towns of England, second to none in the influence which it has exerted on the history of our own country. The town is located near the southwest corner of England, at the mouth of the River Ply. The site is on a series of natural terraces sloping south to the sea, and forming part of the foothills of Dartmoor. The harbor, one of the finest and largest in the kingdom, opens to the south. Some interesting bits of Plymouth's history are given in the following bulletin just prepared by the U. S. National Geographical Society and issued from its headquarters in Washington:

"'Tis a notable old town,' said Longfellow, and every patriotic American who has visited there has trod lightly and with reverence. Out of the harbor of Plymouth sailed Sir John Hawkins and Sir Francis Drake to meet and conquer the Spanish Armada, a feat which wrote 'finish' to the sea-power of Spain. Had Philip succeeded in his design to crush the British lion in 1588 the history of this republic would have borne little of the English impress. Sir Humphrey Gilbert sailed from here to take possession of Newfoundland; Sir Walter Raleigh to colonize Virginia; and in 1620 the Mayflower spread its sails at the barbican of Plymouth on its daring expedition to the new country.

"To Plymouth men was given the first charter for trading with America and to Plymouth men, also King James gave a charter whereby the region which has been called 'the North Parts of Virginia' was to be the domain of the council established at Plymouth in the County of Devon, for the planting, ruling, ordering and governing of New England in America.' The first colonists of Australia (not the Botany Bay convicts) took ship at this port for their home beyond the seas. Here also embarked the brave troops which fell in the Crimean war, and a year or so later the troops sent out to quell the Indian mutiny.

"The principal sights of interest in Plymouth are St. Andrews church, in the center of the town, built in the thirteenth century and restored by Sir Gilbert Scott in 1875; the old Guildhall, now a public library; the old town hall, now a museum of old books, drawings, paintings and portraits, among which is to be found Earl of Edgecumbe, built in the reign of Henry VIII; the Eddystone lighthouse; and the Citadel, on the eastern portion of the Hoe, constructed in 1616. Most interesting of all is the Hoe, a hill 110 feet above the sea, the top of which is laid out to parks and gardens, and the most wonderful promenade in the kingdom. It was on this hill that the fabled wrestling matches between the Trojan Corinaeus and the Giant Goemagot (Gogmagog) took place. To Corinaeus, who held 'it a diversion to encounter giants' was reserved the privilege of wrestling with th's being 'twelve cubits high,' after the Trojans had killed all his tribesmen. The Trojan apparently took little interest in the encounter until the giant had broken three of his ribs, which so provoked Corinaeus that, taking the giant on his shoulders he ran with him to the shore, and 'getting upon the top of a high rock, hurled down the savage monster into the sea, where falling on the sides of a cragged rocks he was torn to pieces, and colored the waves red with his blood.'

"To the world of arms, art, and song Plymouth has made large contributions. Three Royal Academicians and one president of the Royal Academy were born there. Among the painters, are Sir Charles Eastlake, Samuel Prout, James Northcote, Benjamin Robert Haydon, Solomon Hart and many others, while Sir Joshua Reynolds was born four miles away in the little town of Plympton."



Child Irritable From Itching Rash On Face Healed By Cuticura

"The trouble began with a small rash on my little boy's face and itched a great deal. It was inflamed and red and he was very irritable. The breaking out disfigured his face for the time being. He scratched the sore eruptions until they would bleed, especially at night. I used ——, but it did not heal him. I sent for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and then bought more, and the trouble disappeared." (Signed) Mrs. I. S. Bell, Hope River, P. E. I., Feb. 18, 1916.

Cheap soaps, harsh soaps, coarse, strongly medicated soaps are responsible for half the skin troubles in the world. They make little irritations into great ones. Stop the use of all doubtful soaps. Use Cuticura for all toilet purposes. Help it with touches of Ointment applied to any redness, roughness, pimples or dandruff.

For Free Sample Each by Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

Brave Enough, Anyhow.

"Raisuli, who is giving the allies trouble," said a globe trotter, "is a brave man, anyhow. In Tangier I once saw Raisuli, fat and magnificent in silks and jewels, enter a shooting gallery where a Tunisian was practicing.

"The Tunisian was an excellent shot. He broke glass balls, rang bells, splintered pipe stems and penetrated bull's eyes without number. At each shot a polite murmur of applause arose. The man was puffed up with triumph.

"Raisuli exclaimed in a loud voice: 'In a duel this gentleman wouldn't shoot so well.'

"'We'll see about that,' growled the Tunisian, and he challenged Raisuli. Ten minutes later they were on the field.

"They were to fight at 12 paces, each to fire one shot. Lots were drawn as to who should shoot first, and Raisuli lost. He took his stand before the Tunisian calmly, and the latter lifted his weapon, took careful aim and — missed.

"Raisuli smiled. 'What did I tell you?' he said.

"And he thrust his pistol in his belt and strode away humming a song."—Washington Star.

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, etc.

Words Which Have Strayed.

Hardly any words in the English language have strayed farther from their original meaning than the terms of forestry. Thus a forest was originally a great tract of country, which might include woods, cultivated lands, pastures and even towns and villages, all the hunting rights over which were reserved to the monarch. A chase differed from a forest mainly in the fact that the hunting rights were vested in a subject instead of a king. A park was a fenced preserve, either in or out of a forest, while a warren was a piece of waste ground over which the right to hunt the hare, the rabbit and the fox, the pheasant, the partridge and the woodcock had been granted by the King.

In the same way the term afforestation had nothing to do with the planting of trees. It meant the subjection of any tract of country to the forest laws—in other words, it was the setting aside of this tract as a forest. A forest might and commonly did include vast estates of landowners and large towns whose rights remained untouched except as to game.—London Mail.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

Fashion Features.

One of the handsomest spring wraps is of jersey cloth, with the loveliest silk lining, and hand embroidery done in two shades to harmonize with the coat.

* * *

For spring gowns there are very pleasing silk and wool fabrics in plain colors—poplin, grosgrain, crepes and failles.

* * *

New sports blouses of ....handkerchief linen are usually in white with colored collar, cuffs and bandings. Rose, blue, green and gold are the best liked colors.

* * *

Kolinsky and Georgette crepe and ermine and moire are two of the combinations used for summer furs—and you've no idea, till you see them, how fascinating they are!

* * *

New dress trimmings from Paris are of braids—intricate and remarkable combinations of silk braids in different widths and colors to form designs that are charming. Buy them by the yard, or singly—and use them for girdles, pockets, bags and no end of other trims [illegible]

"What will happen if America doesn't feed the world?" demanded the serious man. "Oh, let the world chew the rag," replied the flippant one.

THE CHEMIN DES DAMES

(New York Tribune.)

It would be a profound error to minimize or misunderstand the battle which is now being waged along the Chemin des Dames between the French and German troops. Those military writers who have already likened it to Verdun seem to have correctly diagnosed one of the most considerable military operations of the year. The world was very slow in waking up to the real meaning of Verdun, and it was still slower in understanding how nearly the Germans succeeded at Verdun. Of the present conflict one may say: That it has opened with no such success as marked the first furious onrush of the German troops in February, 1916. In some places the Germans advanced rods; in some places they have been held squarely. Nor have they taken many prisoners or guns, while at Verdun they advanced more than four miles, taking 40,000 prisoners and more than 100 guns in three days.

Yet, the things the Germans are undertaking must be understood fully. The French offensive on the same ground, was a failure in the larger sense because it resulted merely in the gain of a little ground incommensurate with the sacrifice of French life by which it had been purchased. Nor were 30,000 German prisoners and more than 100 guns counterweights to this French loss.

The defeat of the French offensive, the change in the high command, the reorganization of the general staff—these things brought depression to France. They brought depression to the French army and they added one more strain to that almost intolerable burden borne by Frenchmen now for three years. The hope for victory in '14, '15 and '16 had gone glimmering. The hope of victory in '17 was shattered by the failure to reach Laon and disengage Rheims, together with the collapse of Russia and the halt in the British advance.

To-day the German general staff is spending men and blood without hesitation and without regard, not because the positions it is attacking are of any great value, nor because a successful retaking of Craonne would materially change the military and strategic situation, but because they are seeking, as they sought at Verdun, to crush the spirit of France.

Let us look the whole war situation in the face as it is. Russia is, temporarily at least, eliminated, and probably stands in the presence of a great collapse. The United States is still unable to send troops in any number to the front and cannot send sufficient numbers this year. English man power is declining. For another eight months the battle on the western front must be fought on the allied side by the French and by the British. If either weakens the whole battle is lost.

And so the Germans, just as they did at Verdun and for exactly the same reason, are using up the best of their reserves in a desperate and terrific effort to batter in the heart of France. It is the supreme test of energy and endurance which is now going on along the Chemin des Dames. It is one of the crucial tests in all human and military history. This should not be mistaken because the gains are insignificant. The changes in the battle front can hardly be shown on any map, however large the scale.

The Germans are now seeking for a decision over French quite as Napoleon in the closing hours of Waterloo endeavored to have a decision as to the British when he put the Old Guard in. If the Germans can beat France to her knees they will have won the war. If they have correctly gauged the spirit of France and believe France is now at the point of collapse, their military case is logical and will be as successful as it is daring.

More than a year and a half ago tactics now employed on the Chemin des Dames failed on the hills of the Meuse, though the Germans had the advantage of defects in French military organization and the further benefit of a great surprise. They have neither now. The entire question must rest with the moral strength of the two forces now facing each other. If France, after all her sacrifices and sufferings, after the Marne and Verdun, can stand a third trial, the consequence to the Germans will be very grave, because they are spending reserves they cannot spare, if the war is to go for another year.

The struggle on the Chemin des Dames is beginning rather than ending. It is likely to continue for a long period. It is likely to be marked with even more terrific fighting and greater sacrifices than we have yet seen. It is the real Hindenburg offensive, about which so much was written in the early spring. It is the effort for which the Germans have been gathering their strength and holding their reserves for a very long time. If it fails they will have to propose peace. If it succeeds they will be able to dictate peace.

Meantime, all France and all the world will look inquiringly toward the British front. We know that when Verdun was attacked Sir Douglas Haig, whose army was still untrained, offered to attack to ease the strain, and General Joffre declined the offer. Sir Douglas Haig now has a veteran army, trained and ready. It is not too much to conjecture that the British attack will not be delayed beyond the point where the strain upon the French becomes excessive. On the other hand, it will have far greater chances in proportion as it waits the exhaustion of German reserves.

At the moment the attention of the world is naturally fixed upon Russia, where great, disappointing and perhaps disastrous events are taking place. But for the moment the real danger point is in France. Once more in this terrible war the post of honor and the post of danger has come to the French. The battle of Chemin des Dames is taking on an importance comparable only with the Marne and with Verdun. We are seeing what must inevitably be the final German bid for a decision in the west, and we shall probably have to wait many days before the issue is decided, although up to the present moment the French have far surpassed their Verdun performance, while the German performance so far has been incomparably beneath that of February, 1916.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply, Welland Hospital, St. Catharines, Ont.

LADIES WANTED TO DO PLAIN and light sewing at home; whole or spare time; good pay; work sent any distance, charges prepaid. Send stamp for particulars. National Manufacturing Co., Montreal, Que.

WANTED—LOOM FIXER ON CROM- ton and Knowles' Looms. Good opportunity to right man. Apply, stating age and experience, to the Slingsby Mfg. Co., Ltd., Brantford, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

DOMINION EXPRESS MONEY Orders are on sale in five thousand offices throughout Canada.

FOR SALE

A CHOICE DAIRY FARM IN THE County of Brant. Buildings No. 1, with plenty of water. Full particulars. Apply to F. Barber, Kelvin, Ont.

TRADE BRIEFS.

The decrease in Holland's output of dairy products is due to difficulty experienced in getting proper fodder. Eighty-five per cent. of the butter produced is being reserved by the Government for domestic consumption.

Bounties will be paid to growers of hemp and sisal in Costa Rica. The Government will also aid planters who wish to establish fibre factories.

Experiments are to be made in Bolivia to determine the value of agave as a source of fibre.

French officials are studying conditions at Brest with a view to making that port a large transatlantic terminal. It is probable that the ports of Calais, St. Nazaire and Cette will also be improved.

Tests made of the clay deposits in the vicinity of Moncton, N. B., show that the shale is suitable for many kinds of clay products. Natural gas, which is found in that district, would be available for clay burning purposes.

A company has been formed to mine the salt recently discovered at Anse La Gas and oil found in proportion adjacent to the salt deposits will meet the requirements of fuel needed for the new enterprise.

A firm in Petrograd, Russia, has announced its intention of importing automobile goods, including automobiles and accessories, electrical appliances, wood and iron working machinery, railway supplies. Catalogues are requested.

Prizes have been offered to farmers in several sections of Italy to encourage the cultivation of cereals on lands which have not been tilled on a long period. Farmers who manure such lands will also be reimbursed for one fifth of the cost of chemical manures used.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

The Outdoor Woman.

When that husky brute, man, goes into the big woods for the good time of the year no longer does he leave a bundle of frills and laces at home or the shore, with nothing to assuage her grief at parting with her lord but a stack of the latest fiction, a fond kiss and, perhaps, a hypocritical "Wish you could go with me." No, indeed! Now she goes with him, and he is finding out that he is very glad she does.

Whether either he or she is glad, however, depends, in a measure—in fact, rather largely—upon her clothing. She must be warm in cold weather, not too warm in hot weather, not be bedraggled to helplessness when it rains, nor snagged every few minutes in rough going by stepping on her skirt or getting caught on a stub. If she is to be a real companion to a man she must not hold him back by adding to her natural handicap, lack of strength, the unnecessary and exasperating unsuitable costume.—Outing.

Inertia of Bodies.

Lay a visiting card on the tip of the left forefinger, and on it place a penny. A quick flick of the card with the right second finger will remove the card without disturbing the coin. Another trick which illustrates the inertia of bodies is to knock away the bottom of a pile of checkers without upsetting the pile. This is effected quite easily with the help of a flat ruler. The remaining checkers are removed successively by a number of smart blows.

A more spectacular and apparently risky trick consists of drawing a newspaper away from under a glass filled with water. Provided, however, that the table is smooth and the paper be pulled away smartly and horizontally there is no danger of the water being spilled.

The fellow who didn't enlist because he had a cold is now wondering if he will be able to keep out of a draft.

Lighten the Day's Work by eating food that does not use up all the vital powers in an effort to digest it. Every particle of Shredded Wheat Biscuit is digested and converted into healthy tissue and caloric energy. In the present food crisis every housekeeper and mother should demand bread that is 100 per cent. whole wheat. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is made of the whole wheat grain prepared in a digestible form. Better than meat, or eggs, or potatoes, and costs much less. For breakfast or any meal with sliced bananas, berries or other fruit.

Made in Canada.

THE BATTLE IN NO MAN'S LAND

When Canadians Met Germans With the Bayonet.

Foe Fought "Like Rats in a Trap."

London Cable.——Describing the encounter of the Canadians with Germans in the open, Beach Thomas, of The Daily Mail, wires that the infantry on both sides scrambled over their parapets out of the redoubts close on the heels of their barrage. An autumn mist clung to the bluish twilight as this charge was made. It was a great morning for a surprise attack. The first clear object the Canadians saw was not a parapet or fort, but through blue mist the figures of advancing German soldiers. Probably for the first time during this war real attacks were delivered simultaneously by the two storming parties met in No Man's Land, perhaps rather nearer the German than our own lines. They met and clashed in the open but between two walls of shells that made live barriers to No Man's Land, cutting off the rival champions, but for the moment harming neither, except when one of the shells with more sensitive fuses sent home singing fragments on a longer journey than usual.

Bayonets met in these strange lists; neither side gave an inch of ground. The noise of the shells drowned the fierce shouting, but our men had the greater impetus, or skill, or power, at heart. They forced the Germans back and back or else forced themselves forward, for there was no retreating. "The Germans," a soldier said, 'fought like rats in a trap. Men died at the point they had reached or crossed over dead bodies."

The first shock was not the worst. As our troops, in uneven formation, reached the parapet of the German trench system fresh enemies came up, and the second encounter was more desperate than the first.

Most of the work on the side of the Canadians was bayonet work, punctuated by revolver shots of officers. The Germans used rather more bombs, but had difficulty distinguishing friends from foes.

It is reckoned that the fight in No Man's Land and on the battlements of the German trenches lasted a long quarter of an hour. Almost all the Germans were killed. The remnant of Canadians was still large enough and strong enough to occupy the trench and consolidate it.

This force, which had met the Germans in the midfield shock, had advanced southeast upon the outer town of Lens, in which the main road from Arras joins the hub of roads. It was only half the attack, but the drama drives it into prominence. Its men won immortal fame.

"Another attack moving in a northeasterly direction went more normally, though fighting was bitter there, too. The Germans fought to the death, but they had not come into the open, and lost their trenches without the savage thrill of body fighting in the open ground. Some prisoners captured during the advance were wholly on the north side of the Bouchez River.

"Although Canadians are in part of Lens, this does not mean that Lens is ours. The Germans are fighting with desperation now. They have lost Hill 70, perhaps not wholly on strategic grounds, but because they do not care to face the political reputation of losing a place that was important first defence.

We have seldom, if ever, in recent fighting found enemy trenches manned with such a weight of troops and concentration of guns. The German losses are immense, and the Canadians have not spared themselves. They have out-topped even the fame won at Vimy.

THE ITALIAN FRONT.

Official Report of the Great New Drive.

Rome Cable.——The text of the Italian statement follows:

"Along the whole front the battle is raging without let up. North of Gorizia the operations are proceeding regularly and we are overcoming the resistance of the enemy and the difficulty of the ground.

"To the south the struggle yesterday became localized, especially on the Carso.

"Along the whole line of battle our troops have gained new successes and are overcoming the difficulties which give to every yard of ground won and held the importance of a conquered fortress.

"Masters of the air over the battlefield our aeroplanes bombarded the troops and hutments in the Chiapovano Valley and along the eastern slopes of the Hermada, making the enemy suffer losses and causing conflagrations in his communication lines. The number of able-bodied prisoners captured is 311 officers and more than 13,000 men. Thirty guns, nearly all of medium calibre, have been taken. The other booty is large and is increasing in quantity.

"On the Trentino and Carnia fronts the enemy yesterday again attempted small attacks which everywhere were repulsed. In the Ledro Valley a bitter attack resulted, after a lively struggle, in failure for the enemy, who was put to flight. He left prisoners and material in our hands."

FRENCH MINISTERS SEE DRIVE.

Paris Cable.—Minister of War Painleve and Albert Thomas, Minister of Munitions, were witnesses to the new battle of Verdun. They observed the struggle from both sides of the Meuse, watched the operation of the artillery, visited first line hospitals and expressed themselves as highly satisfied with the methods employed.

BRITISH RAILWAY STRIKE OFF, FOR THE PRESENT, AT LEAST

Understanding Reached Between Government and the Threatening Union.

London Cable—An understanding has been reached between the Government and the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, who have been threatening a general strike of railwaymen. The society had demanded the adoption of an eight-hour day, but a delegation which visited Sir Albert Stanley, President of the Board of Trade, was informed on Sunday that the Government would discuss the question of an eight-hour day only when the war was ended. Later, however, the two sides entered into further negotiations, and it was believed yesterday that a way would be found to reach an agreement.

It is officially announced that the negotiations continued at the Board of Trade offices between Sir Albert Stanley and the executive of the Associated Society until very late Tuesday night, when the understanding was arrived at. This understanding, it is added, is embodied in a letter to Sir Albert, written by the executive secretary of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, Mr. Bromley. The text of this letter, issued by Sir Albert, recalls a series of statements Sir Albert had previously made, including the following: That the Government was pledged to return the control of the railways some time after the war, when there would be an opportunity within one month to bring forward the request for a shorter working day on the railways; that any reasonable request for them would have immediate sympathetic consideration by the Government; that adequate machinery existed for dealing with the questions of excessive hours and insufficient pay arising from war conditions; that everything possible would be done by the railway committee to reduce long hours to the smallest possible minimum consistent with the demands upon the railways; and that hitherto all demands for increased pay arising from war conditions had been amicably adjusted, and that he (Sir Albert) had no reason to doubt that any future demands would be met in the same spirit.

The letter concludes with an assurance that Sir Albert will use his good offices to arrange for a discussion of outstanding matters between the representatives of the men and the railway committee at the earliest possible moment.

It may be inferred from the official statement that the executive of the Associated Society has accepted the Board of Trade's viewpoint, instead of pressing a strike, but up to the present time the Associated Society has made no announcement.

Interviewed early this morning with reference to the Board of Trade announcement, Mr. Bromley said:

"We have come to an arrangement on the eight-hour question with which we are satisfied for the time being, and we will not strike this week, as we would have done but for the arrangement. We shall immediately continue negotiations on the question of wages. The strike would have occurred Wednesday, but we telegraphed the delegates to stop it."

HONEY CROP IS NEAR AVERAGE

Ontario Beekeepers' Report Committee Meets.

Slight Price Advance is Recommended.

The Crop Report Committee of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association met on Wednesday, Aug. 14th. Five hundred beekeepers from all parts of the province reported a naverage of 51.6 pounds per colony which is about the average reported from year to year. While most of the south western counties had short crops, the eastern counties have done better than usual. The market has been bare of honey for several months, however; all the necessaries of life have advanced, and beekeepers expect some increase in price, although the advance over late winter prices recommended is slight.

The committee recommends the following prices:

Best quality light extracted, wholesale, 14c to 16c per lb.

Best quality light extracted, retail, 17 1-2 to 20c per lb.

Best quality comb, wholesale, $2 to $3.25 per dozen.

No. 2 comb, wholesale, $2 to $2.50 per dozen.

These prices are being paid at the present time in Ontario, and United States' prices have advanced in even greater proportion. Surplus honey from Western States is going direct to Europe for use by the armies of the Allies, leaving a greater shortage of honey on the American Continent than ever before.

Beekeepers are cautioned not to sell second grade honey for table use, but to sell it to biscuit manufacturers. The prices recommended are f.o.b. in 60 lb., 10 lb. and 5 lb. tins, the former being net weight, the latter being gross weight. The lower prices should be quoted to wholesale and commission men and the higher wholesale price to retailers. The size of the order and style of package should be taken into account in determining the retail price. Signed by the committee; Wm. Couse, F. G. Sibbald, W. J. Craig; F. W. Krouse, President; Morley Pettit, Sec.-Treas.

Guelph, Ont., Aug. 17, 1917.

Mr. Wigwag—I met your friend Mrs. Talkalot, to-day. Mrs. Wigwag—What did she have to say? Mr. Wigwag—Oh, nothing. She was so busy talking she didn't have time to say anything.

REICHSTAG TO HAVE SOME SAY

In the Foreign Policy of the German Empire.

Chancellor's Statement is Taken as Pledge.

Berlin cable, via London cable—The Liberal press points out as a significant feature of Tuesday's session of the main committee of the Reichstag Chancellor Michaelis' statement that the Government would not take final action on the Papal peace note without consulting and advising with the committee. This is being received as a pledge that the Government henceforth intends to collaborate with the Reichstag factions in dealing with the chief problems of the nation's foreign policy, and that it would continue to work in harmony with the committee in the direction of achieving peace of reconciliation and mutual understanding.

The suggestion that a smaller sub-committee of the main committee be organized for the purpose of acting as confidential agent between the Government and Parliament is meeting with approval. It also is said to have the sanction of the Chancellor. The smaller unit would enter into intimately confidential relations with the Government for the purpose of suggestion and paving the way to general deliberations in the main committee executive session.

Active champions of parliamentary reforms are inclined to look on the progress thus far recorded as giving promise of still greater headway in the desired direction, while the Conservative advocates of democratized relations between the Government and the Reichstag cite the modest advance as proof of their assertion that Parliamentary reorganization must be reached by easy stages, and that the new plant must be given opportunity to familiarize itself with German political soil before it can take firm root.

While the Chancellor's informal statements and specific reference to the Papal peace note are in keeping with expectations, it is not unlikely that the Vatican's message will prove the basis of an extended debate on war aims, during the committee's present sitting, at which the issues of parliamentary reforms are equally certain to be discussed.

The Ultra-Conservative and pan-German press warn against offering the Reichstag coalition parties an opportunity to influence the Government's attitude. In this connection the Deutsche Zeitung says:

"We are permitted to hold the three great international powers, Rome, Social Democracy and Judaism, working in complete unison to bring to shame the German victory, for which hundreds of thousands have held, and died. The National Liberals are lending effective aid. It would seem that Chancellor Michaelis does not yet understand how to manage this Reichstag."

Vorwaerts, the Socialist organ, says:

"We do not yet know how the Government intends to answer the Pope's note, in all its details, but we do know that the response will be in accord with the wishes of the Austro-German Government, and the German Reichstag majority. Between these two factors, as far as discernible, there is complete unity, and with that harmony every German Government would have to reckon. If the majority remains intact the German answer to the Papal note will prove an effective support to the Pope's peace action, and as such will meet the wishes of the German people".

One of Tuesday's notable developments was the official announcement that the National Liberal party would join the coalition group in its deliberations, although reserving to itself the right to take an independent attitude on questions of the Government's foreign policy.

GRAND DUKES KICK.

Want a Share in the Russian Elections.

Petrograd Cable.—The military council of the Don Cossacks has announced its support of the constitutional democratic party and its desire to form a fusion with that party in the approaching elections. The Astrakhan Cossacks have withdrawn their representatives from the workmen's and soldiers' group, basing their action upon the status of the council as a self-constituted organization.

A letter of protest against the problem of the former Imperial family from participating in the coming elections has been advised by Grand Dukes Nicholas Michaelovitch and Paul Alexandrovitch to Vassili Maklakoff, who is charged with working out a plan for the constituent assembly. The letter bears also the signatures of virtually all the other Grand Dukes and Grand Duchesses and states that the former Emperor joins in the protest.

In another communication to Premier Kerensky, Grand Duke Paul Alexandrovitch asks permission to make his home in Sweden, alleging that he finds the cost of living in Russia burdensome.

Blobb—Closefist ought to make a good soldier. He says he has absolutely no fear of death. Slobb—That's only because he argues that the longer he lives the more it costs him.

THROUGH MANY TRIALS

"But what right hast thou, in thy position in her father's house, in thy station in life, to play the lover to Imogene Trefusis," Miriam Lilly asks more sternly and excitedly.

"I am not 'playing the lover,'" he says, tersely. "I love her with all my heart and strength, deeply desperately, determinedly, and as many more adjectives beginning with 'd' as you like?"

"I have spoken to thee, trusting to make an appeal to thy better nature," Miriam Lilly says, turning away in cold wrath. "I shall not speak again. I have warned thee once, I shall not warn thee twice. I shall not consider thee more than the veriest stranger, Richard Dumaresq, when I warn Sir Philip Trefusis against thee."

"Do you threaten, my good aunt?" he asks with a reckless smile that fairly arrest her step to know what it portends. "Then I threaten you, and I shall not warn you twice, my good aunt and I will not consider you more than the veriest stranger if you interfere between me and Imogene Trefusis again. I told you to trust to my honor and good faith, you have not done so therefore I am absolved from all trust so far as you are concerned. 'Warn Sir Philip against me,' as you say in your candid assurances you will do, and I shall consider you have absolved me from all trust and faith as far as he is concerned, and I tell you candidly the result will be that I will steal his daughter and have her and hold her for my own as fast as church and state can bind her to me within forty-eight hours!"

"Thee wouldst—wouldst lure the child away from her home and her father and sister?" Miriam fairly gasps.

"And her loving, noble-minded, unworldly aunt, Lady Althea de Burgh, why don't you add?" sneers Dumaresq, bitterly. "If ever revenge could have any motive in a scheme which concerned Imogene, I should like to revenge myself through Imogene on my Lady Althea. If ever her vile worldliness, and her avarice and her greed and lust for wealth and position induce her to lay snares for Imogene's angel footsteps, or induce her to plot the casing of her and selling her to the highest bidder—much as a little white dove would be caged and sold, and I know the ways of Lady Althea and of women like her—then my lady will have to sit down to play a game with me, and I lay my life on it, the result for her will be checkmate."

"But thou hast no position, no prospects, no fortune," argues Miriam Lilly. She is so frightened or bewildered, or charmed, it may be, by his bold speech, into arguing.

"I know thy birth, and thy father's house, godless though they were, were among the great ones of the earth. Thy poor mother often spoke in her letters with much silly pride of the great folks she had wedded among." she says nervously, and almost pleadingly, "but that does not make thee a fit husband for a daughter of Sir Philip Trefusis. And Richard, I tell thee plainly, thou art no fit husband for any innocent young maid, living happily and at peace under her father's roof; thou hast not even a home to offer her!"

"True," he says, sadly, slowly, with a sorrowful, lingering smile, glancing in the direction in which Imogene has gone. "You are quite right, Aunt Miriam, and I am quite wrong. I am no fit husband for Imogene; but, as for the rest, I think you forget, Mrs. Lilly, that Heneage Court is as good as Fortdreath, and Viscountess Dumaresq would surely rank as the social superior of a daughter of Sir Philip Trefusis."

"But thy uncle has made no division of his property to thee?" Miriam Lilly asks, eagerly.

"Not a penny of it," Dumaresq answers, shortly. "Richard inherits everything that my uncle could deprive me of. There isn't sixpence a year to support the title."

"I do not know why thy uncle has treated thee so," Miriam Lilly says, thoughtfully, "but it seems to be scarcely just, as there is the empty title and the dignity of the family name to be maintained; but he doubtless has strong reasons for acting as he did."

"He had," Dumaresq says, coolly; "I thwarted his tyrannical will and set his supreme authority at defiance. He was hard on Richard, poor lad, and merciless to his faults; he was a tyrant over us both; poor, foolish old man! I got on best, as I was fearless and as self-willed as he was, but Richard was dreadfully afraid of him from his childhood, and uncle seemed to hate him for it. He was very hard, very strict with the poor lad, and when at last it came to an open rupture I stood up for Richard, and refused point-blank to obey the old man's mandates concerning him.

"He gave Richard four-and-twenty hours either to acknowledge his fault and humbly beg his forgiveness, and submit to all sorts of penalties and humiliation for what was only a boyish folly, or to be turned out of doors.

"I stood up for Richard, of course. The old man's harshness had almost driven the poor boy to commit suicide; I found him going to hang himself——"

"Going to hang himself sooner than humbly ask pardon for a fault of which he was guilty?" interposes Miriam Lilly, in her cold, sardonic manner. "Fortunately it was only going to hang himself he was when thee found him."

"I tell you he was! Upstairs in his own room," Dumaresq says agitatedly, at the bare remembrance, with a fleeting recollection, nevertheless, of Mr. Alfred Mantalini's elaborate preparations for the committal of suicide occurring unpleasantly apropos. "And, of course, the more I defended Richard, and tried to argue the point with my uncle, the more incensed and tyrannical he became, and then at last he threatened me, and I defied him."

"Well, what did thee do then?" the Quakeress asks, with a cold smile.

"Richard and I left the Court together—the very same day—and went off on the continent together, meaning to try and get situations, either in Paris or some other large city. We had romantic schemes—or I had—of concealing our name and identity, and becoming half foreigners in the course of a few years, so that no one should know whatever became of us; but Richard fell ill at Abbeville, and there we had to stay until our money was all spent, and starvation stared us in the face, and he was dying, I feared, and so I wrote to Viscount Dumaresq, and told him the situation in which his sister's orphan son was, and acknowledging by fault in inducing Richard to set him at defiance; in fact, told him to blame what he pleased on me, but to forgive Richard, who was broken down by illness and suffering, so that it was not likely, for many a day, that he would have strength to oppose his uncle's authority; said everything, in fact, which could make him feel indulgent toward poor Richard, and feel inclined to lay the blame on my shoulders—they were broad enough to bear it—and my endeavor was quite successful. He came at once; Richard asked his forgiveness, and the old man took him back to Heneage Court the same day, and took him into his favor for life."

"And what did thee do then?" Miriam Lilly asks once more.

"What did I do? Anything—everything that a penniless outcast could do short of stealing!" Dumaresq laughs. "I had rather a rough time of it for a week or two, and then I took the queen's shilling, and did ten years' soldiering."

"And did thy cousin do nothing for thee all those years?" Miriam Lilly asks.

"What could he do?" Dumaresq says, warmly. "The poor fellow has never had a sovereign beyond a small allowance from his uncle—ridiculously small for the position he has to keep up, both in his regiment and in society—and considering he is heir to six thousand a year."

"What dost thou call a ridiculously small allowance?" Miriam Lilly asks.

"Five hundred a year," answers Dumaresq, indignantly. "How does Viscount Dumaresq expect his heir to live on five hundred dollars a year and his captain's pay?"

"Evidently he does," Miriam Lilly says dryly, "whether his heir does or not; but as he allows thee nothing a year, Richard, I do not see that thou shouldst pity thy cousin for having only five hundred. As thou despisest that sum of money so much, thou wouldst doubtless scorn it if Francis Dumaresq allowed thee five hundred a year."

Something in her tone, something in the oddity of the question, something in the way she says "Francis Dumaresq," even allowing for the peculiarity of Friends' phraseology, strikes with a sensation of puzzled curiosity and surprise on Dumaresq's thoughts; but the pale, grave face, and the stern eyes are waiting evidently for his reply.

"Scorn it! Certainly I should not!" he says, impatiently. "I do not want his money while he is at enmity with me; but if he made me an allowance, I should take it as a sign he was not altogether unfriendly to me, and I should accept it thankfully. But as he hasn't the slightest idea of doing such a thing, and I haven't the slightest idea of petitioning for an action of his favor," he adds, irritably, "I do not see why you should make such a suggestion."

"I simply asked thee if thee scornest five hundred a year as thy cousin does," Miriam Lilly says, briefly; and she turned away without a word more, and Dumaresq goes his way upstairs to his own and his cousin's rooms.

On his way he passes by the room which was Evelyn's dressing-room, where there is a little cottage piano for practice, and whither Imogene has come, preferring it to the drawing room.

She is singing to herself, warbling song after song, in her sweet, fresh young voice, and the door is ajar.

"Surely I may stand outside and listen, as the other servants might," he mutters to himself. "Only a few minutes. I have never heard her sing before."

And so he stands and listens and listens, though his face flushes and pales once or twice at his own imaginings, though his heart is beating fiercely, and the hot blood is running riot in his veins.

There is a pause as the singer turns over some pages of music; and in the pause Dumaresq ventures a step nearer and looks into the room.

CHAPTER X.

The crimson window blind is drawn down, and though the window is open, no sunshine enters the room but through the tempering medium which fills all the room with warm, ruddy light.

The chairs and couches are covered with a dark red, soft stuff, and the carpet is of dark crimson and purple hues; and amid the glow and flush of color—warm as the light of love—Imogene's delicate face and pale-robed slender figure gleams out statue-like, fair, and cold.

The fire of a sudden passion of daring, despairing resolve burns in Dumaresq's eyes as he watches her. The lover who dares not tell his love—who dares not venture in there into her presence, although the whole warmth and strength of his manhood had sprung up into a fierce and tender adoration of her—a hopeless, bitter delight in her—a reckless devotion to her, frail, white blossom of girlhood as she is, half child, half woman; and a mad longing seizes him to make or take the chance that is so opportune—the chance of standing by Imogene's side for a few brief minutes, of singing to her, perhaps, as he knows he can sing, and so — to banish forever the maddening, cruel unconsciousness of that "passionless, pale, cold face"—and make her know the power of the mighty power called love; make her know it, and be troubled by the knowledge.

But as he stands there, hesitating, half willing, half afraid, wholly longing, he is violently startled by one of Lionel's strident laughs, and suddenly perceives the boy's face alight with malicious fun, looking at him from over the high-cushioned scroll end of the couch, where, as it stands a little behind and beyond the piano, the young gentleman is lying stretched out at full length, unseen by Dumaresq.

"I've been watching you this ever so long," he says, chuckling. "Look, Imogene looks toward him with a 'Tom' all the time you've been singing."

"I have been doing nothing of the kind, sir," Dumaresq says, growing pale again with intense vexation. "I only stopped to listen to Miss Trefusis singing those two last ballads; I have never had the pleasure of hearing her before."

"Well, come in, can't you, and hear her now?" Lionel says, shortly.

But Dumaresq does not stir until Imogene looks toward him with a little smile, and then returns to her employment of searching busily for some song which is apparently undiscoverable; for she has been searching for it since the moment that Lionel's laughter startled her into perceiving Dumaresq's presence.

Her hands nervously flutter the pages over, her color is heightened, and between her delicate, dark, straight brows come lines of trouble and embarrassment.

"What on earth are you hunting for, Midge?" her brother demands, impatiently. "Sing us something, can't you? Sing 'Five o'Clock in the Morning' for Dumaresq. It's such a jolly song," he adds, patronizingly.

"I will, presently," Imogene says, quietly, though her nervous color has deepened and spread to her temples. "Perhaps Mr. Dumaresq can sing something."

"Yes, do!—there's a good fellow," urges Lionel.

"Please do!" Imogene says, graciously, handing him a volume of songs. "Perhaps there is something there you know."

"No, nothing," Dumaresq answers, with a glance through the page. "I don't know any 'drawing-room songs,' Miss Trefusis. I only know a few odd things at the most. If you will allow me to sit down at the piano for a few minutes I may remember something."

"Do you play, too, as well as sing?" inquires Lionel, with much frank admiration. "How jolly! I wish I could."

Imogene says nothing. She is standing beside the piano, her little white hand resting on the lid among the loose music; her dress touches him as he sits down in her place, and the scent of the carnation she gave him, which he has fastened in his coat affects them both with a consciousness of its presence and meaning.

To Imogene the subtle perfume bears a troubled sense of gladness and of wondering that disturbs her soul. To Richard Dumaresq it is an odor which intoxicates his senses with vague delight and reckless daring.

Then striking a few stray harmonious cords in various keys, he pauses, and after a brief prelude, with deep bass notes and a passionate tremolo he sings, in a soft, rich baritone and with deep expression and perfect accent, a French chansonette:

"L'amour fait [illegible] la vie;
N'oublie pas
Que j'ai trouvé l'amour ma mie
Dans tes deux yeux.

"Bien d'autres vont jurer peut-etre
J'aimer toujours.
C'est dans mon cœur que tu fais naitre
Un seul amour."

He raises his eyes to Imogene's face as he concludes.

"That is a beautiful little French song," she says; but her eyelids are drooping, and her sweet face is flushed and quivering.

Its passionless peace is broken up and gone, for the tender ardor of the love-song is thrilling her through.

"You understand it perfectly, of course?" he asks, in a quiet, suppressed tone; but he is looking into her eyes still.

"Oh, yes," she answers quietly, but she trembles visibly, and the long lashes droop until they touch her soft come, I believe, on my soul, if I were wicked enough to ask her, come to me as I stand, with bare hands that have not even the wherewithal to make a nest for her to lay her head in."

He finishes his letter soon after this and pauses to read it over, but is ashamed of having written effusively, keen a pleasure as it has given him to confess in words what has been burning in his heart, and so seals it up unread, stamps and addresses it all in a desperate hurry, haunted still by a sense of vexation or regret at having written at all, and goes down to the postoffice in the village to post it himself.

He cannot post a letter addressed to "Captain Dumaresq" into the post bag in the hall.

But, just as he reaches the postoffice, which is the village drapery, fancy goods and stationery emporium as well, at the very door, he comes face to face with Miriam Lilly.

"What an extraordinary thing," he says, confusedly, concealing the address of his letter, at the same instant perceiving that Miriam Lilly has been about to post a letter here, which she has instantly replaced in her handbag.

"What is extraordinary?" she inquires, coldly smiling.

"That we should both have come out here and both meet posting our letters," he retorts, with a meaning smile at her handbag as he puts his letter into the slit of the box.

(To be continued.)

Many a man isn't satisfied to [illegible] his own. He wants to hold [illegible]

Specials

Negligee shirts 50 cts each

Work shirts 75 cents each

Black overalls at $1.25 pair

Large work aprons, (ladies) 60 cents each

Be sure and secure one of the above specials.

We are paying 40 cts for eggs, and 38 cts for good fresh butter

N. McGillivray
North End Store

BANK OF HAMILTON
Established 1872.
Capital Authorized, $5,000,000
Capital Paid-up, - $3,000,000
Surplus, - - - - - - $3,500,000

Opportunity

Does not come to you every day. Neither can you count upon finding it when you want it. It is the part of wisdom to prepare for it and be ready to grasp it when it comes. Some capital will be required. Open a savings account in the Bank of Hamilton and begin to save now.

R. J. RANNEY, MANAGER
PORT ELGIN BRANCH
40-C

Can you afford to be without The Times ?

Clearing Lines At Cost

The following lines of Seasonable goods will be sold at or less than cost price. . . . .

All canvas shoes, leather or rubber soled many lines in practically all sizes, men's ladies' and children's.

Your chance to Save Money

Ladies' and Misses' colored parasols below cost price.

Straw hats for every day or better wear clearing below cost.

Let us supply your wants.

Produce Wanted—Highest Price paid.

South End Store
N. McGillivray & Co.

The Port Elgin Times
MEMBER OF THE CANADIAN PRESS ASSOCIATION (INC.)

E. Roy Sayles, Editor and Proprietor

ADVERTISING RATES

Farms or Real Estate for Sale 50c each insertion: Miscellaneous articles, To Rent, Wanted, Lost, Found, etc., each insertion 25c. Local Readers, Notices, etc., 10c per line per insertion, 5c each subsequent insertion. Cards of thanks 50c. Legal advertising 10 and 5c a line. Black-faced type, count 2 lines for 1. Display rates, yearly contracts, 12c per inch, 6 mos. 15c per inch. In memoriam poetry 5c per line. Professional cards $6 per year in advance.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Russian soldiers receive six cents a day It doesn't seem reasonable to expect to hire first class heroes for that.

* * *

Ex-Mayor Euler, of Kitchener was nominated as an anti-conscription candidate for the Commons in North Waterloo.

* * *

Judge Donnelly, of New York, rules that waiters who take tips are grafters. Here's a chance for The Globe to clean up the grafters in Toronto.

* * *

The largest potato crop in the country's history is in sight, says an exchange. This should be comforting news to the amateur who resigned his little two by four patch to the bugs weeks ago.

* * *

A judge has sentenced one reckless auto driver to jail for three years, thus helping to conserve the gasoline supply by that much anyhow.

* * *

Maryland cobwebs are reported to have spelled "War ends in September.' 'Lay this upon the shelf with the egg that had "w" on it for war, and the oats that have "B" on them for Berlin by Christmas.

* * *

The position of the Liberal press which ran amuck in their eulogies of the Conservative conscription measure, are now trying to avoid the kisses being thrown at them by the Conservative newspapers.

* * *

Butter at 45 cents per pound simply means that many a family will use bread without butter. In England and United States oleomargarine helps the situation mightily but in Canada people must go without, because of the opposition of the few,

* * *

The Globe reported 600 bowlers from all over the province meeting in Toronto last week, and further says; 'Let not the anxious conscriptionist grow uneasy. The war cause was not suffering for the moment by this carnival in the gentleman's game, for the bowlers are not of the first or second draft." Truth is Toronto papers are satisfied so long as the people assemble to spend time and money in their city.

* * *

By the wholesale abuse of Sir Wilfrid Laurier papers like the Toronto News are increasing the difficulty of forming a national government. Because conscription Liberals do not see eye to eye with their chief on the one question of conscription does not make the abuse of one of the greatest statesmen this country has ever known, any the less nauseating to them.

—Brantford Expositor

* * *

Kerensky, the great Russian leader said recently: "I have not long to live, Heredity and disease have numbered my days. I must hasten the work of liberating Russia and do the greatest good I can before I depart." Kerensky is dying. But before he dies he will erect a monument for himself that will defy time. In a world-storm in which the very foundations of civilization are rocking he is a captain unafraid. Will he save Russia and, by saving Russia, save democracy for the Russian millions? If death will but stay his hand a little while Kerensky will.

* * *

This year it is not a question of whether it is cheaper to can fruits and vegetables or to buy them in the winter already canned. The only question is whether we shall can, or do without next winter. It should be remembered by our people that most of the canned goods are likely to be bought up for the armies, so we shall need to provide for our needs.

* * *

H. F. Gadsby, the brilliant Ottawa political writer says that even the Chateau Laurier is on to Sir Joseph Flavelle. It used to be, says Gadsby, that when they saw Sir Joseph coming they struck up "He's the Lily of the Valley the Bright and morning Star," whereas now, Sir Joseph's appearance is the signal for the orchestra to start playing "Old Black Joe."

* * *

Ontario this year will have the biggest oat crop in the history of the province according to Dr. A. C. Creelman, Commissioner of Agriculture for the province. "We will have 125 million bushels as compared to the average crop of 100 millions."

Crops Good

The editor enjoyed a week's automobile trip during the holiday week, going as far as Detroit. Nearly 700 miles were made, going along Lake Huron to London, then to Windsor along the River road. The return was made along the Erie shore to St. Thomas and around through the towns of Brussels, Seaforth, through Formosa and home. Everywhere along the route the crops were good, and were being housed in good shape. Threshing is on the way, and is general in Middlesex, Kent and Essex. Considerable grain was standing in Huron and Bruce, but by this time is cut, and in a few days the thresher will be on his rounds in these counties, too.

Great quantities of beans, oats and corn were seen in Kent and Essex, and in the latter the tobacco crop was especially fine. Everywhere the harvest seemed abundant, and everywhere the demand was great for all that could be raised. Frequently women were seen working in the fields, and on one farm two women were operating the binder and stooking.

In Detroit the talk heard was mainly about the drafts. Many of the great auto plants are planning to make ammunition. Prices of foodstuffs are soaring, and the food and fuel controller is being criticized in the U. S. equally as much as in Canada. The price of soft coal has been fixed by the government.

Detroit is the autoists paradise. Thousands and thousands of machines are constantly on the go. Gas is 19 and 20 cents per gallon, while tires were displayed in some service windows ranging from $6.95 to $14.

Roads were good. In many sections miles of well built roads were encountered, in fact the only poor roads were spots in Kent and Essex.

PERSONAL MENTION

Miss Bessie Currie is holidaying in Peterboro.

Miss Veitch and Miss Bundy, of Toronto, are guests of Mrs. Shier.

Mr. and Mrs. Welsford, Toronto, are at the Queen's.

Mrs. Wm. Mitchell, and Laurier, of Toronto, are holidaying at the beach.

Mrs. E. Martin and Bernice are holidaying at Brockville.

Mrs. Harrett has returned from a visit to Toronto.

Mrs. J. S. Smith of Toronto, is visiting Mrs. Bottrill.

W. Goodall of Toronto, spent the week-end here.

Rev. Mr. Mann will occupy his pulpit Sunday Sept. 2nd.

Local hog buyers did not ship this week.

Henry Dent is visiting at Robert Pollock's Saugeen.

Mrs. J. C. Clark has returned to Coldwater, after a visit with Mrs. J. M. Kennedy.

Mr. Archie McIntyre had the index finger on his right hand badly cut while at work at the factory.

The Western Fair
Sept. 7th to 15th

The Management of the Western Fair of London, Ontario, are making every possible effort this year to eclipse all their previous Exhibitions good as they have been. They are giving special attention to the Live Stock and Agriculture departments. Two Thousand Dollars was added to the Prize List, (which was a liberal one before) making this year's list the best ever offered, and exceedingly liberal in all departments. It is expected that there will be a large entry in all the Live Stock Classes. Special classes in the Horse Department have been provided for farmers and their sons. Professional breeders and dealers have been barred from those classes and farmers will have an opportunity of exhibiting against farmers. There are also plenty of classes for the professionals with liberal prizes offered. Prize Lists, Entry forms and all information promptly given on application to the Secretary A. M. Hunt, London Ontario.

BORN

BRUNTON—In Arran, on Aug. 12th, to Mr. and Mrs. John Brunton, a son.

SCHWASS—At Burgoyne, to Mr. and Mrs. S. Schwass, a daughter.

DUDGEON—In Bruce Tp., on Aug. 9th, to Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Dudgeon, a daughter.

Re-Opening Services at The Baptist Church

On Sunday the Baptist church was re-opened after being closed for repairs and renovation for the past three weeks. The edifice now presents a very cheerful and pleasing appearance, having been newly painted and decorated, as well as some changes being made in the interior.

The services were of a special character, Rev. Mr. Mintz, B. A., of Rochester, who is in Southampton for the summer, was the preacher for the day, The congregations were large at both services, and the services were greatly enjoyed. The choir was assisted by Miss Ewald and Miss Ebert, and Messrs. Langford and Salter.

In the morning Mr. Mintz preached a splendid sermon on the "Kingdom of Heaven", and in the evening his subject was "Heaven, what kind of a place is it, and how to get there." The preacher based all his arguments on the Scriptures, and persuaded his hearers that heaven was a place set apart for the followers of Christ. There was no guesswork in this matter. The chief aim of every one should be to so follow the Lord that there would be no doubt in the mind of anyone as to the future abiding place, for it is a place not made with hands, and its foundations are of God."

Rev. Mr. Mintz is an eloquent speaker, and his discourse was followed closely.

CLIP THIS AND PIN ON WIFE'S DRESSER

Cincinnati man tells how to shrivel up corns or calluses so they lift off with fingers.

Ouch ! ! ! ! ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn or hardened callus stops soreness at once, and soon the corn or callus dries up and lifts right off without pain.

He says freezone dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels. If your druggist doesn't have freezone tell him to order a small bottle for you.

An appeal to the eye of the woman who is looking for perfection in her footwear will be found in "Empress" Shoes for Women, and what means more to her, satisfaction and comfort. Needs no breaking in.

James George & Son

$10 Saved Every Month

for ten years will amount to $1,399.13 if deposited in this bank at 3% per annum interest compounded twice a year. Open a Savings Account with us and watch your money grow. 43

The Bank of NovaScotia

PAID-UP CAPITAL - $ 6,500,000
RESERVE FUND - - 12,000,000
TOTAL RESOURCES over 110,000,000

PORT ELGIN BRANCH.
A. L. Wyant, Manager

BLACKSMITHING

N. EIDT, Blacksmithing, horse-shoeing and general repairs. Tire-setting a specialty

Just the Thing for Summer Wear

Boy's khaki bloomers, in good quality denim two special lines at 90 cents and $1.25

Boy's wash suits, in tan or blue linen and striped percale, in sizes 2 to 8 years, reg. up $1.50 to clear at 98 cents.

To save those good leather boots, buy a pair of harvest shoes. We have them in all sizes.

Youth's at $1.35 per pair
Boy's at $1.65
Men's at $2.65

Highest price for produce

Store closes every Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon.

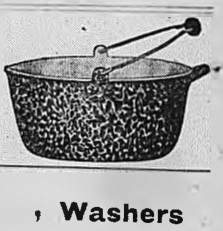
Roppel Bros.
Rural phone, Underwood

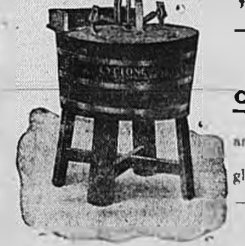
Advertise it in The Times.

SPECIAL

We have a few of Dr. Pierce's Family Medical Advisors. Good cloth binding which we offer at 50 cents each while they last.

R. C. Crawford
Drugs and Kodaks
C. P. R. ticket agent





PRESERVING KETTLES

Old English granitware at reduced prices. Extra large size

75 cents

Don't miss this snap.

Washers

Why not try a Cyclone Washer and make wash day a glad day.

Sold on approval

McLAREN'S HARDWARE

Five Large Phonographs
Given as First District
Prizes in

Bread-Making Contests

At Rural School Fairs in Ontario

More than $2,000 worth of prizes for bread making will be offered at the Rural School Fairs this fall. Among the prizes are five large cabinet phonographs, fifteen Canuck bread mixers, and many attractive books. These splendid prizes will make the contest the most stirring ever held at rural school fairs. Every girl between the ages of 12 and 18 should read all about this fine opportunity, and should begin now to prepare for it. The prizes, under the conditions explained below, will be awarded for the best loaves baked with

Cream of the West Flour

the hard wheat flour that is guaranteed for bread

—the flour that you will want to use always, once you have given it a good trial. We want you to know for yourself that it makes splendid big loaves of the lightest, most wholesome bread that good flour can bake. That is why we make it well worth your while to try it, by offering these attractive and costly prizes.

For this contest we have divided the Province into five districts, each with several counties. In each district we will give a large cabinet phonograph, a set of Dickens' Works and three bread mixers. These are called the District prizes and they are to be given in addition to the prizes offered at the local rural school fairs. (See list of districts below.) Be sure to compete at your local rural school fair. If you win first prize there, you will then automatically become a competitor for the phonograph and other district prizes.

The Prizes, remember, are offered for the best loaf of bread baked with Cream of the West Flour. No other flour will do. For local prizes we offer a number of valuable books. By local prizes we mean those given at the fair.

1st Local Prize.—"Girl's Own Annual," a great big beautifully bound, illustrated book with 800 pages of stories and articles about people, art, animals, gardens, sewing, crocheting—everything that particularly interests young girls, older girls and their mothers. This is a wonderful prize that you can treasure for years.

2nd Local Prize.—"Stories of Famous Men and Women," heavily cloth bound with gold titles, many beautiful pictures in colors, entrancing life stories of Florence Nightingale, Grace Darling, Flora MacDonald, Jenny Lind, the late Queen Victoria and others.

3rd Local Prize.—"Britain Overseas," a big handsomely bound book with many colored pictures, interesting stories and descriptions of the countries and the peoples of Britain's world-wide Empire.

4th Local Prize.—"The Queen's Gift Book," a book of stories, pictures and special articles by Britain's best writers; the proceeds from the sale of this book are for the benefit of disabled soldiers in England.

Note.—Unless the entries number six or more only first and second prizes will be awarded. Unless the entries number ten or more no fourth prize will be awarded.

The District Prizes.—The winner of the first prize at each local fair automatically becomes a competitor for the following District prizes. One-half of the first prize loaf will be sent to the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, to compete in the District Contests. (See conditions below.)

1st District Prize.—The "Pathephone" is the name given to the fine big mahogany phonograph we offer as first prize. It will give you endless pleasure and entertainment for a lifetime. It has special reproducer attachments and needles, enabling you to play all kinds of flat disc records of no matter what make. The Pathephone reproduces band music, orchestra music, songs and funny pieces perfectly. With it goes a dozen of the famous Pathe records. Total value, $153.00.

2nd District Prize.—Set of Dickens' Works, 15 splendidly bound volumes with many illustrations. Among the books in the set are "Oliver Twist" and "Old Curiosity Shop." These are two of the most entrancing stories ever written.

3rd, 4th and 5th Prizes.—"Canuck" Bread mixers. This simple, yet well-made, machine takes the hard work out of bread making. Instead of laborious kneading of the old method, you just put in the ingredients, turn the handle and the dough is thoroughly and more evenly mixed.

FIRST PRIZE AT LOCAL RURAL SCHOOL FAIRS

CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST

Every girl may compete at the rural school fair in her district, whether or not she attends school, providing that her 12th birthday occurs before November 1st, 1917, or her 18th birthday does not occur before Nov. 1, 1917. One loaf of bread must be submitted baked in pan about 7 x 5 inches and 3 inches deep, and divided into twin loaves so that they may be separated at the fair. The loaf must be baked with Cream of the West Flour. One-half will be judged at the fair. The other half of the prize loaf will be sent to Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, to compete in the District Contests. The judging will be done by Miss M. A. Purdy, of the Department of Breadmaking and Flour Testing. The local contest at the fair will be conducted under the same rules as all the other regular contests at your fair.

The Standard by which bread will be judged will be as follows:

1. Appearance of Loaf		15 marks
(a) Color	5 marks
(b) Texture of crust	5 marks
(c) Shape of loaf	5 marks
2. Texture of Crumb		40 marks
(a) Evenness	15 marks
(b) Fullness	20 marks
(c) Color	5 marks
3. Flavor of Bread		45 marks
(a) Taste	25 marks
(b) Odor	20 marks

Important.—Each loaf must be accompanied by the part of the flour bag containing the face of the Old Miller, and an entry form must be signed by the girl and parents or guardian stating date of birth, P.O. address, and giving name of dealer from whom Cream of the West Flour was purchased. The form will state that the girl actually baked the loaf entered in the competition. The forms will be provided at the time of the fair. The decision of the judges is final. Not more than one entry may be made by each girl and not more than one local prize will be awarded to the same family.

Which District is yours? This list shows you which counties you compete in should you become a competitor for the District prizes:

District No. 1.—Counties of Glengarry, Stormont, Dundas, Grenville, Leeds, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Carleton, Lanark, Renfrew.

District No. 2.—Counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Peterboro, Northumberland, Victoria, Durham.

District No. 3.—Counties of York, Ontario, Peel, Halton, Wentworth, Oxford, Brant, Waterloo.

District No. 4.—Counties of Welland, Haldimand, Norfolk, Elgin, Kent, Essex, Lambton, Middlesex.

District No. 5.—Counties of Bruce, Grey, Dufferin, Simcoe, Districts of Muskoka, Parry Sound, Timiskaming, Algoma, Sudbury, Manitoulin.

THE RESULTS of the contests at the fair will be made known in the usual way as in the case of all the other regular contests. The District results will be announced as soon as possible after the conclusion of the Rural School Fairs in the Province.

DO NOT MISS THIS GREAT OPPORTUNITY: Every girl between 12 and 18 years should compete. What a splendid way to stir up increased interest in breadmaking! Get a supply of Cream of the West Flour at your dealers and practice using it as often as possible to increase the chances of winning. If your dealer cannot sell it to you, write to the Campbell Flour Mills Co., Ltd., Toronto, and we will promptly tell you the nearest place to get it.

NO COMPETITIONS IN COUNTIES NAMED BELOW; The competition is open to all parts of the Province where Rural School Fairs are held, except the Districts of Rainy River, Kenora and Thunder Bay. These districts are the only parts of the Province where rural fairs are held by the Department of Agriculture in which this competition will not be a feature. There are no district representatives of the Department of Agriculture in the Counties of Huron, Perth, Wellington, Haliburton, Prescott, Russell or Lincoln, and no rural school fairs are held in these Counties by the Department of Agriculture. There are, however, a few local school fairs held in these seven counties, and we are opening the competition to these fairs. We will announce later the districts in which each of these Counties will be included.

The Campbell Flour Mills Co., Limited
(West) Toronto, Ontario

(Keep this announcement for reference)

120

☞—Cream of the West is sold by N McGillivray, Port Elgin; E. Witter & Co., Mildmay; Geo. Lambert, Mildmay; Mrs. J. A. Wells, Southampton; A. Fisher & Son, Paisley; Wm. Irwin, Wiarton; D. Mallough, Lucknow.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

Many Thousand Farm Laborers Wanted for Harvesting in Western Canada

"Going Trip West"—$12.00 to WINNIPEG "Return Trip East"—$18.00 from WINNIPEG

GOING DATES

August 21st and August 30th	All stations in Ontario West of Smith's Falls up to and including Toronto on Lake Ontario Shore Line and Havelock-Peterboro' Line; also from stations between Kingston and Renfrew Junction, inclusive, and from stations on Toronto-Sudbury direct line. From stations on Sault Ste. Marie branch. From stations on Main Line, Beaumaris to Franz, inclusive. From stations Bethany Junction to Port McNicoll and Burketon Bobcaygeon.
August 23rd and August 30th	From stations West and South of Toronto up to and including Hamilton and Windsor, Ont., on Owen Sound, Walkerton, Teeswater, Wingham, Elora, Listowel, Goderich, St. Mary's, Port Burwell and St. Thomas branches, and stations Toronto and North to Bolton, inclusive.

SPECIAL THROUGH TRAINS

Further particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents, or W. B. HOWARD, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

Mrs. Southcott Foretold War

Officials of the Johanna Southcott Society of Great Britain arrived in the U. S. last week to inaugurate a campaign to aid in forcing the 24 bishops of the Church of England who sit in the house of lords at Westminster to make public the contents of the sealed boxes of writings left in their custody by Johanna Southcott, the English prophetess more than 100 years ago.

The disciples of Mrs. Southcott assert that her prophecies embodied in the sixty volumes preserved in the British library and in the sealed writings never made public, will establish her as the peculiar prophetess of these troublesome times. They say that the prophetess was as divinely inspired as Deborah of old and Joan of Arc to lead the people of England and America back to the paths of peace and safety.

Following are some of the prophecies made by Mrs. Southcott, more than 100 years ago:

Our foes (the French) to become our friends.

The eagle is the foe we have to fear.

Two monarchs to plan a great war (one said to be Prussia).

Land will prove to be the best investment during the troublesome times. (clearly seen in good prices obtained for the products).

"Daily presents to England will flow." (Fulfilled in the relief ships).

England to possess Egypt.

Only one nation to be lost to Europe and that is Turkey, because of the power Satan has in the hearts of men there, though some will turn to God.

The earthquake at Messina.

"The Germans they are in your land."

"The Germans, they are suffering for England." (Clearly fulfilled in the recent anti-German riots. Foreigners will be reduced to great straits in England.)

Our ships foretold to founder.

The dangers to London would first be overhead.

Guns and soldiers firing with clouds of smoke in the air.

England promised to be delivered from the foreign enemy according to Johanna's prayer; but the awful sound of war would be heard in our land, and persons would be killed in their beds.

Scarcity of gold and scarcity of sugar foretold.

The Lord will end the war in Turkey.

Prophetic picture of the trench warfare at the western front. Probable duration of the war in that part indicated.

England to possess Jerusalem when she joins in war against the Turks.

The Jews to become a strong nation, but they must first with England join in the fight and in the faith. (The former they have done; nearly 400 have fallen.)

England will not come into her own strength until the Jews were warned. Special books and leaflets were sent out in thousands to the Jews all around the world during the three months preceding the "Big Push."

The smelling gases foretold; also flame projectiles of liquid fire.

It seems foretold that the Kaiser will perish on the water.

The rebellion in Ireland. "An awful week I'll bring to man, apparently if a week is not appointed by the bishop to examine the writings."

High rustling winds of unusual power and velocity. Some valuable glass in church windows have already been removed for safety.

The beginning of miracles will be at the opening of the box of sealed writings. Christ will be known in the breaking of the seals as He was in the breaking of the bread.

Voter's List 1917

MUNICIPALITY OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SAUGEEN

Notice is hereby given that I have transmitted or delivered to persons named in the Section 9 of the Ontario Voters List Act, the copies required by said Section to be so transmitted or delivered of the list made pursuant to said act of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment roll of said municipality to be entitled to vote in the said municipality at elections for members of the Legislative Assembly and at Municipal Elections and said list was first posted up in my office in Port Elgin on the 16th day of August 1917, and remains there for inspection.

And I hereby call upon all voters to take immediate proceedings to have any errors or omissions corrected according to law.

Dated at my office Port Elgin this 16th day of August 1917.

F. W. Elliott,
Clerk of Saugeen Tp.

BRUCE TOWNSHIP COUNCIL

Bruce township council met in the Hall on Sat. August 18th pursuant to adjournment, members all present, minutes of previous meeting read, adopted and signed.

A number of communications were then read and disposed of.

A delegation from Tiverton womens Institute addressed council requesting a grant as the Institute has devoted their energies since the war started to Patriotic purposes.

Dobson-Baker—That this council give grant of $35.00 to the Women's Institute of Tiverton for Patriotic purposes—carried

McNeil-McKenzie—That the following rates be struck for 1917 viz—Provincial war tax 1.1 mills on $ General County rate and Municipal equivalent 3.7 on $ Township war rate for Red Cross 2 mills on $ General school rate 2.1 mills on $ General township rate 4 mills on $ and that a By-law be prepared levying above rates.

McKenzie-Baker—That a By-law be prepared for the purpose of levying the rates on the different school sections, as called for by the Trustees requisitions less the amount provided for by the general rate—carried.

Dobson-McKenzie—That a rate of $14 be levied on all Telephone subscribers and that a By-law be prepared levying same.

McNeil-Baker—That the Clerk be authorized to collect in 1917 taxes, from the parties in the award ditch con. 4, amount of cleaning ditch in 1915 and the cleaning of ditch this year be collected in 1918 taxes.

Baker-Dobson—That By-laws 214, 215 and 216 for levying rates as now read be passed—carried.

Dobson-McNeil—That this council empower the different committees to have all bridges let built as soon as possible.

A number of accounts were then passed and council adjourned to meet Sept. 22nd 1917.

J. G. MacKay—Clerk

Never Disappoints You

You'll never be disappointed or have to worry about your cooking or baking if you use a "Pandora." In this range nothing has been omitted that could make it more efficient, economical or durable. Write for free booklet.

McClary's
PANDORA RANGE

LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER
ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY
SASKATOON EDMONTON

10

Sold by J. H. Kennedy, Port Elgin

RHEUMATISM ARRESTED

Many people suffer the tortures of lame muscles and stiffened joints because of impurities in the blood, and each succeeding attack seems more acute until rheumatism has invaded the whole system.

To arrest rheumatism it is quite as important to improve your general health as to purify your blood, and the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is nature's great blood-maker, while its medicinal nourishment strengthens the organs to expel the impurities and upbuild your strength.

Scott's Emulsion is helping thousands every day who could not find other relief. Refuse the alcoholic substitutes.

Advertise it in The Times

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now, will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places, and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College
Owen Sound, Ontario

is the very best place to get a practical training and prepare to help to meet the demand for trained office help. Students may enter any time. No increase in fees. Circular free on application.

C. A. Fleming, F. C. A., Principal
Dept. A., Owen Sound, Ont.

Port Elgin Fair

PLAN TO ATTEND IT

Wednesday & Thursday, Sept. 19, 20

This year the directors and officers present largely increased money prizes, and a list covering every department of farm and home.

Canadian Bankers' Association

In this competition, the Canadian Bankers' Association, acting in co-operation with the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Live Stock Branch, offers cash prizes to boys and girls who exhibit calves or pigs at their local fair, who comply with all the rules governing the competition.

Attractions

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS—The Attraction Committee promise a special feature for the afternoon, and every farmer should plan to spend Thursday at the fair.

Watch This Space for Specials

Many special prizes are being arranged for, and will be printed in this space. Watch for them.

Grand Concert at Night

The Celebrated fun-maker Jimmie Fax has been engaged. Better get a seat early.

Secure prize list and information from

John Henderson, President
F. W. Elliott, Sec.-treas.

A Handy Thing

The handiest thing in the world is a wrist watch, and especially so in the summer weather. You'll be interested in looking at them.

Let us show you one of our fine line of clocks

Rowlands
The Jeweller

Alarm Clocks

Why do most people go to Busby's for alarm clocks? Because we have the best stock, also when repairs are necessary you know our reputation.

We have in stock

Big Ben	Vigilant
Cyclone	Turnout
Vantite	Icalle
Giant Spasmodic
Suminous Sunrise

J. J. BUSBY,
The Quick Repair House

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson x. September 2, 1917.

The Shepherd of Captive Israel.—Ezekiel 34: 1-31.

Commentary.—I. Evil shepherds of Israel (vs. 1-10.) Ezekiel speaks of God's people under the figure of a flock, and sharply reproves the rulers, or shepherds. A woe is pronounced upon them because they have fed themselves on the flock, instead of feeding the sheep and caring for them. They were both positively injurious to the flock under their care and were neglectful of it. Verse 4 names five particulars in which they had failed of doing their duty. They had not strengthened the diseased nor healed the sick nor bound up the bruised nor brought back that" which had been driven away. The rulers had oppressed the people, had failed to protect them and they had been scattered, and there was no one to search them out and gather them again. "The allegory is simple enough. Owing to the evil and selfish government of the rulers the people became the prey of all the nations round about them. The figure of the flock indicates, however, the affection of Jehovah for his people and his compassion over their sufferings.—Davidson.

